as I was borne, then ſhulde I be now, as
though I had neuer bene.
Shall not my ſhorte life come ſoone to an ende? O holde the fro me, let me alone, that I may eaſe my ſelf a litle afore I go thither, ſtõ whẽce I ſhal not turne again:
Namely, to that londe of darkneſſe & ſha-
dow of death: yee in to ꝓ darck clowdy lõd
and deadly ſhadow, where as is no order,
but terrible feare as in the darkneſſe.

The.xii. Chapter.

Then anſwered Sophar the Naamathite, & ſaide: Shuld
not he that maketh many wor
des, be anſwered? Shuld he ꝓ babbleth much, be cõmended
therin? Shuld mẽ geue eare vnto ꝓ onely?
Thou wilt laugh other men to ſcorne, and ſhal no body mocke ꝓ againe? Wilt thou ſay vnto god: The thing ꝓ I take in hand, is perfect, & I am clene in thy ſight? O that god wold ſpeake, & opẽ his lippes againſt
the, ꝓ he might ſhewe the (out of his ſecrete wyſdome) how manifolde his lawe is: thẽ
ſhuldeſt thou knowe, that God had forgot ten the, becauſe of thy ſinnes.
Wilt thou fynde out God with thy ſe-
kinge? wilt thou attaine to the perfectneſſe
of the Almightie? He is hyer then heauen, what wilt thou do? Deper thẽ hel, how wilt thou thẽ know him? His length exceadeth
ꝓ length of ꝓ earth, & his breadth the bredth of the ſee. Though he turne al thinges vp ſyde down, cloſe them in, or thruſt them to gether, who darre check him therfore?
* For it is he, ꝓ knoweth the vanite of men: he ſeith their wickednelle alſo, ſhulde
he not then conſider it? A vayne body eral teth himſelf, and the ſonne of man is like a wilde aſſes foale. yf thou haddeſte now a right harte, & liftedeſt vp thine handes to-warde him: yf thou woldeſt put awaye the wickednelle, which thou haſt in hande, ſo
that no vngodlynelle dwelt in thy houſe:
Then mighteſt thou lyfte vp thy face wp-
thout ſhame, then ſhuldeſte thou be ſure,
and haue no nede to feare.
Then ſhuldeſt thou forget thy miſery,
and thinke no more vpon it, than vpon the waters ꝓ runne by. Then ſhulde thy lyfe be as cleare as the noone daye, and ſpring forth as ꝓ morninge. Then mighteſt thou haue comforte, in the hope that thou haſt:
& ſlepe quietly, whan thou art buried. Thẽ ſhuldeſt thou take thy reſt, and no man to make the afrayed: yee many one ſhulde ſet much by the. As for the eyes of the vngod
ly, they ſhal be conſumed, and not eſcape:
their hope ſhalbe miſery & ſorow of mind.

The.xii. Chapter.

So Job anſwered, and ſayde:
Then (no doute) ye are the mẽ

riſh wt you. But I haue vnder ſtõding as wel as ye, and ame
no leſſe thẽ ye. yee who knoweth not theſe thynges? Thus he that calleth vpon God, and whom God heareth, is mocked of hys neghbour: the godly and innocent man is laughed to scorne. Godlynesse is a lyghte despysed in the hartes of the ryche, and is set for them to stomble vpon.

The houses of robbers are in wealth & prosperyte, & they that maliciously medle agaynst God, dwel without care: yee God geueth al thynges rychely wyth his hand.

The.xii. Chapter.

LO, all this haue I sene wyth myne eye, herde wt myne care, and vnderstōde it. Loke what ye knowe, ỹ same do I knowe also, nother am I inferior vn to you. Neuertheles I am purposed to talke with the Almightie, and my desyre is to comune with God. As for you, ye are workmasters of lyes: & vnprofytable physicians altogether. Wolde God ye kept youre tunge, * that ye myght be taken for wise men. Therfore heare my wordes, and ponder the sentence of my lyppes. Will ye make answere for God with lyes, and rea-sone him with deceate? Will ye accepte the personne of God, and intreate for hym?
Shal that helpe you, whan he calleth you to rekeninge? Thinke ye to begyle hym as a man is begiled? Punish you shal he, and reproue you, yf ye do secretly accepte his personne. Shall he not make you afrayed, whan he sheweth himselfe? Shall not his terrible feare fall vpon you? youre remembraunce shalbe lyke the duste, and youre
pryde shalbe turned to claye.

Holde youre tunges now, and let me
speake, for ther is some thinge come in to my minde. Wherfore do I beare my flesh in my teth, * and my soule in myne han-des? Lo, ther is nother cōforte nor hope for me, yf he will slaye me. * But yf he shal
and reproue myne owne waies in his sight,
he is euen the same ỹ maketh me whole.
And why? ther maye no hypocryte come fore him. Heare my wordes, and ponder sayenges wt youre eares. Behold, though sentence were geuen vpon me, I am sure to be knowē for vngodly. What is he, that will go to lawe with me? For yf I holde
my tunge I shal dye. Neuertheles graunt
me. ii. thinges, and then will I not hyde
my self from the.

Withdraw thine hande fro me, & let
not the fearfull drede of the make me afray
ed. And then sende for me to the lawe, that I maye answere for my self: or els, let me speake, and geue thou the answere. How greate are my mysdedes and synnes? Let me knowe my transgressions and offences. Wherfore hidest thou thy face, and hodest me for thine enemie? Wilt thou be so cruell and extreme vnto a flyenge leaf, and folowe vpon dry stubble? that thou layest
so sharply to my charge, and wilt bringe
vndo me, * for the sinnes of my youthe?
* Thou hast put my foote in the stockes, &
thou lokest narowly vnto all my pathes, &
markest the steppes of my fete: where as I (notwithstondinge) muste consume as a foule carion, and as a cloche that is moth eaten.

The.xiiii. Chapter.

1 Man that is borne of a wom-an,
hath but a shorte tyme to lyue,
and is ful of diuerse miseries.
2 He commeth vp, and falleth a waye lyke a floure. He flyeth as it were a shadowe, & neuer cõtinueth in one estate. Thinkest thou it now wel done to open thyne eyes vpon such one, and to bringe me before the in iudgement? Who can make it cleane, that commeth of an vn
cleane thynge? No body. The dayes of mã are shorte, the nombre of his monethes are knowne onely vnto the. Thou hast apoyn
ted hym his bondes, he can not go beyond them. Go from hym, that he maye reste a lytle: vntyll hys daye come, wich he loketh
for, lyke an hyrelynge doth.

3 yf a tre be cut downe, ther is som hope yet that it will sprout, and shute forth
the braunches agayne: For though a rote
be waxen olde and dead in the ground, yet
whan the flocke getteth the sent of water,
it will budde, and bringe forth boughes, lyke as whan it was fyrst planted. But as for a man, whan he is dead, perished, & con sumed awaye, what becommeth of him?
4 The floudes whan they be dryed vp, and the ryuers when they be emptye, are fylled
agayne therowe the flowynge waters of y
see: but whan man slepeth, he ryseth not a-gayne, * vntyll the heauen perish: he shal not wake vp, nor ryse out of hys slepe. O y thou woldest kepe me, and hyde me in the hell, vntyll thy wrath were stylled: and to appoynt me a tyme, wherin thou mightest remembre me. Maye a dead man lyue a-gayne? * All the dayes of this my pylgry
mage am I lokynge, when my chaunging shall come, yf thou woldest but call me, I shulde obey the: * only despise not y worke of thyne owne hondes.

C For thou hast nombred all my goyn-ges, yet be not thou to extreme vpon my synnes. Thou hast sealed vp myne offences, as it were in a bagge: but be mercifull vnto my wickednesse. The moũtaynes fal awaye at the last, the rockes are remoued
out of theyr place, the waters pearse tho-rowe the very stones by lytle and lytle, the floudes do washe awaye the grauell and earth: Euen so destroyest thou the hope of man in lyke maner. Thou preuaylest a-gaynst hym, so that he passeth away: thou chaungest hys estate, and puttest him frõ
the. Whether hys chyldren come to wor-shyppe, or no, he can not tell: And yf they be men of lowe degre, he knoweth not.
Whyle he lyueth, his flesshe must haue tra-uayle: and whyle the soule is in hym, he must be in sorowe.

The.xv. Chapter.

1 Then answered Eliphas y Thema-
nyte, and sayde: Shulde a wise mã geue such an answere
(as it were one that shake in y wynde) and fyll hys stomacke with anger? Thou reprouest with wordes that are nothyng worth: and speakest the thynge, wich cã do no good. As for shame, thou hast set it aside, els woldest thou not make so many wordes before God: but thy wickednesse teacheth thy mouth, & so thou hast chosen the a crafty tunge. Thine own mouth cõdemneth the, and not I: yee thine
owne lyppes shape y an answere. Art thou the fyrste man, that euer was borne? Or wast thou made before y hylles: hast thou herde the secrete counsell of God, that all wysdome is to lytle for the? What know-est thou, that we knowe not? What vnder stondest thou, but we can the same? Wyth vs are olde & aged men, yee suche as haue
lyued longer then thy forefathers.

2 Dost thou nowe regarde the com-
forte of God? but thy wicked wordes wyll not suffre the. Why doth thyne hart make the so proude? Why stondest thou so great ly in thyne owne conceate? Where vnto
loke thyne eyes, that thy mynde is so puft
vp agaynst God, and lettest suche wordes go out of thy mouth? What is a man, that he shulde be cleane? What hath he (which is borne of a woman) wherby he myght be knowe to be ryghteous? * Behold, he hath Iob. 4. b.
founde vnfaythfulnesse amonge his own 2. Pet. 2. d.
sayntes: yee the very heauẽs are vncleane
in hys syght. How muche more then an ab hominable and vyle man, which drinketh wickednesse lyke water? I wyll tell the, heare me: I wyll shewe the a thyng, that I know: which wyse men haue tolde, & hath not ben hyd from theyr fathers: vnto whõ
onely the londe was geuen, that no straun
ger shulde come amonge them.

C * The vngodly despayreth al y dayes Eccl. 4. b.
of hys lyfe, and the nombre of a tyrauntes yeares is vnknowe. A fearfull sounde is euer in hys eares, and when it is peace, yet
feareth he destruccyon: He beleueth neuer
to be delyuered out of darknesse, y sweard
is alwaye before his eyes. When he goeth forth to get hys lyuynge, he thynketh planely, that the daye of darknesse is at hand.

Sorow and carefulnesse make hym afrayed, and compasse hym rounde aboute, lyke as it were a kinge with his hoost ready to the battayll. For he hath stretched out his hande agaynst God, and armed hymselfe agaynst the Almightye. He runneth proudly vpon hym, and wyth a styf necke fyghteth he agaynst him: where as he couereth his face with fatnesse, and maketh his body well lykynge. Therfore shall his dwellynge be in desolate cyties, and in houses whiche noman inhabiteth, but are become heapes of stones.

D He shall not be ryche, nother shall his substaunce continue, nor encrease vpon earth. He shal neuer come out of darknesse the flame shall drye vp his braunches, & the blaste of the mouth of God shall he be taken awaye. He will nother applie hymselfe to faythfulnesse nor treuth, so sore is he deceaued with vanyte.

He shal perysh afore his tyme be worne out, and his hande shall not be grene. He shal be pluckte of as an vnfrutefull grape from the vyne, and shall let his floure fal, as the olyue doth. For the congregacion of ypocrytes is vnfrutefull, and the fyre shall consume the houses of suche, as are

Esa. 59. a trauayle, he beareth myschefe, and his body bringeth forth deceate.

The.xvi.Chapter.

IOb answered, and sayde: I haue oftymes herde suche thynges. Wilerable geuers of comforte are ye, all the sort of you. Shall not thy vayne wordes come yet to an ende? Or hast thou yet ony more to saye? I coulde speake, as ye do also. But wold God, that your soule were in my soules steade: then shulde I heape vp wordes against you, and shake my heade at you. I shulde comforte you wt my mouth, and release youre payne with ỹ talkynge of my lyppes. But what shall I do? For all my wordes, my sorowe wyl not ceasse: and though I holde my tunge, yet wyll it not departe fro me. And now that I am full of payne, and al that I haue destroyed (whereof my wyncles beare wytnesse) ther stondeth vp a dissebler to make me answere with lyes to my face. He is an

Mar. 14. g stoureth vpon me with his eyes.

B They haue opened their mouthes wide vpon me, * and smytten me vpon ỹ cheke despytefully, they haue taken them selues thorow myne adulterye. God hath geuen me ouer to the vngodly, and delyuered me in to the hondes of the wicked. I was late ryme i wealth, but sodeyly hath he brought me to naught. He hath taken me by the necke, he hath rente me, and ferme, as it were a marck for him to shute at. He hath compassed me round aboute with his dartes, he hath wounded my loynes, and not spared. My bowels hath he powred vpon the grounde. He hath geuen me one wounde vpon another, and is fallen vpon me lyke a giaunte. I haue sowed a sackecloth vpon my skynne, and lye wyth my strength in the duste.

My face is swollen with weepynge, & myne eyes are wark dymme. Howbeit there is no wyckednesse in my hondes, and my prayer is cleane. O earth, couer not my bloud, and let my crienge find no rowme. For lo, my witnesse is in heauen, and he ỹ knoweth me, is aboue in the heyghte. My frendes laugh me to scorne, but myne eye poureth out teares vnto God. Though a body myghte pleate with God, as one man doth with another, yet the nombre of my yeares are come, and I must go the waye from whence, I shall not turne agayne.

The.xvii.Chapter.

MY breth fayleth, my dayes are shortened, I am harde at deathes doze. I haue deceaued no man, yet must myne eye continue in heynesse. O deliuer me, & set me by the, who shall then be able to thrust my hondes together? Thou hast withholden their hartes from vnderstondinge, therfore shall they not be let vp on hye. He promyseth his frendes part of his good, but hys owne chyldren spende it. He made me as it were a byword of ỹ common people, I am his yestinge stocke among them. My countenaunce is heuy for very anger, and the membres of my body are become lyke a shadow. Vertuous men therfore shal wel consydre this, and the innocent shall take parte against the ypocrite.

The righteous will kepe his waye, & he ỹ hath cleane handes, wil euer be stronger and stroger. As for you, turne you, & get you hence, for I can not se one wyse man amõg you. My dayes are past, my thoughtes are vanished awaye, wich haue bered myne harte, chaungynge the nyghte into day, and ꝑ light in to darkneſſe. Thoug I labo̱ neuer ſo muche, yet the graue is my houſe, and I muſt make my bedde in the darcke. I call corꝛuption my father, and ꝑ wo̱mes call I my mother and my ſyſter. What helpeth then my longe tarynge? Or who wyll fulfyll the thynge, ꝑ I loke for? All that I haue, ſhall go downe in to the ꝓt, and lye with me in the duſt.

The.xviii.Chapter.

THen anſwered Baldad ꝑ Suhite, and ſayde: whan wyll ye make an end of youꝛ wo̱des? Marke well, and conſido̱e, we wyll ſpeake alſo. Wherfo̱ are we coũted as beaſtes, and reputed ſo vyle in youꝛe ſyght? Why deſtroyeſt thou thyſelf with angeꝛ? Shal the earth be fo̱ſake ꝑ ſtones remoued out of theyr place be cauſe of the? Shal not the light of the vngodly be put out? yee the flame of hys fyꝛe ſhal not burne. The lyght ſhalbe darke in hys dwellynge, and hys candle ſhalbe put out with hym. Hys preſumptuous goynges ſhal be kepte in, and his owne councel ſhal caſt him downe. Fo̱ his fete ſhalbe take in the net, & he ſhal walke in the ſnare. His foote ſhalbe holden in the trappe, and the thyrſte ſhal catch him. The ſnare is layd fo̱ hym in the grounde, and a pytfall in the waye.

Feartulneſſe ſhal make him afrayed on euery ſyde, that he ſhal not knowe, where to get out. Honger ſhalbe hys ſubſtaunce, and myſfoꝛtune ſhal hange vpon hym. He ſhal eate hys owne ſkinne, yee hys owne armes ſhal he deuoure, beynge a fyrſtbo̱n of death. All hys comfoꝛte and hope ſhall be voted out of hys dwellynge, very feartulneſſe ſhal bryng him to ꝑ kynge. Other men ſhal dwel in hys houſe (which now is none of hys) and brymſtone ſhalbe ſcatered vpon his habitacion. Hys rotes ſhalbe dryed vp beneth, and aboue ſhall his harueſt be cut downe. Hys remembꝛaũce ſhal perych from the earth, and hys name ſhal not be prayſed in the ſtretes: he ſhalbe dryuen from ꝑ light in to darkneſſe, & be caſte clene out of the worlde. He ſhal nother haue chyldren no̱ kynſfolkes amonge hys people, no̱ no̱ ony poſterȳte in hys contre: yonge and olde ſhalbe aſtonnyed at hys death. Suche are now the dwellynges of the wycked, and this is the place of hym that knoweth not God.

The.xix. Chapter.

IOb anſwered, and ſayde: How A longe wyll ye vexe my ſoule, & trouble me wyth wo̱des? Lo, ten tymes haue ye repꝛoued me: are ye not aſhamed, for to laugh me ſo to ſcorne, yt I go wꝛonge, I go wꝛonge to my ſelf. But yf ye wyll enhaunce youꝛ ſelues agaynſt me, and accuſe me to be a wycked perſonne, becauſe of the ſame that is come vpon me: know this then, that it is God whiche hath handled me ſo violently, and hath compaſſed me about wt hys ſcourges. * Behold, though Iob.19.a.
I crie, yet vyolence is done vnto me. I cã not be herde: Though I complayne, ther is none to geue ſentence with me. He hath hedged vp my path, I can not get awaye, he hath ſet darkneſſe in my gate.

* He hath ſpoyled me of myne honour, B and taken the crowne awaye fro my head. Iob.1.a.
He hath deſtroyed me on euery ſyde, and I am vndone: My hope hath he taken awaye fro me, as it were a tre pluct vp by the rote. His wꝛath is kindled againſt me, he taketh me, as though I were his enemy

Hys mẽ of warre came together, whith made theyr waye ouer me, and beſeged my dwellynge rounde aboute. * He hath put Ps.37.b
my bꝛethꝛen farre awaye fro me, and ſuch as were of myne acquayntaunce, are become ſtraungers vnto me. Myne owne kynſfolkes haue fo̱ſaken me, and my frendes haue put me out of remembꝛaunce. C
The ſeruauntes, and maydens of myne owne houſe take me fo̱ a ſtraunger, and I am become as an aleaunt in theyr ſyghte.

Whan I call vpon my ſeruaunt, he geueth me no anſwere: no though I pꝛaye hym wyth my mouth. Myne owne wyfe maye not abyde my bꝛeth, I am layne to ſpeake fayꝛe vnto ꝑ childꝛen of myne own body. yee the very dyſerte fooles deſpyſe me, and whan I am gone from them, they ſpeake euell vpon me. All ſuch as were my mooſt familiars, abho̱re me: & they whõ I loued beſt, are turned againſt me. My bone hangeth to my ſkinne, and the fleſhe is awaye, onely ther is left me the ſkynne aboute my teth. Haue pyte vpon me, haue pyte vpon me (o ye my frendes) fo̱ ꝑ hand of the LORDE hath touched me. Seynge God perſecuteth me, wyll ye vexe me alſo? Haue ye not yet ynough of the trouble of my fleſhe?

O that my wo̱des were wꝛytte, O that D
they were put i a boke: wold god they wer grauen wt an yꝛon penne in leade o̱ ſtone.

For I am sure, that my redemer lyueth, ād that I shall rise out of the earth in the latter daye: that I shall be clothed agayne w̄ this skynne, and se God in my flesshe. yee I myselfe shall behold him, not with other, but with these same eyes. My reynes are consumed within me, whan ye saye: Why do not we persecute him? we haue founde an occasion agaynst hym. But beware of the swearde, for the swearde wylbe auenged of wickednesse, and be sure, that ther is a iudgement.

The.xx.Chapter.

1 Then answered Sophar the Naamathite, and sayde: For the same cause do my thoughtes cōpell me to answere. And why? my mynde is tossed here and there. I haue sufficiently herde ẏ checkinge and reproffe, therfore am I purposed to make answere after my vnderstonding. Knowest thou not this, namely: that from the beginninge (euer sence the creacion of man vpon earthe) the prayse of the vngodly hath ben shorte, and that the ioye of ypocrytes continued but ẏ twinckling of an eye? Though he be magnifyed vp to the heauen, so that his head reacheth vnto the cloudes: yet he perisheth at the last like donge: In so much that they whiche haue sene him, saye: Where is he? He vanysheth as a dreame, so that he can no more be founde: and passeth awaye as a vision in the nighte. So that the eye whiche sawe him before, getteth now no sight of hym, ꝛ his place knoweth him nomore. His chyldren go a beggynge, theyr handes bringe them to sorowe, and heupnesse.

3 From his youth vp are his bones ful of vyce, whiche shall lye downe with hym in the earth. Whan wyckednesse is swete in his mouth, he hydeth it vnder his tūge. That he fauoureth, that will he not forsake, but kepeth it close in his throte. The meate that he eateth, shalbe turned to the poyson of serpentes within his body. The riches that he deuoureth, shall he perbreake agayne, for God shall drawe them oute of his belly. The serpentes heade shal suck him, and the adders tunge shall slaye him: so that he shal nomore se the riuers ꝛ brookes of hony and butter: But laboure shall he, and yet haue nothynge to eate. Greate trauaple shall he make for ryches, but he shal not enioye them. And why? he hath oppressed the poore, and not helped them: houses hath he spoiled, and not buylded them. His belly could neuer be fylled, therfor shal he perish in his couetousnesse. He deuoured so gredly, that he left nothing behynd, therfore his goodes shall not prosper.

4 * Though he had plentousnesse of euerythinge, yet was he poore, and therfor but a wretch on euery syde.

For though the wicked haue neuer so much to fill his bely, yet God shall sende his wrath vpō him, and cause his battayl to raigne ouer him: so ẏ yf he flie ẏ̄ wepens, he shal be shot with ẏ stele bow. The arow shal be take forth, and go out at his backe ꝛ a glisteryng sweard thorowe his gal, feare shall come vpon him. Ther shal no darknesse be able to hyde hym. An vnkindled fyre shall consume him, and what remayneth in his house, it shal be destroyed. The heauen shall declare his wickednesse, and the earthe shall take parte agaynst him. The substaunce that he hath in his house shalbe taken awaye ꝛ perish in the daye of th LORDES wrath. This is the porcion that the wicked shal haue of God, and the heretage that he maye loke for of the LORDE.

The. xxi. Chapter.

1 And Job answered, ꝛ sayd: O heare my wordes and amende your selues. Suffre me a lite, that I maye speake also, and the laugh my wordes to scorne, yf ye wyll. Is it with a man, that I make this disputacion? Which yf it were so, shuld not my spirite be then in sore trouble? Marck me well, be abashed, and laye your hande vpon your mouth. For whan I ponder and consyder this, I am afrayed, and my flesh is smytten with feare. * Wherfor do wicked men lyue in health, and prosperyte, come to theyr olde age, and increase in ryches? Theyr chylders children spring theyr syght, and theyr generacion before theyr eyes. Theyr houses are safe from feare. * For the rodde of God doth not smyte them. Their bullocke gendreth, and that not out of tyme: their cow calueth, and is not vnfruteful.

They sende forth theyr chyldren by flockes, and theyr sonnes lede the daunce. * They beare with them tabrettes and pypes, and haue instrumentes of musyck at theyr pleasure. They spende theyr dayes in welthynesse: but sodenly they go downe to hell. They saye vnto God: go from vs.

he delyte not the knowlege of thy wayes.
What maner of felowe is the Almyghtye,
that we shulde serue hym? What profyte
shulde we haue to submytte oure selues vn to hym? Lo, ther is vtterly no goodnesse in them, therfore will not I haue to do wyth
the counsell of the vngodly. * How oft shal
ꝑ candle of the wycked be put out? how oft commeth theyr destruccyon vpon them?
O what sorowe shall God geue them for theyr parte in hys wrath? * yee they shall be euen as chaffe before the wynde, and as dust that the storme carryeth awaye.

And though God saue theyr chyldren
from such sorowe, yet will he so reward the selues, that they shal knowe it. Their own destruccyon and mysery shall they se wyth
their eyes, and dryncke of the fearful wrath of ꝑ Almyghtye. For what careth he, what become of hys housholde after his death?
whole monethes palle awaye swyfter then an arowe, In as much the as God hath ꝑ
hyghest power of all, who can teache hym any knowlege? One dieth now whan he is myghtie and at hys best, ryche and in pros-perite: euen whan hys bowels are at the fattest, and hys bones full of mary. Another dyeth in sorowe and heuynesse, and ne uer had good dayes. Now slepe they both alyke in the earth, and the wormes couer them. But I knowe what ye thynke, yee &
what reasons ye magen against me vnrygh teous
ly. * For ye saye: where is the princes palace, where is the dwellynge of the vngod
ly? Axe ye not man that goeth by the waye, & (yf ye will not regarde theyr tokens, and dedes) he shall tell you, that * the wycked is kept vnto the daye of destruccyon, and that the vngodly shalbe brought forth in the day of wrath. Who darre reproue hym to hys face? who rewardeth hym for the vngracyousnesse that he doth?
yee shall he be brought to hys graue, and watch among the heape of the dead. The dulle be sayd vnto be buried among the stones by the broke syde. All men muste so depart hens, and ther are innumerable gone before hym. O how vayne is the comforte that ye geue me? Are not youre answeres alone contrary to ryght and trewth?

The.xxii.Chapter.

THEN Eliphas the Themanyte
gaue answere, and sayde:
Mate a man be compared vn
to God in wysdome, though
he seme to hymself, for to be ly

he hym? What pleasure hath God in that thou art ryghteous? Or what doth it pro-fyte hym, that thy wayes are perfecte? Is he afrayed to reprouе the, & to steppe forth with the in to iudgement? * Commeth not this for thy greate wyckednesse, & for thine
vngracyous dedes which are inumerable?
Thou hast taken the pledge from thy brethren for naught, and robbed the naked of theyr clothynge: * To such as were weery
hast thou geuen no water to drynke, thou hast withdrawen bread from the hungrie:
Should such one the as vseth violence, wrong & oppression (doinge all thinges of partialyte, & haunge respect of personnes) dwel in ꝑ lond? Thou hast sent wydowes away
emptie and oppressed the poore fatherlesse

Therfore art thou compassed about wt
snares on euery syde, and sodenly vexed wt
feare. Shuldest thou the se no darknesse?
Should not the waterfloude runne ouer ꝑ.
* Now because ꝑ God is hyghe the ꝑ hea-
uens, and because thou seyst ꝑ the starres
are so hyghe, wilt thou therfore saye: Tush
how shulde God knowe? Doth hys dominion reach beyonde the cloudes? Tush, ꝑ cloudes couer hym, ꝑ he maye not se, for he dwelleth in heauen. Well, thou wylt kepe
ꝑ olde waye, ꝑ all vnrighteousnes haue gone:
both olde and yonge, whose fundacion is a runnynge water, which saye vnto god: go fro vs, & after this maner: * Tush, what wyll the Almyghtye do vnto vs? where as he (not withstandynge) fylleth theyr houses with all good. Which meanynge of ꝑ vngod
ly be farre fro me. * For wt ioye shal ꝑ god
ly, and with gladnesse shall the innocent se ꝑ theyr increase shall be hewen down, and theyr posterite consumed with the fyre.

Therfore reconcyle the vnto God, and be content, so shall all thynges prosper wt
the ryght well. * Receaue the lawe at hys mouth, and laye vp hys wordes in thyne
harte. * For yf thou wylt turne to the Al-myghtye, thou shalt stonde fast, and all vn
righteousnesse shal be farre from thy dwel lynge: He shall geue the an harueste, which in plentye, and abundaunce shall excede the dust of the earthe, and the golde of Ophyr lyke ryuer stones. yee the Almigh
tye hys owne selfe shalbe thyne harueste, and the heape of thy money. Then shalt thou haue thy delyte in the Almyghtye, and lyft vp thy face vnto God. Then shalt thou make thy prayer vnto hym, and he shall heare the, and thou shalte kepe thy promyses. Then loke what thou takest in hand, he shal make it to prospere with the, and the lyght shall shyne in thy wayes.

For who so humbleth hymselfe, hym shall he set vp: and who so loketh mekelye, shal be healed, yf thou be innocent, he shal saue the: and thorowe the vngyltynesse of thyne handes shalt thou be delyuered.

The.xxiii. Chapter.

A IOb answered and sayd: My sayenge is yet thys day in bytternesse, and my hand heuy among my gronynges. O that I myght se hym & fynde hym: O that I myght come before hys seate, to pleate my cause before hym, and to fyll my mouth with argumentes. That I myghte knowe, what answer he wolde geue me: & that I myght vnderstonde, what he wold saye vnto me. Wyll he pleate agaynst me wyth hys greate power and strengthe: or wyl he leane hymselfe vtterly vpon me? Oh no, let hym not do so with me. But let hym geue me lyke power to go to lawe, then am I sure to wynne my matter. For though I go before, I fynde hym not: yf I come behynde, I can get no knowlege of hym: yf I go on the lefte syde to ponder hys workes I can not attayne vnto them: Iagaine, yf I go on the ryghte syde, he hydeth hymselfe, þ I can not se hym. But as for my waye, he knoweth it, * and trieth me as the golde in the fyre.

Dap. 3.a. 1.Pet. 1.b

B Neuertheles my fete kepe hys path, hys byghe strete haue I holden, and not gone out of it. I haue not forsaken the cõmaundement of hys lippes, but loke what he charged me wyth hys mouth, that haue I shut vp in my harte. It is he hymselfe alone, who wyl turne hym back? He doth as hym lysteth, and bringeth to passe what he wyll. He rewardeth me in to my bosome, & many other thinges mo doth he, as he may by hys power. This is the cause, that I shrenke at hys presence, so that whan I cõsyder hym, I am afrayed of hym. For in so much as he is God, he maketh my harte soft: & seynge þ he is Almightie, he putteth me in feare. Thus cã not I get out of darknesse, the cloude hath so couered my face.

The.xxiiii. Chapter.

A Consyderynge then that ther is no tyme hid from þ Almightye, howe happeneth it, þ they which knowe hym, wyl not regarde hys dayes? For some men ther be, that * remoue other mens lãdmarkes, that robbe them of theyr catell, & kepe the same for theyr owne: * that dryue a waye the asse of the fatherlesse: that take the wydowes ore for a pledge, that thrust the poore out of the waye, * and oppresse symple of the worlde together. Beholde, wylde asses in the desert go by tymes (as theyr maner is) to spoyle: yet the barrennesse mynistreth foode for their chyldren. They reape the corne feld that is not theyr owne: and gather the grapes out of þ vineyarde, whom they haue oppressed by vyolẽce. They are the cause that so many men are naked and bare, hauinge no clothes to couer them, and kepe thẽ from colde. So that whan the showers in the mountaines haue rayned vpon them, and they be all wet, they haue none other succurre, but to kepe them amonge the rockes.

They spoyle the fatherlesse chyldren, and put the poore in pylon: In so much that they let them go naked without clothynge, and yet the hungrie beare sheeues. The poore are fayne to labour in theyr oyle mylles, yee and to treade in theyr wyne presses, and yet to suffre thyrst. The whole cytie treyth vnto the LORDE wyth syghynge * the soules of the slayne make theyr complaynte: But God destroyeth thẽ not for all thys, where as they (for wythstondynge) are rebellyous and disobedient enemies: which seke not hys lyght and waye, nor turne agayn in to his path. * Tymely in the mornynge do they ryse to murthur the symple, and poore, and in the nyghte they go a stealynge.

The eye of the vngodly is lyke the eye of a vouterer, that wayteth for the darkenesse, sayeth thus in hymselfe: Tush, ther shall no man se me, & so he dysgyseth his face. In the nyght season they searche þ houses, & kepe them selues in the dayes tyme, but wyll not knowe the lyght. For as soone as the day breaketh, þ shadow of death commeth vpon them, and they go in horyble darknesse. The vngodly is very swyft: O that his eyen also vpon earthe were swyfter than a runnynge water, which suffreth not þ any man to beholde the fayre and pleasaunt by neardes. O that they (for the wyckednesse wich they haue done) were drawe to þ hell. sooner thẽ snow melteth at the heat. O full of cõpassion vpon thẽ were forgotten: they, dayntyes were wormes: þ they were clene put out of remembraunce, & vtterly brought downe lyke an vnfrutefull tree. For they mauhyne the baren, and make them that they cā not beare, and vnto widowes they do no good. They plucke downe ỹ myghtie with theyr power, and whan they them selues are gotten vp, they are neuer wythout feare, as lōg as they lyue. And though they myght be safe, yet they wyll not receaue it, for theyr eyes loke vpon theyr owne wayes. They are exalted for a lytle, but shortly are they gone, brought to extreme powerte, and taken out of the way: yee and lyeuely plucke of as ỹ eares of corne. Is it not so? Who wil then reproue me as a lyar, & laye that my wordes are nothing worthe?

The.xxv. Chapter.

Then answered Baldad ỹ Suhyte, and sayd: Power & feare is with hym aboue, that maketh peace (spirytyng) in his hye nelle, whole men of warre are innumerable, and whose lyghte aryseth ouer all. * But how maye a man compared vnto God, be iustifyed? Or how can he be clene, that is borne of a womā? Behold, the moone shyneth nothynge in comparison to hym, and the starres are vnclene in hys syghte. Howe muche more then man, that is but corrupcyon: and the sonne of man, whiche is but a worme?

The.xxvi. Chapter.

Iob answered, and sayde: O how helpest thow the weake? what comfort geuest thou vnto hym that hath no strength? Where is the councell ỹ thou shuldest geue him, which hath no wysdō? Wilt thou so shewe thyne excellent rychtousnelle? Before whom hast thou spoke thole wordes? Who made ỹ breth to come out of the mouth? The giauntes and worthies that are slayne, and lye vnder the worlde & theyr companions: yee and all they which dwell beneth in the hel are not hyd from hym, and the very destruccion it self can not be kepte out of hys syghte. He stretcheth out of the north ouer the emptie and hangeth the earth vpon nothynge. He byndeth the water in hys cloudes, ỹ they fall not downe together. He holdeth back his stoole, that it can not be sene, and spreadeth hys cloudes before it.

B * He hath cōpassed ỹ waters vnto certaine bondes, vntyll the daye and nyghte come to an ende. The very pylers of heauen tremble & quake at his reprofe. * He stylleth the see with hys power, & thorowe hys wysdome hath he set forth ỹ worlde. With his spirite hath he garnyshed the heauens, & with hys hand hath he wounded the rebellious serpent. This is now a shorte summe of hys doynges. But who is able sufficiently to rehearse hys workes? Who can perceaue, and vnderstond the thonder of his power?

Iob also proceded, and wente forth in hys communicacyon, sayenge: As truely as God lyueth (which hath taken away my power fro me) and the Almightie, that hath vexed my mynde: My lyppes shall talke of no vanyte, and my tunge shall speake no deceate, whyle my breth is in me, and as longe as the vynde (ỹ God hath geuē me) is in my nostrels. A

God forbydde, that I shulde graunte youre cause to be rycht. Is for me, vntyll myne ende come wyll I neuer go fro myne innocency. My righteous dealynge wil I kepe fast, and not forsake it: For my conscience reproueth me not in all my conuersacyon. Therfore myne enemy shalbe found as the vngodly, and he that taketh parte against me, as the vnrighteous. What hope hath ỹ ypocryte, though he haue greate good and though God geue him ryches after hys hartes desyre? Doth god heare him B the sooner, whan he crieth vnto him in his necessyte? Hath he suche pleasure and delyte in the Almyghtye, that he darre alwaye call vpon God: I wyll teache you in the name of God, and the thynge that I haue of the Almyghtie, wyl I not kepe frō you. Beholde, ye stonde in youre owne conceate, as though ye knewe al thynges. Wherfore then do ye go aboute with such vayne wordes, sayenge: * This is the porcion ỹ Iob. 20.a the wicked shal haue of god, & the heritage that tyrauntes shall receaue of ỹ Almightie. ỹ he get many chyldren, they shall perysh wyth ỹ sworde, & his posterite shal haue scarcenelle of bread. Loke who he leaueth behynde hym, they shall dye & be buried, & no man shall haue pyte on hys wydowes. Though he haue as much money as ỹ dust C of the earth, and rayment as ready as the claye, he maye well prepare it: but the godly shal put it vpō him, and ỹ innocent shal deale out ỹ money. Hys house shall endure as the moth, & as a boothe that the watchman maketh. * Whan ỹ rych man dyeth, he carieth nothinge with hym: he is gone Luce. 12.b Ps. 48.c in the twynklynge of an eye. Destruccyon taketh holde vpon hym as a water floude, and the tempest stealeth hym awaye in the nyght season. A vehement wynde caryeth hym hence, and departeth: a stonne plucketh hym out of hys place. It russheth in vpon hym, and spareth hym not, he maye not escape from the power therof. Than clap men theyr hondes at hym, yee & leaste vpō hym, whan they loke vpon hys place.

The. xxviii. Chapter.

A Deu. 8.b THer are places * where syluer is molten, and where golde is tryed: where yron is dygged oute of the grounde, and stones resolued to metall. The darknesse shall once come to an ende, he cā seke out the grounde of all thynges: ỹ stones, the darke, and the horrible shadowe, with the ryuer of water parteth he a sunder, the straunge people that knoweth no good neghboureheade: suche as are rude, vnmanerly and boysteous. He bryngeth foode out of the earth, and that whiche is vnder, consumeth he w fyre. Ther is foūd a place, whose stones are clene Saphyrs, and where ỹ clottes of the earth are golde. Ther is a waye also that the byrdes know not, that no vulturs eye hath sene: wherin the proude and hyghe myuded walke not, and where no lyon cōmeth. There putteth he his hande vpon the stony rockes, and ouerthoroweth the mountaynes. Ryuers flowe out of the rockes, and loke what is pleasaunt, his eye seyth it. Out of droppes bryngeth he great floudes together, and ỹ

B Eccli. 1.a. 7.c Iacob. 1.a 3. Reg. 3.b. 4.c Pro. 2.a thynge that is hyd bryngeth he to lyghte. * How commeth a man then by wysdome? Where is the place that men fynde vnder stondynge? Uerely no man can tell howe worthye a thynge she is, nother is she foūd in the londe of the lyuynge. The depe sayeth: she is not in me. The see sayeth: she is not with me. She can not be gotten for ỹ mooste fyne golde, * nother may ỹ pryce of Hap. 7.b. her be bought with ony moneye. No wedges of golde of Ophyr, no precious Onix stones, no Saphirs maye be compared vn to her. Nother golde, nor Cristall, nother swete odours, nor goldē plate. Ther is nothynge so worthye, or so excellent, as once to be named vnto her: for perfecte wysdom goeth farre beyonde them all. The Topas that commeth out of Inde, maye in no wyse be lykened vnto her: yee no maner of apparell how pleasaunt, & layre so euer it be.

From whence then commeth wysdome? and where is the place of vnderstondynge? She is hyd from the eyes of all men, yee and from the foules of the ayre, Destruccyon and deathe saye: we haue herde tell of her with oure eares. But God knoweth her way, and knoweth hyr place. For he beholdeth the endes of the worlde, and loketh vpon all that is vnder the heauen. When he weyed the wyndes, and measured the waters: whan he set the rayne in ordre, & gaue the myghtye floudes a lawe: Then dyd he se her, then declared he her, prepared her, and knewe her. And vnto man he sayde: Beholde, * to feare the LORDE, is wysdome: & to forsake euel, is vnderstondynge.

The. xxix. Chapter.

MOreouer Job proceded, and wente forth in hys communacyon, & sayenge: O that I were as I was in the monethes that are past, and in the daies when God preserued me: whan hys lyght shyned vpon my heade: whan I wente after the same light and shine, euē thorow the darknesse. As it stode with me, whan I was welthy and had ynough: whan God prospered my house: whan the Almyghtye was with me: whan my houshold folkes stode about me: whan my wayes ranne ouer with butter: & whan the stony rockes gaue me ryuers of oyle: whan I wente thorow the cyte vnto the gate, and whan they set me a chayre in the strete: whan the yong men (as soone as they sawe me) hyd them selues, & whan the aged arose, and stode vp vnto me: whan the prynces left of theyr talkynge, & layed theyr hande to theyr mouth: whan I might tie kepte styll theyr voyce, and whan their tūges cleued te the rofe of theyr mouthes. When al they that herd me, called me happie: & whan al they ỹ sawe me, wysshed me good. For I delyuered the poore when he cried, & the fatherlesse ỹ wanted helpe. He ỹ shuld haue ben lost, gaue me a good word, & the widowes hart praised me. And why? I put vpon me ryghteousnes, which couered me as a garment, and equite was my crown. I was an eye vnto ỹ blind, & a fote to ỹ lame. I was a father vnto ỹ poore. And whā I knewe not theyr cause, I sought it out diligently. I brake ỹ chawes of the vngracious, * & pluct ỹ spoyle oute of their teeth.

Therfore, I thought verely, ỹ I shuld haue died in my nest: & ỹ my dayes shuld haue ben as many as ỹ sonde ar ỹ see. For my rote was spred out by the waterside, & the dew lay vpō my corne. Myne honour encreased more and more, and my bowe was euer the stronger in my hande. Unto me men gaue eare, me they regarded, and with silence they tarryed for my counsell. & I had spoken, they wolde haue it none other wayes, my wordes were so well take amonge them. They watted for me, as the earth doth for the rayne: and gaped vpon me, as the grounde doth to receaue the latter shower. Whā I laughed, they knewe well it was not earnest: & thys testymony of my countenaunce pleased thē nothinge at all. Whā I regarded vnto theyr waye, I was the chefe, & sat as a kynge amonge hys seruātes: Or as one that comforteth such as be in heuynesse.

The.xxx.Chapter.

But now they that are my inferiours, & yonger then I, haue me in derision: yee euen they, whose fathers I wolde haue thought scorne to haue set vā the dogges of my cattell. The power and strengthe of theyr hādes mighte do me no good, & as for theyr age, it is spente & past awaye wythout ony profyt. For very mysery & honger, they wente aboute in ỹ wyldernesse lyke wretches & beggers, pluckig vp herbes from amonge the bushes, and the Junipers rote was theyr meate. And whā they were dryuen forth, men cryed after them, as it had ben after a theefe. Theyr dwellyng was beside foule brookes, yee in the caues & dennes of the earth. Upon the hye herth wente they aboute cryenge, & in the brome hylles they gathered them together. They were the chyldren of fooles, & vylanes, which are dead away from the worlde. * Now am I theyr songe, & am become theyr vesynge stocke, they abhorre me, they flye farre fro me, & stayne my face with spette. For the LORDE hath opened hys quyuer, he hath hyt me, & put a bridle in my mouth. Upon my ryghte hāde they rose together agaynst me, they haue hurte my feet, made a waye to destroye me, & my path haue they clene marred. It was so easy for them to do me harme, ỹ they neded no mā to helpe them. They fell vpon me, as it had ben the breakynge in of waters, & came in by heapes to destroy me. Fearfulnesse is turned agaynst me. Myne honour vanysheth awaye more swiftly then wynde, & my prosperyte departed hence lyke as it were a cloude. Therfore is my mynd poured ful of heuynesse, & the dayes of trouble haue taken hold vpon me. My bones are pearsed thorowe in the nyghte season, & my senowes take no rest. With al theyr power haue they chaunged my garment, & gyrded me therwith, as it were vā a coate. I am euen as it were claye, & am become lyke asshes & dust. Whā I crye vnto the, thou doest not heare me: & though I stonde before ỹ, yet thou regardest me not. Thou art become myne enemye, & wyth violent hāde thou takest part agaynst me. In tymes past thou dyddest set me vp on hygh, as it were aboue the wynd, but now hast thou geuen me a very sore fall. Sure I am, ỹ thou wylt delyuer me vnto death: where as a lodgynge is prepared for all men lyuynge. Now vse not men to do violence vnto them, that are destroyed alreadye: but where hurte is done, there vse they to helpe. Dyd not I wepe in the tyme of trouble? Had not my soul compassion vpō the poore? yet neuertheles where as I loked for good, euell happened vnto me: and where as I wayted for lighte, there came darknesse. My bowles seeth within me, & take no rest, for the dayes of my trouble are come vpon me. Wekely & lowly came I in, yee and wythout ony displeasure. I stode vp in the congregacion, & communed with them. But now I am a companyon of dragons, & a felow of Estriches. My skynne vpon me is turned to black, and my bones are burnt vā heate: my harpe is turned to sorow, & my ppe to weppynge.

The.xxxi.Chapter.

I Made a conuenaunt vā myne eyes, * ỹ I wold not loke vpō a damsel. For how great a portion shall I haue of God frō aboue? & what enheritaunce from the Almighty on hye? Is for ỹ vngodly, & he ỹ ioyneth himself to ỹ cōpany of wicked doers shall not destruccion & mysery come vpō hi? * Doth not he se my waies & telleth al my steppes? * yf I haue cleued vnto vanite, or yf my fete haue rūne to deceaue: let my be weyed in an eaue balaunce, ỹ god may se myne innocēcy. * yf so be ỹ I haue withdrawē my foote out of the ryght waye, yf my harte hath folowed myne eye syght, yf I haue stayned or defiled my hondes: O then is it reason that I sowe, and another eate: yee that my generacyon, and posteryte be clene roted oute. * yf my harte hath lusted after my neighboures

Deut 4.c. 17.b. Sap 13.a gat so muche. * Dyd I euer greatly regarde the rysynge of the Sonne? Or had I the goynge downe of the Moone in greate reputacion? Hath my hart medled priuely with ony deceate? Or dyd I euer kysse myne owne hande? (that were a wyckednesse worthy to be punyshed, for then shuld I haue denyed the God yͤ is aboue.)
Pro.17.a. * Haue I euer reioyced at yͤ hurt of myne enemy? Or was I euer glad, yͤ ony harme happened vnto hym? Oh no, I neuer suffered my mouth to do suche a synne, as to wysh him euel. yet they of myne own housholde saye: who shall let vs, to haue our belly full of hys flesh? I haue not suffered a D straunger to lye without, but opened my doores vnto hym. Haue I euer done ony wycked dede, where thorow I shamed my selfe before men? Or ony abhominacyon, I I was fayne to hyde it? For yf I had stand ony greate multitude of people: Or yf I had bene desyred of the symple, Or then shulde I haue bene afrayed. Thus haue I quyetly spent my lyfe, and not gone out of the doore. O that I had one whiche would heare me. Lo, this is my cause. Let the almyghtie geue me an answere, & let hym write his contrary partye, sure me with a lyne. Then shall I take it vpon my shulder, & as a garlande aboute my heade. I haue told the nombre of my goynges, and delyuered them vnto hym as to a prynce. But yf it be that my londe crye against me, or that the forowes thereof make ony complaynt: Or I haue eate the frutes therof vnpayed for, yee yf I haue grened ony of the plowmen: Than, let thistles growe in steade of my wheate, and thornes for my barlye.

The.xxxii.Chapter.

SO these thre men wolde speake nomore wyth Job, because he helde hymself a righteous man. But Eliu the sonne of Barachell the * Bussite of the kynred of Ram, was very sore displeased at Job, that he called hymself iust before god. And with Jobs thre fredes he was angry also, because they had found no reasonable answere to ouercome hi. Now tarried Eliu tyll they had ended theyr communicacyon with Job, for why? they were elder then he. So whan Eliu the sonne of Barachell the Bussite sawe, that these thre men were not able to make Job an answere, he was moch cõtent: so yͤ he gaue answere hymself, and sayde: * Consyderinge that I am yonge, and ye be men of age, I was afrayed, and durste not shewe forth my mynde, but I thought thus within myself: It becometh olde mẽ to speake, * and the aged to teache wysdome. Euery man (no doute) hath a mynde, but it is the * inspiracyon of the almightie that geueth vnderstondyng. Men are not wyse, nother doth euery aged man vnderstonde the thinge that is lawfull. Therfore wyll I speake also (so farre as I maye be herde) and wyll shewe my mynde opinion. For whan I had waytyd tyll ye made an ende of youre talkynge, and herd youre wysdome, what argumẽtes ye made in youre communicacion: yee whan I had diligently pondred what ye sayd, I found not one of you ỳ made ony good argumẽt agaynst Job, or ỳ dyrectly could make an swere vnto hys wordes: lest ye shulde pray

se youre selues, to haue founde oure wysedome: because it is God that hath cast him out, & no mã. Neuertheselle, seyng he hath not spoken vnto me, therfore wyll I not an swere hym as ye haue done (for they were so abashed, ỳ they could not make answer
nor speake one worde) but in so much as ye spyll not speake. stondynge styll lyke dõme men & making no answere: I haue a good hope for my part to shape hym an answere
& to shewe hym my meanynge. For I am full of wordes, & the spyrete ỳ is wythin me, compelleth me. Beholde, I am as the new wyne whiche hath no vente, & bursteth the new vessels in sunder. Therfore wyll I speake, ỳ I maye haue vente: I wyll open my lyppes, & make answere. I wyl regard no maner of personne: no, no man wyll I spare, * For yf I wolde go aboute to plea se men, I knowe not how soone my maker wolde take me awaye.

The.xxxiii. Chapter.

Wherfore, heare my wordes (O Job) & herken vnto all, ỳ I wyll saye: Beholde, I wil opẽ
my mouthe, & my tunge shall speake out of my chawes. My hart shall ordre my wordes a ryght, & my lyppes shal talke of pure wysdome. The spyrete of God hath made me, & * the breth
of the Almyghtye hath geuen me my lyfe.
yf thou canst, then geue me answere: prepa
re thyselfe to stonde before me face to face.
Beholde, before God am I euen as thou,
for I am fashioned & made euen of ỳ same mould. Therfore thou nedest not be afray ed of me, nother nedes thou to feare, ỳ my authorite shalbe to heuy for the. Now hast thou spoken in myne eares, & I haue herd
the voyce of thy wordes: * I am clene wy thout ony faulte, I am innocent, & ther is no wickednesse in me. But lo, he hath fy red a quarell agaynst me, & taketh me for hys enemy * he hath put my foote in ỳ stoc
kes, & loketh narowly vnto al my pathes.
Beholde, vnto these vnreasonable wor-
des of thyne wyll I make answere.

Should god be reproued of mã? Why doest thou thẽ striue agaynst him, because he geueth ỳ no accomptes of all his doyn-ges? For whã god doth oure commaunde
a thinge, ther shulde no mã be curious, to search whether it be right. * In dreames & visions of ỳ night season (whã slombring cõmeth vpõ men, ỳ they fall a slepe in their beddes) he rowneth them in ỳ eares, he informeth thẽ, & sheweth thẽ plainely, ỳ it is he, which withdraweth mã from euell, deli
uereth him from pryde, kepeth his soul frõ destruccion, & his lyfe from ỳ sweande, he chastneth him with sycknesse, & bryngeth
him to his bed: he layeth sore punyshment
vpõ his bones, so ỳ his lyfe may awaye wi
no bread, & his soule abhorreth to eate ony daintie meate: In so muche, ỳ hys body is clene consumed away, & his bones appea-re nomore. His soul draweth on to destruc cion, & hys lyfe to death. Now yf ther be an angell (one amonge a thousande) sent for
to speake vnto mã, & to shewe him ỳ right
waye: then is God mercyfull vnto hym, & sayeth: He shalbe deliuered, ỳ he fall not downe to destruccion, for I am sufficiently recõcyled. Thã his flesh (which hath bene in misery & trouble) shalbe, as it was in his youth. For yf he submitte himself vnto god
he is gracious, & sheweth him his countenaũce ioyfully, & rewardeth mã for his righ teousnesse. Such a respecte hath he vnto men. Therfore let a mã confesse, (& saye:) I offended, but he hath chastened & refourmed me: I dyd vnrigteously, neuertheless
he hath not recõpenced me therafter. yee
he hath delyuered my soule from destrucci on, & my lyfe, that it seyth ỳ light. Lo, thus worketh god alway wi mã, ỳ he kepeth his soule frõ perysshing, & letteth him enioye ỳ light of the liuing. Marke wel (O Job) &
heare me: hold the stil, vntil I haue spoke.
But yf thou hast ony thyng to saye, thẽ an-swere me & speake: for thy answer pleaseth
me. yf thou hast nothinge, thẽ heare me, &
hold thy tunge, so shal I teache ỳ wysdom.

The.xxxiiii. Chapter.

Eliu proceaded forth in his cõ
munication, and sayd: Heare
my wordes (O ye wyse men)
herken vnto me, ye that haue vnderstondyng. For lyke as ỳ

ueth and discerneth the wordes. * Is for ỳ

The.xxxvi.Chapter.

Eliu spake moreouer and sayd: I Thynkest thou it ryght that thou sayest: I am righteous
before god? Seyng thou sayst
so, how doest thou knowe it?
What thing hast thou more excellẽt then I, ꝑ am a synner? Therfore wyl I geue an-swere vnto ꝑ & thy frendes: loke vpon the heauen, & behold it, cõsider ꝑ cloudes, how they are hyer then thou. ꝑ if thou synnest,
what doest thou vnto him, ꝑ thyne offens
be many, how getrest thou his fauour? ꝑ if thou be righteous, what geuest thou him?
Or what receaueth he of thyn handes? Of such an vngodly person as thou, & of ꝑ son
of man ꝑ is righteous, as thou pretendest
to be: ther is a great crye & cõplaynt made by them that are oppressed w violence, yee
euery man cõplayneth vpõ the cruel arme
of tyrauntes. For suche one neuer sayeth:
Where is God ꝑ made me? & that lyeth
vpon vs, that we myght prayse him in the nyght? Which geueth more vnderstõding then he doeth the beastes of the earth, and teacheth vs more then ꝑ foules of heauen.

ꝑ if ony such complayne, no man geueth
answere, & that because of the wickednesse
of proude tyrãntes. But ꝑ a man call vpõ God, doth not he heare him? Doth not the almyghty accept his crye? Whã thou spea kest then, shulde not he pardon the, ꝑ if thou open thy selfe before him, and put thy trust in him? Then vseth he no violence in his wrath, nother hath he pleasure in curious and depe inquisicions. Therfore hath Job opened his mouth but in vayn, and folysh
ly hath he made so many wordes.

The.xxxvi.Chapter.

Eliu proceded forth in his tal-kyng, & sayd: holde the styll a lytle, & I shal shewe the what I haue yet to speake on gods behalfe. I wyl open vnto the

yet more of myne vnderstondyng, & proue my maker righteous. Trewe are my wordes, & no lye: & the knowlege wherwithal I argue agaynst ỹ, is perfect. Beholde, God castyth not awaye the mighty, for he himselfe is myghty in power and wysdome.

Is for the vngodly, he preserueth them not, but helpeth ỹ poore to their right. * He turneth not his eyes away frō the righteous: * he setteth vp kynges in their trone, and confyrmeth them, so that they alwaye sytt therin. But yf they be layed in preson & chaynes, or bounde with the bondes of pouerte: then sheweth he them their workes and dedes, and the synnes wherwith they haue vsed cruell violence.

He with puny shyng and nurturynge of them, cowneth them in the eares, warneth them to leaue of from their wickednesse, & to amende. * yf they now wyl take hede & be obedient, they shal weare out their dayes in prosperite, & their yeares in pleasure & ioye. But yf they wyl not obeye, they shall go thorow ỹ swearde, & perysh or euer they be aware. Is for such as be fayned, dissemblers and ypocrytes, they heape vp wrath for them selues: for they call not vpō him, though they be his presoners. Thus their soule perisheth in foolishnes, & their life vnder ỹ condempned. The poore deliuereth he out of his straytnesse, & comforteth suche as be in necessite & trouble. Euen so shal he kepe the (yf thou wylt be content) from the bottomlesse pyte that is beneth: & if thou wilt holde the quiet, he shall fyll thy table with plentousnes.

Neuertheless thou hast cōdempned the iudgment of the vngodly, yee euen suche a iudgment & sentence shalt thou suffre. For then shal not thy cause be spylled wt cruelte, nor pacified with many gyftes. Hath god ordeyned then, ỹ the glorious lyfe of the, & al such mighty mē shuld not be put downe? Prolong not thou the tyme, tyll ther come a night for the, to set other people in thy stede. But beware that thou turne not aside to wickednesse & synne, which hytherto thou hast chosen more then mekenesse. Beholde, God is of a myghty hye power: Where is ther such a gyde & law geuer as he? Who wil reproue him of his way? who wil say vnto him thou hast done wronge?

O consider how great and excellent his workes be, whom al men cōmend & prayse: yee they wonder at him, & yet they se him but a farre of. Beholde so great is God, ỹ he passeth oure knowlege, nother are we able to come to ỹ experience of his yeares. * He turneth ỹ water to small droppes, he dryueth his cloudes together for to rayne, so ỹ they poure downe, & droppe vpō men. He can spredde out the cloudes (a couerynge of his tabernacle) & cause his light to shine vpon them, and to couer the bottom of the see. By these thinges gouerneth he his people, and geueth them abundance of meat, in the turnynge of a hande he hydeth the lyght, & at his cōmaundement it cōmeth a gayne. The rysyng vp therof sheweth he to his frendes and to the cattell.

Deu. 11. c. and. 28. d.

The.xxxviii.Chapter.

AT this my harte is astonnied, and moued out of his place. Heare then the sounde of his voyce, & the noyse ỹ goeth out at his mouth. He gouerneth euery thing vnder ỹ heauen, & his lyght reacheth vnto the ende of ỹ world. A roaringe voyce folowyth him: for his glorious maiesty geueth such a thonder clap, ỹ (though a man heare it) yet may he not perceaue it afterward. It geueth an horryble sounde, whan God sendeth out his voyce: great thinges doth he, whiche we can not cōprehende. * Whan he cōmaūdeth the snow, it falleth vpon the earth: As soone as he geueth the rayne a charge, Immediatly the shoures haue their strength & fall downe. He sendeth keare vpon euery man, ỹ they might know their owne workes. The beastes crepe into their dēnes, & take their rest. Out of the south cōmeth the tempest, and colde out of the north.

Ps. 147. b

At the breth of God, the frost cōmeth, & ỹ waters are shed abrode. The cloudes do their labour in geuyng moystnes, the cloudes poure downe their rayne. He distributeth also on euery syde, according as it pleaseth him to deale out his workes, that they maye do what soeuer he cōmaundeth them, thorowe the whole worlde: whether it be to punysh ony londe, or to do good vnto them that seke him.

Herken vnto this (O Job) stonde styll, & considre ỹ wonderous workes of God. Art thou of coūsell wt God, whan he doth these thinges? Whan he causeth ỹ light to come forth of his cloudes? Art thou of his coūsel whan he spredeth out ỹ cloudes? Hast thou the perfect knowlege of his wonders? and how thy clothes are warme, whan ỹ londe is styll thorow the south wynde? hast thou helped him to spredde out ỹ heauē, which is to loke vpō, as it were cast of cleare metal.

C Teach vs what thal we say vnto hi, for we are vnmete because of darkenesse. Shal it be told hi, what I y Should a mā speake, or shulde he kepe it backe? For euery man seyth not ỹ light, ỹ he kepeth cleare in the cloudes, whiche he clenseth whan he maketh the wynde to blow. Golde is brought out of the north, but the prayse & honoure of Gods feare cōmeth from God himselfe. It is not we that can fynde out ỹ almyghtynesse for in power, equite and ryghteousnesse he is hyer than can be expressed. Seynge then ỹ euery body feareth him: why shuld not all wyse men also stonde in feare of hi.

The.xxxviii.Chapter.

A THan spake the LORDE vnto Job out of the stonne, & sayd: What is he, that hydeth his mynde with koolysh wordes, Job. 40.a * Gyrde vp thy loynes lyke a man, for I wil question wt the, se thou geue me a direct answer. Where wast thou, whā I layed ỹ fundacions of the earth? Tell playnly yf thou hast vnderstōdyng. Who hath measured it, knowest thou? Or who Psa. 23.a hath spred the lyne vpon it? * Where vpon stonde ỹ pylers of it? Or who layed ỹ corner stone, where wast thou whā ỹ morning starres gaue me prayse, & whā al ỹ angels Iere. 5.d of god retoyced? * Who shutte the see with dores, whan it brake forth as a chylde out of his mothers wombe? Whan I made ỹ cloudes to be a couerynge for it, & swadled Psa. 32.b 103.b Luce. 8.c. it wt the darke? * whan I gaue it my commaūdment, makyng dores & barres for it, sayenge: Hetherto shalt thou come, but no B further, & here shalte thou laye downe thy proude & hye waues. Haste thou geuen the morynge his charge (as soone as thou wast borne) and shewed the dayspryng his place ỹ it myght take holde of the corners of the earth, and ỹ the vngodly myght be shaken out? Their tokēs & weapōs hast thou turned lyke clay, & set them vp agayn as ỹ chaūgyng of a garmēt. yee thou hast spoyled the vngodly of their lyght, & broken ỹ arme of the proude. Camest thou euer in to the grounde of ỹ see? Or hast thou walked in the lowe corners of the depe? Haue the gates of death bē opened vnto ỹ, or hast thou sene the dore of euerlastyng treasure? Hast thou also perceaued, how brode ỹ earth is? Now yf thou haste knowlege of all, then shew me where lyght dwellyth, and where darkenesse is: that thou mayst bringe vs vnto their quarters, yf thou canst tell the way to their houses. Knewest thou (whan thou wast borne) how old thou shuldest be?

Wentest thou euer in to ỹ treasuries of C the snow? or hast thou sene ỹ secrete places of ỹ hayle? * wich I haue prepared against Exo. 9.a ỹ tyme of trouble, agaynst the tyme of bat- Iosu. 10.a tayl & warre? By what waye is ỹ lyght parted, and the heate dealte oute vpon earth? Who deuideth the abundaunce of waters in to ryuers, or who maketh a waye for the stormye wether, that it watereth and mayshureth the drye, and barē grounde: to make the grasse growe in places where no body dwelleth, and in the wyldernesse where no man remayneth? Who is the father of rayne? Or who hath begotten the droppes of dew? Out of whose wombe came ỹ yse? who hath gendred the coldnes of the ayre? that the waters are as hard as stones, and lye congeled aboue the depe. Haste thou brought the .vii. starres together? Or art thou abel to breake ỹ Cyrcle of heauē? Cast thou bringe forth the morynge starre, & D the euenynge starre at conuenient tyme, & conuey them home agayn? Knowest thou the course of heauen, that thou mayst set vp the ordinaunce therof vpon earth? Wouret, canst thou lyfte vp thy voyce to the cloudes, that they mayboure down a gret rayn vpon the? Canst thou thonder also, ỹ they maye go theyr waye, and be obedient vnto the, sayenge: lo, here are we? Who giueth sure wysdome, or stedfast vnderstondynge? who nombreth the cloudes in wysdome? who stylleth the behement waters of the heauen? who turneth the clottes in dust, and them to be clottes agayne? Hunteste thou the praye from the Lyon, or fedest thou hys whelpes lyenge in theyr denne and lurkynge in theyr couches? * who pro- Psa. 146.b uideth meat for ỹ raue, whā his yongones crie vnto god, & flie about for wāt of meate?

The.xxxix.Chapter.

KNowest thou the tyme when I the wilde goates bring forth theyr ponge amonge the stonye rockes? Or layeste thou wayte whan the hindes bere fawne? Reckenest thou the monethes after they engender, that thou knowest the tyme of theyr bearing? Or whan they lye downe, whan they cast theyr yongones, and whā they are delyuered of theyr trauayle and payne? How theyr yongones grow vp & waxe greate thorowe good fydinge? how they go forth and come agayne? Who lowseth the wylde asse go free? or who lowseth the bondes of the Wule? Unto whom I haue geuen the wyldernesse to be their house, & the vntylled lōde to be their dwelling place, that they may geue no force for the multytude of people in the cytyes, nother to regarde the crienge of the dryuer: but to sēke their pasture about ꝑ moūtaynes, & to folowe vpon ꝑ grene grasse. Will the vnicorne be so tame as to do seruyce, or to abyde styll by thy crybbe? Canste thou bynde the yock about him in thy forowes, to make him plowe after the in ꝑ valleys? Mayst thou trust him (because he is strōg) & cōmyt thy labour vnto him? mayst thou beleue him, that he wyll bringe home thy corne, or to cary ony thyng vnto thy barne? The Estrich (whose fethers are fayner then the wynges of the sparowhauke) whan he hathe layed his egges vpon the grounde, he hydeth them in the dust, and forgetteth them: so that they myght be troden vnder fete, & broken with some wylde beast.

So harde is he vnto his yonge ones, as though they were not his, and laboureth in vayne without ony feare. And that because god hath taken wysdome from him, and hath not geuen him vnderstondyng. Whan his tyme is, he styeth vp on hye, & scorneth nother for horse nor man.

Hast thou geuen ꝑ horse his strength, or learned him to bow downe hys necke with feare, ꝑ he letteth him selfe be dryuen forth like a grashopper, where as ꝑ stout neyeng that he maketh is fearfull? he breaketh the ground vnder the hoffes of his fete cheerfully in his strength, & rūneth to mete ꝑ harnest man. He layeth aside al feare, his stomack is not abated, nother starteth he a back for any swearde. Though the quyuers rattle vpon him, though the speare and shylde glytter: yet ruffeth he in fearfully, & beateth vpon the grounde. He feareth not the noyse of the trumpettes, but as soone as he heareth the hornes blowe, truly (sayth he) for he smelleth the battayl afarre of, the noyse of the capteynes and the shoutyng.

Cōmeth it thorow thy wysdome, that the goshauke flyeth towarde the south? Doth the Egle mount vp & make his nest on hye at the commaundement? He abydeth in the stony rocke, and vpon the hye toppes of harde mountaynes, where no mā can come. From thence may he beholde his pray, and his feare about with his eyes. His yonge ones are fed with bloude, * and where ony dead body lyeth there is he immedyatly.

Moreouer god spake vnto Job & sayd: Can he ꝑ stryueth wt the almyghty, be at rest? Shulde not he which disputeth with god, geue him an answere? Job answered the LORDE sayeng: Behold, I am to vyle a personne, to answere the, therfore wyl I laye my hande vpon my mouthe. Once or twyse haue I spoke, but I wyl say no more.

Jerem.50. & 51.c.d. WHo * is able to stonde before me? Or * who hath geuen me ony thing afore, hande, that I am bounde to reward hym agayne? All thinges vnder heauẽ are myne. I feare hi not, whether he threaten, or speake fayre. Who lyfteth hym vp & strypeth hym out of hys clothes, or who taketh hi by the byt of hys brydle? Who openeth ꝓ dore of hys face? for he hath horrible tethe round about. Hys body is couered w̃ scales as it were w̃ shyldes, locke in, kept, well cõpacte together. One is so ioyned to another, ꝓ no ayre cã come in: yee one hangeth so vpõ another, & sticke so together, ꝓ they cã not be sundered. His neesing is like a glistering fyre, & his eies lyke ꝓ morning shyne. Out of his mouth go torches & fyre brandes, out of his nosethrels ther goeth a B smoke, lyke as out of an hote lethinge pot. His breth maketh ꝓ coales burne, ꝓ flame goeth out of his mouthe. Jn his necke remayneth strẽgth, & before his face sorow is turned to gladnesse. The mẽbres of his body are ioyned so strayte one to another, & cleue so fast together, ꝓ he cãnot be moued His hart is as hard as a stone, & as fast as ꝓ stythye ꝓ the hãnerman smiteth vpõ. Whãne goeth, ꝓ mightest of al are afrayed, & ꝓ waues heuy: yet he draw out ꝓ sward ther may nother spear, nor brest plate abyde him. He setteth as much by a strawe as by yron, & as much by a rotten stock as by metall. He starteth not away for him ꝓ bedeth ꝓ bowe, & as for stynge stones, he eateth as much for stubble as for chẽ. He counteth ꝓ hãmer no better thẽ a strawe, he laugheth him to scorne ꝓ shaketh the speare. He treadeth ꝓ gold in ꝓ myre like ꝓ sharpe pat̃hedes. He maketh ꝓ depe to seeth & boyle like a pot, & stereth the see together like an oitmẽt: ꝓ way is light after him, ꝓ depe is his walkig place. Vpõ earth is ther no power like vnto his, for he is so made, ꝓ he feareth not. yf a mã wil cõsydre al hye thinges, this same is a kinge ouer all ꝓ childre of pryde.

The. xlii. Chapter.

THen Job answered ꝓ LORDE & sayde: * I know ꝓ thou hast all power of all thynges, and that ther is no thought hyd from the, for who cã kepe his owne counsell so secrete, but it shall be knowe? Therfore haue I spoken vnwyselye, seynge these thinges are so hye, & passe myne vnderstondinge. O herken thou vnto me, & let me speake: answere me vnto ꝓ thinge ꝓ I will axe ꝓ. I haue geuen diligẽce vnto the, & nowe I se the with myne eyes. Wherfore I geue myne owne self ꝓ blame and take repentaũce in the dust & asshes.

Nowe whan the LORDE had spoken these wordes vnto Job, he sayde vnto Elyphas the Themanyte: I am displeased at the and thy two fredes, for ye haue not spoken ꝓ thynge that is ryght before me, lyke as my seruaunt Job hath done. Therfore take vii. oxen, and vii. rammes, and go to my seruaunt Job, * offre vp all for your selues a burntofferinge, & let my seruaunt Job prayer for you. Hym will I accepte, & not deale wyth you after your folysshnesse in that ye haue not spoke the thynge that is right, like as my seruaũt Job hath done.

So Eliphas the Themanite, Bildad the Suhite, and Sophar the Naamathite went ther way, and dyd accordinge as the LORDE commaunded them. The LORDE also accepted the persone of Job, and the LORDE turned hym vnto Job, whan he prayed for hys frendes: * and gaue Job twyse as much as he had before.

And ther came ther vnto him all his brethren, all his systers, with all them ꝓ were of his acquayntaũce afore, and sate with him in his house, wondringe at him, and sorrynge him ouer all the trouble that the LORDE had brought vpon him. Euery man gaue him a shepe & a Jewel of golde. * And the LORDE blessed the laters ende of Job more than his begynnynge, for he had after this xiiii. thousande shepe, vi. M. camels, a M. yockes of oxen, a M. asses. He had eyghtene sonnes also, and vii. doughters. The eldest he called Jemima, the seconde, Kesia, the thyrde, Kerenhappuch. In all the londe were no soch fayre women as ꝓ doughters of Job were. Their father gaue them enheritaunce amonge their brethre. After this lyued Job an C c. & xl. yere, & saw his children, & his childrens children vnto ꝓ fourth generacion. And Job dyed, beynge olde & full of dayes.

Conserua me domine: quoniam.

The.xvj Psalme of Dauid.

PReserue me (o God) for in the do I truste.
I haue sayde vnto ỹ LORDE: thou art my God, my goodes are nothinge vnto the.
All my delyte is vpon the sayntes that are in the earth, and vpon suche lyke.
But they that runne after another, shal haue greate trouble.
Theyr drinkofferynges of bloude wyll not I offre, nother make mencyon of their name in my mouth.
* The LORD hymselfe is my good, & my porcyõ, thou mãteynest myne enheritaũce. Deut.3.e
The lot is fallen vnto me in a fayre grounde, yee I haue a goodly heretage: I wyll thanke the LORDE for geuynge me warnynge: my reynes also haue chastened me in the nyght season. B
I fore hande sawe I God alwayes before me, for he is on my ryghthande, that I shulde not be moued.
Therfor dyd my hart reioyce, & my tũg was glad, my flesh also shall reste in hope.
* For why? thou shalt not leaue my soul in hell, nother shalt thou suffre thy sayncte to se corruption. Actu.2.b & hab.13.b
Thou hast shewed me ỹ wayes of lyfe: thou shalte make me full of ioye with thy countenaunce. At thy ryghthande ther is pleasure and ioye for euermore.

Exaudi domine iusticiam meam,

The.xvij A Psalme of Dauid.

HEare the tyght O LORD, * tõ sydre my complaynte: herken vnto my prayer, ỹ goeth not oute of a fayned mouth. A Psal.25.a
Let my sentence come forth from thy presence, and loke vpon ỹ thinge that is equall.
* Thou hast proued & visited mynhart in ỹ night season: thou hast tried me in ỹ fyre & hast fõud no wickednesse i me: for I vtterly purposed, ỹ my mouth shal not offende. Psa.16.a.
Because of the wordes of thy lippes, I haue kepte me from the workes of men, in the waye of the murtherer.
Oh order thou my goynges in thy pathes, that my footesteppes slippe not.
For vnto the I crie, heare me o god: enclyne thyne eares to me, and herken vnto my wordes.
Shew thy maruaylous louing kindnesse thou ỹ saueste thẽ which put theyr trust in ỹ from such as resyst thy ryghthand.
* Kepe me as the apple of an eye, defende me & vnder the shadowe of thy wynges, B Iosue.1.b. & mat.23.c Frõ ỹ vngodly ỹ trouble me, fro myne enemies wich cõpasse my soul roũd about.
Wich manteyne theyr own welthinesse & oppression, and theyr mouthe speaketh proude thynges.
They lye wayting in our way on euery side, turning theyr eyes down to ỹ ground.
Lyke as a liõ is gredy of his pray, & as it wer a liõs whelpe lurckyng in his dẽne.

Up LORDE, dispoynte hym, and caste hym downe: delyuer my soule * wyth thy swearde from the vngodly.

Ephe.6.b.

From the men of thy hand (o LORDE) from the men of the worlde, whiche haue theyr porcyon in thys lyfe: whose belyes thou fyllest with thy treasure.

They haue chyldre at theyr desyre, & leaue þ reste of theyr substaūce for their babes

But as for me, I wyll beholde thy presence in ryghteousnesse: and whan thy glory appeareth, I shall be satisfyed.

Diligam te domine fortitudo.

The.xviii. A psalme of Dauid whan he was deliuered from the hande of Saull.

A

I Wyll loue the (o LORDE) my strength.

The LORDE is my succour, my refuge, my Sauecour: my god, my helper, in whom I trust: my buckler, the horne of my saluacō and my defence.

2.Re.22.a. * I wyll prayse the LORDE, & cal vpō hym, so shall I be safe fro myne enemyes.

Psl.114.a * The sorowes of death cōpassed me, & þ brokes of vngodlinesse made me afrayed.

The paynes of hell came aboute me, þ snares of death toke holde vpon me.

yet in my trouble I called vpon þ LORDE, and complayned vnto my God.

So he herde my voyce out of hys holy temple, and my complaynte came before hym, yee euen in to hys eares.

Mat.27.f * Then the earth trembled, & quaked, the very fundacions of the hylles shoke, & were remoued, because he was wrothe.

There wente a smoke oute of his nosetrels, and a consumynge fyre oute of hys mouth, so that coales were kyndled at it.

He bowed the heaues, and came down, and it was darcke vnder hys fete.

He rode vpon the Cherubins, & dyd flie: he came flyēge vp the wynges of the wynd.

He made darknesse hys pauylyon roūd aboute hym, wyth darcke water and thick cloudes to couer hym.

At the bryghtnesse of hys presence the cloudes remoued, wyth hale stones, and coales of fyre.

The LORDE also thondred out of the heauen, and the heyght gaue hys thondre wyth hale stones and coales of fyre.

He sent out his arowes & scatred them, he cast sore lyghtenynges, & destroyed thē.

The sprynges of waters were sene, & the fundacions of the rounde worlde were discouered at thy chydynge (o LORDE) at the blastynge and dreth of thy displeasure.

He sent downe from the heyght to fetch me, and toke me out of greate waters.

He delyuered me fro my stroūg enemyes, & fro my foes, wich were to mighty for me.

They preuented me in the tyme of my trouble, but the LORDE was my defence.

He brought me forth also in to lyberte and deliuered me, because he had a fauour vnto me.

The LORDE shal reward me after my righteous dealyng, & accordyng to þ clennesse of my hādes shall he recompense me.

C

For I haue kept the wayes of the LORDE, and haue not behaued myself wickedly agaynst my God.

I haue an eye vnto al hys lawes, & cast not out hys commaundementes fro me.

Uncorrupte wyll I be before hym, and wyll eschue myne owne wyckednesse.

Therfore shall the LORDE reward me after my ryghteous dealynge, and accordynge vnto the clennesse of my handes in hys eye syghte.

With the holy thou shalte be holy, and with the innocent thou shalt be innocent.

* With the clene thou shalt be clene: & with the frowarde thou shalt be frowarde.

For thou shalt saue the poore oppressed, * & bring down þ hye lokes of the proude.

Thou lyghtest my candel, o LORD my god: thou makest my darknesse to be light.

For in the I can discōfyte an hoste of mē: yee in my god I can leape ouer þ wal.

The waye of God is a perfecte waye: * þ wordes of the LORDE are tried in the fyre: he is a shylde of defence, for all them that truste in hym.

* For who is God, but the LORDE? Or who hath ony strength, but oure God?

* It is God that hath gyrded me with strength, and made my waye vncorrupte.

He hath made my fete lyke hertes fete, and set me vp on hyghe.

* He teacheth myne hādes to fight, and maketh myne armes to breake euen a bow of stele.

Thou haste geuen me þ defence of thy saluacyon: thy righthand vpholdeth me, & thy louinge correccion maketh me great.

Thou hast made rowm ynough vnder me to go, þ my footesteppes shuld not slyde.

I wyll folowe vpon myne enemyes, and take them: I wyll not turne, tyll they be discomfyted.

I wyll smyte them, that they shall not be able to stond, but fall vnder my fete.

Thou haste gyrded me with strength vnto the battayl, thou haste throwen them al downe vnder me, ẏ rose vp agaynst me.

Thou haste made myne enemyes to turne theyr backes vpõ me, thou hast destroyed them that hated me.

* They cryed, but ther was none to helpe them: yee euen vnto ẏ LORDE, but he herde them not.

I wyll beate them as small as the dust before the wynde, I wyll cast them out as the claye in the stretes.

Thou shalte delyuer me from the stryvynges of the people, thou shalt make me the head of the Heythen.

A people whome I haue not knowne, shall serue me.

As soone as they heare of me, they shal obey me, but the straunge chyldren dyssemble with me.

The straũge chyldren are waxen olde, and go haltyng out of theyr pathes.

The LORDE lyueth: and blessed be my helper, praysed be the God of my saluaciõ.

Euen the God which seyth that I be auenged, and subdueth the people vnto me.

It is he that delyuereth me fro my cruell enemyes: thou shalte lyfte me vp from them that ryse vp agaynst me, thou shalte rid me from the wycked man.

* For this cause I wyll geue thankes vnto ẏ (O LORDE) amonge the gentyls, and syng prayses vnto thy name.

* Great prosperyte geueth he vnto his kynge, and sheweth louyng kyndnesse vnto Dauid his anoynted, yee and vnto his sede for euermore.

Cœli enarrant gloriam dei.

These thy seruaũt kepeth, * and for kepyng of them ther is great rewarde. Psa. 118. a

Who can tel how oft he offendeth? Oh clense thou me from my secret faultes.

Kepe thy seruaũt also from presumptuous synnes, lest they get the dominiõ ouer me: so shall I be vndefyled and innocent from the great offence.

Yee the wordes of my mouth & the meditacion of my hart shal be acceptable vnto ẏ, O LORDE, my helper, & my redemer.

Exaudiat te dominus in die.

The.xix. A psalme of Dauid.

THe LORDE heare the in the tyme of trouble, the name of the god of Jacob defende the.

Sende the helpe from the Sanctuary, and strengthe the out of Syon.

Remembre all thy offerynges, and accept thy burnt sacrifyce. Sela.

Graunt the thy hartes desyre, and fulfyll all thy mynde.

The.xxii. A Psalme of Dauid.

A My God, my God: why haste
Mat.27.c thou forsakẽ me? the wordes
Mar.15.b of my cõplaynte are farre fro my health.

O my God, I crye in ỹ day tyme, but thou hearest not: and in ỹ nyght season also I take no reste.

yet dwellest thou in the Sanctuary, o thou worshyppe of Israell.

Oure fathers hoped in the, they trusted in the, and thou diddest delyuer them.

They called vpon the, and were helped: they put theyr trust in the, and were not confunded.

But as for me, I am a worme and no man: a very scorne of men, and the outcast of the people.

* All they ỹ se me, laugh me to scorne, they shute out their lippes, & shake their heades

* He trusted in God, let hym delyuer hym: let hym helpe hym, yf he wyll haue hym.

* But thou arte he that toke me out of my mothers wombe: thou waste my hope, whan I hanged yet vpon my mothers brestes.

I haue bene lefte vnto the euer sence I was borne, thou arte my god, euen fro my mothers wombe.

O go not fro me thẽ, for trouble is hard at hande, and here is none to helpe me.

Greate bulles are come about me, fat oxen close me in on euery syde.

They gape vpon me with theyr mouthes, as it were a rampyng & roaring lyon.

* I am poured out lyke water, all my bones are out of ioynte: my harte in the myddeste of my bodye is euen lyke melteynge ware.

My strẽgth is dryed vp like a potsherd my tung cleueth to my gommes, and thou hast brought me in to the dust of death.

For dogges are come about me, the counsell of the wycked hath layed sege agaynst me.

They pearsed my handes and my fete. I myghte haue tolde all my bones: as for them, they stode staryng & lokyng vpõ me.

* They haue parted my garmentes amonge them, & cast lottes vpõ my vesture.

But be not thou farre fro me, o LORDE thou art my succoure, hayst the to helpe me.

Delyuer my soule from the sweard, my dearlynge from the power of the dogge.

Saue me from the lyons mouthe, and heare me from amonge the hornes of the vnicornes.

* So wyl I declare thy name vnto my brethren, in the myddeste of the congregacyon wyll I prayse the.

O prayse the LORDE yee that feare hym: Magnifye hym all ye sede of Iacob, and let all the sede of Israell feare hym.

* For he hath not despysed, nor abhorred ỹ myserable estate of the poore, hath not hyd hys face fro me, but whan I called vnto hym, he herde me.

I wyll prayse the in the great congregacyon, and perfourme my vowes in the syght of all them that feare the.

D * The poore shal eate, and be satisfied: they that seke after the LORDE shal prayse him: your harte shal lyue for euer.

All the endes of the world shal remembre them selfes, and be turned vnto the LORDE: and all ỹ generacyons of ỹ Heythen shal worshyp before hym.

For the kyngdome is the LORDES, & he shal be the gouernour of the Heythen.

All such as be fat vpon earth, shal eate also & worshyp: All they ỹ lye in the dust, & lyue so hardly, shal fal downe before him.

The sede shal serue him, and preach of the LORDE for euer.

They shal come & declare his ryghteousnesse vnto a people that shal be borne, whome the LORDE hath made.

* What profyte is ther in my bloude, yf I go downe to corrupcyon?

May the dust geue thankes vnto the? or shall it declare thy faythfulnesse?

Heare (O LORDE) and haue mercy vpō me: LORDE be thou my helper.

And so thou haste turned my heuynesse in to ioye: thou hast put of my sacke cloth, and gyrded me with gladnesse,

That my honour myght synge prayses vnto the without ceassyng: O LORDE my God, I wyl geue thankes vnto ỹ for euer.

In te domine speraui non confundar.

The.xxx. A psalme of Dauid.

IN the O LORDE * is my trust: let me neuer be put to confusion, but delyuer me in thy ryghteousnesse. ℣ ps.24.a. and.70.a

Bowe downe thyn eare to me, make haste to delyuer me: be thou my stronge rocke and a house of defence, that thou mayst saue me.

For thou arte my strong holde and my castell. O be thou my gyde, and leade me for thy names sake.

* Drawe me out of the nette ỹ they haue layd preuily for me, for thou art my stregth & * Into thy hādes I cōmend my spyrete: thou haste delyuered me O LORDE thou God of trueth. 1 Re.19.a and.21.b. & Luc.23.c

I hate them that holde of vanities, and my trust is in the LORDE, I wyll be glad and reioyce in thy mercy: for thou hast con

sydzed my trouble, thou haste knowne my soule in aduersyte.

B Thou hast not delyuered me ouer in to the handes of the enemye, but haste sette my fete in a large rowme.

Haue mercy vpon me O LORDE, for I am in trouble, myne eye is cõsumed for very heupnesse: yee my soul and my body.

My lyfe is waren olde wyth heupnesse, and my yeares wyth mourynge.

My strẽgth kaylcth me, because of myn aduersyte, and my bones are corrupte.

I am become a very reproke amonge al myne enemyes, my neghbours and they of myne owne acquayntaunce are afrayed of me: they that se me in the strete, conueye them selues fro me.

I am clene forgotten and out of mind, as a dead man: I am become lyke a broken vessell.

C For I haue herde the blasphemye of ỹ multytude: euery man abhorreth me: they haue gathered a councell together against me, & are purposed to take awaye my lyfe.

But my hope is in the O LORDE, and I saye: thou arte my God.

My tyme is in thy hande: delyuer me from the hande of myne enemyes, and frõ them that persecute me.

Shewe thy seruaunte the lyght of thy coũtenaũce, helpe me for thy mercyes sake

Let me not be confunded (o LORDE) for I call vpon the: let the vngodly rather be putte to confusyon, and broughte vnto the hell.

Let the lyenge lippes be put to silence, which cruelly, dysdanously, and despytefully speake agaynst the ryghteous.

O howe greate, and manyfolde is thy good, which thou hayst hyd for them that feare the:

O what thynges bringest thou to passe for them that put theyr truste in the, euen before the sonnes of men:

D Thou hidest them priuely by thyn own presence from the proude men, thou kepest them secretlye in thy tabernacle, from the stryfe of tunges.

Thankes be to the LORDE, for he hath shewed me maruaylous greate kyndnesse, in a stronge cytie.

For whan the sodane feare came vpon me, I sayde: I am caste out of thy syghte.

Neuertheles, thou herdest myne humble prayer, whan I cryed vnto the.

O loue the LORDE (al ye his sayntes) for the LORD preserueth ỹ faythfull, and plenteously rewardeth he the proude doer.

* Be stronge therfore, and take a good harte vnto you, al ye that put youre truste in the LORDE.

Beati quorum remisse sunt.

The.xxxii. A Psalme of Dauid.

BLessed are they, whose vnrighteousnesses are forgeuen, and whose synnes are couered.

Blessed is the man, vnto whom the LORDE imputeth no synne, in whose spyrete ther is no gyle.

For while I helde my tunge, my bones consumed awaye thorowe my daylye complaynynges.

And because thy hande was so heuy vpon me both daye and nyghte, my moysture was lyke the drouthe in sommer. Sela.

Therfore I confessed my synne vnto ỹ, and hydde not myne vnryghteousnesse.

* I sayde: I wyll knowlege myne offence, and accuse my selfe vnto the LORDE, and so thou forgauest me the wyckednesse of my synne. Sela.

* For this shall euery sayncte make his prayer vnto the in due season, therfor shal not the great waterfloudes come nye hym.

Thou arte my defence in the trouble ỹ is come aboute me, O compasse thou me aboute also wyth the ioye of delyueraunce. Sela.

* I wyll enforme the, and shewe the the waye wherin thou shalt go: I wyll fasten myne eyes vpon the.

Whose mouthes thou must holde wyth byt and brydle, yf they wyll not obeye the.

Greate plages shall the vngodly haue: but who so putteth his truste in the LORDE, mercy shall compasse hym on euery syde.

Be glad (o ye ryghteous) and reioyce in the LORDE, be ioyfull all ye that are true of harte.

Exultate iusti in domino.

REioyce in ỹ LORDE (* ye righteous) for it becommeth well iust to be thankfull.

* Prayse the LORDE wyth harpe: syng Psalmes vnto him wyth the lute & instrument of ten stringes.

Synge hym a new songe, per synge lustely vnto hym, and with a good courage.

For the worde of the LORDE is true,

and all his worckes are faythfull.

He loueth mercy and iudgement, the earth is full of the goodnes of the LORDE.

* By the worde of the LORDE were the heauens made, and all the hoostes of them by the breath of his mouth.

* He gathereth the waters together as it were in a bottell, and layeth vp the depe in store.

Let all the earth feare the LORDE, and let all them that dwell in the worlde, stonde in awe of him.

* For loke what he sayeth, it is done: & loke what he cõmaũdeth, it stondeth fast.

* The LORDE bringeth the counsel of the heythen to naught, and turneth the deuyces of the people.

* But the counsell of the LORDE endureth for euer, & the thoughtes of his harte from generacyon to generacyon.

* Blessed are the people that holde the LORDE for their God, and blessed are the folke whome he hathe chosen to be his heritage.

* The LORDE loketh downe from heauen, and beholdeth al the chyldren of men: from his stronge seate he consydereth all them that dwell in the worlde.

* He onely hath fashioned all the hartes of them, & knoweth al their workes.

A kyng is not holped by his owne great power, nether is a gyaunt saued throwe the greatnesse of his owne strength.

* A horse is but a vayne thynge to saue a man, & is not the power of his strengthe that can delyuer him.

* Behold, the eye of the LORDE loketh vpon them that feare him, and put their trust in his mercy.

That he may delyuer their soules from death, and to fede them in the deare tyme.

Let our soule patiently abyde the LORDE for he is our helpe and shylde.

Dixit iniustus vt delinquat.

The. xxxvi. A Psalme of Dauid.

My harte sheweth me the wyckednesse of the vngodly, that ther is no feare of God before hys eyes.

For he dyssembleth before hys face, so longe, tyll hys abhominable synne be founde oute.

The wordes of hys mouth are vnryghteousnesse, and deceat, * he wyl not be learned to do good.

He ymagyneth myschefe vpon his bed, he wyll come in no good waye, and refuse the thynge that is euell.

Thy mercy (O LORDE) reacheth vnto the heauen, and thy faythfulnesse vnto the cloudes.

Thy ryghteousnesse standeth lyke the strong mountaynes, and thy iudgement lyke the greate depe: * thou LORDE preseruest both men and beastes.

How precious is thy mercy (O god) that the chyldren of men maye put theyr trust vnder the shadowe of thy wynges?

1.Reg.1.b Now whan I thynke there vpon, * I poure oute my harte by my selfe, for I wold fayne go hence with the multitude, & passe ouer with them vnto the house of God, in the voyce of prayse, and thankesgeuynge, amonge such as kepe holy daye.

Psa.42.a * Why arte thou so full of heuynesse, (o my soule) and why arte thou so vnquiete wythin me?

O put thy truste in God, for I wyll yet geue him thankes, for the helpe of his coũtenaunce.

My god, my soule is vexed within me: therfore I remembre * the londe of Iordane, and the litle hill of Hermonim.

Iosue.12.a

B One depe calleth another with the voyce of thy whistles, * all thy wawes and waters floudes are gone ouer me.

Ione.2.a.

The LORDE hath promised his louing kindelie daylie, therfor wil I praise hi in ỹ nyght season, and make my prayer vnto ỹ God of my lyfe.

I will saye vnto God my stony rocke: Why haste thou forgotten me? why go I thus heuely, while ỹ enemy oppresseth me?

While my bones are broken, and while mine enemies caste me in the tethe, daylye sayenge vnto me: where is now thy God?

Why art thou so heuy (o my soule) and why art thou so disquieted within me?

O put thy truste in God, for I will yet thanke hym for the helpe of hys countenaunce, and because he is my God.

Iudica me deus, et discerne causam meam.

The.xlitj. A Psalme of Dauid.

I Geue sentẽce vpõ me (o God) and defende my cãuse against the vnholy people: Oh deliuer my from the deceatfull, and wycked man.

For thou (o God) art my strength: why hast thou shut me from the? Why go I the so heuely, while the enemie oppresseth me?

Oh sende out thy lyght, and thy treuth, that they maye lede me and bringe me vnto thy holy hyll, and to thy dwellynge.

That I maye go vnto ỹ aulter of God, euen vnto the God which is my ioye, and pleasure, and vpon the harpe to geue thankes vnto the, o God my God.

Psa.42.a * Why art thou so heuy (o my soul) and why art thou so disquieted wythin me?

O put thy trust in God, for I wyll yet geue hym thankes for helpe the of his coũtenaunce, and because he is my God.

Deus auribus nostris audiuimus.

The.xlitij. A Psalme of ỹ children of Corah.

WE haue herde with oure eares (o God) * oure fathers haue told vs, what thou hast done in theyr tyme, of olde.

How thou hast driuen out the Heythen wyth thy hande, and planted them in: how thou hast destroyed the nacyons and cast them out.

* For they gat not the londe in possession thorow theyr owne sweard, neither was it theyr owne arme that helped them.

But thy ryghthande, thyne arme, and the lyght of thy countenaũce, because thou hadde ste a fauoure vnto them.

Psa. * Thou art the kynge my God, thou sendest helpe vnto Iacob.

Thorow the wyll we ouerthrowe oure enemyes: and in thy name wyll we treade them vnder that ryse vp agaynst vs.

For I wyll not truste in my bowe, it is not my sweard that shall helpe me.

But it is thou that sauest vs from oure enemyes, and puttest them to confusyon, that hate vs.

We wyll alwaye make oure boaste of God, & prayse thy name for euer. Sela.

But now thou forsakest vs, and puttest vs to confusyon, and goest not forth wyth oure hoostes.

Thou makeste vs to turne oure backe vpon oure enemyes, so that they which hate vs, spoyle oure goodes.

* Thou lettest vs be eaten vp lyke shepe, and scattrest vs amonge the Heythen.

Thou sellest thy people for naught, and takest no moneye for them.

Thou makest vs to be rebuked of oure neghbours, to be laughed to scorne, & had in derisyon, of them ỹ are round about vs.

Psa. * Thou hast made vs a bery by word amonge the Heythen, and that the people shake theyr heades at vs.

My confusyon is daylie before me, and the shame of my face couereth me.

For the voyce of the slaunderer & blasphemer, for the enemye and auenger.

All thys is come vpon vs, and per haue we not forgotten the, nor behaued oure selues vnfaythfully in thy conuenaunt.

Oure harte is not turned backe nether oure stepes gone out of thy waye.

That thou smitest vs in the place of the serpent, and couerest vs with the shadow vdeth.

If we had forgotten the name of oure God, and holden vp oure handes to ony straunge God:

Shulde not God fynde it oute? for he knoweth the very secretes of the hart.

*But for thy sake we are kylled all ye daye longe, and are counted as shepe appointed to be slayne.

*Vp LORD, why slepest thou? awake and cast vs not of for euer.

Wherfore hydeste thou thy face? wilt thou clene forget our mysery, & oppressiõ?

*For our soule is brought lowe, euē vnto the dust, and oure bely cleueth vnto the grounde.

Aryse LORDE, helpe vs, and delyuer vs for thy mercyes sake.

Eructauit cor meum verbum bonum.

The.xliiii. A Psalme of the chyldren of Corah.

MY harte is dyenge of a good matter, I speake of that, which I haue made of the kyng: My tunge is the penne of a ready wryter.

Thou arte the fayrest amonge the chyldren of men, full of grace are thy lyppes, therfore God blesseth thy for euer.

Gyrde the with thy swearde vpon thy thye (o thou myghty) wyth worshippe and renowne.

Good lucke haue thou with thine honour, ryde on with the treuth, meknesse, & righteousnesse, and thy righthande shall teach the wonderfull thynges.

Thy arowes are sharpe, the people shal be subdued vnto the, euen in the myddeste amonge the kynges enemyes.

*Thy seate (o God) endureth for euer: the septer of thy kyngdō is a right septer.

Thou haste loued ryghteousnesse, and hated iniquyte: wherfore God (whiche is thy god) hath anoynted the wyth the oyle of gladnesse aboue thy felowes.

All thy garmētes are lyke myrre, Aloes and Casia, whan thou cōmest out of thine ryche palaces in thy bewtyful glory.

Kynges doughters go in thy goodlye araye, and vpon thy righthande standeth ye quene in a vesture of ye moost fyne golde.

Herken (o doughter) consydre and encline thyne eare: forget thyne owne people, & thy fathers house.

So shall the kynge haue pleasure in thy bewte, for he is thy LORDE, and thou shalt worshyppe hym.

The doughters of *Tyre shal be there wyth gyftes, the ryche amonge the people shall make theyr supplicacyon before ye. C Psal.37.c. C 31.27.28

The kynges doughter is all glorious wythyn, hyr clothyng is of wrought gold.

She shalbe brought vnto the kynge in rayment of nedle worke, and maydens after her: such as be nexte her shalbe brought vnto the.

With ioye and gladnesse shall they be brought, and go in to the kynges palace.

In steade of thy fathers thou hast gotten chyldren, whom thou shalt make prynces in all londes.

I wyll remembre thy name from one generacyon to another: therfore shall the people geue thankes vnto the worlde wythout ende.

The.xlvi. A Psalme of the chyldren of Corah.

IN oure troubles and aduersyte, we haue found, that God is our refuge, oure strength, and helpe. A

Therfore wyl we not feare though the earth fel, and though the hilles were carted in to the middes of the see.

*Though the waters of the see raged, and were neuer so troublous, and though the mountaynes shoke at the tempest of the same. Sela. Psa.92.a

For ther is a floude, whiche wyth hys ryuers reioyceth the cytie of god, the holy dwellynge of the hyghest. Job.7.d.

God is in ye middest of her, therfore shal she not be remoued: for god helpeth her, & that ryght early.

The Heythen are mad, the kyngdomes make much a do: but whan he sheweth hys voyce, the earth melteth awaye.

The LORDE of hoostes is with vs, the god of Jacob is oure defence. Sela. B

O come hyther, and beholde the workes of the LORDE, what destructyōs he hath brought vpon the earth.

He hath made warres to ceasse in all ye worlde, he hath broken the bowe: he hath knapped the speare in sonder, and burnt ye charettes in the fyre. Psa.75.a

Be styll then & confesse that I am god I wyll be exalted amonge the Heythen, & I wyll be exalted vpon earth.

The LORDE of hoostes is with vs, the god of Jacob is oure defence. Sela.

Omnes gentes plaudite manibus.

The.xlvti. A psalme of the chyldren of Corah.

Psa.95.a *For the LORDE ꝯ moost hyest is to be feared, and he is the greate kynge vpon all the earth.

He shal subdue the people vnder vs, & the Heythen vnder our fete.

He choseth vs for an heretage, ꝯ bewtye of Jacob whom he loued. Sela.

God is gone vp with a mery noyse, and the LORD ꝯ the sounde of the trompet.

O synge prayses, synge prayses vnto God: o synge prayses, synge prayses vnto our kynge.

For God is kyng of al the earth, o syng prayses vnto him with vnderstondynge.

God is kynge ouer ꝯ Heythen, god sytteth in his holy seate.

The princes of the people are gathered together vnto the god of Abraham: for god is farre farre hyer exalted then the myghtyrodes of the earth.

The.xlviti. A psalme of the chyldren of Corah.

1 GReat is the LORDE and hyely to be praysed, in ꝯ cytie of our god, euen vpon his holy hyll.

The hyll of Syon is lyke a fayre plante, wherof all the londe reioyceth: vpon the northsyde lyeth the cytie of the great kynge.

God is well knowne in hir palaces, ꝯ he is the defence of the same.

Exper.20.a *For lo, kynges are gathered, & gone by together.

They marueyled to se suche thynges: they were astonyed, & sodenly rane downe.

Feare came ther vpon them and sorow, as vpon an woman in hir trauayle.

Thou shalte breake the shyps of the see, thorow the East wynde.

8 Lyke as we haue herde, so se we in the cytie of the LORDE of hooستes, in the cytie of oure god: God vpholdeth the same for euer. Sela.

The.xiiij. A Psalme of Asaph.

THe LORDE, euen the mygh-tye God hath spoken, and called the worlde from the rising vp of the sonne vnto ỹ going downe of the same.

*Out of Syon appeareth the glorious beawte of God.

Oure God shall come, and not kepe silence: ther goeth before hym a consumpng fyre, & a myghty tēpest rounde about hym.

He shall call the heauens from aboue, & the earth, that he mate iudge his people.

Gather my sayntes together vnto me, those that set more by the conuenaunt then by ony offerynge.

And the heauens shall declare his righteousnesse, for god is iudge himselfe. Sela.

Heare o my people, let me speake: let me testifye amonge you, o Israell: I am god, euen thy God.

I reproue the not because of thy sacrifyce, thy burntofferynges are alwaye before me.

*I wil take no bullockes out thy house, nor goates out of thy foldes.

For al the beastes of the feld are myne, and thousandes of cattel vpon the hilles.

I knowe all the foules vpon the mountaynes, and the wylde beastes of the felde are in my syght.

If I be hongrie I wyll not tell the: for the whole worlde is myne, and al that therein is.

Thynkest thou, that I will eate ỹ flesh of oxen, or drynke the bloude of goates?

Offre vnto God prayse, and thankesge uynge, and pay thy vowes vnto ỹ moost hyghest.

But vnto ỹ vngodly saieth God: Why dost thou preache my lawes, and takest my conuenaunt in thy mouth?

Where as thou hatest to be reformed, and castest my wordes behynde the?

Yf thou sawest a theefe, thou runnest wt hym, and art partaker wt the aduouterers.

Thou lettest thy mouth speake wickednesse, and thy tunge paynteth deceate.

Thou sittest and speakest agaynst thy brother, yee and sklaunderest thyne owne mothers sonne.

This thou doest, whyle I hold my tunge and thynkest me to be euen suche one as thy selfe: but I wil reproue the, and set my selfe agaynst the.

O consyder this, ye that forget God: lest I plucke you awaye, and there be none to deliuer you.

Psa.88.e Thou shalt be feared * as longe as the Sonne and the Moone endureth, from one generacyon to another.

In his tyme shal ryghteousnesse florysh, yee and abundaunce of peace, so longe as the Moone endureth.

Exod.23.d 3.Reg.4.b * His dominion shal be from the one see to the other, and from the floude vnto the worldes ende.

They that dwel in the wyldernesse shal knele before hym, and his enemyes shall lycke the dust.

3.Re.10.a Esa 61.a. Math.2.b * The kynges of the see and of ye Iles shal bringe presentes, the kynges of Araby and Saba shal offre gyftes.

All kynges shall worshyp hym, and all heythen shall do hym seruyce.

For he shall delyuer the poore whan he cryeth, and the nedy that hath no helpe.

He shall be fauourable to the symple & poore, he shal preserue the soules of suche as be in aduersyte.

He shal delyuer their soules from erroz cion & wronge, and deare shal their blonde be in his syght.

He shal lyue, and vnto him shal be geuen ye golde of Arabia: prayer shal be made euer vnto him, & dayly shal he be prayed.

Ther shall be an heape of corne in the earth hye vpon the hylles, his frute shall shake lyke Libanus, and shall be grene in the cytie lyke grasse vpon the earth.

His name shal endure for euer, his name shall remayne vnder the Sonne amonge the posterytes, whiche shall be blessed thorow him, & al the heythen shal prayse him.

Iud.13.b Psa.135.a Blessed be the LORDE God, euen the God of Israell, * whiche onely doth wonderous thynges.

And blessed be the name of his maiesty for euer, & all londes be fulfylled with his glorye. Amen. Amen.

Here ende the prayers of Dauid, the sonne of Jesse.

Quàm bonus deus Israel, his qui rectum.

The.lxxii. A Psalme of Asaph.

HOwe louynge is god vnto Israel, to suche as are of clene harte.

Neuertheles my fete were almost gone, my treadynges had well nye slypte.

And why? * I was greued at ye wicked, to se the vngodly in suche prosperyte.

For they are in no parell of death, but stonde fast lyke a palace.

They come in no mysfortune lyke other folke, nother are they plaged like other men.

And this is the cause that they are so puft vp in pryde, and ouerwhelmed with cruelte and vnrighteousnesse.

Their eyes swel for fatnesse, they do eue what they lyst.

Corrupte are they, and speake blasphemyes malycyously, proude and presumptuous are theyr wordes.

They stretch forth theyr mouth vnto heauen, and their tunge goeth thorow the worlde.

Therfore fal the people vnto them, and therout sucke they no small aduantage.

* Tush (saye they) how shall God perceaue it? is ther knowlege in ye most hyest?

Lo, these are ye vngodly, these prosper in ye world, these haue ryches in possession.

* Shulde I then clense my harte in vayne, (thought I) and wasshe my handes in innocency?

Wherfore shulde I be then punyshed dayly, & be chastened euery morning.

yee I had almost also said euen as they, but lo, then shulde I haue condemned the generacyon of thy children.

Then thought I to vnderstonde this, but it was to harde for me.

Vntyll I went vnto the Sanctuary of god, and consydred the ende of these men.

* Namely how thou hast set them in a slyppery place, that thou mayst cast them downe headlynges, and destroy them.

O how sodenly do they consume, perysh, and come to a fearful ende?

* yee euen lyke as a dreame when one awaketh, so makest thou theyr ymage to

haply out of the cytie.

Thus my harte was greued & it wente euen thorowe my reynes.

So foolish was I & ignorant, and as it were a beast before the

Nevertheless, I am alway by the, thou holdest me by my righthande.

Thou ledest me wyth thy counsell, and afterwarde receauest me vnto glory.

O what is ther prepared for me in heauen: ther is nothynge vpon earth, that I delyre in comparison of the.

My flesh & my hart fayleth, but God is the strength of my hart, * and my porcion for euer.

For lo, they that forsake the, shal perish: thou destroyest all them that committe fornication agaynst the.

But it is good for me, to holde my fast by God, to put my trust in the LORD God, and to speake of all thy workes.

Ut quid deus repulisti in finem, iratus est.

The.lxxiii. I Psalme of Asaph.

O God, wherfore doest thou cast vs so cleane away? why is thy wrath so hote agaist the shepe of thy pasture?

O thynke vpon thy cõgregacion, whom thou hast purchased from the begynnynge: the stafe of thyne inheritaunce, whom thou hast redemed, euen thys hyll of Syon wherin thou dwellest.

Trade vpon them with thy fete, & cast them downe to the ground, for the enemie hath destroyed altogether in ỹ Sanctuary

Thyn aduersaries roare in thy houses, & set vp their banners for tokens.

Men may se the ares glister aboue, like as those that hewe in the wood.

They cut downe all the sylynge worke of the Sanctuary with bylles and ares.

* They haue set fyre vpon the Sanctuary, they haue defyled the dwellyng place of thy name, euen vnto the grounde.

Yee they say in their hartes: Let vs spoyle them altogether, thus haue they burnt vp all the houses of God in the londe.

We se oure tokens nomore, ther is not one prophet more, no not one that vnderstandeth vny more.

O God, how longe shal the aduersary thus dishonoure: howe longe shall the enemye blaspheme thy name? for euer?

Why withdrawest thou thyne hande? why pluckest thou not thy righthand out of thy bosome, to consume thyne enemies?

But God is my kynge of olde, the helpe that is done vpon earth he doth it himself.

Thou hast set all the borders of ỹ earth thou hast made both Sommer and winter

Remembre this (O LORDE) how ỹ enemye rebuketh, and how the foolysh people blaspheme thy name.

O delyuer not ỹ soule of thy turtle doue vnto the beastes, and forget not the congregacyon of the poore for euer.

Loke vpon thy couenaunt, for ỹ darke houses of the earth are ful of wyckednesse.

O let not the symple go away ashamed, for the poore and nedy geue prayses vnto thy name.

Aryse (o God) and mainteine thyne own cause, remembre how the foolysh man blasphemeth the daylie.

Forget not the voyce of thyn enemyes, for the presumpcion of them that hate the, increaseth euer more and more.

IN Juda is God knowne, his name is great in Israel,

At Salem is his tabernacle, & his dwellynge in Syon.

Psa. 45.b * There braketh he the arowes of the bowe, the shylde, the swearde and the whole battayle. Sela

Thou arte of more honour and myght then the hylles of robbers.

The proude shall be robbed and slepe theyr slepe, and the myghty shal be able to do nothynge with theyr handes.

Voce mea ad dominum clamaui, voce ad.

The.lxxvi. A psalme of Asaph.

A Psl. 141.a I Cryed * vnto god with my voyce, yee euen vnto God cryed I with my voyce, and he herde me.

In the tyme of my trouble I sought the LORDE, I helde vp my handes vnto him in the nyght season, for my soule refused al other comforte.

Whan I was in heuynesse, I thought vpon god, whan my harte was vexed, the dyd I speake. Sela.

Thou heldest myn eyes wakyng, I was so feble, that I coulde not speake.

The.lxxvii.psal.

* Then remembred I the tymes of olde and the yeares that were past.

I called to remembraunce my songe in the nyght, I communed with myne owne harte, and I sought out my spirite.

Wyl the LORDE cast out for euer? & he be nomore intreated?

Is his mercy cleane gone? Is his promyse com vtterly to an ende for euermore?

Hath the LORDE forgotten to be gracious? or hath he shutte vp his louyng kyndnesse in dyspleasure? Sela.

At the laste I came to this point, that I thought: O why arte thou so folysh? the ryght hande of ỹ moost hyest can chaūge al.

Therfore wyl I remembre the workes of the LORDE, and call to mynde thy wonders of olde tyme.

I wyl speake of all thy workes and my talkynge shal be of thy doynges.

Thy way (o god) is holy, who is so great & myghty as God?

Thou art the god ỹ doth wonders, thou hast declared thy power amonge ỹ people.

* Thou with thyne arme haste delyuered thy people, euen the sonnes of Jacob and Joseph. Sela.

The waters sawe the (o god) the waters sawe the, and were afrayed: the depthes were moued.

The thycke cloudes poured out water, the cloudes thondered, and theyr arowes went abrode.

Thy thonder was herd rounde about, the lyghtynges shone vpon the grounde, the earth was moued and shoke withal.

Thy waye was in the see, and thy pathes in the great waters, yet coulde no man know thy foote steppes.

Thou leddest thy people lyke a flocke of shepe by the hande of Moses and Aaron.

Attendite populi meus legem meam.

The.lxxvii. A Psalme of Asaph.

HEare my law (o my people) incline your eares, vnto ỹ wordes of my mouth.

* I wyll open my mouth in parables, and speake of thynges of olde.

* Which we haue herde and knowne, and suche as our fathers haue tolde vs.

That we shuld not hyde them from the chyldren of the generacyons to come: but to shewe the honoure of the LORDE, his myght & wonderful workes ỹ he hath done.

He made a couenaunt with Jacob and gaue Israel a lawe * whiche he cōmanded oure forefathers to teache theyr

children.

That theyr posteryte myght knowe it,
and the children which were yet vnborne.

To the intent that whan they came vp,
they myght shewe theyr children the same.

That they also myght put theyr trust in God,and not to forget what he had done,
but to kepe his cōmaundementes.

* And not to be as their forefathers,
a frowarde and ouerthwarte generacyō:
a generacion ỹ set not theyr harte a right,
and whose spyrte was not true toward god

* Lyke as the children of Ephraim which beyng harnessed, and carynge bowes,turned them selues backe in the tyme
of battayle.

They kept not the conuenaūt of God,
and wolde not walke in his lawe.

They forgat what he had done,and the wonderfull workes that he had shewed for them.

Marueylous thynges dyd he in the sight of their fathers,in ỹ londe of Egypt,
even in the felde of Zoan.

* He deuyded the see & let them go tho-
rowe it,and made the waters to stond lyke
a wall.

* In the daye tyme he led them with a cloude,and all the nyghte thorowe with a light of fyre.

* He dyd cleue the hard rockes in ỹ wyl
dernes,and gaue them drynke therof,as it had ben out of the great depth.

He droughte waters out of the * stony
rocke,so ỹ they gusshed out lyke ỹ ryuers.

yet for al this they synned agaynst him,
prouoked ỹ moost hyest in ỹ wyldernesse.

They tempted god in theyr hartes,and required meate for their lust.

For they spake agaynst god and sayde:
* yee,yee, God shall prepare a table in the wyldernesse shal he?

Lo he smote the stony rocke,that the wa ters streames gusshed out,and the streames flowed with all:but how can he geue
bread and prouyde flesshe for his people?

When the LORDE herde this, he was wroth:so the fyre was kyndled in Jacob, &
hevy displeasure agaynst Israel.

Because they beleued not in god, and put not their trust in his helpe.

So he cōmaunded the cloudes aboue,
and opened the dores of heauen.

* He rayned downe Manna vpō them
for to eate,& gaue them breade frō heauen.

Than dyd they eate angels foode,for he Iohe. 6.b
sent them meat ynough.

He caused the east wynde to blowe vnder the heauen, and thorowe his power he brought in the south wynde.

* He made the flesh to rayne vpon them Exo.16.c
as thicke as dust, and fethered foules lyke Num.11.g
the sonde of the see.

He let it fall amonge theyr tentes roūde
aboute their habytacyons.

So they dyd eat and were fylled,for he gaue them their owne desyre: They were not dysposynted of theyr lust.

* But whyle the meat was yet in their Num.11.g
mouthes,the heuy wrath of god came vpō them, slewe the welthyest of them, and smote downe the chosen men of Israel.

* But for all this they synned yet more D and beleued not his wonderous workes. Nu.14.a

Therfore their dayes were consumed
in vanyte,& sodēly were their yeares gone.

Whan he slewe them, they sought him,
and turned them early vnto god.

They thought then that god was their succour,and that the hye god was their redemer.

Neuertheless they dyd but flatter him
in theyr mouthes,and dissembled with him
in their tunges.

For theyr harte was not whole w̄ him,
nother contynued they in his cōuenaūt.

But he was so mercyful that he forgaue
theyr mysdedes, and destroyed them not.

yee many a tyme turned he his wrath a way,& wolde not suffre his whole displeasure to aryse.

* For he consydered that they were but Ps.102.b flesh:euen a wynde that passeth away and cōmeth not agayne.

O how often haue they greued him in ỹ
wyldernesse?

How many a tyme haue they prouoked
him in the deserte?

They turned backe and tempted God,
and moued the holy one in Israel.

They thought not of his hande, in the E daye whan he delyuered them from the hande of the enemye.

How he had wroughte his myracles in Egypt,& his wonders in ỹ londe of Zoan.

* Howe he turned their waters in to Exo.7.b
bloude, so that they myght not drynke of the ryuers.

* Howe he sent lyce amonge them,to eat Exod.8.a them vp, & frogges to destroy them. Exod.8.b

* Howe he gaue their frutes vnto the Exod.10.b
caterpyller, and theyr labour vnto the grestopper.

Exo.9.c * How he bet downe theyr vinelardes with hayle stones, & theyr Wolbery trees with the frost.

How he smote theyr cattell with hayle-stones, and theyr flockes with hote thonder bolles.

How he sent vpon them the furiousnesse of hys wrath, anger and displeasure: wt trouble and fallynge in of euell angels.

Exod.9.a. * Whan he made awaye to his fearful indignacyon, and spared not theyr soules from death, yee and gaue theyr cattel ouer to the pestilence.

Exod.12.c Psa.134.b * Whan he' smote all the fyrstborne in Egypte, the mooste principall and myghtiest in the dwellynges of Ham.

F But as for hys owne people, he led them forth lyke shepe, and carted them in ỹ wyldernesse lyke a flocke.

He brought them out safely, that they shulde not feare, and ouerwhelmed theyr enemies wyth the see.

He carted them vnto the borders of his Sanctuary: euen in to this hyll, whiche he purchased with hys righthande.

Deu.3.a Iosu.6.a. * He dyd caste oute the Heythen before them, causyd theyr londe to be deuyded amonge them for an heretage, and made ỹ trybes of Israell to dwell in theyr tentes.

For all this they tempted and displeased the mooste hygh God, and kepte not his conuenaunt.

But turned theyr backes and fel away lyke theyr forefathers, startynge asyde like a broken bow.

And so they greued hym with theyr hye places, and prouoked hym wyth theyr ymages.

Whan God herde this, he was wroth, and toke sore displeasure at Israell.

Iere.7.a. * So that he forsoke the tabernacle in Silo, euen hys habitacyō wherin he dwelt amonge men,

Psa.45.b * He delyuered theyr power in to captiuite, and theyr glorye in to the enemyes hande.

G He gaue his people ouer in to ỹ sweard, for he was wroth with hys heretage.

The fyre consumed theyr yonge men, & theyr maydens were not geuē to mariage.

Theyr prestes were slayn with ỹ sweard and ther were no wydowes to make lamentacyon.

So the LORDE awaked as one out of slepe, and lyke a giaunte refreshed wyth wyne.

* He smote hys enemyes in the hynder partes, and put them to a perpetual shame.

He refused the tabernacle of Joseph, & chose not the tribe of Ephraim.

Neuertheless, * he chose the tribe of Juda, euen the hyll of Syon whiche he loued.

And there he buylded his temple on hye, and layed the fundacyon of it lyke the grounde, ỹ it myghte perpetually endure.

* He chose Dauid also hys seruaunt, & toke hym awaye from the shepefoldes.

As he was folowynge ỹ ewes great yonge, he toke hym, that he myght fede Jacob hys people, and Israell is enheritaunce.

So he fed them with a faythfull, and true hart, and ruled them with all the diligence of hys power.

Deus venerunt gentes in hereditatem tuam.

The.lxxviii. A psalme of Asaph.

O God, * the Heythen are falle in to thyne heretage: thy holy temple haue they defyled, and made Jerusalem an herpe of stones.

* The dead bodies of thy seruaunts haue they geuen vnto the foules of the ayr to be deuoured, and the flesh of thy sayntes vnto the beastes of the londe.

Theyr bloude haue they shed lyke water on euery syde of Jerusalem, and there was no man to burie them.

* We are become an open shame vnto oure enemies, a very scorne and derysyon vnto them that are rounde aboute vs.

LORDE, how long wilt thou be angry shall thy gelousy burne lyke fyre for euer?

* Poure out thy indignacion vpon the Heythen that knowe the not, and vpon the kyngdomes that call not vpon thy name.

For they haue deuoured Jacob, & layd wayste hys dwellynge place.

* O remembre not oure olde synnes, but haue mercy vpon vs (and that soone) for we are come to greate myserey.

Helpe vs (O God oure Sauyour) for the glorye of thy name: o delyuer vs, & forgeue vs oure synnes for thy names sake.

* Wherfore shal the heythē saye: Where is now theyr God?

O let the vengeaunce of thy seruauntes bloude that is shed, be openly shewed vpon the heythen in oure syght.

O let the sorowfull syghinge of the prisoners come before the, and according vnto the power of thyne arme, preserue thou that are appointed to dye.

And for the blasphemy wherwith oure neyghbours haue blasphemed the, reward them (o LORD) seuenfolde into their bosome.

Psal. 1.b. and 34.a. and as * the stubble before the wynde.

Lyke as a fyre that burneth vp þ wood and as the flamme that consumeth þ mountaynes.

Persecute them euen so with thy tempest, and make thē afrayed with thy storm.

Make theyr faces ashamed (o LORDE)

that they maye seke thy name.

Let them be confoūded and vexed more and more: Let them be put to shame, and perysh.

That they maye knowe, that thou art alone, that thy name is the LORDE, and that thou only art the moost hyghest ouer all the earth.

Quam dilecta tabernacula tua domine virtutum.

The. lxxxiii. A Psalme of the chyldren of Corah.

HOw amiable are thy dwellynges, thou LORDE of hoostes!

* My soul hath a desyre, yea longynge for the courte of the LORDE: * my harte & my flesh reioyce in the lyuynge God.

For the sparow hath found hir an house, and the swalowe a nest, where she maye laye hyr yonge: euē thyn autres O LORDE of hoostes, my kynge and my God.

O how blessed are they that dwel in thy house, they are alwaye praysynge the.

Blessed are the men whose strengthe is in the, in whose harte are thy wayes.

Which goynge thorowe the vale of misery, vse it for a well, and the pooles are fylled with water.

They go from strength to strength, and so the God of Gods appeareth vnto them in Syon.

O LORDE God of hoostes, heare my prayer: herken O God of Jacob.

Behold o God oure defence, loke vpō the face of thyne anoynted.

For one daye in thy courte is better then els a thousande.

I had rather be a doorkeper in þ house of my god, then to dwel in the tentes of the vngodly.

For the LORDE God is lyght and defence, the LORDE wyll geue grace, and worshyppe, and no good thynge shall he withholde from them, that liue a godly life.

O LORDE god of hoostes, blessed is the man, that putteth hys trust in the.

Benedixisti domine terram tuam, auertisti captiuitatem

The. lxxxiiii. A Psalme of the chyldren of Corah.

LORDE, thou hast a loue vnto thy lond, thou dyddest bryng agayne the captiuite of Jacob

Thou dyddest forgeue the offence of thy people, * and co- ps. 84.a. uered all theyr synnes. Sela.

Thou tokest awaye all thy displeasure

and turnedest thyselfe from thy wrothfull indignacyon.

Turne vs then (o God oure Saueour) and let thyne angre ceasse from vs.

Wilt thou be displeased at vs for euer? wilt thou stretch oute thy wrath from one generacyon to another?

Wilt thou not turne agayne, and quycken vs, that thy people may reioyce in the?

I wyll herken what the LORDE God wyll saye, for he shal speake peace vnto his people and to hys sayntes, that they turne not them selues vnto foolyshnesse.

For hys saluacyon is nye them that feare hym, so that glory shall dwell in our londe.

Mercy & treuth are met together, rygh teousnesse and peace kysse eche other.

Treuth shall ryse oute of the earth, and rygh teousnesse shall loke down from heaue.

And why? the LORDE shall shewe louinge kyndnesse, and oure londe shal geue hys encrease.

Righteousnesse shall go before hym, & prepare the waye for hys commynge.

Inclina domine aurem tuam, et exaudi me, quoniam.

The.lxxxvi. Psalme A prayer of Dauid.

BOw downe thyne eare (o LORDE) and heare me, for I am comfortles, and poore.

O kepe my soule, for I am holy: my God, helpe thy seruaunt that putteth hys truste in the.

Be mercyfull vnto me (o LORDE) for I call daylie vpon the.

Comforte the soule of thy seruaunt, for vnto the (o LORDE) do I lift vp my soul.

* For thou LORDE art good and gracious, and of greate mercye vnto all them that call vpon the.

Geue eare LORDE vnto my prayer, & ponder my humble desyre.

In the tyme of my trouble I call vpon the, for thou hearest me.

Amonge the goddes ther is none lyke the o LORDE, ther is not one that can do as thou doest.

All nacions whom thou hast made, shal come and worshippe before the o LORDE, and shall glorifye thy name.

For thou art greate, thou doest wonderous thynges, thou art God alone.

Lede me in thy waye (o LORDE) that I maye walke in thy treuth: O let my hart delyte in fearynge thy name.

I thanke the o LORDE my God, & will praise thy name for euer.

For greate is thy mercye towarde me, * thou hast delyuered my soule out of the depe hell. Psa.29.a

O God, the proude are rysen agaynste me, and the congregacyon of the mightye seketh after my soule, and set not the before theyr eyes. C

* But thou (o LORDE God) arte full of compassion and mercy, longe sufferyng, greate in goodnesse and treuth. Psa.102.a 144.a Exo.34.a

O turne the then vnto me, haue mercye vpon me: geue thy strength vnto thy seruaunt, & helpe the son of thy handmayden.

Shewe some token vpon me for good, that they which hate me, maye se it, and be ashamed: because thou LORDE haste holped me, and comforted me.

Fundamenta eius in montibus sanctis,

The.lxxxvii. A Psalme of the chyldren of Corah.

HYr fundacions are vpon the holy hilles: * the LORDE loueth the gates of Syon more, then all the dwellynges of Jacob. A Psa.77.a

Very excellent thynges are spoken of the, thou cytte of God. Sela.

I wyll thynke vpon Rahab and Babylon, so that they shall knowe me.

Yee the Philistynes also, and they of Tyre with the Morians. Lo: there was he borne.

And of Syon it shalbe reported, that he was borne in her, euen the moost hyghest which hath buylded her.

The LORDE shal cause it be preached and wrytten amonge the people, that he was born there. Sela.

Therfore the dwellynge for al syngers and daunsers is in the.

Domine deus salutis mee, in die clamaui.

The.lxxxviii. A Psalme of the chyldren of Corah.

OLORDE God my Saueoure, I crie daye and night before the. A

O let my prayer entre in to thy presence, encline thyn eare vnto my callynge.

For my soule is full of trouble, and my lyfe draweth nye vnto hell.

I am counted as one of them that go downe vnto the pytte, I am euen as a man that hath no strength.

Free amonge the dead, lyke vnto them, that lye in the graue, which be out of remembraunce, & are cut awaye from thy hande.

Thou hast layed me in the lowest pitte, in the darknesse, and in the depe.

Thy indignacyon lyeth harde vpon me, and thou vexest me with al thy floudes Sela.

Thou hast put awaye myne acquayntaunce farre fro me, and made me to be abhorred of them: I am so fast in prison, that I can not get forth.

My syght fayleth for very trouble: LORDE, I call daylie vpon the, and stretch out my handes vnto the.

Psal. 6.a. * Doest thou shewe wonders amonge the dead?

Can the physycians rayse them vp agayne, that they maye prayse the?

Esay. 38.d * Maye thy louynge kyndnesse be shewed in the graue, or thy faythfulnesse in destruccyon?

May thy wōderous workes be known in the darke, or thy righteousnesse in the londe where all thynges are forgotten?

C Vnto the I crie (O LORDE) and earlye commeth my prayer before the.

LORDE, why putteste thou awaye my soule? Wherfore hydeste thou thy face fro me?

My strengthe is gone for very sorowe, and mysery, with fearfulnesse do I beare thy burthens.

Thy wrothfull displeasure goeth ouer me, the feare of the oppresseth me.

They come rounde aboute me daylie like water, and compasse me together on euery syde.

My louers and frendes hast thou put awaye fro me, and turned awaye myne acquayntaunce.

Misericordias domini in eternum cantabo.

The. lxxxviii. A Psalme of Ethan, the Ezrahyte.

I Psl.106.a. * Wyll synge of the louynge kyndnesse of the LORDE, with my mouth wil I euer be shewynge thy faythfulnesse, from one generacyon to another.

For I haue sayde: mercy shall be set vp for euer, thy faythfulnesse shalte thou stablyshe in the heauens.

2.Reg.7.c Psa.132.a * I haue made a couenaunt wyth my chosen, I haue swore vnto Dauid my seruaunt.

Thy sede wyll I stablyshe for euer, and set vp thy Trone from one generacyon to another. Sela.

O LORDE, * the very heauens shall prayse thy wonderous workes, yee and thy faythfulnesse in the congregacyon of the sayntes. Psa.

For who is he among the cloudes, that maye be compared vnto the LORDE?

* yee what is he amonge the goddes, that is lyke vnto the LORDE? Psal.

God is greatly to be feared in the counsell of the sayntes, and to be had in reuerence of all them that are aboute hym.

O LORDE God of hoostes, who is lyke vnto the in power? thy treuth is rounde aboute the.

* Thou rulest the pryde of the see, thou stillest the wawes therof, whan they arise. Psal.

Thou breakest the proud, lyke one that is wounded, thou scattrest thyne enemyes abrode with thy mightie arme.

The heauens are thyne, the earth is thine thou hast layed the fundacion of the round worlde, and all that ther in is.

Thou hast made the north, and the south Thabor, and Harmon shall reioyce in thy name.

Thou hast a mightie arme, strouge is thy hande, and hyghe is thy righthande.

Ryghteousnesse and equite is the habitacyon of thy seate, mercy and treuth go before thy face.

Blessed is the people (O LORDE) that can reioyce in the, and walketh in the light of thy countenaunce.

They? delyte is in thy name al the day C longe, and thorow thy righteousnesse they shalbe exalted.

For thou art the glory of they? strength and thorowe thy fauoure shalte thou lyfte vp oure hornes.

* The LORD is oure defence, and the holy one of Israell is oure kynge. Psal.

Thou spakest somtyme in visions vnto thy sayntes, and saydeste: I haue layed helpe vpon one that is myghtie, I haue exalted one chosen out of the people.

* I haue found Dauid my seruaunt, with my holy oyle haue I anoynted hym. 1.Reg.16.c Psa.89.a

My hande shall holde hym fast, and my arme shall strengthe hym.

The enemye shall not ouercome hym, and the sonne of wyckednesse shall not hurte hym.

I shall smyte downe hys foes before his face, and plage them that hate hym.

My treuth also & my mercye shalbe with him, & in my name shal his horne be exalted.

* I wyll sette hys hande in the see, Psa.

He shall call me: thou art my father, my God, and the strength of my saluacion.

And I will make hym my fyrstborne, hyer then the kynges of the earth.

My mercy will I kepe for hym for euermore, and my couenaunt shall stonde fast with hym.

His sede will I make to endure for euer and his Trone as the dates of heauen.

* But yf his childzen forsake my lawe, and walke not in my iudgementes.

yf they breake myne ordinaunces, and kepe not my commaundementes.

I will visit theyr offences with ỹ rodde and theyr synnes with scourges.

Neuertheles, my louynge kyndnesse will I not vtterly take frō hym, nor suffre my treuth to fayle.

My couenaunt will I not breake, nor dissanulle the thynge that is gone oute of my lyppes.

I haue swome once by my holynesse, ỹ I will not fayle Dauid.

His sede shall endure for euer, and hys seate also lyke * as the Sonne before me.

He shall stonde fast for euermore as the Moone, and as the faythfull wytnesse in heauen.

But now thou forsakest and abhorrest thyne anoynted, and art displeased at him

Thou haste turned backe the couenaunt of thy seruaunt, and caste hys crowne to the grounde.

* Thou hast ouerthrowne all hys hedges, and broken downe hys strong holdes

All they that go by, spoyle hym, he is become a rebuke vnto his neighbours.

Thou settest vp the ryght hande of hys enmyes, and makeste all his aduersaryes to reioyce.

Thou haste taken awaye the strengthe of his swearde, and greuest hym not victorye in the battayll.

Thou hast put out hys glory, and caste hys Trone downe to the grounde.

The dayes of hys youth hast thou shortned, and couered hym wyth dishonoure. Sela.

LORDE, how longe wilt thou hyde thy selfe for euer? shall thy wrath burne lyke fyre?

O remembre howe shorte my tyme is, hast thou made all men for naught?

* What man is he that lyueth, & shall not se death?

Maye a man deliuer his owne soule from the hande of hell? Sela.

LORDE where are thyne olde louing kindnesses, which thou swarest vnto Dauid in thy treuth?

Remembre LORDE the rebuke that the multitude of the people do vnto thy seruauntes, and howe I haue borne it in my bosome.

Wherwith thyne enemies blaspheme the, * and sklaundre the footesteppes of thyne anoynted 1. Pet. 3. b.

Thankes be to the LORDE for euermore: Amen, Amen.

Domine refugium factus es nobis a generatione in gene

The. lxxxix. Psalme. A prayer of Moses the man of God.

LORDE, thou arte oure refuge A from one generacion to another.

Before the mountaynes were broughtforth, or euer the earth and the worlde were made, thou art God from euerlastynge, and worlde wythout ende.

Thou turneste man to destruccyon: Agayne, thou sayeste: come agayne ye childzen of men.

* For a thousande yeares in thy syght are but as yesterdaye that is past, and like as it were a night watch. 2. Pet. 3. b

As soone as thou scattreste them, they are euen as a slepe, and fade awaye sodenly lyke the grasse.

* In the mornynge it is grene & groweth vp: but in the euenynge it is cut downe, and wythered. Psa. 72. e. Psa. 30. d. Esa. 40. a

B

For we consume awaye in thy displeasure, and are afraied at thy wrothfull indignacyon.

Thou settest oute mysdedes before the, and oure secrete synnes in the light of thy countenaunce.

For whan thou arte angrie, all oure dayes are gone, we bringe oure yeares to an ende, as it were a tale that is tolde.

The dayes of oure age are .iii. score yeares and ten: and though men be so stronge that they come to .iiii. score yeares, yet is theyr strengthe then but laboure, and sorowe: so soone passeth it awaye, and we are gone.

But who regardeth the power of thy wrath, thy fearful, & terryble displeasure?

* O teache vs to nombre oure dayes, that we maye applie our hartes vnto wysdome. C Psa. 32. a Turne the agayne (o LORDE) at the last, and be gracious vnto thy seruauntes.

O satisfie vs with thy mercy, and that soone: so shall we reioyce and be glad all ȳ dayes of oure lyfe.

Comfort vs agayne, now after ȳ tyme that thou hast plaged vs, and for the yeares wherein we haue suffred aduersyte.

Shewe thy seruauntes thy worke, and their children thy glorye,

And the glorious maiesty of the LORDE oure God be vpō vs: O prosperе thou the worke of oure handes vpon vs, o prospere thou oure handy worke.

Qui habitat in adiutorio altissimi, in protectione

The. xc. Psalme.

WHo so dwelleth vnder the defence of the moost highest, and abydeth vnder the shadowe of the almyghtye:

He shall saye vnto the LORDE: o my hope, and my stronge holde, my God, in whom I wyll truste.

For he shall delyuer the from the snare of the hunter, and from the noysome pestylence.

He shall couer the vnder hys wynges, that thou maiest be safe vnder his fethers: hys faythfulnesse, and treuth shall be thy shylde and buckler.

So that thou shalt not nede to be afrayed for ony bugges by nyghte, nor for the arowe that flyeth by daye.

For the pestilence that crepeth in the darknesse, nor for the syckenesse that destroyeth in the noone daye.

A thousande shall fall besyde the, and ten thousande at thy righthand, but it shal not come nye the.

B yee with thyne eyes shalt thou beholde and se the rewarde of the vngodlye.

For thou LORDE arte my hope, thou haste set thy house of defence very hyghe.

There shall no euell happen vnto the, nother shall ony plage come nye thy dwellynge.

* For he shall geue hys angels charge ouer the, to kepe the in all thy wayes.

They shall beare the in their handes, that thou hurte not thy foote agaynste a stone.

Thou shalt go vpon the Lyon and Adder, the yonge Lyon and the Dragon shalt thou treade vnder thy fete.

Because he hath set his loue vpon me, I shall delyuer hym: I shall defende hym, for he hath knowne my name.

* When he calleth vpon me, I shall heare hym: yee I am with hym in trouble, wherout I wyll delyuer hym, & bringe hym to honoure.

With long lyfe wyll I satisfye hym, and shewe hym my saluacyon.

Bonum est confiteri domino, et psallere nomini tuo.

The. xci. Psalme.

IT is a good thynge * to gyue thankes vnto the LORDE, and to synge prayse vnto thy name o moost hyghest.

To tell of thy louyng kyndnesse early in the mornynge, and of thy treuthe in the nyghte season.

Upon an instrumente of ten stringes, vpon the lute, and with a songe vpon the harpe.

* For thou LORDE haste made me glad thorowe thy workes, and I wyll reioyce ouer the operacton of thy handes.

O LORDE, how glorious are thy workes, thy thoughtes are very depe.

An vnwyse man wyll not knowe this, and a foole wyll not vnderstonde it.

* That the vngodlye are grene as the grasse, and that all the workers of wickednesse do florysshe, to be destroyed for euer.

But thou LORDE o moost hyghest, abydest worlde without ende.

For lo, thyne enemyes (o LORDE) lo, thyne enemyes shall perysshe, and all the workers of wickednesse shalbe scattred abrode.

* But my horne shall be exalted lyke the horne of an Unicorne, and shall be anoynted with freshe oyle.

Myne eye also shall se hys lust of myne enemyes, and myne eare shall heare hys desyre of the wycked that ryse vp agaynst me.

The ryghteous shall florysshe lyke a palme tre, and growe lyke a Cedre of Libanus.

Such as be planted in the house of the LORDE, be fruteful, plenteous and grene

That they maye shewe, howe true the LORDE my strenghte is, and that there is no vnrighteousnesse in hym.

Dominus regnauit decorem indutus est, indutus est

The. xcii. Psalme.

THe LORDE is kynge, & hath put on glorious apparell, the LORDE hath put on his apparell, and gyrded himself wyth strength: * he hath made the rounde worlde so sure, that it can not be moued.

From that tyme forth hath * thy seate ben prepared, thou arte from euerlastyng.

* The floudes arose (o LORD) the floudes lyft vp theyr noyse: the floudes lyft vp theyr wawes.

The mawes of the see are mightie, and rage horribly: * but yet the LORDE that dwelleth on hyghe, is myghtier.

Thy testimonies (o LORDE) are very sure, holynesse becommeth thyne house for euer.

Deus ultionum dominus, deus ultionum libere

The.xciii. Psalme.

O LORDE God, * to whom ben geaunce belongeth: thou God to whom vengeaunce belongeth shewe thy selfe.

Aryse thou iudge of the world, and rewarde the proude after theyr deseruynge.

LORDE, * howe longe shall the vngodly, howe longe shall the vngodly triumphe?

How longe shal al wycked doers speake so disdanously, and make suche proude boastynge?

They smyte down thy people (o LORD) and trouble thyne heretage.

They murthure the wydowe, and the straunger, and put the fatherlesse to death.

And yet they saye: * Tushe, the LORDE seyth not, the God of Jacob regardeth it not.

Take hede, ye vnwise amonge the people: ye fooles, whan wyll ye vnderstonde?

He that planted the eare, shall he not heare? he that made the eye, shall not he see?

He that nurthureth the heythen, & teacheth a man knowlege, * shall not he punysshe?

The LORDE knoweth the thoughtes of men, that they are but vayne.

* Blessed is the man, whom thou learnest (o LORDE) and teachest hym in thy lawe.

That thou mayest geue hym pacyence in tyme of aduersyte, vntyll the pytte be digged vp for the vngodly.

For the LORDE wyll not fayle his people, nother wyl he forsake his inheritaūce.

And why? iudgement shall be turned agayne vnto righteousnesse, and all suche as be true of hart shall folowe it.

Who ryseth vp wyth me agaynst the wycked? who taketh my parte agaynst the euell doers?

Yf the LORDE had not helped me, my soule had almooste bene put to sylence.

1.Psa.17a. SYnge vnto the LORDE a newe songe, * synge vnto the LORDE all the whole earth.

Synge vnto the LORD, & prayse hys name, be tellynge of hys saluacyon from daye to daye, Declare hys honoure amonge the Heythen, and hys wonders amonge al people.

Psa.46.a Eccl.43.b * For the LORDE is greate, and cān not worthely be praysed: he is more to be feared then all goddes,

As for all the goddes of the Heythen, they be but Idols, but it is the LORDE that made the heauens.

Thankesgeuynge and worshippe are before hym, power and honoure are in hys Sanctuary.

Psa.28.a * Ascrybe vnto the LORDE (o ye kynreddes of the Heythen) ascrybe vnto the LORDE worshippe and strengthe.

Ascrybe vnto the LORD the honoure of hys name, bringe presentes, and come in to hys courte.

B O worshyppe the LORD in the beawty of holynesse, let the whole earth stonde in awe of hym.

Tell it out amonge the Heythen, that the LORDE is kynge, that it is he which hath made the rounde worlde so fast, that it can not be moued, and howe that he shall iudge the people righteously.

Let the heauens reioyce, and let ȳ earth be glad: let the see make a noyse, yee and al that therin is.

Let the felde be ioyfull, and all that is in it, let all the trees of the wood leape for ioye, before the LORDE.

For he commeth, for he commeth to iudge the earth: yee w̄ righteousnesse shall he iudge ȳ world, and ȳ people w̄ hys treuth.

2. Dominus regnauit, exultet terra, letentur

The.xcvi. Psalme.

Psa.43.a THe LORD is kynge, ȳ earth maye be glad therof: yee the multitude of the Iles maye be glad therof.

Cloudes and darknesse are round about hym, tyghteousnesse and iudgement are the habitacion of his seate.

There goeth a fyre before hym, to burne vp hys enemyes on euery syde.

Hys lyghtenynges geue shyne vnto ȳ worlde, the earth seyth it and is afrayed.

* The hylles melte lyke ware at ȳ presence of the LORDE: at the presence of the LORDE of the whole earth.

* The very heauens declare hys tyghteousnesse, and all people se hys glory.

Confounded be al they that worshippe ymages & * delite in theyr Idols: worshippe hym all ye goddes.

B Sion heareth of it and reioyceth: yea all the doughters of Iuda are glad, because of thy iudgementes, o LORDE.

For thou LORDE arte the moost hyest ouer all the earth, thou arte exalted farre aboue all goddes.

* O ye that loue the LORD, se that ye hate the thinge which is euell: the LORDE preserueth the soules of hys saynctes, he shall delyuer them from ȳ hand of the vngodly.

There is spronge vp a light for the righteous, and a ioyful gladnesse for such as be trew harted.

* Reioyce therfore in the LORDE ye righteous: and geue thankes for a remembraunce of hys holynesse.

2. Cantate domino canticum nouum, quia mirabilia.

The.xcvii. A Psalme.

* SYnge vnto the LORDE a newe songe, for he hath done maruaylous thynges.

With hys own righthande and with his holy arme hath he gotten the victory.

The LORD hath declared his sauinge health, and hys righteousnesse hath he openly shewed in the syghte of the Heythen.

* He hath remembred hys mercy, and treuth towarde the houle of Israell: & all that al the endes of the worlde se the saluacion of oure God.

Shewe youre selfe ioyfull vnto ȳ LORDE all ye londes, synge, reioyce, & geue thankes.

* Prayse the LORDE vpon the harpe, synge to the harpe with a Psalme of thankesgeuynge.

With trompettes also and shawmes shewe youre selues ioyfull before the LORDE the kynge.

* Let the see make a noyse and all that therin is, yee the whole worlde and al that dwell therin.

Let the floudes clappe theyr handes

let all the hylles be ioyfull together.

Before the LORDE, for he is come to iudge the earth.

per with righteousnesse shall he iudge the world, and the people with equite.

The.xcviii. Psalme.

THe LORDE is kynge, be the people neuer so vnpacient: he sytteth vpon the Cherubins, be the earth neuer so vnquiete

The LORDE is greate in Syon, and hyghe aboue all people.

O let men geue thākes vnto thy greate and wonderfull name, for it is holy.

The kynges power loueth iudgement, thou prepareste equite, thou executest iudgement and righteousnesse in Jacob.

O magnifye the LORDE oure God, fall downe before hys * foote stoole, for he is holy.

Moses and Aaron amonge his prestes and Samuell amonge suche as call vpon hys name: these called vpon the LORDE, and he herde them.

* He spake vnto them out of the cloudy pyller, for they kepte hys testimonies, & the lawe that he gaue them.

Thou herdest the (o LORDE our god) thou forgauest them o God, and punishedest their owne inuentions.

O magnifye the LORDE our god, and worshippe hym vpon hys holy hyll, for the LORDE oure God is holy.

¶ Jubilate deo omnis terra, seruite domino.

The.xcix. Psalme.

BE ioyfull in God (all ye londes) serue the LORDE with gladnesse, come before his presence with ioye.

* Be ye sure, that the LORDE is God: It is he that hath made vs, and not we oure selues: we are but hys people, and the shepe of hys pasture.

O go youre waye in to his gates the with thankesgeuynge, and in to hys courtes with prayse: be thankfull vnto hym, and speake good of hys name.

For the LORDE is gracious, * his mercy is euerlastyng, and hys treuth endureth from generacyon to generacyon.

¶ Misericordiam et iudicium cantabo tibi.

The.C. Psalme. A thankesgeuynge of Dauid.

MY * songe shalbe of mercy and iudgemēt, vnto the (o LORDE) will I synge. Psa. 88.a

O let me haue vnderstondynge in the waye of godlynesse, vntyl the tyme that thou come vnto me: and so shall I walke in my house wyth an innocent harte.

I will take no wycked thinge in hand, I hate the synne of vnfaythfulnesse, it shal not cleue vnto me.

A frowarde harte shall departe fro me, I will not knowe a wicked personne.

Who so preuely sklaundreth his neyghboure, hym will I destroye,

Who so hath a proude loke and an hye stomacke, I maye not awaye with hym.

Myne eyes shall loke for suche as be faithfull in the londe, that they may dwel with me: & who so ledeth a godly lyfe, shall be my seruaunt.

There shal no deceatful personne dwell in my house: he that telleth lyes, shall not tary in my syght.

I shall soone destroye all the vngodlye of the londe, that al wycked doers maye be roted out of the cytie of the LORDE.

¶ Domine exaudi orationem meam, et clamor meus

The.C.i. Psalme.

HEare my prayer (o LORDE) I * and let my crye nge come vnto the. Ps. 142.a

Hyde not thy face fro me in the tyme of my trouble: enclin thyne eares vnto me whan I call, O heare me, and that ryght soone.

For my dayes are consumed away lyke smoke, & my bones are brent vp as it were a fyre brande.

My herte is smytten downe, and wythered lyke grasse, so that I forget to eate my bread.

* For the voyce of my gronynge, my bone will scarce cleue to my flesshe. Trin.4.b

I am become lyke a Pellycane in the wildernesse, and lyke an oule in a broken wal.

I wake, and am euen as it were a sparowe syttynge alone vpon the house toppe B

Myne enemyes reuyle me all the daye long, they laugh me to scorne, & are swoorn together agaynst me.

I eate asshes with my bread, and medle my drynke with weepynge.

And that because of the indignacion, & wrath, for thou hast taken me vp, and cast me awaye.

My dayes are gone lyke a shadowe, & I am wythered lyke grasse.

But thou (o LORD) endurest for euer, and thy remembraunce thorowe oute all generacyons.

C The Heythen shall feare thy name (O LORDE) and all the kynges of the earthe thy maiestye.

For the LORDE shall buylde vp Sion, and shall appeare in hys glory.

He turneth hym vnto the prayer of the poore destitute, & despyseth not theyr desyr.

Psa.21.b This shalbe wrytte for those that come after * that the people which shalbe born, maye prayse the LORDE.

Psa.32.b. * For he loketh downe from hys Sanctuary, oute of the heauen doth the LORD beholde the earth.

That he maye heare þ mournynges of such as be in captiuite, and deliuer þ children of death.

That they maye preache the name of þ LORDE in Sion, and hys worshyppe at Jerusalem.

When the people are gathered together, and the kyngdomes also to serue the LORDE.

D He hath brought downe my strengthe in my tourney, and shortened my dayes.

yet wyll I say: O my God, take me not awaye in the myddest of myne age: as for thy yeares, they endure thorowe out all generacyons.

Heb.1.b. * Thou LORDE in the begynnyng hast layed the fundacyon of the earthe, and þ heauens are the workes of thy handes.

Esa.4o.a 2.Pet.3.b * They shall perysshe, but thou shalt endure: they all shall ware olde as doth a garment, and as a vesture shalt thou chaunge them, and they shalbe chaunged.

But thou arte the same, and thy yeares shall not fayle.

The children of thy seruauntes shal continue & theyr sede shal prosper in thy sight

1.Benedic anima mea domino, et omnia que intra

The.C.ii. A Psalme of Dauid.

PRayse the LORD (o my soul) and al that is within me prayse hys holy name.

Prayse the LORD o my soule, and forgette not al hys benefytes.

Which forgeueth all thy synnes, & healeth all thyne infirmities.

* Which sauyth thy lyfe from destruccyon, and crowneth the with mercy and louynge kyndnesse.

Which satisfyeth thy desyre with good thynges, makynge the ponge and lusty as an Egle.

The LORDE executeth righteousnesse and iudgement, for all them that suffer wronge.

He shewed his waies vnto Moses, and hys workes vnto the children of Israel.

* The LORDE is full of compassion & mercy, longe sufferyng, and of great goodnesse.

He wyll not alwaye be chydynge, neither wyll he kepe hys anger for euer.

He hath not dealte with vs after our synnes, nor rewarde vs accordinge to our wyckednesses.

* For loke howe hyghe the heauen is in compariſon of the earth, so greate is hys mercy also towarde them that feare hym.

Loke how wyde the east is frō the west, so farre hath he set oure synnes from vs.

yee lyke as a father pytieth his owne children, euen so is the LORDE mercyful vnto them that feare hym.

For he knoweth whereof we be made, * he remembreth that we are but dust.

That a man in hys tyme is but as grasse, & flourysheth as a floure of the feilde.

For as soone as the wynde goeth ouer it, it is gone, and the place therof knoweth it nomore.

But the mercyfull goodnesse of þ LORDE endureth for euer, and euer, vpon them that feare him, and his righteousnesse vpō theyr childers children.

Such as kepe his cōuenaunt, & thinke vpon his commaundementes to do them.

The LORDE hath prepared his seate in heauen, & hys kingdom ruleth ouer all.

O prayse the LORDE ye angels of his ye that be myghtye in strength, fulfyllyng his cōmaundemente, that men may heare the voyce of hys wordes.

O prayse the LORDE al ye his hoostes ye seruauntes of hys, that do his pleasure.

O speake good of the LORDE all ye workes of hys, in euery place of his dominion: prayse thou the LORDE, o my soul.

2.Benedic anima mea domino, domine deus

of all hys wonderous workes.

Geue hys holy name a good report, let
theyr hartes reioyce that seke the LORDE

Seke the LORDE and his strength, seke his face euermore.

Remembre the maruaylous workes ꝑ he hath done, his wonders and the iudgementes of his mouthe.

O ye sede of Abraham his seruaunt, ye chyldren of Jacob his chosen.

B He is the LORDE our God, whose punyshmentes are throwout al the worlde.

He is alway myndfull of his cõuenaũt, and promyse that he made to a thousande generacyons.

Gen. 17. a & 26. a * yee the cõuenamt that he made with Abraham, & the oth that he swaze vnto Jsaac.

Gen. 28. a * And appoynted the same vnto Jacob for a lawe, and to Jsraell for an euerlastynge Testament.

Sayeng: vnto the wyll I geue ꝑ londe of Canaan, the lotte of your heretage.

Whan ther was yet but a few of them, and they straungers therin.

What tyme as they went from one nacion to another, from one kyngdome to another.

Gene. 12. d and. 20. a * He suffered no man to hurte them, but repzoued euen kynges for their sakes.

Touche not myn anoynted, do my prophetes no harme.

C Moreouer he called for a derth vpon ꝑ londe, & destroyed al the prouisiõ of bread.

Gen. 45. a & 37. f. 39. a * But he had sent a man before them, euen Joseph which was solde to be a bond seruaunt.

Luce. 2. f. They hurt his fete in the stockes, * the yron pearsed his harte.

Untyll the tyme that his worde came, & tyll the worde of ꝑ LORD had tryed him.

Gen. 41. f * Then sent the kyng and cauled him to be delyuered, the prynce of the people had let him go.

He made him LORDE of his house, and ruler of all his substaunce.

That he myght enfourme his prynces after his wyll, and teache his Senatours wysdome.

Gen. 46. a * Jsrael also came in to Egypte, & Jacob was a straũger in the londe of Ham.

Exod. 1. a. Deu. 7. c. * But he encreased his people exceedyngly, & made the stronger then their enemies.

D Whose harte turned, so that they hated his people, and dealt vntruely with his seruauntes.

Exo. 3. 4. ꝯ Deu. 7. d * Then sent he Moses his seruaũt and Aaron whome he had chosen.

These dyd his tokens amonge them, & wonders in the londe of Ham.

* He sent darkenesse and it was darke, for they were not obedient vnto his worde.

* He turned their waters in to bloude, and slewe their fysshe.

* Their londe brought forth frogges, yee euen in their kynges chambres.

He spake the worde, and ther came all maner of flyes & lyce in al their quarters.

He gaue them hayle stones for rayne, & flammes of fyre in their londe.

He smote their vinyardes & fygetrees, & destroyed ꝑ trees ꝑ were in their coastes.

* He spake the worde, & ther came grashoppers and catterpillers innumerable.

These did eate vp al ꝑ grasse in their lãd, and deuoured the frutes of their grounde.

* He smote al ꝑ first borne in their lond, & euen the chefe of al their substaunce.

He brought them forth with syluer and golde, ther was not one feble persone amonge their trybes.

Egypte was glad of their departyng, for they were afrayed of them.

* He spred out a cloude to be a couerynge, and fyre to geue lyght in the nyght season.

* At their desyre ther came quales, and he fylled them with breade of heauen.

* He opened the rocke of stone, and the waters flowed out: so that ryuers came in the wyldernesse.

For why? he remembred his holy promyse whiche he had made vnto Abraham his seruaunt.

Thus he brought forth his people with ioye, and his chosen with gladnesse.

And gaue them the londes of the heythen, where they toke the labours of the people in possessyon.

That they myght kepe his statutes, and obserue his lawes. Alleluya.

Blessed are they that alway kepe iudgment and ryghteousnesse.

Remembre vs (o LORDE) accordyng to the fauoure that thou bearest vnto thy people: o vysyt vs with thy sauyng health.

That we myghte se the pleasure of thy chosen, that we myght reioyce in the gladnesse of thy people, and geue thankes with thyne enheritaunce.

* We haue synned with oure fathers, we haue done amysse, we haue dealte wyckedly.

Our fathers regarded not thy wonders in Egypte, they kepte not thy greate goodnesse in remembraunce: but were disobedient at the see, euen at the reed see.

Neuertheless, he helped them for hys names sake, that he might make his power to be knowne.

B * He rebuked the reed see, & it was dryed vp: so he led them thorowe the depe as in a wyldernesse.

Thus he saued them from the hande of the hater, and deliuered them from ỹ hand of the enemye.

As for those that troubled them, the waters ouerwhelmed them, ther was not one of them left.

* Then beleued they in his worde, and songe prayse vnto hym.

But within a while they forgat his workes, and wolde not abyde his counsell.

* A lust came vpon them in the wylderneße, so that they tepted God in the desert.

yet he gaue them they⁹ desyre, & sente them ynough at they⁹ willes.

They angred Moses in the tentes, and Aaron the saynte of the LORDE,

* So the earth opened and swalowed vp Dathan, and couered the congregacion of Abiram.

C The fyre was kyndled in they⁹ company, the flame burnt vp the vngodly.

* They made a calfe in Horeb, & worshipped the molten ymage.

The.Cxxvii. Psalme.

BLessed * are all they that feare the LORDE, and walke in his wayes.

Psa.33.b.

For thou shalte eate the laboures of thyne owne handes: o well is the, happie arte thou.

Thy wyfe shalbe as a frutefull vyne vpon the walles of thy house.

Thy chyldren lyke the olyue braunches rounde aboute thy table.

Lo, thus shall the man be blessed, that feareth the LORDE.

* The LORDE shall so blesse the out of Syon, that thou shalt se Jerusalem in prosperyte all thy lyfe longe.

* Yee that thou shalte se thy chyldren chyldren, and peace vpon Israell.

Sepe expugnauerunt me a iuuentute mea

The.C.xxviii. Psalme.

MAny a tyme haue they fought agaynste me fro my youth vp (may Israel now saye.)

Yee many a tyme haue they fought against me fro my youth vp, but they haue not ouercome me.

The plowers plowed vpon my backe, and made longe forowes.

But the ryghteous LORDE hath hewen the pocke of the vngodlye in peces.

Let the be confoūded and turned backwarde, as many as haue euell will at Syon.

Oh let thyne eares consyder wel the voyce of my complaynt

* yf thou (LORDE) wilt be extreme to marcke what is done amysse, Oh LORDE who maye abyde it?

But ther is mercye wyth the, that thou mayest be feared.

I loke for the LORDE, my soule doth wayte for hym, & in hys worde is my trust.

My soule doth patiently abyde the LORDE, from the one morowtyde to the other.

Let Israell truste in the LORDE, for with the LORDE ther is mercye and plenteous redemptcion.

* And he shall redeme Israell from all hys synnes.

I wyl not suffre myne eyes to slepe, nor myne eye lydes to slomber.

Untyl I fynde out a place for the LORD an habitacion for ỹ myghty one of Jacob.

Lo, we herde the same at Ephrata, and founde it in the wood.

We wyll go in to his tabernacle, and fall downe before his footstoole.

* Aryse (o LORDE) in to thy restynge place, thou and the arke of thy strengthe.

* Let thy prestes be clothed with ryghteousnesse, and let thy sayntes reioyce.

For thy seruaunte Dauids sake turne not away the presence of thyne anoynted.

* The LORDE hathe made a faythfull othe vnto Dauid, and he shall not shrynke from it.

* Of the frute of thy body shal I set vp on thy seate.

If thy chyldren wyl kepe my cõuenaũt, and my testimony that I shal learne them, their chyldren also shall syt vpon thy seate for euermore.

For the LORDE hath chosen Sion, to be an habitacio for hymselfe hath he chosẽ her.

This shal be my rest, here wyl I dwell, for I haue a delyte therin.

I wyl blesse hyr vytales with increase, and * wyl satysfye hir power with breade.

I wyl decke hir prestes * with healthe, and hir sayntes shal reioyce and be glad.

There shall I make the * horne of Dauid to flowrish. I haue ordeined * a lanterne for myne anoynted.

When I call vpon the, thou heareste me, and endeweste my soule with muche strengthe.

All the kynges of the earth shall prayse the (o LORDE) when they heare the wordes of thy mouthe.

yee they shall synge in the wayes of the LORDE, that greate is the glorye of the LORDE.

*For though the LORDE be hygh, yet hath he respecte vnto the lowlye: as for the proude, he beholdeth hym a farre of.

Though I walke in the myddest of trouble, yet shalt thou refreshe me: thou shalte stretche forth thyne hande vpon the furiousnesse of myne enemyes, and thy ryghte hande shall saue me.

The LORDE shall make good for me, yee thy mercy (o LORDE) endureth for euer: * despyse not then the worke of thyn owne handes.

Domine probasti me, et cognouisti me.

The.C.xxxviii. Psalme of Dauid.

O LORDE, thou searcheste me out, and knowest me.

Thou knoweste my downe sytynge, and myn vprysyng, thou vnderstödest my thought as a farre of.

Thou art aboute my path, and aboute my bedde, and spyest out all my wayes.

For lo, there is not a worde in my tunge, but thou (o LORDE) knowest it altogether.

Thou hast fashioned me behynde, and before, and layed thyne hande vpon me.

Such knowlege is to wonderfull, and excellent for me, I can not attayne vnto it.

* Whyther shall I go then from thy spirite? Or whyther shall I flye frō thy presence?

* If I clymme vp in to heauen, thou art there: yf I go downe to hell, thou arte there also.

If I take the wynges of the morninge, and remayne in the vttermoost parte of the see.

Even there also shal thy hand leade me, and thy ryghthande shall holde me.

If I saye: peraduenture the darknesse shall couer me, then shall my nyght be turned to daye.

But the darknesse is no darknesse wyth the, but the nyght is as cleare as the daye: the darknesse, and lyghte are both alyke.

For my reynes are thyne, thou hast couered me in my mothers wombe.

I wyl geue thankes vnto the, for I am wonderously made: maruaylous are thy workes, and that my soule knoweth ryght well.

My bones are not hyd from the, though I be made secretly, and fashioned beneth in the earth.

Thyn eyes se myne vnperfectnesse, they stonde all wrytten in thy boke: my dayes were fashioned, whan as yet ther was not one of them.

How deare are thy counsels vnto me o God? O how great is the summe of them?

If I tell them, they are mo in nombre then the sonde: whan I wake vp, I am present wyth the.

Wilt thou not slaye the wycked (Oh God) that the bloudethyrstye myghte departe fro me?

PRayse the LORDE o Jerusalem, prayse the God o[illegible]

For he maketh fast ꝑ barres of thy gates, and blesseth thy chyldren wythin the.

He maketh peace in thy borders, and fylleth the with the floure of wheate.

* He sendeth forth hys cōmaundement vpon earthe, his worde runneth swyftly.

He geueth snowe lyke woll, and scatereth the horehoost lyke asshes.

He casteth forthe hys yse lyke morsels, who is able to abyde hys frost?

He sendeth out hys worde, and melteth them: he bloweth with hys wynde, and the waters flowe.

He sheweth hys worde vnto Jacob, his statutes and ordinaunces vnto Israell.

He hath not dealte so with al the heythen, nother haue they knowlege of his lawes.

Hallelupa. The. C. xlviii. Psalme.

OPrayse the LORDE o[illegible] prayse hym in the heyghte.

Prayse hym all ye angels of hys, prayse hym all his [illegible]

Prayse hym Sonne and Moone, prayse hym all ye starres & lyght.

Prayse hym all ye heauens, and ye waters, that be vnder the heauens.

Let them prayse the name of ꝑ LORDE. * for he commaunded, & they were made.

He hath made them fast for euer: he hath geuen them a law which shall not be broken.

Prayse the LORD vpon earth, ye [illegible] fyshes and all depes.

Fyre and hayle, snowe & vapours, [illegible] and stormes, fulfyllynge hys worde.

Mountaynes and all hylles, fruitful trees, and all Ceders.

Beastes and all cattell, worms and [illegible] fethered foules.

Kynges of the earthe, and all people

princes and all iudges of the worlde.
Both yonge men and maydens, olde men & children: let them prayse the name of the LORDE, for his name onely is excellent, and his prayse aboue heauen and earth.
He exalteth the horne of his people, all his saynctes shal prayse hym, the children of Israel, euen the people that serueth hym. Alleluya.

Cantate domino canticum nouum, laus.

The.C.xlix. Psalme. Halleluya.

Synge * vnto the LORDE a newe songe, let the congregacyon of saynctes prayse him.
Let Israel reioyce in him that made hym, and let the children of Syon be ioyful in their kyng.
Let them prayse his name in the daunce, let them synge prayses vnto him with tabrets and harpes.
For the LORDE hathe pleasure in his people, and helpeth the mete harted.
Let the saynctes be ioyfull with glorye, let them reioyce in theyr beddes.
Let the prayses of God be in their mouth and sharpe swordes in their handes.
To be auenged of the heythen, and to punyshe the people.
To bynde their kynges in chaynes, and their nobles with lynkes of yron.
That they maye be auenged of them, as it is wrytten: suche honoure haue all his saynctes. Halleluya.

Laudate dominum in sanctis eius.

The.C.l. Psalme. Halleluya.

Prayse the LORDE in his sanctuary: prayse hym in the firmament of his power.
Prayse him in his noble actes, prayse hym in his excellent greatnesse.
Prayse hym in the sounde of the trompe, prayse hym vpon the lute and harpe.
Prayse hym in the cymbals and daunce, prayse hym vpon the strynges and pype.
Prayse hym vpon the wel tuned cymbals, prayse him vpon the loude cymbals.
Let euery thyng that hath breth prayse the LORDE. Halleluya.

The ende of the Psalter.

The Prouerbes of Salomon.

What this boke conteyneth.

Chap. i. The wysdom of God calleth vs by the mouth of Salomon/exorteth vs and geueth vs warnyng to eschue ye wycked: whose vngodly conuersacyon in worde and worke and punyshment also of the same is here described.

Chap ii. How wysdome may be gotten/and what profyte cōmeth of it.

Chap iii. He exorteth vs to the feare of God and to pacience/he commendeth wysdome and requyreth vs to cleue vnto the same.

Chap iiii. A fatherly exortacyō vnto wysdom with the profyte therof/and how we ought to refrayne ye membres of our body frō euel.

Chap v He exorteth vnto wysdom/and to be ware of harlottes: he telleth what harme may folowe therout/whan men medle with suche: he teacheth men louyngly to cleue vnto their maryed wyues/and describeth the ende of the vngodly.

Chap vi. He warneth men to beware of sure tryfyng/exorteth the slouthful to labour/sheweth the wickednesse of false tunges/and requyreth me to beware of aduoutry/because it is more perylous than theft or felony.

Chap vii. He exorteth vnto wysdome/sheweth the conditions of harlottes/and what hurt happeneth vnto suche as entyse to the prouocacyons and delyres of the flesh.

Chap viii. wysdome calleth men sweetely vnto her/and telleth them what treasure and power she hath. A cōmendacyon and prayse of wysdom/wherout euery man is exhorted to cleue vnto her.

Chap ix. wysdome cryeth vpon the ygnorant and promyseth them great thynges. The foolysh maner of a lyght woman.

Chap x. From this chapter forth vnto the xxxi. ther are described many swete/louely/and wyse sentences/which teache men wysdome/& what profyte cōmeth of it. Agayne how men may auoyde foolyshnesse/and the hurte therof.

Chap xxxi wysdome warneth vs to beware of euel women/and describeth the conuersacyon/maner/and behauioure of an honest maryed wyfe.

These are the Prouerbes of Salomon the sonne of Dauid kynge of Israel/to learne wysdome/nurture/vnderstondynge/prudence ryghtousnesse/iudgement and equite. That the very babes myght haue wyt/and that ponge men myght haue knowlege and vnderstondyng. By hearynge the wyse men shal come to more wysdome: and by experience he shall be more apte to vnderstonde a parable/and the interpretacion therof: the wordes of the wyse/and the darke speches of the same.

Iob.28.c. Ro.10.g. Psa.110.b Eccli.1.c.

* The feare of the LORD is the begynnynge of wysdom. But fooles despise wysdom & nurture.

The fyrst Chapter.

A Myp sonne, heare thy fathers doc
tryne, and forsake not the lawe
of thy mother: for ỳ shal bryng
grace vnto thy heade, and shal
be a cheyne aboute thy necke.
Esa.29.b. * Myp sonne, consente not vnto synners, yf
they entyse the and saye: come with vs, let vs laye wayte for bloud, and lurke secretly
for the innocente wythout a cause: let vs
Psa.123.a swalowe them vp lyke the hell, * let vs de uoure them quycke and whole, as those ỳ
go down in to the pyt. So shall we fynde
all maner of costly ryches, and fyl our hou ses with spoyles. Caste in thy lot amonge vs, we shall haue all one purse.

Myp sonne, walke not thou with them,
Esa.59.a. refrayn thy foote from theyr wayes. * For Rom.3.b. Psa.13.a. they fete runne to euell, and are hastye to shed bloude. But in vayne is the net lay B ed forth before the byrdes eyes. Yee they them selues laye wayte one for anothers
bloud, and one of them wold slay another.
These are the wayes of all suche as be co-
uetous, ỳ one wold raupsshe anothers lyfe.

Pro.1.a. * Wysdome crieth wythout, and put-teth forth hyr voyce in the stretes. She cal leth before the congregacyon in the open gates, and sheweth hyr wordes thorow the cytie, sayenge: O ye chyldren, how longe
wyll ye loue chyldishnesse? how longe wyll
the scorners delyte in scornynge, and the vnwyse be enempes vnto knowlege? O turne you vnto my correccyon: lo, I wil ex
presse my mynde vnto you, and make you vnderstonde my wordes. * Seynge then
C Esay 65.b that I haue called, and ye refuse it: I haue
Jere. 7.b stretched out my hande, and no man regar ded it, but all my counsels haue ye despy-
sed and set my correccions at naughte.
Therfor shal I also laugh in your destruc
cyon, and mock you, whan the thynge that ye feare commeth vpon you: euen whā the thynge that ye be afrayed of, falleth in so-denly lyke a storme, and youre mystery like
a tempest: yee whan trouble and heuynesse commeth vpon you. Then shall they call vpon me, but I wyll not heare: they shall seke me earlye, but they shall not fynde
me. And that because they hated knowlege, and receaued not the feare of the LORDE, but abhorred my counsell, and despysed my correccyō. Therfore shal they eate the frutes of theyr owne waye, and be fylled with theyre owne counsels: for the turnynge awaye of the vnwyse shall slaye them, and the prosperyte of fooles shall be theyr owne destruccyon. But who so harkeneth vnto me, shall dwell safely,
haue ynough wythout any feare of euell.

The.ii. Chapter.

My sonne, yf thou wilt receaue
my wordes, and kepe my com
maundementes by the, so ỳ eare mayst herken vnto wy-
dome, applie thyne hart
to vnderstondynge. For yf thou crie after wysdome, and callest for knowlege: if thou seekest after her as after money, and dyggest for her as for treasure: Then shalt thou vnderstonde the feare of the LORDE and fynde the knowlege of God, * For
is the LORDE that geueth wysdome,
of hys mouth commeth knowlege and vnderstondynge. He preserueth the welfare of the ryghteous, and defendeth them
walke innocentlye: he kepeth them in the ryght path, and preserueth the wayes of hys sayntes. Then shalte thou vnderstonde ryghteousnesse, iudgement and equyte, yea
and euery good path. yf wisdome enter in to thyne harte, & thy soule delyte in knowlege: then shall counsell preserue the, vnderstondynge shall kepe the. That thou mayest be delyuered from the euell waye,
and from the man that speaketh frowarde
thynges. From suche as leaue the ryght strete, and walke in the waye of darkenesse,
which reioyce in doynge euell, and delyte
in wycked thynges: whose wayes are crooked, and theyr pathes sklaunderous.

That thou mayeste be delyuered also
* from the straunge woman, and from her
that is not thyne owne: which geueth fayre wordes, forsaketh the husbande of her youth, and forgetteth the couenaūt of her
god. For hyr house is enclyned vnto death, & hyr pathes vnto hell. All they ỳ go in her, come not agayn, nother take they hold of the waye of lyfe.

That thou mayeste walke in the good
waye, and kepe the pathes of the ryghte-
ous. For the iuste shall dwell in the land, and the innocētes shal remayne therin:
vngodly shalbe roted out of the land, and
the wycked doers shalbe taken out of it.

The.iii. Chapter.

My sonne, * forget not my lawe,
but se that thyne harte kepe my commaundementes. For so shall prolonge the dayes, and yeares of thy lyfe, and bryng the peace. Let mercy and faythfulnesse neuer go from them about thy necke, and write them vpon the tables of thyne hart. So shalt thou finde fauoure and good vnderstonding in the syghte of God and men. Put thy trust in the LORDE with all thyne

herte, and leane not vnto thyne owne vnderstondynge. In all thy wayes haue regard vnto him, and he shal order thy goin
ges. * Be not wyse in thyne owne conceyte, but feare the LORDE, and departe
from euell: so shall thy nauell be whole,
and thy bones stronge.

* Honoure the LORDE with thy substance, and with ye fyrstlynges of al thyne increase: so shall thy barnes be fylled with plenteousnesse, and thy presses shall flowe ouer with swete wyne. * My sonne, despyse not the chastenynge of the LORDE, neither wynde whan thou arte rebuked of
him. For whom the LORDE loueth, him
he chasteneth: and yet delyteth he in him, euen as a father in his owne sonne. Well is him that fyndeth wyldome, and opteyn-eth understondynge, for the gettynge of it is better then ony marchaundise of syluer, and the profite of it is better the gold.
* Wyldome is more worth then precious stones, and all the thinges that thou canst
desyre, are not to be compared vnto her.
Vpon her righthande is longe lyfe, and
vpon her lefthande is ryches and honour.
Her wayes are pleasaunt wayes, and al
her pathes are peaceable. She is a * tree of lyfe to them that laye holde vpon her, &
happy are they that kepe her faste.

Through wyldome hath the LORDE layde
the fundacyon of the earthe, and thorough understondynge hath he stablyshed
the heauens. Thorow his wyldome the depthes breake vp, and ye cloudes droppe out the dew. My sonne, let not these thinges depart from thyn eyes, but kepe
my lawe and my counsell: so shal it be lyfe
vnto thy soule, and grace vnto thy mouth.
Then shalte thou walke safely in thy way, and thy foote shall not stomble. yf thou slepest, thou shalt not be afrayed, but shalt take thy reste & slepe swetely. * Thou shalt not nede to be afrayed of ony sodane feare, neither for the violent rushynge in of the vngodly, whan it commeth.

For the LORDE shall be besyde the, & kepe thy foote that thou be not taken. Refuse not to do good vnto hym that shulde
haue it, so longe as thyne hande is able to do. Saye not vnto thy neghboure: go thy waye, and come agayne, tomorow wil

I geue the: where as thou hast now to ge ue hym. Intende no hurte vnto thy negh-boure, seynge he hopeth to dwell in rest by
the. Stryue not ryghtely with ony man, where as he hath done the no harme. * Fo Pro. 3. a.
lowe not a wycked man, and chose none
of hys wayes: for the LORDE abhorreth
the frowarde, but hys secrete is amonge
the righteous. The curse of the LORDE is in the house of the vngodly, but he blesse-
eth the dwellynges of the righteous.

As for the scornefull, he shall laugh the
to scorne, but he shall geue grace vnto the lowly. The wyse shall haue honour in pos session, but shame is the promocion, that fooles shall haue.

The iiii. Chapter.

HEare (o ye children) the fathe-
ly exhortacion, and take good hede, that ye maye learne wyldome. For I shall geue you a good rewarde, yf ye wyll not forsake my lawe. For whan I myself was my fathers deare sonne, and tenderly belo
ued of my mother, he taught me also, say-
enge: * let thine harte receaue my wordes Deut. 6. b.
kepe my commaundementes, and thou 11. c. 32. g shalt lyue.

Get the wisdom, get the vnderstonding forget not the wordes of my mouthe, and shrenke not from them. Forsake her not,
and she shall preserue the: loue her, and she shall kepe the. The chefe pointe of wisdō is, that thou be willinge to opteine wis-dome, and before all thy goodes to get the vnderstondynge. * Make muche of her, Deu. 28. b and she shal promote the: yee yf thou embra ce her, she shall bringe the vnto honour.

She shall make the a gracious head, B and garnish the with the crowne of glory.
Heare my sonne, and receaue my wordes,
that the yeares of thy life maye be many. I will shewe the the waye of wisdome, and lede the in ye right pathes. So that yf thou goest therin, ther shall no straytnesse hyn-der the: and whan thou runnest, thou shalt not fall. Take faste holde of doctryn, let her not go: kepe her, for she is thy life.

* Come not in the path of the vngodly Psal. 1. a.
and walke not in the waye of the wicked. eccl. 36. a.

Eschue it, & go not therin: depart aside, & passe ouer by it. For they can not slepe, ex
cepte they haue fyrst done some mischefe:
nother take they ony rest, except they haue fyrst don some harm. For they eate ye bread of wickednesse, & drinke ye wine of robbery

The path of the ryghteous shyneth as the lyghte, and is euer bryghter and bryghter vnto the perfecte daye. But the way of the vngodly is as the darknesse, wherein men fall, or they beware.

C Myn sonne, marcke my wordes, and enclyne thyne eare vnto my sayinges. * Let them not departe from thyn eyes, kepe thē euen in the middest thyne harte. For they are lyfe vnto all those that fynd them, and health vnto all theyr bodyes. Kepe thyne harte wyth all diligence, for therupon hangeth lyfe. Put awaye from the a froward mouth, and let the lyppes of sklaunder be farre from the. Let thyne eyes beholde the thynge that is ryghte, and let thyne eye lidde s loke strayghte before the.

Num. 15. d Deut. 11. c.

Ponder the path of thy fete, so shall all thy wayes be sure. * Turne not aside, nother the ryghthande, nor the lefte: but wytholde thy foote from euell.

Deut. 5. d. and. 17. c.

The. v. Chapter.

A Myn sonne, geue hede vnto my wysdome, and bowe thyn eare vnto my prudence, that thou mayest regarde good counsell and that thy lyppes may kepe nurtoure. * For the lyppes of an harlot are a droppynge hony combe, & hyr throte is softer then oyle. But at the last she is as bytter as wormwood, and as sharpe as a twoedged sweard. Hyr fete go down vnto death, & hyr steppes pearse thorowe vnto hel. She regardeth not ỳ path of lyf, so vnstedfast are hyr wayes, that thou canst not knowe them. Heare me therfore (o my son) and departe not from the wordes of my mouth. Kepe thy waye farre from her, and come not nye the dores of hyr house. That thou geue not thyn honour vnto another,

Pro. 7. a.

B and thy yeares to the cruell. That other men be not fylled with thy goodes, and ỳ thy labours come not in a straūge house. yee that thou mourne not at the last (whā thou hast spent thy body and goodes) and then saye: Alas, why hated I nurtoure? why dyd my hart despyse correccyon? Wherfore was not I obediente vnto the voyce of my teachers? and herkened not vnto them that informed me? I am com almoost in to all myschefe, in the myddeste of the multytude and congregacyon. Drynke of the water of thyne owne well, and of the ryuers that runne out of thyne owne spryngs. Let thy welles flowe oute abrode, that ther may be ryuers of water in the stretes. But let them be only thyne own, and not straungers with the. Let thy well be blessed, and be glad with the wyfe of thy youth. * Louynge is the hynde, and frendlye is the Roo: let hyr breastes alwaye satisfie the, and holde the euer content in hyr loue. Why sonne, why wilt thou haue pleasure in an harlot, and embrace the bosome of another woman? * For euery mans wayes are open in the syght of the LORDE, and he pondereth all they r goynges. The wyckednesse of ỳ vngodly shall take hymselfe, and with the snares of hys owne synnes shall he be trapped. Because he wolde not be reformed, he shall dye: and for hys greate foolyshnesse he shall be betroyed.

The. vi. Chapter.

M Y sonne, * yf thou be suerte for the neghboure, thou hast fastened thyne hande vnto another man: yee thou art bounde with thyne owne wordes, and taken with thyne owne speche. Therfore (my sonne) do thys: Discharge thy selfe, thou arte come in to thy neghbours danger. Go thy waye then soone, and intreate thy neghboure: let not thyn eyes slepe, nor thyne eye lyddes slomber. Saue thy selfe as a doo from the hound, and as bryde from the hande of the fouler. Go to the emmet (thou slogarde) consyder hyr wayes, and learne to be wyse. * She hath no gouernour, no teacher, no leder: yet in the sommer she prouideth hyr meate, and gathereth hyr foode together in the harueste. How longe wilt thou slepe, thou slogysh man? When wilt thou arise out of thy slepe? yee slepe a lytle, slomber a lytle, folde thyne handes together yet a lytle, that thou maist slepe: so shall pouerte come vnto the as one that trauayleth by the waye, and nedefull as a wapened man. A dissemblynge person, a wicked man goeth with a froward mouth, he wynketh with hys eyes, he teacheth with his fete, he poynteth with hys fyngers, he is euer ymagenynge myscheefe, and sowatdnesse in hys harte, and causeth ỳ sore. Therfore shall hys destruccyon come hastely vpon hym, sodenly shall he be ouerthrowen, and not be healed.

Ther be syre thynges which the LORDE hateth, and the seuenth he vtterly abhorreth: * A proude loke, a dissemblynge tunge, handes that shed innocent bloude, an harte that goeth about myschefe

pestilencyons, * fete that be swyfte
to ronnyge to do mysscheefe, a false wyt-nesse that bryngeth vp lyes, and suche
one as soweth dyscorde amonge brethren. My sonne, kepe thy fathers commaundementes, and forsake not the lawe of thy mother. Put them vp together in thyne herte, and bynde them aboute thy necke. That they maye lede the where thou goest, preserue the whā thou art aslepe, and talke when thou awakeste, thou mayeste talke of them. * (For the commaundement
is a lanterne, and the lawe a lyght: yee cha stenynge and nurtoure is the waye of lyfe)
that they maye kepe the from the * euell woman, and from the flatterynge tunge of the harlot: that thou lust not after hyr bew
tye in thyne harte, and lest thou be taken w hyr fayre lokes. An harlot wyll make a man to begge hys bread, but a maried wo man will hunte for the precious lyfe. May one take fyre in hys bosom, and his clo thes not be burnt? Or can one go vpon hote coales, and hys fete not be hurt? Euē
so who soeuer goeth in to hys neghbours
wyfe, and toucheth her, can not be vngyl-
ty. * Men do not vtterly despise a theefe,
but fealeth to satisfye his soule, whan he is hongrie: but yf he maye be gotten, he re storeth agayne seuen tymes almuch, or els
he maketh recompense with all the good of hys house. But who so committeth adwtrye with a woman, he is a foole, and destroyeth hys lyfe to destruccyon. He getteth alle shame and dishonoure, and shall neuer be put oute. For the rowme and wrath of the man wyll not be mytigated, no though thou woldeste offre him many gyftes to make amendes, he will not receaue them.

The.bii. Chapter.

My sonne, kepe my wordes, and

dementes and my lawe, euen
as the apple of thyne eye, and bynde them vpon thy fin gers, and write them in the table of thyne

wyfe of another man, and from the harlot which flatereth with her wordes. For out of the wyn-dow of my house I loked thorow the trai
lyse, and behelde the symple people: and among other yonge folkes, I spied one yonge foole goyng ouer the stretes, by the corner in the waye towarde the harlottes

house in the twylyghte of the euenynge, whan it beganne now to be nyghte, and

wanton & an vnstedfast woman: whose fete

rell of hys lyfe lyeth there vpon. Heare me now therfore (o my sonne) and marcke the wordes of my mouth.
Let not thyn hart wandre in hyr wayes
and be not thou deceaued in hyr pathes.

For who so fyndeth me, fyndeth lyfe, and shall optayne fauoure of the LORDE. But who so offendeth agaynst me, hurteth his owne soule. All they that hate me, are the louers of death.

The.ix.Chapter.

Wysdome hath buylded hyr selfe an house, and hewen out seuen pylers: she hath slaughted, powred out hir wine, and prepared hir table. She hath sent forth hir maydens to crye vpon the best place of the cytie: Who so is ygnorāunt, let him come hyther. And to the vnwyse she sayde: O come on your way, eate my bread, and dzynke my wyne, whiche I haue powred out for you. Forsake ygnorāunce, and ye shall lyue: and se that ye go in the waye of vnderstondynge.

Who so reprooueth a scorneful person, getteth hymselfe dishonour: and he that rebuketh the vngodly stayneth hymselfe.

Reproue not a scorner, lest he hate the: reproue a wyse man, and he wyll loue the. Geue a discrete man but an occasyon, and he wyll be the wyser: teache a ryghteous man, and he wyll encrease.

* The feare of the LORDE is the begynnynge of wysdome, and the knowlege of holy thynges is vnderstondynge.

* For thorowe me thy dayes shall be prolonged, and the yeares of thy lyfe shall be many. Yf thou be wyse, thy wysdome shal do thy selfe good: but yf thou thinkest scorne therof it shal be thyne owne harme. But they cōsider not that death is there, and that hir gestes go downe to hell.

The.x.Chapter.

These are the Pzouerbes of Salomon.

* Wyse sonne maketh a glad father, but an vndyscrete son is ꝑ heupnesse of hys mother.

* Treasures that are wyckedly gotten, pzofyt nothing: but ryghteousnesse deliuereth from death.

* The LORDE wyll not let the soule of the ryghteous suffre honger, but he putteth the vngodly from hys desyze.

An ydle hande maketh pooze, but a quycke labourynge hande maketh ryche.

Who so gathereth in Sommer, is wise: but he that is slogysh in haruest, bzingeth hymself to confusyon.

Louynge and fauozable is the face of the ryghteous, but the fozeheade of the vngodly is past shame, and pzesumptuous.

* The memozyall of the iust shal haue a good repoze, but the name of the vngodly shall synke.

A wyse man wyll receaue warnynge, but a foole wyl sooner be smytten in ꝑ face

* He that leadeth an innocent lyfe, walketh suerely: but who so goeth a wzonge waye, shalbe knowne.

* He that wynketh with hys eye, wil do some harme: but he that hath a foolysshe mouth, shalbe beaten.

The mouthe of a ryghteous man is a well of lyfe, but the mouth of the vngodly is past shame, and pzesumptuous.

Euel wyl steareth vp stryfe, but * loue couereth the multitude of synnes.

In the lyppes of hym that hath vnderstondynge, a man shall finde wysdom, but a rode belongeth to the backe of the foolysshe.

Wyse men laye vp knowlege, but the mouthe is nye destruccyon.

The ryche mans goodes are hys stzōg cite, but pouerte oppzesseth the pooze.

The ryghteous laboureth to do good, but the vngodlye bleth hys increase vnto synne.

To take hede vnto the chastenynge of loue, is the way of lyfe: but he that refuseth to be reformed, goeth wzonge.

Dissemblynge lyppes kepe hatred secrete, and he that speaketh ony slaūder, is a fole.

Where much babblynge is, there muste nedes be offence: he that refrayneth his lyps, is wyselye of all.

An innocent tunge is a noble treasure, but the hert of the vngodlye is nothinge worthe.

The lyppes of the ryghteous fede a whole multytude, but fooles shall dye in theyz owne foolye.

* The blessynge of the LORDE maketh ryche men, as foz carefull trauayle, it doth nothynge therto. Iob.42.b. Eccli.11.b Pſ.126.a. mat.6.a.b

A foole doth wyckedlye, ꝑ maketh but a spoze of it: neuertheles it is wysdome foz a man to beware of suche.

The thynge that the vngodly are afrayed of, shall come vpon them: but the righteous shall haue theyz desyze.

As vyneger is to the teth, and as smoke is vnto the eyes: euen so is a slogysh person to them that sende hym fozth.

The feare of the LORDE maketh a longe lyfe, but the yeares of the vngodlye shall be shoztened.

The pacyent abydynge of the ryghteous shalbe turned to gladnesse, but ꝑ hope of the vngodly shall perysh.

The waye of the LORDE geueth a corage vnto the godlye, but it is a feare foz wycked doers.

* The ryghteous shall neuer be ouerthzowē, but the vngodly shall not remayn in the londe. Pſ.124.a.

* The mouth of the iust wilbe talking of wysdome, but the tunge of the frowarde shall perysshe. Pſa.36.b

The lyppes of the ryghteous are occupied in acceptable thinges, but the mouth of the vngodlye taketh them to the woꝛst.

The.xi.Chapter.

A false balaunce is an abhominacyō vnto the LORDE, but a true weyght pleaseth hym. Pzo.16.b. 20.b.b.

Where pryde is, there is shame also and confusyō: but where as is lowlynesse, there is wysdome.

The innocent dealyng of the iuste shal lede them, but the vnfaythfulnesse of ꝑ dysplysers shalbe theyz owne destruccyon.

* Ryches helpe not in the daye of vengeaunce, but ryghteousnesse delyuereth from death. Pzo.10.b. Eccli.5.b.

The ryghteousnesse of the innocent dzyeth hys waye, but the vngodlye shal fal in his owne wyckednesse.

The ryghteousnesse of the iuste shal delyuer them, but the dysplysers shalbe taken in theyz owne vngodlynesse.

When an vngodly man dyeth, his hope is gone, ꝑ cōfydence of riches shal perish

The ryghteous shalbe delyuered oute of the trouble, and the vngodly shall come in hys stede.

Thorow the mouth of the dissembler is his neghbour destroied, but thorow knowlege shall the iust be delyuered.

Pro. 14. b. * Whan it goeth well with the ryghteous, the cytie is mery: and whan the vngodly perysh ther is gladnesse.

Whan the iuste are in wealth, the cytie prospereth: but whan the vngodly haue ye rule, it decayeth.

A foole bryngeth vp a sklaunder of his neghboure, but a wyse man wyll kepe it secrete.

Pro. 10. b. * A dissemblynge personne wyll discouer preuy thinges: but he that is of a faithfull harte, wyll kepe counsell.

3. Esr. 12. a * Where no good counsell is, there the people decaye: but where as are many that can geue counsel, there is wealth.

Pro. 6. a * He that is suertye for a straūger, hurteth hymself: but he that medleth not with suerteshippe, is sure.

A gracious woman manteyneth hone stie: as for ye mightie, they manteyn riches

He that hath a gentle liberal stomack, is mercyfull: but who so hurteth his neghboure, is a tyraunt.

The laboure of the vngodlye prospereth not, but he that loweth ryghteousnesse, shall receaue a sure rewarde.

Lyke as ryghteousnesse bryngeth lyfe: euen so to cleue vnto euell, bringeth death.

The LORDE abhorreth a fayned hart: but he hath pleasure in them that are vndefyled.

It shall not helpe the wycked, though they laye all theyr handes together: but ye sede of the ryghteous shalbe preserued.

A fayre woman wythout discrete maners, is lyke a tynge of golde in a swynes snoute.

The iust labour for peace and tranquilyte: but the vngodlye for disquietnesse.

Pro. 36. b and. 111. b. Eccl. 6. b. * Some man geueth out hys goodes, & is the rycher: but the nygarde (hauynge ynough) wyll departe from nothynge, and is euer in pouerte.

2. Co. 9. b. * He that is lyberall in geuynge, shall haue plentye: and he that watereth, shall be watereth also hymself.

Who so hoordeth vp hys corne, shalbe cursed amonge the people: but blessynge shall lyght vpon hys heade that selleth it.

He that laboureth for honesty, findeth his desyr: but who so seketh after mischefe it shall happen vnto hym.

* He ye trusteth in hys riches, shall haue a fall: but the ryghteous shall florysh as the grene leaf.

Who so maketh disquietnesse in hys owne house, he shall haue wynde for hys herytage: and the foole shall be seruaunt to the wyse.

The frute of the ryghteous is as the tre of lyfe: a wyse man also wynneth mens soules.

* Yf the righteous be recompensed vpon earth: how much more then the vngodly, and the synner?

The xii. Chapter.

Who so loueth wysdome, wyll be content to be corrected: but he that hateth to be reproued, is a foole.

* A good man is acceptable vnto the LORDE: but the wycked will he condempne.

A man can not endure in vngodynesse: but the rote of the ryghteous shall not be moued.

A stedfast woman is a crowne vnto hyr husbande: but she that behaueth herself vnhonestly, is a corruptyon in hys bones.

The thoughtes of the ryghteous are ryght, but the ymaginacyon of the vngodly are deceatfull.

The talkynge of the vngodly is, lye: they maye laye wayte for bloude: but the mouth of the ryghteous wyll delyuer them.

* Ouerthrowe thou canst turne the vngodly, but the vngodly shall be ouerthrowne: but the house of the ryghteous shall stonde.

A man shall be commended for his wysdome: but a foole shall be despysed.

* A symple man which laboureth, and worketh, is better then one that is gorgious, and wanteth bread.

A righteous man regardeth the lyfe of his cattell: but the vngodlye haue cruell hartes.

* He that tylleth hys londe, shall haue plenteousnesse of bread: but he that followeth ydelnesse, is a very foole.

The desyre of the vngodly huntyth after myscheefe: but the rote of the ryghteous bryngeth forth frute.

* The wycked falleth in to the snare thorow the malyce of hys own mouth: but the iust shall escape out of the parell.

Euery man shall enioye good aduenture to the innocency of his mouth, and after the workes of hys handes shall he be rewarded.

Like what a foole taketh in hande, he thinketh it well done: but he that is wyse, will be counseled.

A foole vttereth hys wrath in all the hast, but a discrete man forgeueth wrong done.

A iust man will tell the truth, & shewe forth that is ryght: but a false witnesse deceaueth.

A slaunderous person prycketh lyke a sworde, but a wyse mās tung is wholsome for all.

A true mouth is euer constant, but a dissemblynge tunge is soone chaunged.

They that ymagyn euell in theyr mynd shall deceaue: but the counselers of peace shall haue ioye folowynge them.

There shall no myshappe tune happen vnto the iuste, but the vngodly shall be fylled with myserye.

He that hath vnderstondynge, cā hyde hys wysdome: but an vndiscrete harte telleth out hys foolyshnesse.

A diligent hande shall beare rule, but the idle shal be vnder tribute.

Heuynesse * discouageth the hart of mā, but a good worde maketh it glad agayne.

The righteous is liberal vnto his neyghbour, but the waye of the vngodlye wyll deceaue them selues.

A deceatfull man shall fynde no baunchet, * but he that is content with that he hath, is maye worth then golde.

In the waye of ryghteousnesse ther is life: as for any other waye, it is the path vnto death.

The.xiii. Chapter.

A wyse sonne wyll receaue hys fathers warnyng, but he that is scornefull, wyll not heare when he is reproued.

A good man shall enioye the fruite of hys mouth, but he that hath a frowarde minde, shalbe spoyled.

He that kepeth hys mouth, kepeth hys life: but who so speaketh vnaduysed, synneth hastely.

The slouthfull wolde fayne haue, and can not get hys desyre: but the soule of the diligent shall haue plentye.

A righteous man abhorreth lyes, but the vngodly shameth both other & himselfe.

Righteousnesse kepeth the innocent in the waye, but vngodlynesse shall ouerthrowe the synner.

* Some men are ryche, though they haue nothing: agayn, some men are poore haupnge greate ryches. Pro. 10. 12.

With goodes euery mā delyuereth his lyfe, and the poore wyll not be reproued.

The light of the righteous maketh ioy full, * but the candle of the vngodlye shall be put oute. Iob. 21. f.

Understondynge is a well of lyfe vnto hym that hath it, as foz the chastenynge of fooles, it is but foolyshnesse.

The harte of the wyse enkourmeth hys mouth, and amendeth the doctryne in hys lyppes.

Fayze wozdes are an hony combe, a refreshynge of the mynde, and healthe of the bones.

D *Ther is a waye that men thinke to be ryghte, but the ende therof leadeth vnto death.

Pro.14.b Deu.12.a Esay.55.b

A troublous soule disquieteth hyz self: foz hiz own mouth hath brought her therto

An vngodly person steareth vp euel, & in hys lyppes he is as an whote burning fyz.

A frowarde body causeth strife, and he that is a blabbe of hys tunge, maketh diuision amonge pzynces.

A wycked man begileth his neighbour, and ledeth him the waye that is not good.

He that wyncketh with hys eyes, ymagineth mischefe: and he that byteth his lippes, wyll do some harme.

Leui.19.a *Age is a crowne of wozshippe, yf it be founde in the waye of rygteousnesse.

A pacyent man is better then one that is stronge: and he that can rule hymselfe, is moze wozth then he that winneth a cite

The lottes are cast in to the lappe, but they fall stondeth in the LORDE.

The.xvii. Chapter.

BEtter is *a dzye mosell with quietnesse, then a full house, & many fat cattel with stryfe. Ecclus

A discrete seruaunt shall haue moze rule then the sonnes that haue no wysdome, and shal haue lyke herytage with the bzethzen.

*Lyke as syluer is tryed in the fyz, and golde in the fornace, euen so doth the LORDE pzoue the hartes.

Pro.16.b 1.Pet.1.a

A wycked body holdeth muche of falce lyppes, and a dissemblynge persone geueth eare to a deceatfull tunge.

*Who so laugheth the poore to scorne, blasphemeth hys maker: * and he that is glad of another mans hurte, shall not be vnpunyshed.

Pro.14.a Iob.31.c

*Childers chyldzen are a wozshyppe vnto the elders, and the fathers are ỹ honour of the chyldzen.

An eloquent speche becommeth not a foole, a dissemblyng mouth also beseemeth not a pzynce.

Liberalyte is a pzecious stone vnto him that hath it, foz where soeuer he becömeth, he pzospereth.

*Who so coueteth another mãs offence, seketh loue: but he that discloseth the fau, setteth frendes at variaunce.

One repzoke onely doth moze good to hym that hath vnderstondyng, then an hundzeth stryppes vnto a foole.

A seditious persone seketh mischefe, but a cruell messaunger shall be sente agaynst hym.

It were better to come agaynst a fyze bere robbed of hyz whelpes, then agaynst a foole in hys foolyshnesse.

*Who so rewardeth euell foz good, the plage shall not departe from hys house.

He that soweth discozde and stryfe, is lyke one ỹ digeth vp a water broke: but an open enemie is like the water that breketh out and runneth abzode.

The LORDE hateth as well hym that iustifyeth the vngodlye, as hym that condempneth the innocent.

What helpeth it to geue a foole money in hys hande, where as he hath no mynde to bye wysdome.

He is a frende that alwaye loueth, and in aduersyte a man shall know who is his bzother.

*Who so pzompteth by the hande, and is suertye foz another, he is a foole.

he that loueth stryfe, delyteth in synne: and who so setteth his doze to hygh, seketh after a fall.

Who so hath a frowarde harte, optey-neth no good: & he ỳ hath an ouerthwart tunge, shall fall in to myschefe.

An vnwyse body bryngeth hymselfe in to shame, and the father of a foole cā haue no ioye.

A merry harte maketh a lusty age, but a sorowfull mynd dryeth vp the bones.

The vngodly taketh gyftes out of the bosome, to wrayst ỳ wayes of iudgement.

Wysdome shyneth in the face of him that hath vnderstondynge, but the eyes of the fooles wandze thozow out all londes.

An vndiscretcion is a greke vnto his father, and heuynesse vnto hys mother that bare hym.

To punysh the innocent, and to smyte the pynces that geue true iudgement, are both euell.

He is wyse and discrete, that tempe-reth his wozdes: and he is a man of vnder standynge, that maketh much of his spzete

Yee a dezp foole (whan he holdeth hys tung) is counted wyse, and to haue vnder-standynge, whan he shutteth hys lyppes.

The.xviii.Chapter.

Who so hath pleasure to sowe discozde, pyketh a quarell in euery thynge.

A foole hath no delite in vn derstonding, but only in those thynges wherin hys harte reioyceth.

Where vngodlynesse is, there is also dis-dayne: and so there followeth shame, and dishonoure.

The wozdes of a mans mouth are lyke depe waters, and the well of wysdome is lyke a full streame.

It is not good to regarde the person of the vngodlye, ozto put backe the rygh-teous in iudgement.

A fooles lippes are euer brawlyng, and hys mouth prouoketh vnto battayll.

A fooles mouth is hys owne destructi-on, and hys lyppes are the snare foz hys owne soule.

The wozdes of a slaunderer are very bounden, & go thozow vnto the pynnooste partes of the body.

Who so is slouthfull and slacke in hys labour, is the brother of hym ỳ is a wastter

The name of ỳ LORD is a strōg castell, a righteous flieth vnto it, & shalbe saued.

But the ryche mans goodes are hys stronge holde, yee he taketh them foz an hyghe wall rounde aboute hym.

After pryde commeth destruccyon, and honoure after lowlynesse.

He that geueth sentence in a matter be foze he heare it, is as a foole, and wozthy to be confounded. Eccli. 11.8

A good stomack dryueth awaye a mās disease, but whan the spzete is vered, who maye abyde it?

A wyse harte laboureth foz knowlege, and a pzudent eare seketh vnderstondyng

Lyberalyte bryngeth a man to honour and wozshyppe, and setteth hym amonge greate men.

The ryghteous accuseth hymselfe fyrst of al, yf his neighbour com, he shal find hi.

The lot pacifieth variance, and parteth the myghtie a sunder. C

The vnite of bzethzen is stronger then a castell, and they that holde together, are lyke the barre of a palace.

A mans belly shalbe satisfyed with the frute of hys owne mouth, and with the in-crease of hys lyppes shall he be fylled.

Death and lyfe stonde in the power of the tunge, he that loueth it, shal enioye the frute therof

Who so fyndeth a wyf findeth a good thynge, and receaueth an wholsome bene-fyte of the LORDE. Pro. 19.b. and. 21.d.

The poore maketh supplicacyon and pzayeth meekely, but the ryche geueth a rough answere.

A frend that delyteth in loue, doth a mā moze frendshyppe, and stycketh faster vn-to hym then a brother.

The.xix.Chapter.

Better * is the poore that ly-ueth godly, then the blasphe-mer that is but a foole. A pro.28.a

Where no discretion is, there the soule is not wel: and who so is swifte on foote, stōbleth hastely

Foolysh shnesse maketh a man to go oute of hys way: and then is hys hart vnpacient agaynst the LORDE.

Ryches make many frendes, but the poore is forsaken of hys owne frendes.

A false wytnesse shall not remayn vn punyshed, and he that speaketh lyes shall not escape. Deu. 19.b

The multitude hangeth vpon greate men, and euery man fauoureth hym that geueth rewardes.

Is for ỹ poore, he is hated among al his brethren: yee hys owne frendes forsake hym. And he that geueth credẽce vnto wordes, getteth nothynge.

B He that is wyse, loueth hys owne soule: and who so hath vnderstondynge, shall prospere.

A false wytnesse shall not remaynе vnpunyshed, and he that speaketh lyes shall perysshe.

Delicate ease becommeth not a foole, much more vnsemely is it, a bonde man to haue the rule of prynces.

A wyse man putteth of displeasure: and it is honour to let some fautes passe.

Pro. 28.f. Psa. 132.a * The kynges displeasure is like ỹ roaryng of a Lyon, but hys frendshyppe is lyke the dewe vpon the grasse.

Pro. 17.a and. 27.b. *An vndiscret sonne is the heuynesse of hys father, and a braulynge wyfe is lyke ỹ droppynge of an house, where thorow it is euer droppynge.

Pro. 18.c. House and ryches maye a man haue by the heritage of hys elders, * but a discrete woman is the gyfte of the LORDE.

C Slouthfulnesse bryngeth slepe, and an idell soule shall suffer honger.

Who so kepeth the commaundement, kepeth hys owne soule: but he that regardeth not hys waye, shall dye.

He ỹ hath pitie vpon the poore, lendeth vnto the LORDE: and loke what he laieth out, it shalbe payed him agayne.

Chasten thy sonne whyle ther is hope, but let not thy soule be moued to slay him.

For greate wrath bryngeth harm, ther fore let him go, and so mayeste thou teach hym more nurtoure.

O geue eare vnto good counsell, and be content to be refourmed, that thou mayest be wyse here after.

Pro. 16.b. * Ther are many deuices in a mans harte, neuertheles the counsel of the LORDE shall stonde.

It is a mans worshyppe to do good, and better is it to be a poore man, then a dissembler.

D The feare of the LORDE preserueth ỹ lyfe, ye it geueth plenteousnesse, wythout the visytacyon of ony plage.

Pro. 26.b. *A slouthfull body shutteth hys hande in to his bosome, so that he can not put it to his mouth.

Pro. 21.b. *yf thou smytest a scorneful personne, the ignorant shall take better hede: and yf thou reprouest one that hath vnderstondynge, he wyll be the wyser.

He that hurteth hys father, or shutteth out his mother, is a shameful ỹ and dedy thy sonne.

Hy sonne, heare nomore the doctryne that leadeth the away from the wordes of vnderstondynge.

A false wytnesse laugheth iudgement to scorne, and the mouth of the vngodlye eateth vp wyckednesse.

Punishmentes are ordened for the scornefull, and strypes for fooles backes.

The.xx. Chapter.

Wyne * is a voluptuous thing and dronckennesse causeth sedicion: who so delyteth therin shall neuer be wyse.

Pro. * The kynge ought to be feared as the roarynge of a lyon, who so prouoketh hym vnto anger, offendeth agaynst hys owne soule.

It is a mans honoure to kepe himself from strife, but they that haue pleasure in braulynge, are fooles euerydele.

A slouthfull body wyll not go to plowe for colde, therfore shall he go a beggynge in Sommer, and haue nothynge.

Wyse counsell in the harte of man is like a water in the depe of the earth: but he ỹ hath vnderstondynge, bryngeth it forth.

Many ther be ỹ are called good doers, but wher shal one find a true faithful man?

Who so ledeth a godly and innocent lyfe, * happie shall hys chyldre be, whom he leaueth behynde hym.

A kynge that sytteth in iudgement, and loketh wel aboute hym, driueth away all euell.

Pro. 1.a *Who can saye: my harte is cleane, I am innocent from synne?

To vse two maner of weightes, or two maner of measures, both these are abhominable vnto the LORDE.

A chylde is knowne by hys conuersacion, whether his workes be pure & right.

As for the hearynge of the eare and the syght of the eye, the LORDE hath made them both.

Delite not thou in slepe, lest thou come vnto pouerte: but open thyne eyes, & thou shalt haue bread ynough.

It is naught, It is naught (saye men) whan they haue it: but whan it is gone, they geue it a good worde.

A mouthe of vnderstondynge is more worth then golde, many precyous stones, and costlye Iewels.

Gen.43. * Take his garment that is suertye for a straunger, and take a pledge of hym for the vnknowne mans sake.

Euery man liketh the breed that is got ten with deceate, but at the last his mouth shalbe filled with grauell.

Thorow counsell the thynges that mē dispose go forwarde: and with discrecyon ought warres to be taken in hande.

Medle not with hym that bewrayeth secretes, and is a slaunderer, & deceaueth with hys lyppes.

Exo.21.b. * Who so curseth his father and mother, hys lyghte shalbe put out in the myddest of darknesse.

Deu.23.a. The heretage that commeth to hastely at ỹ fyrst, shal not be praysed at ỹ end.

Rom.12.b. * Saye not thou: I wyll recompense euell: but put thy trust in the LORDE, and he shall defende the.

* The LORD abhorreth two maner of weyghtes, and a false balaunce is an euell thynge.

* The LORDE ordreth euery mans goynges: for what is he, that vnderstondeth hys owne wayes?

It is a snare for a man to blaspheme ỹ which is holy, and then to go aboute with vowes.

* A wyse kynge destroyeth the vngodlye, and bryngeth the whele ouer them.

The lanterne of the LORDE is the breth of man, and goeth thorow all the inwarde partes of the body.

* Mercy and faithfulnesse preserue the kynge, and with louyng kindnesse his seat is holden vp.

The strength of yonge mē is they^r worshippe: and a graye head, is an honour vnto the aged.

Woundes dryue awaye euell: and so do stypes the inwarde partes of the body.

The.xxi. Chapter.

The * kynges harte is in the hand of the LORDE, lyke as are the ryuers of water: he maye turne it whyther so euer he wyll.

Euery man thynketh hys owne waye to be vyght, but the LORDE iudgeth the hartes.

* To do ryghteousnesse and iudgemēt is more acceptable to the LORDE then sacrifice.

A presumptuous loke, a proude stomack, and the lanterne of the vngodly is synne.

The deuyces of one that is diligente, bryngе plenteousnesse: but he that is vnadvysed, commeth vnto pouerte.

Who so hoordeth vp ryches with the deceatfulnesse of hys tunge, he is a foole, & lyke vnto them ỹ seke they^r owne death.

The robberyes of the vngodlye shalbe they^r owne destruccyon, for they wold not do the thynge that was right.

The waies of the frowarde are straūge: but * the workes of hym that is cleane, are vyghte. B Tit.1.a

Pro.25.b. * It is better to dwell in a corner vnder the house toppe, then with a braulinge woman in a wyde house.

The soule of the vngodlye wysheth euell, and hath no pytie vpō his neighbour.

Whan the scornefull is punyshed, the ignorant take the better hede: and whan a wyse man is warned, he wyll receaue ỹ more vnderstondynge.

The vyghteous enfourmeth the house of the vngodly, but ỹ vngodly go on still after they^r owne wyckednesse.

Eccl.21.b. * Who so stoppeth his eare at ỹ crieng of the poore, he shal crie himselfe, and not be herde.

A preuy rewarde pacifieth displeasure, and a gyfte in the bosome stylleth furyousnesse.

The iust delyteth in doynge the thyng that is vyght, but the workers of wyckednesse abhorre the same.

The man that wandreth out of ỹ waye of wysdome, shall remayne in the congregacyon of the dead. C

He that hath pleasure in banckettes, shall be a poore man.

Pro.23.a. * Who so delyteth in wyne and delycates, shall not be ryche.

The vngodly shalbe geuen for ỹ vyghteous, and the wycked for the iust.

Eccli.25.c. * It is better to dwell in a wyldernesse, thē with a chydynge & an angrie woman.

In a wyse mans house ther is greate treasure and plenteousnesse: but a foolyshe body spendeth vp all.

Who so foloweth righteousnesse and mercy, fyndeth both lyfe, vyghteousnesse, and honoure.

A wyse man wynneth the cytie of the myghtie, and as for the strengthe that they trust in, he bryngeth it downe.

Pro.12.b. * Who so kepeth hys mouth & his tunge the same kepeth hys soule from trouble. D

He that is proude and presumptuous,

is called a scornefull man, which in wrath darre worke malitiously.

The voluptuousnesse of the slouthfull is hys own death, for hys handes wyl not laboure.

He coueteth and desyreth all the daye longe, but the righteous is alway geuing and kepeth nothynge backe.

Pro. 15.c. Iere. 7.c The sacrifyce of the vngodlye is abhominacyon, for they offre the thynge that is gotten with wyckednesse.

Pro. 19.a. * A false witnesse shall perysshe, but he that wylbe content to heare, shall alwaye haue power to speake hymselfe.

In vngodlye man goeth forth rashlye, but the iust refourmeth hys owne waye.

Eso. 8.c and. 46.b * There is no wysdome, there is no vnderstondynge, there is no counsell agaynst the LORDE.

Psal. 32.c. * The horse is prepared agaynste the daye of battayll, but the LORDE geueth the victorye.

The.xxii. Chapter.

Eccle. 41.b Eccls. 7.a. * Good name is more worth, then greate ryches, & louynge fauoure is better then syluer, and golde.

Whether ryches or pouerte do mete vs, it commeth all of God.

A wyse man seyth the plage and hideth hymselfe, but the foolyshe go on styll, & are punyshed.

The ende of lowlynesse, and the feare of God, is ryches, honour, prosperyte, and healthe.

Speares and snares are in the way of the frowarde, but he ỳ wyll kepe his soule, let hym flye from such.

Yf thou teachest a chylde in hys youthe what waye he shulde go, he shall not leaue it whan he is olde.

The ryche ruleth the poore, and the borower is seruaunt to the lender.

He that soweth wickednesse, shal reape sorowe, and the rodde of hys plage shal destroye hym.

Eccll. 31.c. * A louyng eye shal be blessed, for he geueth of hys bread vnto the poore.

Cast out the frowardfull man, and so shal stryfe go out with him, yee variaunce and sklaunder shal ceasse.

Who so delyteth to be of a clene harte, and of gracious lyppes, the kynge shal be hys frende.

The eyes of the LORD preserue knowlege, but as for the wordes of the despytefull, he dyngeth them to naught.

The slouthful body sayeth: ther is a lio wythout, I myght be slayne in the strete.

* The mouth of an harlot is a deepe pyt wherein he falleth that the LORDE is in grie wythall. Pro. 2.

* Foolyshnesse sticketh in the harte of the lad, but the rodde of correccyon dyueth it awaye. Ecc.

Who so doth a poore man wrong to increase hys owne ryches, geueth (comonly) vnto the ryche, and at the last commeth to pouerte hymselfe.

My sonne, bowe downe thine eare, and herken vnto the wordes of wysdome, applye thy mynde vnto my doctryne: for it is a pleasaunt thynge, yf thou kepe it in thy harte, and practyse it in thy mouth: that thou mayeste alwaye put thy truste in the LORDE.

Haue not I warned the very oft with counsell and learnynge: that I might shew the the treuth and that thou with the verye mysghtest answere them that laye ony thynge agaynst the?

Se that thou robbe not the poore because he is weake, and oppresse not the symple in iudgemente: for the LORDE hymselfe wil defende theyr cause, & do violence vnto them that haue vsed violence.

Make no frendlyppe with an angrye wylfull man, and kepe no company with the furious: lest thou learne hys wayes, & receaue hurte vnto thy soule.

* Be not thou one of the that bynd theyr hande vpon promyse, and are suertye in dette: for yf thou haste nothynge to paye, they shall take awaye thy bed fro vnder the. Pro. 6.

* Thou shalt not remoue the lond mark, which thy fore elders haue set. Pro. 22.

Seyste thou not, that they which be diligent in theyr busynesse stonde before kynges, and not amonge the symple people?

The xxiii. Chapter.

When thou sytteste at the table to eate with a Lorde, order thyselfe manerly with the thynges that are set before the.

Measure thyne appetyte: and yf thou wylt rule thyne owne selfe, be not ouer gredy of hys meate: for meate begyleth and deceaueth.

* Take not ouer greate trauayle, and labour to be ryche, beware of such a purpose. Pro. 23.

Why wylt thou set thyne eye vpon the thyng, which sodenly vanysheth awaye?

For riches make the selues wynges, & ta ke they flight lyke an Egle in to the ayre.
Eate not thou wt ỹ enuious, & desyre not
hys meate, for he hath a maruaylous hart
He sayeth vnto the: eate and drynke,

Applie thyne harte vnto learning, and
thyne eare to the wordes of knowlege.
*Withold not correctiō frō ỹ child, for: yf
thou beatest hym wt ỹ rod, he shal not dye.
Thou smytest hym with the rodde, but thou delyuerest hys soule from hell.
My son, yf thyn harte receaue wisdom,
my hart also shall reioyce: yee my reynes shalbe very glad, yf thy lyppes speake the thynge that is ryghte.
*Let not thin hart be gelous to folow sin ners, but kepe ỹ stil in ỹ feare of ỹ LORD al
ỹ daye long: for ỹ end is not yet come, and thy patient abyding shall not be in vaine.
My sonne, geue eare & be wyse, so shall
thyne harte prosper in the waye.
Kepe no cōpany wt wynebebbers, & ryo
tous eaters of flesh: *for such as be dronkat des & ryotous, shal com to pouert, & he ỹ is gyuē to much slepe, shal go wt a ragged cote Geue eare vnto thy father ỹ begat ỹ, &
dispise not thy mother whan she is olde.
Labour for to get the treuth: sell not awaye wyldome, nurtoure and vnderston-dynge (for a ryghteous father is maruay-lous glad of a wyse sonne, and delyteth in
hym) so shall thy father be glad, and thy mother that bare the, shall reioyce.
My son geue me thyn hart, & let thyne
eyes haue pleasure in my wayes.
*For an whore is a depe graue, and an
harlot is a narow pytte.
She lurketh lyke a theefe, and those that
be not aware she bringeth vnto her.
Where is woe? where is sorowe? where is stryfe? where is braulinge? where are wordes vnout cause? where be reed eyes?
Euen amonge those that be ouer at the wyne, and seke out where the best is.
Loke not thou vpon the wyne, how reed
it is, what a colloure it geueth in ỹ glasse.
It goeth down softly, but at ỹ last it by
teth lyke a serpēt, & stynget h as an Adder.
So shall thyne eyes loke vnto straung
women, and thyne harte shall muse vpon
frowarde thynges.
yee thou shalt be as tho thou sleppest, in
ỹ middest of ỹ see, or vpō ỹ top of the mast.
They wounded me (shalt thou say) but it hath not hurte me, they smote me, but I felt it not.
Whan I am well wakened, I wyll go to the drynke agayne.

The.xxiiii. Chapter.

BE not thou gelous ouer wyc-ked men, and desyre not thou
to be amonge them.
For theyr harte ymagineth
to do hurte, and theyr lyppes
talke of myschefe.
Thorow wisdome an house shalbe buyl
ded, & with vnderstondyng it shalbe set vp Thorow discrecion shall the chābers be fylled with all costly and pleasaunt riches
A wyse man is stronge, yee a man of vnderstondynge is better, then he that is myghtie of strength.
For with discrecion must warres be ta ken in hande, and where as are many that can geue counsell, there is the victory.
Wisdō is an hye thing, yee euē to ỹ foole
for he darre not open hys mouth in ỹ gate.
He that ymagineth myschefe, may wel
be called an vngracious persone.
The thought of ỹ foolysh is syn, and the scornefull is an abhominacion vnto men.
yf thou be ouerseue and negligent in the
tyme of nede, then is thy strength but smal Deliuer thē ỹ go vnto death, and are led awaye to be slayne, and be not negligent
therin. yf thou wilt saye: I knew not of it.
Thynkest thou that he which made the hartes, doth not consyder it? and that he which regardeth thy soule, seyth it not?
Shall not he recompense euery man
accordynge to hys workes?
My son, thou eatest hony & ỹ swete hony
combe, for it is good & swete in thy mouth.
Euen so shal ỹ knowlege of wisdō be vn
to thy soule, as soone as thou hast gottē it.
And ther is good hope, yee thy hope shal
not be in vayne.
Laye no prouy wayte wyckedly vpon
the house of the ryghteous, and disquiete
not hys restynge place.
*For a iuste man falleth seuen tymes, &

Take away vngodlinesse frā ꝑ kynge, & his seat shalbe stablished wt righteousnesse

Put not forth thy selfe in the presence of ꝑ kyng, & preasse not in ꝑ place of great men.

Better it is that it be sayde vnto the *come vp hyther, thē thou to be set before in the presence of the prynce, whom thyne eyes haue seyn with thyne eyes.

Who so beareth false wytnesse against hys neyghbour, he is a very speare, a sworde and a sharpe arowe.

The hope of ꝑ vngodly in tyme of nede is lyke a rotten toth & a slippery foote.

Who so syngeth a songe to a wyckedharte, clotheth him with ragges in ꝑ cold, and poureth vyneger vpon chalke.

Whan the vngodly come vp, wyckednesse increaseth: but the ryghteous shall se theyr fall.

Chastise thy sone with correccyon: and he shall comforte the, ye he shall do the good at thyne harte.

Where no prophet is, there the people perysh, but wel is him that kepeth the lawe.

A seruaunt wyll not be the better for wordes, for though he vnderstond, yet wel he not vnderstande them.

Seyest thou a man that is hastye to speake vnaduysed, thou mayste truste a foole more then hym.

Chap ii. In this chapter (and in the other also) he maketh oft tymes mẽcyon of the wastes and conuersacyon of the vngodly: that by these mennes he maye the better cause men to beware of creatures in respecte of the onely euerlastynge God.

Chap iii. Euery thynge hath a tyme. Ther is nothynge / but God hath put redyoulnesse & trauayle in it / to exercyse men withall. what so euer a man enioyeth of his laboure / þ same is a gyfte of God / geuen to the intent that men shulde feare hym.

Chap iiii. A consyderacyon of dyuerse thynges. Ther is nothyng so excellent and hye / but yf it do not the dewtye and office where vnto it is ordeyned / it shalbe brought lowe.

Chap v Against foolyche and temerarious vowes. Let no man maruayle that so much euel is done / for the wycked are many. Against the ryche and agaynst ryches.

Chap vi. Against those ryche men that darre not enioye theyr ryches: how madde and foolish they be.

Chap vii. No mā knoweth what is to come how worthy a thynge it is to haue a good name. The profyte of wysedome.

Chap viii. Of the obedience which mā owe vnto God and to theyr heades. The longe sufferaunce of God is not to be delyded. It is not possible for any man / to comprehende the workes that are in the worlde.

Chap ix. Lyke thynges happen vnto al men: therfore with myrth and thankfulnesse shulde men enioye the gyftes of God. wysedome passeth all thynges.

Chap x. xi. In these two chapters are many wyse and profytable sentences / well worthy to be consydered of every man.

Chap xii. In this chapter the preacher sheweth his whole meanynge / as though he wolde saye: As for al the thynges that be vnder the Sonne (where of I haue spoken) I haue consyderyd them / and proued them metely well by experyence. And this is the conclusyon / that ther is nothynge stedfast and durable but God hym selfe / whom men ought to feare / & to haue his commaundementes before theyr eyes euen frō theyr youth vp.

These are the wordes of the Preacher, the sonne of Dauid, kynge of Jerusalem.

The fyrst Chapter.

All is but vanyte (sayeth the Preacher) * all is but playne vanyte. For what els hathe a man of all the labour that he taketh vnder þ Sonne? One generacyon passeth away, and ther commeth, but the earth abydeth styll.

The Sonne aryseth, the Sonne goeth downe, and returneth to his place, that he maye there ryse vp agayne. The wynde goeth to warde the South, and fetcheth his compasse about vnto the North, and so turneth in to hymselfe agayne. * All floudes runne in to the See, and yet þ See is not fylled: for loke vnto what place the waters runne thence they come agayne. All thynges are so harde, that noman can expresse them. Job.14.b

* The eye is not satisfied with syght, the eare is not fylled with hearynge. * The thynge that hath ben commeth to passe agayne: and the thynge that hath ben done, is done agayne, ther is no new thynge vnder the Sonne. Is ther ony thynge where of it maye be sayde: lo, this is new? For it was longe ago in the tymes that haue ben before vs. The thynge that is past, is out of remembraūce: Euen so the thynges that are for to come, shal nomore be thought vpon amonge them that come after. I my selfe the Preacher, beynge kynge of Israel and Jerusalem, applyed my mynde to seke out and search for the knowelege of al thynges that are done vnder heauen. Such trauaile & labour hath God geuen vnto þ chyldren of men, to exercise them selues therin. Pro.27.c. Eccli.1.a & Eccles.3.b

Thus I haue consydered all the thynges that come to passe vnder the Sonne, & lo, they are all but vanyte and veracyon of mynde. The croked can not be made straight, and the lautes can not be nombred. I cōmuned with myne owne harte, sayenge * lo I am come to a great estate, and haue gotten more wysedom, then all they þ haue ben before me in Jerusalem. yee my hart had great experience of wysedome & knowlege, for ther vnto I applyed my mynde: þ I myght knowe what were wysedom & vnderstandynge, what were errour & foolyshnesse. And I perceaued þ this also was but a veracyon of mynde: for where much wysedom is, there is also great trauayle and disquyetnes: & the more knowlege a mā hath, the more is his care. 2.Esd.3.b and.4.c.

The.ii. Chapter.

Then sayd I thus in my harte: Now go to, I wyll take myne ease and haue good dayes. But lo, that was vanyte also: in so muche that I sayde vnto laughter: thou arte madde, and to myrthe: what doest thou?

So I thought in my hart, to withdraw my flesh frō wyne, to apply my mynde vnto wisdome, & to cōprehende foolishnes vntyl, the time þ (amōge al þ thynges which ar vnder

the Sonne) I might se what were best for me to do, so longe as they lyue vnder heauen.

3.Reg 4.9 5.6.7. * I made gorgious fayre workes. I buylded me houses, and planted vynyardes: I made me orchardes and gardes of pleasure and planted trees in them of al maner frutes.

3.Reg.3.4 I made poles of water, to water the grene & frutefull trees withall. * I bought seruautes and maydens, and had a great householde. Is for cattel and shepe, I had more substaūce of them, then all they that were before me in Ierusalem. I gathered siluer and golde togeather, euen a treasure of kynges and landes.

B I prouyded me syngers and womē which coulde playe on instrumentes, to make men myrth and pastyme. I got me drynkynge cuppes also and glasses. (Finally) I was greater and in more worshippe, then all my predecessours in Ierusalem. For wysedome remayned with me: and loke what so euer myn eyes desyred, I let them haue it: and wherin so euer my harte delyted or had ony pleasure, I withheldē it not from it. Thus my harte reioyced in all that I dyd, and this I toke for the portyon of all my trauayle. But whan I consydered al the workes ỹ my hādes had wrought and all the labours that I had taken therin: lo, al was but vanite and veracon of mynde, and nothynge of ony value vnder the Sōne. Then turned I me to consyder wysedome, errroure and foolyshnesse (for what is he amōge men, that myght be compared to me ỹ kynge in suche workes?) and I sawe, that wysdome excelleth foolyshnesse, as farre as lyght doth darknesse. For a wyseman beareth his eyes aboute in his heade, but the foole goeth in the darknesse. I perceaued also that they both had one ende.

C Then thought I in my mynde: If it hapē vnto ỹ foole as it doth vnto me, what nedeth me then to labourē ony more for wysedome? So I confessed withyn my harte, that this also was but vanite. For the wyse are euer as lytle in remembraunce as the foolyshe, and al the dayes for to come shalbe forgottē, yee the wyseman dyeth as well as the foole. Thus be gaune I to be weery of my lyfe, in so muche that I coulde away with nothynge ỹ is done vnder the Sonne, for all was but vanyte and veracyon of mynde: yee I was weery of all my labour, which I had taken vnder ỹ sōne, because I shulde be fayne to leaue them vnto another man, that commeth after me: for who knoweth, whether he shalbe a wyse man or a foole? And yet shall he be lorde of all my labours, which I wt such wysedome haue takē vnder the sonne. Is not this a vayne thynge?

So I turned me to refrayne my myndē from all suche trauayle, as I toke vnder the Sonne: for so muche as a man shulde weery hym selfe with wysedome, with vnderstandynge and opportunite, and yet be fayne to leaue his labours vnto another, that neuer swet for them. This is also a vayne thynge and a great mysery. For what getteth a man of all the labour and trauayle of his mynde, that he taketh vnder the Sōne, but heuynesse, sorow and disquyetnesse all the dayes of his lyfe? In so much that his harte can not rest in the nyght. Is not this also a vayne thynge? Is it not better then for a man to eat and drynke, and his soule to be merry in his labour? yet I sawe that this also was a gyfte of God. * For who maye eate, and drynke, or brynge ony thynge to passe without hym? And wher he geueth vnto man, what it pleaseth hym: whether it be wysedome, vnderstandynge, or gladnesse. But vnto the synner he geueth sorrines and sorowe, that he may gather & heape together the thynge, that afterwarde shalbe geuē vnto hym whom it pleaseth God. This is now a vayne thynge, yee a very disquyetnesse and veracyon of mynde.

The. iii. Chapter.

EVery thynge hath a tyme, yee & that is vnder the heauē hath his conuenient season. * Ther is a tyme to be borne, and a tyme to dye. Ther is a tyme to plante, & a tyme to plucke vp the thynge, that is planted: A tyme to slay, and a tyme to make whole: A tyme to breake downe, and a tyme to buylde vp: A tyme to wepe, and a tyme to laughe: A time to mourne, & a tyme to daunse: A time to cast awaye stones, and a tyme to gather stones together: A tyme to embrace, and a tyme to refrayne from embracyng: A tyme to gette and a tyme to lese: A tyme to spare, and a time to spende: A tyme to cut in peces, and a tyme to sowe together: * A tyme to kepe silence, & a tyme to speake: A tyme to loue, and a tyme to hate: A tyme of warre, and a tyme of peace.

What hath a mā els (ỹ doth ony thynge) but weerynesse and labour? For as touchyng the trauayle and carefulnesse which God hath geuen vnto men, & se that he hath put it them, to be exercysed in it. All thyngs hath he ordeyned maruelous goodly, to euery thynge his due tyme. He hath planted ignorance also in the hartes of men, that they shulde not fynde out the groūde of his workes, which he doth from the begynnynge to the ende. So I perceaued, that in these thynges there is no thynge better for a man, then to be merry and to well so longe as he lyueth. For all that a man eateth and drynketh, yee what soeuer a man enioyeth of all his labour, the same is a yefte of God. I consydered also that what so euer God doth, it cõtinueth for euer, and that nothynge can be put vnto it nor take from it: and that God doth it to the intent, that men shulde feare him. * The thinge that hath ben, is now: and the thynge that is for to come, hath ben afore tyme, for God restoreth agayn the thynge that was past. Moreouer, I sawe vnder the Sonne, vngodlynesse in the steade of iudgement, and iniquite in steade of ryghtwysnesse.

Then thought I in my mynde: God shal separate the ryghteous from the vngodly, & then shalbe the tyme and iudgement of al cõsels and workes. I communed with myne owne harte also concernynge the chyldren of men: how God hath chosen them, and yet letteth them appeare, as though they were beastes: for it happeneth vnto men as it doth vnto beastes, & as ỹ one dyeth, so dyeth ỹ other: yee they haue both one maner of breth, so ỹ (in this) a mã hath no preeminence aboue a beast but all are subdued vnto vanite. They go all vnto one place, for as they be all of dust, so shall they all turne vnto dust agayne.

* Who knoweth the spirite of man ỹ goeth vpward, and the breth of the beast that goeth downe in to the earth? Wherfore I perceaue, that ther is nothynge better for a man, then to be ioyfull in his labour, for that is his portion. But who wyll bringe him to se the thinge that shall come after hym?

The.xii.Chapter.

SO I turned me, and consydered all the * violent wronge that is done vnder the Sonne: and beholde, the teares of such as were oppressed, and ther was no man to comforte them, or that wolde delyuer & defende them from the violence of their oppressours. Wherfore I iudged those that ar dead to be more happy then suche as be alyue: yee hym that is yet vnborne to be better at ease then they both, because he seyth not the mysserable workes that are done vnder the Sõne. Agayne, I sawe that al trauayle and diligẽce of labour was hated of euery man. This is also a vayne thynge, and a vexatiõ of minde. The fole foldeth his handes together, and deuoureth vp his owne flesshe. One hãdful (sayeth he) with rest, then both the hãdes ful with labour and trauayle. Moreouer, I turned me, and behold yet another vanite vnder the Sonne. Ther is one man nomore but hymselfe alone, hauynge nother chylde nor brother: yet is ther no ende of his carefull trauayle, his eyes can not be satisfyed with ryches, yet doth he not remembre hymselfe, (and saye:) For whom do I take suche trauayle? For whose pleasure do I thus consume away my lyfe? This is also a vayne and mysserable thynge. Therfore two are better then one, for they maye well enioye the profyte of their laboure. * yf ony of them fal, his companion helpeth hym vp agayne: But wo is hym that is alone, for yf he fall, he hath not another to helpe hym vp. Agayne, when two slepe together, they are warme: but how can a body be warme alone? One may be ouercome, but two may make resistaunce. A thre folde cable is not lyghtely broken. A poore chylde beynge wyse, is better then an olde kynge, that doteth, and can not beware in tyme to come. * Some one commeth out of prison, and is made a kynge: and another * which is borne in the kyngdome commeth vnto powerte. And I perceaued, that all men lyuynge vnder the Sonne, go with the seconde chylde, ỹ commeth vp in the steade of the other. As for the people that haue bene before hym, and that come after hym, they are innumerable: yet is not their ioye the greater thorow hym. This is also a vayne thynge and a veratyon of mynde. When thou commest into ỹ house of God, kepe thy foote, & drawe nye, that thou mayst heare: that is better thẽ ỹ offerynges of fooles, for they know not what euell they do.

Gen.41.b 1.Re.16.c 3.Re.12.c * 2.Pa.33.c 4.Re.25.c

The.v.Chapter.

BE not haslye with thy mouth, & let not thyne hart speake ony thynge rashly before God. For God is in heauen, and thou vpon earth, therfore let thy wordes be fewe. For where muche carefulnesse is, there are many dreames: and where many wordes are, there men may hear fooles. * yf thou make a vowe vnto God, be not slacke to performe it. As for foolyshe vowes, he hath nõ pleasure in them. yf thou promyse ony thynge, paye it: for better it is that thou make no vowe, then that thou shuldest promyse, and not pay. Use not thy mouth to cause thy flesshe for to synne, that thou saye not before the angell: O my foolyshnesse is in the faute.

Psa.75.b Deuter.23.a

Augustinus legit: Et ne dixeris coram angelum, quia error est.

For thẽ God wyll be angry at thy voyce, & destroye all the workes of thyne handes.

Eccle.4.a

And why? where as are many dreames & many wordes, there ar also dyuerse vanitees: but loke that thou feare God. * yf thou seyst the poore to be oppressed and wrongeously

dealte withall, so that equyte and the ryghte of the lawis wrasted in ꝑ lande: maruayll not thou at such iudgement, for one great man ke peth touch with another, & the myghtye helpe them selues together. The whole lande also with the feldes & al that is therin, is in subiec cyon and bondage vnto the kynge.

B He that loueth mony wyll neuer be satisfyed with money: & who so delyteth in ryches, shall haue no profyte therof. Is not this also a vayne thynge? Where as many ryches are, ther are many also that spende them awaye. And what pleasure more hath he that possesseth thē, sauynge that he maye loke vpon thē with his eyes? A labourynge mā slepeth swetely, whether it be lytle or much that he eateth Iob.20.c *but the abundaunce of the rych wyll not suffre hym to slepe.

Yet is ther a sore plage, which I haue sene vnder the Sonne (namely) ryches kept to the hurte of hym that hath them in possession. Iob.1.c

*For oft tymes they perysh wt his great mysery and trouble: and yf he haue a chylde, it getteth nothynge. Lyke as he came naked out of his mothers wōbe, so goeth he thyther agayne, and carryeth nothynge awaye wt hym C of al his laboure. This is a mysserable plage, that he shall go awaye euē as he came. What helpeth it hym then, that he hath laboured in the wynde? All the dayes of his lyfe also must he eate in the darcke, with great carefulnesse, syckneses and sorowe. Eccls.2.d.

*Therfore me thynketh it a better & a fayrer thynge a man to eate & drynke, & to be refreshed of all his labour, ꝑ he taketh vnder ꝑ Sonne al the dayes of his lyfe which God geueth hym: for this is his porcyon. For vnto whom so euer God geueth ryches, goodes & power, he geueth it hym to enioye it, to take it for his porcyō, & to be refreshed of his labour: this is now ꝑ gyfte of God. For he thynketh not much how longe he shal lyue, for so much as God fylleth his harte with gladnesse.

The.vi.Chapter.

A There is yet a plage vnder ꝑ sōne, & it is a general thynge amonge men: whan God geueth a mā ryches, goodes and honour, so that he wanteth nothynge of all that his harte can desyre: and yet God geueth hym not leue to enioye the same, but another man spendeth them. This is a vayne thynge and a mysserable plage. yf a mā beget an hūdreth chyldre and lyue many yeares, so ꝑ hys dayes are many in nombre, and yet can not enioye his good, nother be buryed: as for hym I saye that an vntymely byrth is better then he. For he commeth to nought, and goeth his waye in to darcknesse, and his name is forgotten. Moreouer, he seyth not the Sonne, and knoweth of no rest nother here nor there: yet though he lyued two thousande yeares, yet hath he no good lyfe. Come not all to one B place? All the labour that a mā taketh, is for hymselfe, and yet his desyre is neuer fylled after his mynde. For what hath the wyse more thē the foole? What helpeth it the poore, that he knoweth to walke before the lyuinge? The syght of the eyes is better, then that the soule shulde so departe awaye. Howbeit this is also a vayne thynge & a disquyetnesse of mynde What is more excellent then man, yet can he not in the lawe get the victory of hym that is myghtyer thē he: A vayne thynge is it to cast out many wordes: but what hath a man els?

The.vii.Chapter.

FOr who knoweth what is good for man lyuynge, in the dayes of his vayne lyfe, which is but a shadowe? Or, who wyll tell a man, what shall happen after hym vnder the Sōne. * A good name is more worth Prouer.22.a then a precyous oyntment, and the daye of death is better then the daye of byrth.

It is better to go in to an house of mournynge, then in to a bancket house. For there is the ende of all men, and he that is lyuynge, taketh it to harte. It is better to be sory then to laugh, for whan the countenaūce is heuy, the harte is ioyfull. The harte of the wyse is in mournynge house, but the hart of the foolishe is in the house of myrth. * It is better to geue Prouer.29.a eare to the chastenynge of a wyse man, then to heare ꝑ songe of fooles. For the laughynge of fooles is lyke ꝑ crackyng of thornes burnynge vnder a pot. And that is but a vayne thynge.

Who so doth wronge, maketh a wise mā B to go out of his wytte, and destroyeth a gyfte harte. The ende of a thinge is better then the begynnynge. The pacyent of spyrte is better then the hye mynded. Be not hastely angry in thy mynde, for wrath resteth in the bosome of a foole. Saye not thou: What is the cause that the dayes of the olde tyme were better, then they that be now? for that were no wyse question. Wysedome is better then ryches, yee much more worthy then the eye syght. For wysedome defendeth as well as money, & the excellent knowlege & wysedome geueth lyfe vnto hym that hath it in possessiō. Consyder ꝑ worke of God, how ꝑ no mā cā make ꝑ thinge strayght, whiche he maketh croked. Vse well the tyme of prosperite, and remembre the tyme of aduersitie: for God maketh ye one by the other, so that a man can fynde nothynge els.

These two thiges also haue I cõsydred in the time of vanite: ye the iust mã perysheth for his righteousnes sake and ye vngodly liueth in hys wickednelle. *Therfor be thou nother to righteous nor ouerwyse, that thou perysh nat: be nother to vnrighteous also nor to foo lysh, lest thou dye before the tyme. It is good ye to take holde of this, and not to let that go out of thy hande. For he that feareth God, shall escape them all.

*Wysedom geueth more corage vnto the wyse, then ten mightye men of the cytye: for ther is not one iuste vpon earth, ye doth good and synneth not. Take not hede vnto euery worde ye is spokẽ, lest thou heare thy seruaũt curse the: for thyne owne hart knoweth, that thou thy selfe also hast oft tymes spokẽ euell by other men. All these thynges haue I proued because of wysedome: *for I thought to be wyse, but she went farther fro me then she was before: yee and so depe that I might not reache vnto her. I applyed my mynde also vnto knowlege, and to seke out science, wysedome and vnderstödynge: to know ye foolysh nesse of the vngodlye, and the erroure of doynge fooles. *And I founde, that a womã is bitterer then death: for she is a very angle, hyr harte is a net, and hir hãdes are cheynes. Who so pleaseth God shall escape from her, but the synner wyll be taken with her.

Beholde (sayeth the preacher) this haue I diligently searched out and proued, that I myght come by knowlege: which as yet I seke and fynde it not. Amõge a thousãd men I haue foũde one, but not one womã amõge al. Lo, this only haue I foũde *that God made man iust and right but they seke dyuerse sotyltyes, where as noman hath wysedom and vnderstödynge, to geue answere there vnto.

The.viii. Chapter

Wysedome* maketh a mãs face to shyne, but malyce putteth it out of fauoure. Kepe the kynges com maũdemẽt (I warne the) and the oth ye thou hast made to God. Be not hastie to go out of his sight, & se thou cõtynue in no euell thynge: for what soeuer it pleaseth hym, that doeth he. Lyke as when a kynge geueth a charge, his cõmaũdement is myghtie: Euen so *who may saye vnto hym: what doest thou? & Who so kepeth the cõmaũdement, shal fele no harme: but a wyse mans harte discerneth tyme and maner: For euery thynge wyll haue opportunite & iudgement, and this is the thynge that maketh men full of carefulnes & sorowe. And why? a mã knoweth not what is for to come. For who wyl tel it him? Nother is ther ony mã that hath power ouer ye spyrite, to kepe styl ye spyrite, nor to haue ony power in ye tyme of death: It is not he also ye can make an ende of the battayll, nother may vngodlines deliuer him ye medleth wha.

All these thynges haue I consydered, and B applyed my mynde vnto euery worke that is vnder the Sonne: howe one man hath lordshyppe vpõ another to his owne harme. For
*Psal.36.a
*I haue oft sene ye vngodly brought to their graues, and fallen downe frõ the hye and glorious place: in so much that they were forgotten in the cytie, where they were had in so hye and greate reputacion. This is also a vayne thynge. Because now that euell workes are not hastily punyshed, the hart of man geueth himselfe ouer vnto wickednelle. But though an euel personne offende an hũdreth tymes, & haue a lõge lyfe: yet am I sure, that it shal go well with them that feare God, because they haue hym before they? eyes. Agayne, as for ye vngodly, it shal not be well with him, nother shal he prolõge his dayes: but euen as a shadowe, so shal he be that feareth not God.

yet is ther a vanyte vpõ earth: Ther be C
iust men, vnto whom it happeneth, as though they had the workes of the vngodly: Agayne ther be vngodlye, vnto whõ it goeth as though they had the workes of the ryghteous. This me thynke also a vayne thynge. Therfore I cõmẽde gladnes, because a mã hath no better thynge vnder ye Sõne, thẽ to eate & drynke, & to be mery: for that shal he haue of his labour all the dayes of his lyfe, whiche God geueth him vnder the Sonne. When I applyed my mynde to learne wysdome, and to knowe the trauayle that is in ye worlde (and that of such a fashiõ, that I suffred not myne eyes to slepe nother daye nor night) I vnderstode of al the workes of God, that it is not possible for a mã to attayne vnto the workes ye are done vnder the Sõne: and though he bestow his labour to seke thẽ out, yet can he not reach vnto thẽ: yee though a wyse man wolde vndertake to knowe thẽ, yet myght he not fynde them.

The.ix. Chapter.

For all these thynges purposed I
I in my mind to seke out. The ryghteous & wyse: yee & they? workes also are in ye hãd of god and ther is noma that knoweth ether the loue or hate of ye thyng that he hath before hym. It happeneth vnto one as vnto another: *It goeth wt the righteous as with the vngodly: with the good and cleane as wt the vncleane: with him that offereth as with hym yt offereth not: like as it goeth wt the ver tuous, so goeth it also with the synner: As it happeneth vnto the periured, so happeneth it also vnto hym that is afrayed to be for swo?ne. Amonge all thynges yt come to passe vnder the Sõne, this is a mysery, that it hap peneth vnto al alike. This is ℞cause also that the hartes of men are ful of wyckednesse and madde foolishnes is in their hartes as longe as they lyue, vntyll they dye.

B And why? As longe as a man lyueth, he is careles: for a quycke dogge (say they) is bet ter then a dead lyon: for they that be liuynge, know that they shall dye: but they yt be dead, know nothynge, nother deserue they ony mo re. For they? memo?all is forgottẽ, so yt they be nother loued, hated no? enuyed: nother ha ue they ony mo?e parte in the wo?lde, in all yt is done vnder the Sonne. Go thou thy waye then, eate thy b?eade wt ioye, and d?ynke thy wyne wt gladnes, for thy wo?kes please god.

So I turned me vnto other thynges vn der the Sonne, and I sawe, that in rũynge it helpeth not to be swyfte: in battayll it hel peth not to be stronge: to fedynge, it helpeth not to be wyse: to riches, it helpeth not be sut tyll: to be had in fauoure, it helpeth not to be connynge: but that all lyeth in tyme and for tune. * For a man knoweth not his tyme, but

hyde the ayre shall betraye thy voyce and with the fethers shall she bewray thy wordes.

The.xi. Chapter.

Sende thy vytayles ouer the waters, & so shalt thou fynde thē after many yeares. Geue it awaye amonge seuen or eyght, for thou knowest not what mysherye shall come vpon earth. When the cloudes are ful, they powre out rayne vpon ỹ earth. And whā the tre falleth, (whether it be toward ỹ south or north) in what place so euer it fall, there it lyeth. He that regardeth the wynde, shall not sowe: & he that hath respecte vnto the cloudes shall not reape. Now lyke as thou knowest not the waye of the wynde, nor how ỹ bones are fylled in a mothers wombe: Euē so thou knowest not the workes of God, which is the workmaster of all.

Cease not thou therfore with thy handes to sowe thy sede, whether it be in ỹ morninge or in the euenynge: for thou knowest not whether this or that shall prosper, & yf they both take, it is the better. The light is swete, and a pleasaunt thynge is it for the eyes to loke vpon the Sonne. yf a man lyue many yeares and be glad in thē all, let hym remēbre ỹ dayes of darknesse, which shall be many: & whan they come, all thynges shal be but vanite. Be glad then (O thou ponge man) in thy youth, and let thyne harte be merry in thy ponge day: & folowe the wayes of thyne owne hart, and the lust of thyne eyes: but be thou sure, ỹ God shal bryng ỹ in to iudgmēt for al these thiges

The.xii. Chapter.

Put awaye displeasure out of thy hart, and remoue euel frō thy body: for childehode & youth is but vanite. Remēbre thi maker in thy youth, or euer the dayes of aduersite come, & at the yeares draw nye, whē thou shalt saye: I haue no pleasure in thē: before ỹ Sonne, the light, the Moone & the starres be darckened, and or the cloudes turne agayne after the rayne: when the kepers of the house shall trēble, & when the stroge men shal bowe themselues: when the Mylliers stonde styll because they be so few, and whē the sight of the wyndowes shall ware dymme: whan ỹ doores in the stretes shall be shut, and whā the voyce of the Miller shall be layed downe: whā men shal ryse vp at the voyce of the byrde, & whan all the doughters of musycke shalbe brought lowe: whan men shal feare in hye places, and be afrayed in the stretes: whan the almonde tre shalbe delyted, the grashopper borne out and whan great powere shall breake in: whē man goeth to his lōge home, & the mourners go aboute the stretes. Or euer the syluer lace be taken away, and ear the golden bande be broken: Ear the pot be broken at the wel, and the whel vpō the cysterne: Ear dust be turned agayne vnto earth frō whence it came, and or * the spyrite returne vnto God, which gaue it. Eccle. 3.c & All is but vanyte (sayeth the preacher) al is but playne vanite. Eccle. 1.a

The same preacher was not wyse alone, but taught ỹ people knowlege also: he gaue good hede, sought out the grounde and sette forth many parables. His diligence was to fynde out acceptable wordes of trueth. * For the wordes of the wyse are like prickes & nayles that go thorow, wherwith men are kepte together: for they are geuen of one shepherde onely. Therfore beware my sonne (my sonne) that aboue these thou make the not many & innumerable bokes, nor take dyuerse doctrynes in hande, to weery thy body withall. Hebr. 4.f

Let vs heare the conclusyon of all thiges: Feare God, kepe his cōmaūdemētes, for that toucheth all men: For God shal iudge al workes & secrete thynges, whether they be good of euell.

The ende of Ecclesiastes, called the Preacher.

Salomons

Ballettes called Cantica Canticorum.

The fyrst Chapter.

O That thou wolde geue me a kysse, for thy brestes are more pleasaunt then wyne, and that because of the good & pleasaūt sauour. * Thy name is a swet smel lynge oyntment, therfore do the maydēs loue the: yee ỹ same moueth me also to rūne after ỹ Cant. 1. a

The kynge hath brought me in to his pryuy chambre. We wyll be glad and reioyce in the, we thynke more of thy brestes then of wyne: well is them that loue the.

I am blacke (O ye doughters of Jerusalem) lyke as the tentes of the * Cedarenes, & as ỹ curtaynes of Salomon: but yet am I fayre and well fauoured withal. Marueil not at me that I am so blacke, & why the Sonne hath shyned vpon me. For whā my mothers chyldrē had euell wyll at me, they made me ỹ keper of the vynyarde. Thus was I fayne to kepe a vynyard, which was not myne owne. B Gen. 25. b 2 Par. 3. a

Tell me (O thou whom my soule loueth) where thou fedest, where thou restest at the noone daye: lest I go wronge, and come vnto the flockes of thy companyons.

Yf thou knowe not thy selfe (O thou fayrest amõge women) then go thy way forth after the footesteppes of the shepe, as though thou woldest fede thy goates beyde ỹ shepeherdes tentes. There wyll I tary for the (my loue) with myne hoost and with my charrettes, which shall be no fewer * then Pharaos.

Exo. 14. b

C Thé shall thy chekes & thy necke be made fayre, & hanged wt spãges & goodly tewels: a neckbande of golde wyll we make the wt syluer bottõs. Whé ỹ kyng sytteth at the table, he shal smel my Nardus: for a bõdel of myrre (O my beloued) lyeth betwixte my brestes. A cluster of grapes of Cypers, or of ỹ vynyardes of Engadi, art thou to me, o my beloued.

Canti. 4. a

*O how fayre art ỹ (my loue) how fayre art thou, ỹ hast doues eyes, o how fayre art thou my beloued how wel fauoured art thou? Our bed is decte wt floures, ỹ syliges of our house are of Cedre tre, and oure balkes of Cypresse.

The.ii. Chapter. *

A I Am the floure of the felde, and lylye of the valleyes: as the rose amonge the thornes: so is my loue amonge the doughters.

Lyke as the appletre among the trees of the wood, so is my beloued amõg the sonnes. My delyte is to syt vnder his shadowe, for his frute is swete vnto my throte. He bryngeth me in to his wyne seller, and loueth me specially well. Refresh me with grapes cõforte me with apples, for I am syck of loue. * His left hande lyeth vnder my heade, and his right hande embraceth me.

B I charge you (O ye doughters of Ierusalem) by ỹ Roes and hyndes of the felde, that ye wake not vp my loue nor touche her, tyl she be content herselfe.

Me thynke I heare the voyce of my beloued: lo, there commeth he hoppynge vpõ the mountaynes: and leappynge ouer the lytle hilles. My beloued is like a Roo or a põge hart. Beholde, he standeth behynde our wall, he loketh in at ỹ wyndow, & pepeth thorow ỹ gate.

My beloued answered and sayd vnto me: O stonde vp my loue, my doue my bewtyfull and come: for lo, the winter is now past, raine is away and gone. The floures are come vp in ỹ felde, the twitkyng tyme is come, ỹ voyce of the turtle doue is herde in oure londe The fygge tre bryngeth forth hir fygges, the wynes beare blossoms, and haue a good smell.

C O stonde vp my loue, my bewtyfull, and come (my doue) out of the caues of the rockes, out of the holes of the wall: O let me se thy countenaunce & heare thy voyce, for swete is thy voyce and fayre is thy face. & Set vs the fores, yee the lytle fores that hurt the vynes, for oure vynes beare blossoms.

*My loue is myne, and I am his, (which fedeth amonge the lylies) vntyll the daye breake, and tyl the shadowes be gone. Come agayn prieuely (O my beloued) lyke as a hart or a ponge harte vnto the mountaynes.

The.iii. Chapter.

B Y nyght in my bedde, I sought hym whome my soule loueth: yee diligently sought I hym, but I founde hym not. I wyll get vp (thought I) and go aboute the cyte: vpon the market & in all the stretes wyll I seke hym whom my soule loueth, but when I sought hym, I coũde hym not. The watchmen that go aboute ỹ citie, founde me. Saye ye not hym, whome my soule loueth?

So whan I was a lytle past thé, I fonde hym whome my soule loueth. I haue gotten holde vpon hym, and wyll not let hym go, vntyll I brynge hym in to my mothers house, and in to hyr chaundre that bare me.

*I charge you (O ye doughters of Ierusalem) by the Roes and hyndes of ỹ felde, that ye wake not vp my loue nor touche her, tyll she be content herselfe.

Who is this, that cõmeth out of the wyldernes lyke pilers of smoke, as it were a smell of Myrre, frankencense and all maner spyces of the Apotecarye?

Behold, aboute Salomõs bedsteade there stonde, lx. valeaunt men of the myghty in Israell. They holde swerdes euery one, & are expert in warre. Euery man hath his sword vpon his thee, because of feare in the night.

Kynge Salomon hath made hymselfe a bedsteade of the wood of Libanus, ỹ pilers are of syluer, the couerynge of golde, the seate of purple, the grounde pleasantly paued for the doughters of Ierusalem.

Go forth (O ye doughters of Syon) & behold kyng Salomõ in ỹ crowne, wherwt his mother crowned him in ỹ day of his mariage and in the daye of the gladnesse of his hart.

The.iiii. Chapter.

D Howe fayre arte thou (my loue)
* how fayre art thou? thou hast doues eyes beside ỹ which lye hyd wtin. * Thy heery locks are lyke a flock of shepe ỹ be clypped which go first vp frõ ỹ washyng place: wher euery one beareth two twins, & not one

(amõg

Thy lyppes are lyke a rose colou ryde, thy wordes are louely: thy chekes are lyke a pece of a pomgranate, beſydes that which lyeth hyd within. Thy necke is ly ke ſtower of Dauid buylded wt bulwarkes
whereupon ther hange a thousande ſhyldes, yee all the weapes of the gaũtes. * Thy two
breſtes are lyke two twynes of ponge roes, which fede amõge the lylies. O that I might go to the moũtayne of Myrre, and to the hyll
of frankyncenſe: tyll the daye breake, and tyll
the shadowes be paſt awaye. Thou arte all fayre (O my loue) and no ſpotte is ther in the.

Come to me frõ Libanus (O my ſpouſe)
come to me frõ Libanus: come ſoone the nexte way frõ the toppe of Amana, frõ the toppe of Sanir and Hermon, frõ the Lyons dennes
and frõ the moũtaines of ỹ leopardes. Thou haſt wounded my hart (O my ſiſter, my ſpouſe)
thou haſt wounded my hart, with one of thyn eyes, & with one cheyne of thy necke. O howe fayre and louely are thy breſtes, my ſyſter, my ſpouſe! Thy breſtes are more pleaſaunt then wyne, and the ſmell of thy oyntmẽtes paſſeth
all ſpyces. Thy lyppes (O my ſpouſe) droppe
as the honycombe, yee mylke and hony is vn
der thy tunge, and the ſmell of thy garmen-
tes is lyke the ſmell of frankyncenſe.

Thou art a well kepte garden (O my ſyſ-ter, my ſpouſe) thou arte a well kepte water ſpringe, a ſealed wel. The frutes that ſprout
in the, are lyke a very paradyſe of põgrana-tes with ſwete frutes: as Cypreſſe, Nardus, Saffron, Calmus, & al the trees of Libanus:
Myrre, Aloes, and al ỹ beſt ſpyces. Thou art
a well of gardens, a well of lyuynge waters, which ranne downe from Libanus. Aryſe thou north wynde, come thou ſouth wynde, & blow
vpon my garden, that the ſmell therof maye
be caſted out on euery ſyde: yee ỹ my beloued
maye come in to my garden, and eate of the frutes and appels that growe therin.

The. v. Chapter.

Come in to my garden O my ſyſ-ter, my ſpouſe: I haue gathered my myrre with my ſpyce. I wyll eate my hony & my honycõbe, I
wyl drynke my wyne & my mylke
(o ye frẽdes) drynk & be mery, o ye beloued
For I was a ſlepe, and my hart wakynge,
I herde the voyce of my beloued, whan he knocked. Open to me (ſayd he) O my ſiſter, my loue, my doue, my dearlynge: for my heade is full of dew and the lockes of my heere are full of the night droppes.

I haue put of my cote, how can I do it on agayne? I haue waſhed my fete, how ſhall I ſyle them agayne? But whan my loue put in his hande at the hole, my hart was moued to warde hym: ſo that I ſtode vp to open vnto
my beloued. My hãdes dropped wt Myrre, & the Myrre ranne downe my fyngers vpõ the locke. Neuertheles whã I had opened to my beloued, he was departed, & gone his waye.
Now lyke as afore tyme whã he ſpake, my hart coulde not longer refrayne: Euẽ ſo now
I ſought him, but I coulde not fynde him. I cryed vpon him, neuertheleſſe he gaue me no anſwere. So the watchmẽ ỹ wente about the cytye, foũde me, ſmote me, & woũded me: yee
they that kepte the walles, toke away my gar ment fro my. I charge you therfore (O ye doughters of Jeruſalẽ) yf ye fynde my beloued, that ye tell hi, how ỹ I am ſyck for loue.

Who is thy loue aboue other louers, O thou fayreſt amonge wemen? Or what can thy loue do, more thẽ other louers, that thou chargeſt vs ſo ſtraytly?

As for my loue, he is whyte and reade coloured, a ſyngular perſonne amonge many thouſãdes: his heade is the mooſt fyne golde
the lockes of his heere are buſhed, browne as the euenynge: His eyes are as the eyes of do
ues by the watet brookes, waſhen with mylck
and remaynynge in a plenteous place: His chekes are lyke a garden bedde, wherin the Apotecaryes plante all maner of ſwete thyn-ges: His lyppes droppe as the floures of the mooſt pryncipal Myrre, his hãdes are full of gõlde tynges & pretious ſtones. His body is as the pure yuory, decte ouer with Saphires
* His legges are as ỹ pylers of Marbell, ſet
vpon ſokettes of golde: His face is as Liba-nus, and as the dewy of the Cedre trees: His throte is ſwete, ye he is altogether louely.
Such one is my loue (O ye doughters of Je ruſalem) ſuch one is my loue.

Whether is thy loue gone thi (O thou fay reſt amonge wemen) whether is thy loue departed, that we maye ſeke hym with the?

The. vi. Chapter.

My loue is gone downe in to his garden, vnto the ſwete ſmelling
beddes, that he may refreſh hym
ſelfe in the garden, & gather flou
res. My loue is myne and I am his, which fedeth amonge the lylyes.

Thou art pleaſaunt (O my loue) euen as louelynelle it ſelfe, thou art fayre as Jeruſalem, glorious as an armye of men with their bannes (Turne awaye thine eyes fro me for they make me to proude) * Thy heery lockes
are lyke a flocke of goates vpon the mount Galaad, Thy teth are lyke a flocke of ſhepe

that be clypped, which go out of the washyng place: where euery one beareth two twyns, & not one vnfrutefull amonge the. Thy cheekes are like a pece of a pomgranate, beſyde that
3. Reg. 11. A which lyeth hyd within. * Ther are thre ſcore quenes, foure ſcore cõcubynes, & yonge wome without nõbre. But one is my doue, my derlynge. She is ꝑ onely beloued of hir mother,
B & deare vnto her ꝑ bare her. Whan ꝑ doughters ſawe her, they ſayd ſhe was bleſſed. yee ꝑ quenes & concubynes prayſed her. What is ſhe this, ꝑ pepeth out as ꝑ mornyng-fayre as the Moone, excellent as the Sonne, glorious as an armye of men with theyr banners?

I wente downe in to the nutgarden, to ſe what grewe by the brokes, to loke yf the vynyarde ſtoryſhed, and yf the põgranates were ſhot forth. Then the charrettes of the prynce of my people made me ſodẽly afrayed. Turne agayne, turne agayne (O thou Sulamite) turne agayne, turne agayne, ꝑ we maye loke vpon the.

The. vii. Chapter.

A What pleaſure haue ye more in the Sulamite, then when ſhe daunſeth amonge the men of warre? O how pleaſaũt are thy treadynges with thy ſhues, thou prynces doughter? Thy thees are lyke a fayre iewell, which is wrought by a connynge workmayſter: Thy nauell is lyke a rouũde goblet, which is neuer without drynke: Thy wombe is like an heape of wheat, ſet about with lylies: Thy two breſtes are lyke two twyns of põge roes: Thy necke is as it were a tower of yuory: Thyne eyes are lyke the water poles in Heſebon, beſyde the porte of Bathrabbim: Thy noſe is lyke the tower of Libanus, which loketh towarde Damaſcus: That heade ꝑ ſtondeth vpon the is lyke Carmel: The heere of thy heade is lyke the kynges purple folde vp in pleates.

B O how fayre & louely art thou (my derlyng) in pleaſures? Thy ſtature is lyke a date tre, & thy breſtes lyke the grapes. I ſayde: I wyll clymme vp in to the date tre, & take holde of his braũches. Thy breſtes alſo ſhalbe as the vyne grapes, the ſmel of thy noſtrels lyke the ſmell of apples, & thy throte lyke ꝑ beſt wyne.

This ſhalbe pure and cleare for my loue, his lyppes and teth ſhall haue theyr pleaſure. There wyll I turne me vnto my loue, and he ſhall turne hym vnto me. O come on my loue, let vs go forth in to the felde, and take our lodgynge in the villages. In the morynge wyll we ryſe by tymes, and go ſe the vynyarde: yf it be ſpronge forth, yf the grapes be growne, & yf the põgranates ſhote out. There wyl I geue ꝑ my breſtes: There ſhall the Mãdragoras geue their ſmell beſyde our doores: There (O my loue) haue I kepte vnto the all maner of frutes, both new and olde.

The. viii. Chapter.

O That I myght fynde ꝑ brother I and kyſſe the, whõ I loue as my brother which ſuckt my mothers breſtes: & that thou wouldeſt not be offended, yf I toke the & broughte the in to my mothers houſe: that thou mighteſt teache me, and that I might geue the drynke of ſpyced wyne and of the ſwet ſappe of my põgranates. * His lefte hande hyeth vnder my heade, & his right hãde embraceth me.

I charge you (O ye doughters of Jeruſalem) that ye wake not vp my loue nor touche her, tyll ſhe be content herſelfe. What is he this, that cõmeth vp from the wildernes, and leaneth vpõ hir loue? I am the ſame that waked the vp among the apple trees, where thy mother beare the, where thy mother brought the in to the worlde.

O ſet me as a ſeale vpon thyne harte, and as a ſeale vpon thyne arme: for loue is mighty as the death, and gelouſy as the hell. The coales are of fyre, and a very flãme of ꝑ LORDE: ſo that many waters are not able to quenche loue, nother may the ſtreames drowne it, yee yf a man wolde geue all ꝑ good of his houſe for loue, he ſhulde counte it nothynge.

When oure loue is tolde oure yonge ſiſter, whoſe breſtes are not yet growne, what ſhall we do vnto her? yf ſhe be a wall, we ſhall buylde a ſyluer bolwarke therupon: yf ſhe be a tower, we ſhall feſten her with bordes of Cedertree.

yf I be a wal, and my breſtes lyke towres, then am I as one that hath founde fauour in his ſight.

Salomon had a vynyarde at Baall Hamon, this vynyarde delyuered he vnto the kepers: that euery one for the frute therof ſhuld geue hym a thouſande peces of ſyluer. But my vynyarde (O Salomon) geueth ꝑ a thouſande, & two hũdreth to the kepers of ꝑ frute.

Thou that dwelleſt in the gardens, O let me heare thy voyce, that my cõpanyons may herke to the ſame. O get the away (my loue) as a roo or a yonge herte vnto the ſwete ſpyce lynge mountaynes.

This is the Prophecy of Esay the sonne of Amos, which he shewed vpon Juda and Jerusalem.

In the tyme of * Osias, Jotham, Achas, and Ezechias, kynges of Juda.

The first Chapter.

HEare o heauen, herken o earth, for the LORDE speaketh. I haue norished and brought vp chyldren, and they are fallen awaye fro me. * An ore knoweth his lorde, and an asse his masters stall, but Israel knoweth nothinge, my people hath no vnderstandinge. * Alas for thys synfull people, whiche are experte in blasphemies, a frouard generacion, vnnatural chyldrē. They haue forsaken the LORDE, they haue prouoked † * holy one of Israel vnto anger, & are gone barwarde. Wherfore shulde ye be plaged eny more? For ye are euer fallyng away. The hole heade is syck, and the harte is hevy. * From the sole of the foote vnto the heade, there is no hoole partie in all your body: but al are woundes, botches, & styppes, which can nether be helped, bounde vp, molified, nor ealed with any ointment.

Your londe lyeth wayste, youre cities are brent vp, youre enemies deuoure youre land, and ye must be fayne to stond, and loke vpon it: and it is desolate, as it were with enemies in a batell. Moreouer the doughter of Syō is left alone lyke a cotage in a vyneyard, lyke a watchhouse in time of warre, like a besieged citie. * And except the LORDE of hoostes had left vs a fewe alyue, we shuld haue ben as Sodoma, & lyke to Gomorra.

Heare the worde of the LORDE, ye tyrauntes of Sodoma: and herken vnto the lawe of oure God, thou people of Gomorra. * Why offre ye so many sacrifices vnto me? I am desceyued for the brent offrynges of wethers, and with the fatnesse of fed beastes. I haue no pleasure in the bloude of bullockes, lambes, and gootes. Who hath apeare before me, who requyreth you to treade within my porches? * Offre me no mo oblacions, for it is but lost laboure. I abhorre youre incense. I may not awaye with youre newmoones, your Sabbathes & solempne dayes. * your fastynges are also in vayne. I hate youre new holy dayes and fastynges, euen fro my very harte. They make me weery, I can not abyde them: * Though ye holde out youre hādes, yet turne I myne eyes frō you. & And though ye make many prayers, yet hear I no thyng at al, for your hōdes are ful of bloude.

† * Wash you, make you clene, put awaye youre euell thoughtes out of my syght, cease from doinge of euel and violence, Lerne to do ryght, applye youre selues to equyte, delyuer the oppressed, helpe the fatherles to his ryght, let the wydowes complaynt come before you. Nowe goo to (sayeth the LORDE, we wyl talke together. Is it not so? Though youre synnes be as read as scarlet, shal they not be whyter then snowe? And though they were lyke purple, shall they not be lyke whyte woll? Is it not so? * If ye be louyng and obedient, ye shall enioye the best thynge that groweth in the londe. * But yf ye be obstinate and rebellious, ye shall be deuoured with the swerde: for thus the LORDE hathe prompsed with his owne mouthe. †

How happeneth it then that the righteous citie (whiche was full of equitie) is become vnfaythfull as an hore? righteousnes dwelt in it, but now murther. * Thy syluer is turned to drosse, and thy wyne mixte with water. Thy rulers are traytours and companōs of theues. * They loue gyftes altoge there, and folowe rewardes. As for the fatherles, they helpe hym not to his ryght, nether wyll they let the wydowes causes come before them. Therfore sayeth the LORDE God of hostes the myghty one of Israel: Ah I must ease me of myne enemies, and auenge me vpon them. And therfore shall I laye my honde vpon the, and burne out thy drosse from the fynest and purest, and put oute all thy leade, and set thy iudges agayn as they were somtyme, and thy Senatours as they were from the begynnynge. * Then shalte thou be called the rightuous citie, the faithfull citie. But Sion shalbe redemed with equite, and hyr captiuite with rightuousnes. For ỹ transgressours and vngodly, & such as are becom vnfaythful vnto ỹ LORDE, must altogether be vtterly destroyed.

The seconde Chapter.†

THis is ỹ worde that was opened vnto Esaye ỹ sonne of Amos, vpon Juda and Jerusalē. *It wyll

B is to the that I crye (o house of Jacob) vp, let vs walke in the lyghte of the LORDE.
But thou art scatred abrode with thy people (o house of Jacob) for ye go farre beyond youre fathers, whether it be in Sorcerers (whom ye haue as the Philistines had) or in Deut.8.c. and.17.d. calkers of mens byrthes, wherof ye haue to many.* As sone as youre lōde was ful of siluer and golde, and no ende of youre treasure: soo sone as youre lōde was full of strōge horses and no ende of youre charettes:

And therfore get the sone in to some rock,
1.Tess.1.b and hyde the in the grounde* from the sight of the fearfull iudge, and from the glorye of his maiestie: which casteth downe the high lokes of presumptuous personnes, and bringeth lowe the pryde of man, and he only shal

Rom.11.c. of man, and laye mans presumptuousnesse full lowe, and the LORDE shall only haue the victory in that daye. But the Jdols shal vtterly be roted out.* Men shall creepe in to holes of stone, and in to caues of the earth,

Esa.2.c. then shall man cast awaye his goddes of syluer and golde (whiche he neuertheles hadde made to honoure them) vnto Moles and Backes: that he maye the better creepe in to the caues and rockes, and in to the clyffes of harde stones from the syghte of the fearfull Judge, and from the glory of his maiestie.

The thyrde Chapter.

EVery man can eschue a person moued in anger, for what doth he wysely. Euen so shal the LORDE of hoostes take awaye from Jerusalē & Juda, all possessions & power, all meate & drynke, ỹ captaine & the soudyare, the iudge & the prophete, the wyse and ỹ aged mā, the worshipful of fyfty yeare olde, & the honorable: the senatours, and me of vnderstondyng: the masters of crafte, & oratours. *And I shall geue you chyldren Esa.3.c. to be youre princes (saieth the LORDE) and babes shall haue the rule of you. One shall euer be doynge violence and wrong to another. The boye shall presume agaynst the elder, and the vyle personne against the honorable. Yee one shal take a frende of his owne kynred by the bosome, and saye: thou hast clothynge, thou shalt be oure heade, for thou mayest kepe vs from this fall and parell.

Then shall he swere and saye: I can not helpe you. Moreouer, there is neither meate nor clothynge in my house, make me no ruler of the people. For Jerusalem and Juda must decaye, because that both their wordes and councels are agaynst the LORDE, they prouoke the presence of his maiestie vnto anger. The chaungynge of theyre countenaunce bewrayeth them, yee they declare their owne sinnes them selues, as the Sodomites, & hyde them not. Woo be vnto their soules, for they shalbe heuely rewarded. Thei shall they saye: O happye are the godly, for they maye enioye the frutes of theyr studies but woo be to the vngodly and vnryghteous. For they shalbe rewarded after theyr workes. O my people, rybaudes oppresse the, and women haue rule of the.

O my people, thy leders deceaue the, and treade out the waie of thy footsteppes. The LORDE is here to comon of the matter, and standeth to geue iudgemente with the people. The LORDE shall come forth to reason with the Senatours and princes of his people, and shall saye thus vnto them: It is ye that haue burned vp my vinyarde, the robbery of the poore is in your house. Wher fore do ye oppresse my people, and marre the faces of the innocentes? thus shall the God of hoostes reuyle them.

Moreouer thus sayeth the LORDE: Seynge the doughters of Sion are become so proude, and come in with stretched oute neckes and with wayne wanton eyes: seyng they come in tryppynge so nycely with theyr fete: therfore shall the LORDE shaue the heades of ỹ doughters of Sion, and make theyre hewtie bare in that daye. In that day shall the LORDE take awaye the gorgiousnes of theyr apparel, and spanges, cheynes, partlettes, and colates, bracelettes, and coyfes, the goodely floured, wyde and brodered tyrmente, bruilhes and headbandes, tynges, and garlandes, holy daye clothes and tables, kerchues and pynnes, glasses, and smockes, bonettes and taches.

And in steade of good smell, there shall be stynck amonge them. And for theyr gyrdles, there shalbe lowse bondes. And for well set heare, there shalbe baldnesse. In steade of a mantell, a sack clothe: and for theyr bewtie, burnednesse & sonneburnyng. Theyr best bondes and theyr myghtie men shall perish with the swerde in batayll.

The fourth Chapter.

That tyme shall theyre gates mourne & complayne, and they shall sytte as desolate folck vpõ the earth. Then shal seuẽ wemen take holde of one man, and saye: we will laye all oure meate and cloothyng together in comõ, onely ỹ we may be called thy brydes: and that this shamefull reproche may be taken frõ vs. After that tyme shall the braunche of ỹ LORDE be beutyfull and glorye, and the frute of the earthe shall be large and pleasaunte for those Israelites that shall scape therof. Then shall the remnaunt in Sion and the remnaunt at Jerusalem be called holy: namely: all soche as are written amonge the lyuynge at Jerusalem: what tyme as the LORDE shall washe awaye the desolacion of the doughters of Sion, and pourge the bloude oute frome Jerusalem, with the wynde of his smoke & fyre. Moreouer vpon all the dwellynges Exo. 13. B.
of the hyll of Sion and vpon theyr hole congregacõ, shall the LORDE prouyde a cloude and smoke by date, & the shyninghe of a flamynge fyre by nyghte, for all theyre glorye shall be preserued: And Jerusalem shall be a tabernacle for a shadowe because of hete in the daye tyme, a place and refuge where a man maye kepe hym for wether and rayne.

The v. Chapter.

Well thã, I wyl singe my be- A vinyarde in a very frutefull plẽteous groũde. This he hedged, this he walled roũde about, & plãted it with goodly grapes. In the myddes of it buylded he a towre, & made a wyne presse therin. And afterward whẽ he loked ỹ it shuld bryng hy grapes, it broughte forth thornes. I shall nowe my cause (O ye Cytesẽs of Jerusalẽ and hole Juda:) Judge I prate you betwixt me and my wineyarding. What more coude haue ben done for it that I haue not done? Jerr. 2. b.

Wherfore then hath it geuen thornes, where I loked to haue had grapes of it?

Well, I shall tell you how I wyll do with my vinyarde: I wyll take the hedge from it, that it maye perysh, and breake downe the wall, that it maye be troden vnder foote. I wyll laye it waste, that it shall nether be twysted nor cutte, but beare thornes and breres. I wyll also forbyde the cloudes, that they shall not rayne vppon it. As for the vinyarde of the LORDE of hoostes, it is the house of Israell, and all Juda his fayre plantynge. Of these he loked for equitie, but se, there is wronge: for ryghtuousnesse, lo, It is but misery.

Woo to you that ioyne one house to ano- B

Woo be vnto them that ryse vp early: yse themselues in dronkynnes, & yet at nyght are more superfluous w̃ wyne. In whole Job. 12. B

Therfore gapeth hell, & openeth hyr mouth maruelous wyde: that pryde, boostynge and wysdome, with soche as reioyse therin, maye descende in to it.

Gene.2.b *Thus shall man haue a fall, he shall be brought lowe, & the high lokes of the proude layde downe. But the LORDE of hoostes, that holy God, shal be exalted and vntouched, when he shall declare his equytie and ryghtuousnesse after this maner. Then shal the lambes eate their apoynted foder, and shall fede plenteously in the mountaynes. Wo vnto vaine personnes, that drawe wickednes vnto them, as it were with a coorde: & synne, as it were with a cart rope. Which vse to speake on this maner: let hym make hast now, and go forth with his worke, that we maye se it. Let the councel of the holy one of Israel come, and drawe nye: that we may knowe it.

There shall not one of them put of the gyrdle from his loynes, nor losse the latche of his shue. Their arowes are sharpe, and their bowes bente. Their horse hoofes are lyke flynt, & their cartwheles lyke a stormy wynde. Their crye is as it were of a lyon, & the roarynge of them lyke lyons whelpes. They shall roare, and hanch vp the pray, and no man shall recouer it, or get it from them. In that daye they shall be so fearce vpon them, as the see. And yf we loke vnto the lōde, beholde, it shalbe all darknesse and sorowe. yf we loke to heauē: beholde, it shall be darck with careful desperacion.

The. vj. Chapter.

In ỳ same yeare* ỳ kyng Osias dyed, I sawe ỳ LORDE syttyng vpō an hygh & glorious seate: his trayne fylled the palace. Seraphyns aboue stakred the Exo.33.a. wherof euery one had syx wynges: wt twayne
Exo.25.a. eche couered his face: with twayne his fete, & with twayne dyd he flye. They cried all one to other on this maner: *holy, holy, holy is the LORDE of hoostes. The hole worlde is ful of his glory. yee the teastes & doorchokes moued at their crienge, & the house was full of smoke. Thē said I: O woo is me. For I was astonyshed: ỳ I (which am a man of vnclene lyppes, & dwel amonge people that hath vnclene lippes also) shulde se the kyng and LORDE of hoostes with myne eyes.

Then flewe one of ỳ Seraphyns vnto me, hauynge a hote cole in his hōde, which he had taken frō the aulter with the tōgs, and touched my mouth, and sayd: lo, this hath touched thy mouth, & thy vnrighteousnes is taken away, & thy sinne is forgeue. After this herde I ỳ voyce of ỳ LORDE tabyng counsement on this maner: Whom shal I sende, and who wyll be oure messaunger? Then sayde I: here am I, sende me. And he sayde goo, & tel this people: ye shal heare in dede, but ye shall not vnderstonde, ye shal playnly se, and not perceaue. Harden ỳ herte of this people, stoppe their eares, & shut their eyes, that they se not with their eyes, heare not with their eares, and vnderstonde not with their hartes, and conuerte and be healed.

Then spake I: LORDE how longe? he answered: vntyll the cities be vtterly without inhabitours, and the houses without man, tyll the londe be also desolate, and lye vnbuylded. For the LORDE shall take the men farre awaye, so that the londe shall lye all wayst. Neuertheles, the tenth parte shall remayne therin, for it shall conuerte and be dulchull. And lyke wyse as the Terebynte3 and Mutrees bynge forth theyr frutes, soo shall the holy *sede haue frute.

The seuenth Chapter.

IT happened in ỹ tyme of Achas the sonne of Jotham, which was the sonne of Ozias, kynge of Juda: that Rezyn the kynge of Sitria, and Peca Romelies sonne, kynge of Israell: wente vp toward Jerusalem to belege it (but wanne it nat) Now whē the house of Dauid (ỹ is Achas) herde woꝛde therof, that Sitria and Ephꝛaim were confederate together: his herte quaked (yee and the hertes also of his people) lyke as a tree in the felde, that is moued with the wynde.

Then sayde God vnto Esay: goo mete Achas (thou and thy sonne Sear Jasub) at the heade of the ouer pole, in the fote path by the fullers grounde, and saye vnto him: take hede to thy self and be styll, but feare not, neyther be faint harted, foꝛ these two tayles (that is) foꝛ these two smokynge fyꝛe bꝛandes, the wrathe and furiousnesse of Rezyn the Sitrian, and Romelies sonne: because that the kynge of Sitria, Ephꝛaim, and Romelyes sonne, haue wekedly conspyꝛed agaynste the, saynge: We wyl go downe into Juda, vexe them, and bꝛynge them vnder vs, and set a kynge there, euen the sonne of Taball. Foꝛ thus sayeth the LORDE God ther to: It shal not so go forth, nether come so to passe: foꝛ the heade citie of the Sirians is Damascus, but the head of Damascus is Rezyn. And after fyue and thꝛe scoꝛe yeare, shall Ephꝛaim be vnnoꝛe a people. And the chefe citie of Ephꝛaim is Samaria, but the head of Samaria is Romelies sonne. * And yf ye beleue not, there shall no promyse be kept with you.

Moꝛouer God spake vnto Achas, sayeng: requyꝛe a token of the LORDE thy God, whether it be toward the depth beneth, oꝛ toward the wyght aboue. Then sayde Achas: I wyll requyꝛe none: nether wyl I tẽpte the LORD. The LORDE answered: Then heare to, ye of the house of Dauid: Is it not ynough foꝛ you that ye be greuous vnto mẽ, but ye must greue my God also? And therfoꝛe ỹ LORDE shall geue you a token of hymself: * Behold, a virgin shall conceaue and beare a sonne, and shall call his name Emanuell. Butter and hony shall he eate, that he maye knowe the euell, and chose the good ℣. But oꝛ euer that tyme come to knowlege, to eschue the euell and chose the good, the londe (that thou art so afrayde foꝛ) shalbe desolate of both hyr kynges.

The LORDE also shall sende a tyme vpõ thy people, and vpon thy fathers house (soch as neuer came sence ỹ tyme that * Ephꝛaim departed from Juda) thoꝛowe the kynge of the Assirians. * Foꝛ at the same tyme shall the LORDE whistle foꝛ the flyes that are aboute the water of Egipte, and foꝛ the Beies in the Assirians londe. These shall come, and shall lyghte all in the valeyes, in the bowtes of stone, vpon all grene thynges, and in all coꝛners. 3.reg.22.c. 2.par.32.a Esa.36.a.

℣ At the same tyme shall the LORDE shaue the heere of the heade and the fete and the beerd clene of, with the rasoure that he shall paye them withall beyonde the water: namely, with the kynge of the Assirians. At the same tyme shall a man lyue with a cowe, and two shepe. Then because of the aboundaunce of mylcke, he shall make butter and eate it. So that euery one which remayneth in the londe, shall eate butter and hony. At the same tyme all vnyardes (though there be a thousande vynes in one, and were solde foꝛ a thousand syluerlynges) shall be turned to bꝛeaers and thoꝛnes. Lyke as they shall come in to the londe with arowes and bowes, soo shall all the londe become bꝛears and thoꝛnes. And as foꝛ all hylles that now are hewen downe, thou shalt not come vpon them, foꝛ feare of bꝛears and thoꝛnes. But the cateil shall be dꝛyuen thyther, and the shepe shall fede there.

The.viii.Chapter.

MOꝛouer the LORDE sayde vnto me: * Take the a greate leafe, and wꝛyte in it, as men do with a penne, that he spede hym to robbe, and haste hym to spoyle. And immediatly I called vnto me faythfull wytnesses: Urias the prieste, and Zacharias the sonne of Barachias. After that wente I vnto the prophetysse, that now had conceaued, and boꝛne a sonne. Then sayde the LORDE vnto me: geue hym this name: Maherschalal haschbas (that is: a spedye robber, an hastie spoyler) foꝛ why, oꝛ euer the chylde shall haue knowlege to saye: Abi and Im (that is father, and mother) shall the riches of * Damascus and the substaunce of * Samaria be taken awaye, thoꝛow the kynge of the Assirians. * The LORDE spake also vnto me, sayeng: foꝛ forasmoch as the people refuseth the styll rennynge water of Silo, and put theyr delite in Rezin & Romelies sonne: Behold, Esa.30.b 4.reg.16 ℣ 4.reg.17 ℣ Jere.2.a. 2.esd.1.b Esa.30.c. 2.reg.9.b

spoyle. * For thou shalt breake ỳ yocke of the peoples burthē: ỳ staf of his shulder & the rod
of his oppressoure, * As in ỳ daye at Madia.

Moreouer all temerarious and seditious power (yee where there is but a cote hyred with bloude) shalbe burnt, and fede the fyre.
* For vnto vs a chylde shalbe borne, & vnto
vs a sōne shalbe geuē. Vpon his shulder shal
the kingdom lye, & he shalbe called with his owne name: The wōderous geuer of counsel,
ỳ myghtie God, ỳ euerlastyng father, * The prince of peace. & he shal make no ende to en-crease ỳ kyngdome & peace, & shall syt vpō ỳ
seate of Dauid & in his kingdom, to set vp ỳ
same, to stablish it w equite & righteousnesse frō thence forth for euermore. This shal ỳ zelousy of ỳ LORDE of hoostes bryng to pas.

The LORDE sente a worde into Jacob, &
the same is come in to Israell. All the people also of Ephraim, and they that dwell in Samaria, can saye with pryde and hye stom-mackes, on this maner: The tyle worcke is fallen downe, but we wyll buylde it with harder stones. The Molbery tymbre is hewken, but we shall set it vp agayne with Ce-
dre. Neuertheles, the LORDE shall prepare Rezyn the enemye agaynste them, and so excyte their aduersaries, that the Sirians shal laye holde vpon them before, and the Philistines behynde, and so deuoure Israell with open mouth.

* After all this, the wrath of the LORDE shall nat ceasse, but yet his hande shall be stretched oute styll. For the people turneth not vnto hym, that chastyseth them, nether
do they seke the LORDE of hoostes. Therfo
ỳ LOODE shal rote out of Israel both heade & tayle, braunch & twygge in one daye. By ỳ heade, is vnderstōde ỳ Senatour & honour-ble man, and by the tale, the prophett that preacheth lyes.

* For all they which enfourme ỳ people that they be in a ryght case, soche be discceuers. Soch as men thynke also to be perfecte amonge these, are but cast awaye.

D Therfore shall the LORDE haue no pleasure in theyr yonge men, nether fauoure theyr fatherlesse and wydowes. For they are altogether ypocrites and wicked, & all theyr mouthes speake foly. After all this shall not the LORDES wrath ceasse, but yet his hõde shal be stretched out styll. For the vngodly burne, as a fyre in the bryers and thornes: And as it were out of a fyre in a wod or a redebush, so ascendeth the smoke of theyr pryde.

For this cause shal the wrath of ỹ LORDE of hooستes fall vpon the londe, and the people shalbe consumed, as it were with fyre, no man shal spare his brother. ✱ If a mã do turne him to ỹ right honde, he shal famesh: or to the lefte honde to eat, he shall not haue inough. Euery mã shal eate ỹ flesh of his owne arme: Manasses shal eate Ephraim, and Ephraim Manasses, & they bothe shal eate Juda. After all this shall not ỹ LORDES wrath ceasse, but yet shall his hande be stretched out styll.

The tenth Chapter.

WO be vnto you ỹ make ✱ vnrighteous lawes, & deuyse thynges, whiche be to harde for to kepe: wherthorow ỹ poore are oppressed, on euery syde, & the innocentes of my people are therewith robbed of iudgmente: ỹ wedowes maie be your praye, and ỹ ye maye robbe the fatherlesse. What wyll ye do in tyme of the visitacion & destruction, that shall come from farre? To whome wyll ye renne for helpe? or to whome wyll ye geue youre honoure? that he maye kepe it? that ye come not amõge the presoners, or lye amonge the dead? ✱ After all this shall not the wrath of the LORDE ceasse, but yet shall his honde be stretched out styll.

WO be also vnto Assur ✱ whiche is a staf of my wrath, in whose hõde is ỹ rod of my puny shmẽt. For I shal sende hym amõge those ypocrityth people, among the people ỹ haue deserued my displeasure shall I sende hym: ỹ he maye vtterly robbe them, spoyle them & treade thẽ downe lyke the myre in the strete. Howbeit his meaninge is not so, nether thinketh his harte of this fashion. But he ymagineth only, howe he maye ouerthrowe and destroie moche people, for he sayeth: ✱ are not my princes all kynges? Is not Calno as easie to wynne, as Charchamis? Is it harder to conquere Antiochia then Arphad? Or is it lyghter to ouercome Damascus then Samaria? Is who saye: I were able to wynne the kyngdome of the Idolaters & theyr goddes, but not Jerusalẽ and Samaria. Shal I not do vnto Jerusalem and theyr images, as I dyd vnto Samaria & theyr ymages?

Wherfore the LODDE sayeth: as soone as I haue perfourmed my hole worke vpon the Hyll of Syon and Jerusalem, then wyll I also vyset the noble and stoute kynge of Assiria, with his wysdome and pryde. For he stondeth thus in his owne conceate: ✱ This do I, thorow the power of myne owne hõde, and thorow my wysdome: For I am wyse, I am he that remoue the loudes of the people, I robbe theyr princes, and (lyke one of the worthies) I dryue them frõ theyr hye seates. My honde hath founde out the hooستes of ỹ people, as it were a nest. And lyke as egges, that were layde here and there, are gathered together: So do I gather all coũtrees. And there is no mã, that darre be so bolde, as to touch a fether: that darre open his mouth, or once whisper.

✱ But doth the axe boost it selfe, agaynste hym that heweth therwith? or doth the sawe make eny crakyng, agaynst hym that ruleth it? That were euẽ lyke, as yf ỹ rod dyd exalte it selfe againste hym, ỹ beateth it: or as though ỹ staf shulde magnifie it selfe, as who saye: it were no wodd. ✱ Therfor shall the LORDE of hooستes sende hym pouerte in his ryches, and burne vp his power, as it were with a fyre. But ỹ lyght of Israell shal be ỹ fyre, and his Sãctuary shalbe the flame, & it shal kyndle, and burne vp his ✱ thornes and bryers in one daye, yee all ỹ glorye of his woddes and felde shalbe cõsumed with bodye and soule. As for hym selfe, he shall be as one chased awaye. The trees also of his felde shall be of soch a nõbre, that a chylde maye tell them.

After ỹ daye shal the remnaunt of Israel, and soche as are escaped out of the house of Jacob, seke no more comforte at hym that smote them, but shall comforte them selues with faithfulnesse and treuth in the LORDE, the holy one of Israell. The remnaunt, yee and the posteritie of Jacob, shall conuerte vnto God the myghty one. ✱ For though thy people (o Israell) be as the sonde of the see, yet shal but the remnaunt of them only conuerte vnto hym. Perfecte is the iudgmente of hym that floweth in ryghteousnesse, and therfore ỹ LORDE of hooستes shall perfectly fulfyll the thynge, that he hath determyned in the myddes of the hole worlde. Therfore thus sayeth the LORDE God of hooستes: Thou my people that dwellest in Sion, be not afrayde for the kynge of the Assirians:

He shall wagge his staf at the, yee and beate the with the rodd, as the Egiptians dyd somtyme: But soone after, shall my wrath and my indignacion be fulfylled agaynste Esa.37.f. theyr blasphemies.* Moreouer the LORDE of hooستes shal prepare a scourge for hym.

Exo.14.c. vp his rod ouer the see, as * he dyd somtyme ouer the Egiptians. Then shall his burthe be taken from thy shulders, and his yock frō thy neck, yee the same yock shall corrupte for very fatnesse. He shal come to Iath, and go thorowe toward Migrō. But at Machmas shal he muster his hooste, & go ouer the foorde Gaba shal be theyr restynge place, Rhama shalbe afrayde, Gadea Saul shal flé awaie. The voice of the noyse of ỹ horses (o doughter Gallim) shalbe herde vnto Lais and to Anatoth, which also shal be in trouble. Madmena shal tremble for feare, but the citesyns of Gabym are manly, yet shal he remayne at Nob that daye. After that, shall he lyfte vp his honde agaynst the mount Sion, and agaynst ỹ hyl of Ierusalē. But se, the LORDE God of hooستes shal take awaye the proude from thence, with feare. He shal hew downe the proude, and fell the hie mynded. The thornes of the wodd shal be rooted out with pyron, and Libanus shal haue a mightie fall.

For he shall not geue sentence after the thynge ỹ shall be broughte before hys eyes, nether reproue a matter at the fyrst hearynge: but with ryghtuousnesse shall he iudge the poore, and with holynes shall he refourme the symple of the worlde.

* Then shall the Gentiles enquyre after the rote of Iesse (which shal be sette vp for a token vnto the Gentiles) for his dwellynge shalbe glorious. * At the same tyme shall the C LORDE take in honde agayne, to conquere the remnaunte of his people (which are lefte alyue) from the Assyrians, Egiptians, Arabians, Moryans, Elamites, Caldeyes, Antiochians, and Ilondes of the see. And he shall set vp a * toke amonge the Gentiles, and gather together the dispersed of Israell, yee & the outcastes of Iuda from the foure corners of the worlde. The hated of Ephraim & the enmite of Iuda shalbe clene roted out. Ephraim shall beare no euell wyll to Iuda, and Iuda shall not hate Ephraim: but they both together shall flye vpon the shulders of the Philistines toward the weil, and spoyle them together that dwell toward the East. The Idumites and the Moabites shal let theyr hondes fall, and the Ammonites shalbe obedient vnto them.

The LORDE also shall cleyre the tunges of the Egiptians see, and with a myghtie wynde shal he lyft vp his honde ouer Flum, and shal smite his seuen streames, and make men goo ouer drye shod. And thus shal he make a waye for his people, that remayned from the Assirians, * lyke as it happened to as it is knowne in al the worlde. Crie out, & be glad, thou that dwellest in Sion, for great is thy prince: the holy one of Israel. ✠

The.xiij. Chapter.

This is the heuy burthen of Babilon, which Esaye the sonne of Amos dyd se. * Make some tokens to the hie hilles, call vnto them, holde vp youre honde that the princes may go in at the doore. For I wil sende for my debites and my gyaunts (saieth the LORDE) and in my wrath I wil call for such, as tryumphe in my glory.

* Mouth that, me thought I herde in the mountaynes, a noyse, like as it had bene of a greate people: and a rushynge, as though thy kingdomes of al nations had come together, (And the LORDE of hoostes was the captayne of the whole armye) as they had come not onely out of farre countres: but also from the endes of the heaues: Euen the LORDE hymself with the ministres of his wrath, to destroye the whole londe.

Mourne therfore, for the daye of the LORDE is at hande, & cometh as a destroyer from the almighty. Then shal all hondes be letted downe, and al mens hartes shal melt awaie they shal stonde in feare, carefulnesse and sorowe shal come vpon them, and they shal haue payne, as a woman that trauaileth with childe. * One shal euer be abaished of another, & their faces shal burne, like the flame.

For lo, the daye of the LORD shall come, cruell, full of indignacion and wrath: to make the londe waist, and to root out the synners therof. For the starres & planetes of heauen shal not geue their light, * the Sonne shalbe quenched in the rysinge, and the Mone shal not shyne with his light. And I wil punish the wickednesse of the worlde, & the synnes of the vngodly, saieth the LORDE. The hye stomaches of the proude will I take awaye, and will laye downe the boastinge tyrannes. I will make a man dearer then fine golde, and a man to be more worth, then a golden wedge of Ophir. Moreouer, I will shake the heauen, that the earth shall remoue out of hir place.

Thus shall it go with Babilon, in the wrath of the LORD of hoostes, in the daye of his feruent indignacion. And Babilon shalbe as an hunted or chased doo, and as a flocke without a shepherde. Euery man shal turne to his owne people, & flye echone to his owne londe. Who so is founde alone, shalbe shot thro: And who so gather together, shalbe destroyed with the swearde. Their childre shal be slayne before their eyes, their houses spoyled, & their wyues rauyshed. For lo, I shall bringe vp the Medes agaynst the, which shal not regard syluer, nor be desyrous of golde. Then shal yonge mens bowes be knapped asunder. The Medes shal haue no pitie vpon wome with childe, and their faces shall not spare the children. And Babilon (the glory of kingdomes & bewtie of the Caldees honour) shalbe destroyed, euen as God * destroyed Sodom and Gomorra. It shal neuer be more inhabited, nether shall there be ony more dwellinge there, from generacion to generacion. Gen.19.

The Arabians shal make no mooltentes there, nother shal the shepherdes make their foldes there ony more: but wylde beastes shal lye there, and the houses shalbe full of greate Oules. Estriches shal dwell there, & Apes shal daunce there: The litle Oules shal crie in the palaces, one after another. & Dragons shalbe in the pleasaunt pallers. And as for Babilons tyme, it is at honde, & hir dayes maye not be longe absent.

The.xiiij. Chapter.

But the LORD wilde mercifull vnto Jacob, and wil take vp Israel agayne, and set the in their owne londe. Straungers shall cleue vnto them, and get them to the house of Jacob. * They shal take the people, and cary them home vnto them. And the house of Israel shal haue them in possession for seruauntes & madyens in the londe of the LORD. They shal take those prisoners, whose captyues they had bene afore: & rule those that had oppressed the. When the LORDE now shal bringe the to rest, from thy trauayle, feare, & harde bondage that thou wast laden with: the shalt thou vse this mokage vpon the kinge of Babilon, & saye: How happeneth it that the oppresser leaueth of? Is the golden tribute come to an ende? Doutles the LORD hath broken the staff of the vngodly, and the septer of the lordly. Which when he is wroth smyteth the people vnto durable strokes, & in his wodernes he persecuteth the & tameth the continually. And therfore the whole worlde is now at rest and quyetnesse, & men synge for ioye. Iudic 1.d. Jaetha .1.d.

Yee euen the fyrre trees and cedres of Libanus reioyse at thy fal, sayenge: Now that thou art layde downe, there come no more vp to destroye vs. Hell also trembleth at thy commynge, All mightie men and princes of the earth, steppe forth before the. All kynges of the earth stonde vp from their seates, that they maye all (one after another) synge and speake vnto the. Art thou wounded also as we?

art thou become lyke vnto vs? Thy pompe & thy pryde is gone downe to hell: Mothes shalbe layed vnder the, and wormes shalbe thy couerynge.

And yet thou thoughtest in thine harte: I will clymme vp into heauen, and make my seate aboue the starres of god, I wyll sytt vpō the glorious mount toward the North. I will climme vp aboue the cloudes, & will be like the hyghest of all. yet darre I laye ṕ thou shalt be brought downe to the depe

Ezec.31.c. Ezec.32.c. of *hell. They that se the, shal narowly loke vpon the, & thinke in them selues, sayenge Is this the man, that brought all londes in feare, and made the kingdomes afrayde: Is this he that made the worlde ma maner waist, and layde the cities to the grounde, which let not his prisoners go home?

How happeneth it, that the kinges of all people lye, euerypne at home in his owne palace, with worshippe, & thou art cast out of thy graue like a wilde braunch: like as dead mens rayment that are shott thorow with the swearde: as they that go downe to the stones of the depe: as a dead coarse that is troden vnder fete: & art not buried with them? Euen because that thou hast wasted thy londe, & destroyed thy people. For the generacion of the wicked shalbe without honour for euer. There shal a waye be sought to destroye their children, for their fathers wickednes: they shall not come vp agayne to possesse the londe, and fyll the worlde full of castels and townes.

D I will stonde vp agaynst them (saieth the LORDE of hoostes) and root out the name and generacion of Babilon (saieth the LORDE) and will geue it to the Otters, and will make waterpouddels of it. And I will swepe them out with the besome of destruccion, saieth the LORD of hoostes. The LORDE of hoostes hath sworne an ooth, sayenge: It shal come to passe as I haue determined: and shalbe fulfilled as I haue deuysed*. The Assirians shalbe destroyed in my londe, and vpon my mountaynes wyll I treade them vnder fote. Wher thorow his pocke shal come from you, and his burthen shalbe taken from youre shulders. This deuyce hath god take thorow ṕ whole worlde, & thus is his hōde stretched out ouer all people. For ṕ the LORD of hoostes determine a thige, who wyl dysanulle it? & ṕ he stretch

The same yeare that kynge Achas dyed God threatned by Esay on this maner: Ioyse not (thou whole Palestina) as though the rod of him the beateth the were broken. * For out of the serpentes rote, there shall ware a cockatrice, and the frute shalbe a fyrie, worme. But the poore shal fede of ṕ best thinges, and the symple shal dwel in safete. * Thy rotes will I destroye with honger, & it shal slaye thy remnaunt. Mourne ye portes, wepe ye cities. And feare thou (o whole Palestina) for there shal come from ṕ North a smoke, whose power no man maye abyde. Who shall then mayntayne the messages of the Gentyles? But the LORDE stablisheth Syon, and the poore of my people shal put their trust in him.

The.xv. Chapter.

THis is the heuy burthen vpon * Moab: Ar of Moab was destroyed (as me thought) in the night season: The walles of Moab perished in the night, and vanished awaye: They wente to Bajth and Dibon in the hye places, for to wepe. Moab dyd mourne from Nebo to Medeba: * All their heades were balde, and all their beardes shauen. In their stretes were they gyrded aboute with sackcloth. In all the toppes of their houses & stretes was there nothinge, but mournynge and wepinge. Heshbon and Eleale cried, that their voyce was herde vnto Jahaz. The warryers also of Moab blared and cried for very feare of their myndes: Wo is my hart for Moab like. They fled vnto the cite of Zoar, which is lyke a fayre frutefull bullock, they went vp to Luhith, wepinge. The waye towarde Horonaim was full of lamentacion for the hurt. The waters of Nimrim were dryed vp, the grasse was wythered, the herbes destroyed, and what necessary grene thinge there was beside. In like maner the thinge that was left them of their substance, they caried it by water to Araby. The crie went ouer the whole londe of Moab: from Eglaim vnto Beer, was there nothinge but mournynge. The waters of Dimon were full of bloode for the enemie had sent thither a hundred mē, which as a lyon, layde waite for ṕ remnaunt of ṕ londe, and for them ṕ were escaped.

The.xvi. Chapter.

THen sent the lorde of the londe a man of warre, from the rocke that lieth toward the desert, vnto the hill of ỹ doughter Sió(for as for the dough ters of Moab, thei were as it had bene a trim binge byde, that is put out of hir nest, by the fery of Arnon) which messaunger sayde: gather youre councel * come together, couer vs with youre shadowe in the myddaye, as the nyght doth: hyde the chased, & bewraye not thē that are fled, let the persecuted Moabites dwel amonge you, be oure opē refuge agaynst the destroyer: for the aduersary oppresseth vs, the robber vndoeth vs, & the tyraunte dryueth vs out of oure londe. But ỹ tyme of youre kyngdome is full of grace, therfore he that sytteth vpon it wt faythfulnesse & treuth in the house of Dauid, knowe the thynge & do hys diligence to helpe shortly, accordynge to equite and rightuousnes.

B As for Moabs pryde it is well knowen. And all though they be excellent, proude, arrogant, & hye mynded: yet is theyr strengthe nothinge lyke. And therfore Moab complayneth vnto Moab, wher thorow they come all to mourne: & now that they be smytten, they take theyr deuice beneth by the bryckwal, and make theyr complaynte.

The suburbes also of Heshebon were made dayst, & the prynces of the Gentyles hewed downe the vynyardes of Sibma, which were planted with noble grapes, and spred vnto Jazer, and wente vnto the ende of the deserte, whose braunches stretched theyr selues forth beyonde the see. Therfore I mourned for Jazer, & for the vynyardes of Sibma wt greate sorowe. I poured my teares vpon Heshbon & Eleale, for all theyr songes were layde downe, in theyr haruest & gatheringe of theyr grapes: Myrth and chere was gone out of ỹ felde & vynyardes, in so muche, that no man was glad ner sunge. There wēte no treader in to the wyne presse, theyr mery cheare was layde downe. Wherfore my belye tōbled (as it had bene a lute) for Moabs sake, & myne inwarde membres, for the brickwalles sake. For it happened thus also: whē Moab sawe that she was turned vpsyde downe, she went vp an hye in to hir sanctuary, to make hir prayer there * but she might not be holpen. Thys is the deuyce whyche the LORDE toke in honde at that tyme agaynste Moab. But nowe the LORDE sayeth thus: In thre yeare shall the power of Moab wt theyr pope (whiche is greate) be minished, like as ỹ hyreling of an hyred seruaunte: And as for ỹ remnaunt of thē, they shalbe lesse then a few, and not tekened muche worth.

The.xvij. Chapter.

THys is the heuy burthen vpon A
*Damascus: Beholde, Damascus shall be nomore a cytye, but an heape of broken stones. The cities of Aroer shalbe waist, The catell shall lye there, & noman shall fraye thē awaye. Ephraim shall no more be stronge, & Damascus shall no more be a kyngdome. And as for the glory of the remnaunt of the Syrians, it shalbe as the glory of the chyldren of Israel, sayeth the LORDE of hoostes. At that tyme also shall ỹ glory of Jacob be very poore, & hys fatnes leane. It shall happen to them, as when one sheareth in haruest, which cutteth hys handfull with the sickle, & when one gathereth the sheaues together in the valley of Rephaim, that there remayneth yet some eares ouer. * Or as whē one shaketh an olyue tre, whiche fyndeth but two or thre olyue beryes aboue in the toppe, and foure or fyue in the braunches. Thus the LORDE God of Israel hath spoken. Jere.49.a Amos.1.b. B Esa.24.b

Then shal man conuerte agayne to hys maker, & turne hys eyes to the holy one of Israel. But the frutes were not yet ripe cut of, and the grapes were but yonge and grene. Then one smote of the grapes with an hoke, yee he hewed downe also the bowes and the braunches, & dyd cast them awaye. And thus they were layde wayst, for the foules of the mountaynes, and for the beastes of the earth together. So ꝑ the foules sat there vpon, and the beastes of the earth wyntered there. Then shall there be a present brought vnto the LORDE of hoo stes: euen that harde folke, that fearful folke, and that further is then thys: that despeate and pylled folke (whose londe is deuyded frō Deut. 12.a vs with floudes of water) vnto the * place of the name of the LORDE of hoostes: euē vnto the hyll of Sion.

The.xix. Chapter.

A This is the heuy burthen vpon
Ierr. 46.a *Egipte: Beholde & the LORDE
Eze. 29.a will ryde vpon a swifte cloude, & & Iu. 21.b come in to Egipte. And ꝑ goddes of Egipte shal trymble at hys cō mynge, and the hart of Egipte shall quake Deut. 33.a within her. For thus sayeth the LORDE: * I wyll stere vp the Egiptians one agaynste a nother amonge the selues, so that one shalbe euer agaynste hys brother and neyghboure, yee one cytte agaynst another, and one kyng dome agaynste another. And Egipte shalbe choked in hyr selfe. When they are councell at theyr goddes, at theyr Prophetes, at theyr sothsayers and witches: then wyll I brynge theyr councell to naught.
B I will delyuer Egipte also in to the hondes of greuous rulers, and a cruel kyng shal haue the rule of them. The water of the see shalbe drawen out, Nilus shall synke awaye & be dronke vp. The ryuers also shalbe drawen out, the welles shall decreace and drye awaye. Rede and rush shall fayle, the grasse by the waters syde or vpon the ryuers bāke, yee and what so euer is sowen by the wa ters, shalbe wythered, destroyed, & brought to naught. The fyshers shall mourne, all soch as cast angles in the water, shall com playne: and they that spreade theyr nettes in the water, shalbe fayne hatted. Suche as la boure vpon flax and sylcke, shall come to pouerte, and they also that weeue fyne workes. All the pondes of Egypte, all the polycye of theyr moates and dyches shall come to naught.

Yee the vndiscrete prynces of Zoan, the C
* councell of the wyse Senatours of Pharao Isa. 29.a shall turne to foolishnesse: Those that darre boast & saye of Pharaos behalfe: I am come of wyse people, I am come of the olde regall progeny. But where are now thy wyse mē? Let them tel the & shewe the, what the LOR DE of hoostes hath taken in honde agaynste Egypte. Fooles are those prynces of Zoan, & proude are the prynces of Noph: yee they de ceaue Egipte with the nobilyte of theyr stock
* For the LORDE hath made Egypte dron- Isa. 51.a ken with the spyrete of errour, and they shall vse it in all matters: euen lyke as a dronken mā goeth spewinge about. For Egipte shal lacke good councell, so that they shall not knowe what to do, neyther begynnynge nor ende, nether vpon the londe nor water. The shall the Egiptians be lyke vnto women, afrayde and astōnyed, at the liftinge vp of the honde, whiche the LORDE of hoostes shall lyfte vp ouer them.

The londe of Iuda also shall make the E- D
gyptyans afrayde: who so doth but speake vpon it, shall put them in feare: And that be cause of the councell, which ꝑ LORDE of hoo stes hath deuysed agaynst them. Then shal the fyue cities of Egipte speake with the Ca nanites tonge, and * sweare by the LORDE Psa. of hoostes, and Heliopolis shalbe one of thē. At the same tyme shall the LORDE of hoo stes haue an aulter in the myddest of the lon de of Egipte, with thys tytle there by: Vnto the LORDE. Thys shalbe a token or testimo ny vnto the LORDE of hoostes in the londe of Egipte, when they shall crye vnto hym, be cause of those that oppresse thē: that he shall sende them a captayne and a Sauioure to de lyuer them.

Moreouer, Egypte shalbe bought vnto the LORDE, and the Egiptiās also shal kno we the LORDE at the same tyme: they shall do hym reuerence with peaceoffringes, and with meatoffringes: they shall promyse hym offringes, yee & paie hym also. Thus the LOR DE shal smyte Egipte, & heale it agayne: & so shal they turne to ỹ LORDE, and he also shal haue mercy vpon them, and saue them. The shal there be a comon waye out of Egipte in to Assiria. The Assirians shall come in to Egipte, and the Egyptians in to Assiria. The Egipcians also and the Assirians shall both haue one Gods seruyce. Then shall Israel with honoure be the thirde to Egypte & Assur. And the LORDE of hooستes shal blesse them, sayenge: Blessed is my people of the Egipcians, Assur is the worke of my hõdes, but Israel is myne enheritaunce.

The. xx. Chapter.

1 In the same yeare that Harthan came to Asdod, where Sargõ the kynge of the Assirians sent him, what tyme as he also beseged Asdod, & wanne it the same season: Then spake the LORDE vnto Esaye ỹ sonne of Amos, sayenge: go and lowse of that sack cloth frõ thy loynes, and put of ỹ shues from thy fete. And so he dyd, goynge naked & bare fote. Then sayde the LORDE: where as my seruaunt Esaye goeth naked and barefote, it is a tokẽ and significnge of the thynge, that after thre yeare shal come vpon Egipte and 3 Ethiopia. For euen thus shal the kynge of the Assirians driue both ponge and olde, as prisoners naked and barefote, out of Egipte and Ethiopia, And shall dyscouer the shame of Egipte. They shalbe also at theyr wits ende, and ashamed one of another: the Egyptyans of the Assyryans, and the Assyryans of the Egipcians, at the sight of theyr glory.

4 Moreouer they that dwel in the Iles, shal saye euen the same daye: beholde, this is our hope, to whom we fled to seke helpe, that we myght be deliuered from the kynge of ỹ Assirians. How will we escape?

The. xxi. Chapter.

1 This is the heuy burthen of ỹ waist lese: A greuous vision was shewed vnto me, lyke as when a storme of wynde & rayne rusheth in from the wyldernesse, that terrible lõde. Who so maye deceaue (sayde the voyce) let hym deceaue: Who so maye distroye, let him distroye. Up Elam, beseege it o Medai, for I will still all theyr gronynges. With this, ỹ raynes of my backe were ful of payne: Pãges came vpon me, as vpon a woman in hir trauayle. Whẽ 2.a. 2.a. I herde it, I was abasshed: and whẽ I loked vp, I was afrayde. Myne herte paunted, I trembled for feare. The darcknesse made me fearfull in my mynde.

3 Yee soone make redy the table (sayde this voyce) kepe the watche, eate and drynke: Up ye captaynes, take you to youre shylde, for thus the LORDE hath charged me: go thy waye, and set a watchman, that he maye tell what he seyth. And whẽ he had wayted diligently, he sawe two horsmen: the one rydinge vpon an Asse, the other vpon a Camel. And the Lyon cried: LORDE, I haue stonde waytinge all the whole date, and haue kepte my watch all the nyght. With that came there one rydinge vpon a charet, whiche answered, and sayde: * Babilon is fallen, she is turned vpsyde downe, and all the ymages of hir goddes are smytten to the grounde. Thys (o my felowe threshers and fanners) haue I herde of the LORDE of hooستes the God of Israel, to shewe it vnto you. Iere. 51.d. Apo. 14.d. and. 18.a.

11 * One of Seir cried vnto me: watchman what haste thou espyed by nyght? Watchman, what haste thou espied by nyght? The watchman answered: The daye breaketh on and the night is cõmynge: yf youre requeste be earnest, then are, and come agayne. Iere. 49.d

The heuy burthen vpon Arabia.

13 At euen ye shal abyde in the wood, in the waye toward Dedanim. * Mete the thyrstie with water, (o ye cytyzens of Theman) mete those with bread that are fled. For they shall runne awaye from the weapen, from the drawen swerde from the bent bowe, and from the great batayll. For thus hath the LORDE spoken vnto me, * ouer a yeare shall all the power of Cedar be gone, lyke as when the office of an hyred seruaunte goeth out: and the remnaunt of the good archers of Cedar, shalbe very few: For the LORDE God of Israel hath spoken it. The. xxii. Chapter.

The heuy burthen vpon the valley of Visions.

1 What haste thou there to do, that thou clymmest vp in to the houses toppe, o thou cyty of miracles, seditious and wilfull & seynge, thy slayne men are neither kylled w swerde, nor deed in batayle? For all thy captaynes gat them to theyr horses from the ordynaunce, yee they are all togethere rydden awaye, and fled farre of. When I perceaued ỹ, I sayde: * awaye fro me, ỹ I maye wepe Iere. 6.d. B The Elamites toke the quyuers to carte and horse, and the walles were bare frome harnesse. Thy goodly valleys were full of charettes, the horse mē made them soone to besege the gates. Then was the couerynge of Juda put from thence, and then was sene the sege of the tymbre house. There shall ye

Ye shall gather together the waters of the lower pole, and tel the houses of Jerusalem, and breake of some of them to kepe the walles. And ye shal make a pyt betwyxte the twayne walles of the water of the olde pole, and nothinge regarde hym, that toke it in hōde and made it. And at the same tyme shall the LORDE of hooستes cal men to weppynge, mournynge, to baldnesse, and puttinge on of sack clothe.

C Thus sayeth the LORDE God of hooستes
Esa.36.a. Go in to the treasury vnto * Sobna ꝑ gouernoure, and saye vnto hym: What haste thou here to do? & from whence comest thou, that thou hast made the a graue here? (For he had caused a costly tombe of stone to be made for hym selfe, and a place to lye in to be hewen out of a rock.) Beholde, the LORDE shal cast the out by violence, he will deck the of another fashion, & put vpon the a straunge clothe. He shall carie the in to a farre coūtre, like a ball with hys hondes. There shalt thou dye, there shal the pompe of thy charettes haue an ende: thou villayne of the house of thy LORDE: I wil shute the out of thyne office, and put the from thyne estate.

D After this wil I cal my seruaunt Eliakim, the sonne of Helkia, and arate him with thy coate, and gyrde hym with thy gyrdle, and I wil geue thy power in to hys honde. He shalbe a father of the cytisens of Jerusa-

They shal hange vpon hym all the glory of hys fathers house, of the chyldren and chylders chyldren, all apparell smal and great, all instrumentes of measure and musike. This shall come to passe, (saieth the LORDE of hooستes) when the nayle, that is fastened to the place of the highest fasthfulnesse, shalbe pluckt of, and whē ꝑ weyght that hangeth vpon it, shall fall, be broken, and hewen in peces. For ꝑ LORDE hym selfe hath sayde it.

The.xxiij.Chapter.

A Sheup burthen vpon * Tirus Iere.47.c. Mourne ye shippes of Charlis for she is throwne downe to the Ezech.27.c. grounde, and conquered of the, that are come from Cithim. The Ezech.28.c. indwellers of the Ilondes, the marchaunes of Sidon, and they that occupied the see (of whom thou wast full somtyme) are at a point. For by see were there frutes brought vnto ꝑ, and all maner of corne by water. Thou was the comon marcket of all people. Sidon is sory for it, yee and all the power of the see cōplayneth, and sayeth: O that I had neuer trauayled with chylde, that I had neuer borne any, that I had nether norished boye, nor brought vp doughter. As soone as Egipte perceaueth it, she wilbe as sory as Tyrus it selfe. Go ouer the see, Mourne ye that dwel in the Iles. Is not that ꝑ glorious cytie, which hath bene of longe antiquite? whose natiues dwellinge farre of, commende her so greatly Who hath deuysed suche thynges vpon Tyrus the crowne of all cytyes, whose marchaūtes and captaines were the hyghest and principal of the worlde? Euen the LORDE of hoo-3 stes hath deuised it, that he maye put downe al pompe, & myndy all the glory of ꝑ worlde. Go thorow thy londe (o thou doughter of the see) as men go ouer the water, * and there is
ya. not a gyrdle more.

Thus the LORDE * that remoueth the pa. kyngdomes, and hath taken in hande agaynst that myghtye Canaan (to rote it out:) hath stretched out hys honde ouer the see, and sayde: From hence forth shalt thou make no more myrth (o thou doughter Sidon) for thou shalt be put downe of the Cytens. Stonde vp therfore / and go where the empye will carye the / where thou shalt also haue no reste. Beholde (for thyne ensample:) The Caldees were suche a people / that no man was like them, Assur buylded them: he set vp his castels & palaces, and broke them downe agayne. And therfore mourne (ye ship pes of the see) for youre power shalbe throwe downe.

After that, shal ỹ seuẽtye yeares of Tyrus (euen as longe as their kynges like was) be forgotten. And after seuentye yeares, it shall happẽ to Tirus, as with an harlot ỹ playeth vpon a lute. Take thy lute (sate men to her) and go aboute the citye, thou art yet an vn-knowne wensche, make pastyme with dyuer se ballettes, wherby thou mayest come in to acquaintãce. Thus shal it happen after seuentye yeares *. The LORDE shal viset the citye of Tyrus, and it shall come agayne to hyr marchaundyse, and shall occuppye with all the kingdomes that be in the worlde.

*But al hir occupiẽge and wynninge shalbe halowed vnto the LORDE. For thẽ shal they laye vp nothinge behinde them nor vpõ heapes: but the marchaundise of Tirus shal be-longe vnto the citizens of the LORDE, to the lyuinge and sustaynynge of the hongrie, and to the clothinge of the aged.

The.xxiiii. Chapter.

BEholde, ỹ LORDE shal wayste &
plage the worlde, he shal make ỹ
face of the earth desolate, & scatre
abrode the inhabitours therof.

*Thẽ shal the preest be as ỹ people: the master as the seruaunt: the dame like
the mayde: ỹ seller like ỹ byer: he that lẽdeth
vpon vsury, like him ỹ vorroweth vpõ vsury:
the creditoure, as the detter. Yee miserably
shal the worlde be wasted & clene destroyed.
For ỹ LORDE hath so determyned in hi self.
The earth shalbe heuy and decaye. The face of the earth shal perish & fal awaye, the prou-
de people of the worlde shal come to naught,
For the earth is corrupte of hir indwellers.

For why they haue offended ỹ lawe, chaũ
ged the ordynaunces, and made the euerlastinge testament of none effecte, And therfore shal the curse deuoure the earth: for they that dwel therõ, haue synned. Wherfore they shal be brent also: and those that remayne, shalbe very few. The swete wyne shal mourne, the grapes shalbe weake, and al ỹ haue bene me

glory of the LORDE, euẽ from the see, & praise
the name of the LORDE God of Israel, in the valleis and lõdes. We heare songes sun ge to the prayse of the righteous, from al the endes of the worlde. Therfore I muste speake: O my vnfrutfulnesse, o my powerte, Wo

the foundacion of the earth shal moue.

The earth shal geue a great crack, it shal
haue a sore ruyne, and take an horrible fall.
The earth shal stacker like a dronken man,
and be taken awaye like a tent. Hir misde-des shal lie so heuye vpon her, that she muste fall, and neuer rise vp agayne. At the same tyme shall the LORDE muster together the
hie hooste aboue, and the kynges of the wor lde vpon the earth. These shalbe coupled to gether as prysoners be, & shalbe shut in one warde, and punished innumerable dayes.
*The mone and the sonne shalbe ashamed, Luc. 21.b

WO be to the crowne of pryde. *To the dronke Ephraemites, and to the fadyng floure, to the glory of his pompe, that is vpō the toppe of the plenteous valley: which men be ouerladen with wyne. Beholde, * the strength and power of the LORDE shall breake in to the lōde on euery syde, lyke a tempeste of hayle, that beareth downe stronge holdes: and lyke an horrible, myghtie and ouer flowynge water. And the proude crowne of the dronken Ephraemites, shall be troden vnder foote. * And as for the fadynge floure, the glory of his pōpe, whiche is vpon the toppe of the plenteous valley, it shall happen vnto hym, as to an vntymelye frute before the haruest come. Whiche as soone as it is sene, is by and by deuoured, or ehet it come well in a mans honde.

And then shall the LORDE of hoostes be a ioyfull crowne, and a glorious garlāde vnto the remnaunt of his people. Unto the lowly, he shall be a spyrete of iudgment: and vnto them that dryue awaye the enemyes from the gates, he shall be a spyrete of strength. But they goo wronge by the reason of wyne, B they fall and slacker because of stroge drynke, * yee euen the preestes and prophetes Esa.3.d them selues go amysse, they are dronke with wine, and weake brayned thorow strōg drynke. But they had no wyll to heare. And ther for the LORDE shall answere theyr stubournesse (Commaūde that maye be cōmaunded: byd that maye be bydden, forbyd that maye be forbydden: kepe backe that maye be kept backe: here a litle, there a lytle) That they maye go forth, fall backwarde, be brused, snared, and taken. Therfor thus sayeth the LORDE God: * Beholde, I wyll laye a stone in Sion, a greate stone, a costly corner stone for a sure foundacion: that who so putteth his trust in hym, shall not be confounded. Righteousnes wyll I set vp agayne in the balāce, and iudgment in the weightes. * The tempest of hayle shal take awaie youre refuge, ỳ ye haue to disceaue withall: and the ouerflowyng waters shall breake downe your strōg holdes of dissimulacion. And therfore make no mockes at it, ỳ youre captiuite increase not: for I haue herde the LORDE of hooستes saye, that there shall come a soden destruction and plage vpon the hole earth. Take hede, & heare my voice, ponder and marck my wordes wel. Goeth not the husbonde man euer in due season earnestly to his londe? he moweth and ploweth his groūde to sowe. And when he hath made it playne, he soweth it with fitches or comyn. He soweth the wheate and Barlye in theyr place. Milium and Rie also in theyr place. And that he maye do it ryght, his God teacheth hym and sheweth hym. For he treadeth not the fitches out with a wayne, nether bringeth he the cart here and there ouer the comyn, but he thrassheth the fitches out with a flayle, and the comyn with a rod. As for the whete, he grindeth it to make breade therof, In as moch as he can not bringe it to passe with treadyng out. For nether the brusling that ỳ cart wheles make, nor his beastes can grinde it. This and soch lyke thinges come of the LORDE of hooستes, whiche is maruelous in councell, and great in ryghteousnesse.

The.xxix.Chapter.

A 2.Reg.5.b WO vnto the o Ariell Ariell: thou citie that * Dauid wanne. Take yet some yeares, and let some feastes yet passe ouer: then shall Ariell be besieged, so that she shal be heuye and sorouful, and shall be vnto me euen as a lyon. For I wyll laye sege to the rounde aboute, and kepe the in with towers, and graue vp dykes agaynst the. And thou shalt be brought lowe and speake out of the earth, and thy wordes shall go humbly out of the grounde. Thy voyce shall come out of the earth, lyke the voyce of a witch, & thy talkynge shall groane out of the myre. For the multitude of thine enemies shalbe lyke mealdust. And the nombre of Tyrannes shall be * as the dust that the wynde taketh awaye sodenlye. Psa.83.a

Thou shalt be visited of the LORDE of hooستes with thonder, earthquake, and with a greate crack, with the whyrle wynde, tempeste, and with the flame of a consumynge fyre. But now the multitude of all the people, that wente out agaynst Ariell: the hole hooste, the stronge holdes, and sege: is * lyke a dreame which apeareth in ỳ nyght. Psa.72.a It is lyke as whē an hungrye mā dreameth that he is eatynge, and when he awaketh, he hath nothynge: lyke as when a thyrsty man dreameth that he is drynkynge, and when he awaketh, he is faynt, and his soule vnpacient.

So is the multitude of all people, that mustre them selues agaynst the hyll of Sion. But ye shall be at youre wittes ende, ye shall be abasshed: ye shall staker, and reele and fro. ye shall be dronkē, but not of wyne. ye shall fall, but not thorowe dronkenes: For the LORDE shall geue you an harde heppynge spyrete, and holde downe youre eyes: namely youre prophetes and heades which shulde se, them shall he couer * And all visions shall be vnto you, as the wordes that stonde in a sealed letter, when one offreth it to a man that is lerned, and sayeth: reade vs this lettre. Then he answereth: I can not rede it, for it is shut. But yf it be geuen to one ỳ is not lerned, or sayd vnto hym: rede this lettre: Then sayeth he. I can not rede. Esa.8.d

Therfore thus sayeth the LORDE * For so moch as this people draweth nye me with Mat.15.a Mar.7.a their mouth, and prayseth me highly with theyr lyppes (where as there herte neuertheles is farre fro me, & the feare which they owe vnto me, that turne they to mens lawes & doctrines) therfore wyll I also shewe vnto this people, a maruelous terrible & greate thynge (Namely this) * I wyl destroie ỳ wis- Esa.44.a dome of theyr wyse, and ỳ vnderstondynge of theyr lerned mē shall perysh. Wo be vnto thē ỳ seke so depe to hyde theyr imagination before the LORDE, which reherse their cōcels in the darknesse, and saye: * Tush, who Psa.9.a seith vs, or who knoweth vs?

Which imagination of yours is euen as when the potters clay taketh abuilement, as though the worke myght saye to the worke master: make me not, or as when an erthen vessell sayeth of the potter: he vnderstondeth not. Se ye not that it is harde by, that

Libanus shall be turned into Carmell, and that Carmell shall be taken as a wodde: Then shall deaf men vnderstonde the wordes of the boke, and the eyes of the blynde shall se without any cloude or darknesse. The oppressed shall holde a mery feaste in the LORDE and the poore people shall reioyce in the holy one of Israell.

D Then shall the furious people ceasse, and the mockers shall be put awaye, & all they that do wronge shall be routed out: * Such as laboure to drawe mē vnto synne: & that deceaue hym, which reproueth thē in ꝑ gate and such as turne good persones to vanite.

And therfore the LORDE (euen the defender of Abraham) sayeth thus vnto the house of Jacob: * Now shall not Jacob be ashamed, nor his face confounded, when he seyth among his children (whome my hondes haue made) such as halowe my name amonge them, that they maye sanctifie the holy one of Jacob, and feare the God of Israell, and that they which afore tyme were of an erroneous spryte, haue now vnderstondynge, and that such as before coude not speake, are now lerned in my lawe.

The xxx. Chapter.

I WO be to those shrenkynge children (sayeth ꝑ LORDE) * which seke councell, but not at me: which take a webbe in honde, but not after my wyll: that they maye heape one synne vpon another. They go downe into Egipte (and axe me no councell) to seke helpe at the power of Pharao, and comforte in the shadowe of the Egipcians. But Pharaos helpe shalbe youre confusion, and the comforte in the Egipcians shadowe shalbe youre owne shame. Youre rulers haue ben at Zoan, and youre messagers came vnto Hanes. * But ye shal all be ashamed of the people that maye not helpe you, which shall not bringe you strengthe or comforte, but shame and confusion.

D Youre beastes haue borne burthes vpon theyr backes toward the Southe, thorowe the waye that is full of parell and trouble, because of the lion and lyonesse, of the Cockatrice and shutyng dragon. Yee the mules bare youre substaunce, and the camels brought youre treasour vpon theyr crooked backes, vnto a people ꝑ can not helpe you. For the Egipcians helpe shalbe but vayne and lost. Therfore I tolde you also ꝑ youre pryde shulde haue an ende. * Wherfore go hence, & write them this in theyr tables, and note it in a boke: that it maye remayne by theyr posterite, and be styll kepte. For it is an obstinate people, * vnfaythfull children Esa.1.a. childrē ꝑ wyl not heare ꝑ lawe of the LORD.

They darre saye to the prophetes: * intromitte youre selues with nothynge, & vnto them that shewe ꝑ trueth: tell vs of nothing for to come, but speake frendly wordes vnto vs, and preache vs false thynges. Treade out of the waye, go out of ꝑ path, turne the holy one of Israell from vs. Therfore thus sayeth the holy one of Israell: In as moche as ye haue cast of youre bewtie, and comforted youre selues with power and nymblenesse, and put youre confidence therin: therfore shall ye haue this mysscheke agayne for youre destruction and fall. Lyke as an hye wall, that falleth because of some tryst (or blast) whose breakynge commeth sodenlye, Jerr.11.d. Amos.7.a ꝑ Esa.2.b

C * And youre destruction shalbe lyke as an erthen pot, which breaketh no mā touching it: yee and breaketh so sore, that a man shal not fynde a sheuer of it to fetche fyre in, or to take water withall out of the pyt. For the LORDE God, euen the holy one of Israell hath promised thus: * with stylstitting and reste shall ye be healed, In quyetnesse and hope shall youre strength stie. Notwithstondyng ye regarde it not, but ye wyl saye: No, for thus are we cōstrained to flye vpon horses. (and therfore shall ye flye) We must ryde vpon swyft beastes, and therfore youre persecutours shall yet be swyfter. * A thousand of you shal flye for one, or at the moost for fyue, which do but only gyue you euell wordes, vntyll ye be desolate, as a shipmast vpon an hye mountayne, and as a beaken vpon a hyll. Rom.2.a * yet stondeth the LORDE waytinge, that he maye haue mercy vpon you: and lyfteth hymselfe vp, that he may receaue you to grace. For the LORDE God is righteous. Happy are all they that waite for hym. For thus (o thou people of Sion and ye citysens of Jerusalem) shall ye neuer be in heupnes, for doutlesse he wyll haue mercy vpon the. As soone as he heareth the voyce of thy crye, he wyll helpe the. The LORDE geueth you the bread of aduersite, and the water of trouble. But thyne instructour sleyth not farre from the, yf thyne eyes loke vnto thyne instructer, and yf thyne eares harken to his worde, ꝑ cryeth after the and sayeth, * This is the waye, go thus, and turne neither to the ryght honde nor to the lefte. ye shalbe vnto mē, as a defence for the wynde, and as a refuge for the tempest, lyke as a ryuer of water in a thyrste place, and as the shadowe of a great rock in a dyre londe. The eyes of the seynge shall not be dymme: and the eares of them that heare, shall take diligent hede. The harte of the vnwyse shall attayne to knowlege,
and the vnparfyte tonge shall speake pla-mynded, and his harte wyll worke euel and playe the ypocrite, and imagyn abhon ma-

leane, & to withholde drinke frō the thirstie.

Theise are the perilous weapons of ỹ couetous, these be his shamefull councels: that he maye begyle the poore with disceatfull workes, yee euen there as he shulde geue sentence with the poore. * But the liberall person imagineth honest thinges, and commeth vp with honestie.

Vp (ye rich and ydle cities) harken vnto my voyce. Yee careles cities, marke my wordes. After yeares and dayes shall ye be brought in feare, o ye careles cities. For hart nest shalbe out, and the grape gat herynge shall not come. O ye ryche ydle cities, ye that feare no parell, ye shal be abashed and remoued: whan ye se the barēnesse, the nakednesse, and preparynge to warre. Ye shal knock vpō youre brestes, because of the pleasaunt felde, and because of the frutefull vineyarde. My peoples felde shall bringe thornes and thistles, for in euery house is deliptuousnes, and in the cities, wilfulnes. The palaces also shalbe brokē, & the greatly occupied cities desolate. The towers and bulwerckes shall become dennes for euermore, the pleasure of mules shalbe turned to pasture for sheepe: Vnto the tyme that the spyrite be poured vpon vs from aboue.

Then shall the wyldernesse be a frutefull felde, and the plēteous felde shalbe rekened for a wodde. Then shall equite dwell in the desert, & righteousnesse in a frutefull londe.

* And the rewarde of righteousnesse shalbe peace, and her frute rest and quietnesse for euer: & my people shall dwell in the vnnes of peace, in my tabernacle and pleasure where there is ynough in them all. And whē the hayle falleth, it shall fall in the wodde & in ỹ cittie. O how happye shall ye be, whē ye shall safely sowe youre sede beside al waters & driue thither the fete of youre oxē & asses.

THerfore wo vnto the (o robber) shalt not thou be robbed also: and vnto the ỹ layest wayte, as who saye there shuld no wayt be layde for thee. Wo vnto the which doest hurte * euē so shalt thou be hurt also. And as thou laiest waite, so shall waite be layde for the also.

LORDE be mercyfull vnto vs, we waite for the. Thine arme is at a poynte to viset vs, * but be thou oure health in the tyme of trouble. Graūte ỹ the people maye flie at the singer of thy voyce, & that at thy vplōdinge the Gentiles be scatred abrode, and ỹ theyr spoile may be gathered, as the greshoppers are comonly gathered together in to ỹ pyt. Stōde vp LORDE thou ỹ dwellest on hye: Let Sion be fylled w equite and righteousnesse. Let treuth and faythfulnesse be in thy tyme: power, health, wisdome, knowlege, & the feare of God are hir treasour. Behold, theyr aūgels crie without, ỹ messaungers of peace wepe bytterly. The stretes are waist, there walketh no man therin, the appointment is broken, ỹ cities are despysed, they are not regarded, ỹ desolate earth is in heupnes. Libanus taketh it but for a spoyte, ỹ it is hewē downe: Saron is lyke a wyldernesse. Basan & Carmell are turned vpsyde downe. And therfore sayeth the LORDE: I wyll vp, now wyll I get vp, now wyll I aryse. * Ye shall conceaue stuble, and beare strawe, & youre spyrite shall be ỹ fyre, that it may cōsume you: & the people shalbe burnt lyke lyme, and as thornes burne that are hewen of, and cast in the fyre. B Ier. 5. c.

Now herken to (ye that are farre of) how I do with them: and consydre my glory, ye that be at honde. The synners at Sion are afrayde, a sodane fearfulnesse is come vpon the ypocrytes. What is he amōg vs (saye they) ỹ wyll dwell by that consumyng fyre? which of vs maye abyde that euerlastynge heate? * He that ledeth a godly lyfe & speaketh the treuth: He that abhorreth to do violence and disceate: he that kepeth his hōd, that he touch no rewarde: which stoppeth his eares, that he heare no councell agaynst the innocente: whiche holdeth downe his eyes, that he se no euell. He it is that shall dwell on hye, whose sauegarde shalbe in the true rocke, to hym shall be geuen the ryght true meat and drynke. His eyes shall se the kyng in his glory & in the wyde world, & his harte shall delyte in ỹ feare of God. * What shall then become of the scrybes of the Senatoure? what of him that teacheth chyldre? There lyeth no man that sayeth: I am syck, but all euell is take away frō ỳ people, that dwell there.

The.xxxiiii.Chapter.

COme ye heythē and heare, take hede ye people. Herken thou earth and al that is therin: thou rounde compasse and all that groweth therupō: for the LORD is angrie with all people, and his displeasure is kindled agaynst all the multitude of them, to curse them, and to slaye them. So that theyr slayne shall be cast out, and theyr bodies stincke: that euen the verye hilles shalbe wet with ỳ bloude of thē. * All the starres of heauen shall be cōsumed, and the heauen shall folde together lyke a scrol, and all the starres therof shall fall, lyke as the leaues fall frō the vynes and fygetrees. For my swearde (sayeth he) shall be bathed in heauen, & shall immediatly come downe vpon Idumea, and vpon the people whom I haue cursed for my vengeaunce.

And the LORDES swearde shall be full of bloude, and be rustie with the fatnesse and bloude of lambes and goates, with the fatnesse of neres of the wethers. For ỳ LORD shall kyll a great offrynge in Bosra, and in the londe of Idumea. There shall the Unicornes fall with the Bulles, (that is with the grauntes) and theyr lōde shalbe washed with bloude, and theyr grounde corrupte with fatnesse. * Unto the also (o Sion) shall come the date of the vengeaūce of God, and ỳ yeare whē as thyne owne iugdmētes shall be recōpenced. Thy floudes shall be turned to pytch, and thyne earth to brymstone, and therwith shall the londe be kyndled, so that it shall not be quēched daye nor nyght: But smoke euermore, & sofoyth to lye waist. And no man shall go thorow thy londe for euer: * But Pellicanes, storkes, great Oules, & Raues shal haue it i possessiō & dwel therin.

For God shall spreade out the lyne of desolacion vpon it, and weye it with the stones of emptynes. Whē kynges are called vpō, there shalbe none, and all princes shalbe awaye. Thornes shall growe in theyr palaces, nettles & thistles in their strōge holdes, ỳ the dragōs maie haue their pleasure therin, and ỳ they maye be a courte for Ostriches. There shall straunge bisures and monstruous beastes mete one another, & the wyldebeastes kepe cōpany together. * There shall the Lamia lye, & haue hyr lodging. There shall ỳ hedghogge builde, dygge, be there at home, and bringe forth his yōgeones. There shall kytes come together, eche one to his lyke. * Seke thorow the scripture of the LORDE and reade it. & There shall none of those thinges be left out, there shall not one (nor such lyke) fayle. For what his mouth commandeth, ỳ same doth his spirete gather together (or fulfylleth). Upon whome so euer the lot falleth, or to whome he dealeth it with the lyne: those shal possesse the enheritaunce frō generacion to generaciō, and dwell therin.

The.xxxv. Chapter

BUt the deserte and wyldernesse shall reioyce, the waist grounde shall be glad, and florysh as the lylly. She shall florysh pleasauntly, and be ioyful, and euer de geuynge of thankes more and more. For the glory of Libanus, ỳ bewtie of Carmell and Saron shall be geuen her. Thei shall knowe the honoure of the LORDE, and the mateslty of oure God. * And therfore stregth the weake hōdes, and cōforte ỳ feble knees. Saye vnto them that are of a fearfull hart. * Be of good chere, and feare not. Beholde youre God cōmeth, to take vengeaūce and to rewarde, God cōmeth his owne self, and wyll delyuer you. * Then shall ỳ eyes of the blynde be lyghtned, & the eares of ỳ deaf opened. Thē shall ỳ lame mā leape as an hart, * and ỳ domme mās tūge shal geue thākes. * In the wyldernesse also there shall welles springe, and floudes of water in the deserte. The dryye grounde shall turne to tyuers, & the thyrstie to springes of water. Where as dragōs dwelt afore, there shall growe sweet floures and grene russhes. There shall be footpathes and comon stretes: this shalbe called the holy waie. No vnciene persō shal go thorow it, for the LORDE hymself shall go with them that waye, & the ignorāt shal not erre. There shall be no lyon, and no vnlyke beaste shall come therin nor be there, but mē shall go there fre & safe. * And the redemed of the LORDE shall conuerte, and come to Sion with thankes geuynge. * Euerlastyng ioye shal they haue, pleasure & gladnes shalbe amōge thē. And as for all sorow and heuynes, it shall vanish awaye.

The.xxxvi.Chapter.

IN the xiiii. yeare of kynge Ezechias/ came Sennacherib king of the Assirians downe/ to lay seige vnto all the stronge cities of Juda. And ỳ king of the Assirians sent Rabsaches from Lachis toward Jerusalem/ against kynge Ezechias: with a greuous hoost, which set hym by the condite of the ouerpole, in the waye that goeth thorow the fullers londe. And so there came forth vnto hym Eliachim Helchias sonne the president, * Sobna the scribe, and Joah Asaphs sonne the Secretary.

And Rabsaches sayde vnto them: Tell Ezechias, that the greate kynge of Assiria sayeth thus vnto hym: What presumpcyon is thys, that thou trustest vnto? Thou thynkest (peraduenture) that thou hast councell & power ynough, to mayntene thys warre: or els wher to trustest thou, that thou castest thi self of fro me? * lo, thou puttest thy trust in a broken staff of rede (I meane Egipte) which yf a man leaneth vpon, it goeth in to hys honde and shuteth hym thorow. Euen so is Pharao the kynge of Egipte, vnto all them that trust in hym. But yf thou woldest saye to me We trust in the LORDE oure God: A goodly god in dede: whose hye places and aultares Ezechias toke downe, and commaunded Jude and Jerusalem, to worshype only before the aulter. Abyde the, thou hast made a condicion with my lorde the kynge of the Assirians, that he shulde geue the two thousande horses: Art thou able to set men there vp? Seynge now that thou canst not resist the power of the smallest prynce that my LORDE hath, how darrest thou trust in the charettes and horsmē of Egipte? Moreouer, thynkest thou that I am come downe hyther, to destroye thys londe without the LORDES will? The LORDE sayde vnto me: go downe in to that londe, that thou mayest destroye it.

Then sayde Eliachim, Sobna & Johah vnto Rabsaches: Speake to vs thy seruaūtes (we praye the) in the Sirians language, for we vnderstonde it well: And speake not to vs in the Jewes tunge, lest the folcke hearē, which lieth vpon the wall. Then answered Rabsaches: Thynke ye, that ỳ kyng sent me to speake thys onely vnto you? Hath he not sent me to thē also, that lye vpō the walle that they be not cōpelled to eate their owne donge, & drinke their owne stayle with you?

And Rabsaches stode stiff, and cryed with a loude voyce in the Jewes tunge, and saide Now take hede, how the greate kynge of the Assirians grueth you warninge. Thus saieth the kyng: Let not Ezechias disceaue you, for he shall not be able to delyuer you. Moreouer let not Ezechias comforte you in the LORD, when he sayeth: The LORDE without doute shall defende vs, & shal not geue ouer this citie in to the hondes of the kynge of the Assirians, beleue him not. But thus saieth ỳ kynge of Assiria: opteyne my fauoure, encline to me: So may euery mā enioie his vynyardes and fygetrees, and drinke the water of his cisterne: vnto the tyme that I come my self, & bringe you in to a londe, ỳ is lyke youre owne wher in is wheat and wyne, whiche is both sowen with sede, & planted with vynyardes. Let not Ezechias disceaue you, when he sayeth vnto you: the LORD shall deliuer vs.

*Might the goddes of the Gentiles kepe euery man hys londe, from the power of the kynge of the Assirians? Wher is the God of Hemath & Arphad? Where is ỳ God of Sepharnaim? And who was able to defende Samaria out of my honde? Or which of all the goddes of the lōdes, hath deliuered their countre out of my power, so that the LORDE shulde delyuer Jerusalem fro my honde? Unto this, Ezechias messaūgers helde their tunges, and answered not one worde: for the kynge had charged them, that they shuld geue hym none answere. So came Eliachim Helchias sonne the president, Sobna the scribe, and Joah Asaphs sonne the secretary, vnto Ezechias with rente clothes, & tolde hym the wordes of Rabsaches.

The .xxxvii. Chapter.

WHen Ezechias herde that, he rente hys clothes, & * put on a sacke cloth, and went in to the temple of the LORDE. But he sent Eliachim the President, Sobna the scribe, with the eldest prestes clothed in * sacke vnto the prophet Esay the sonne of Amos, & they sayde vnto hym: Thus sayeth Ezechias thys is the daye of trouble, of plage and of wrath: lyke as when a chylde cōmeth to the byrth, but the woman hath no power to bringe it forth. The LORDE thy God (no doute) hath well considered the wordes of Rabsaches, whome hys lorde the kynge of the Assirians hath sent, to defie and blaspheme the lyuynge God: with suche wordes, as the LORDE thy God hath herde right well. And therfore lift vp thy prayer for the remnaunt, that yet are left. So the seruauntes of kynge Ezechias came to Esay.

In those dayes, was Ezechias deedlick * And the prophet Esay ỳ sonne of Amos came vnto hym, and sayde: Thus commaũdeth the LORD: Set thyne house in ordre, for thou must dye, and shalt not escape. Then Ezechias turned hys face towarde the wall, and prayed vnto the LORDE, & sayde: Remembre (O LORDE) that I haue walked before the in treuth & a stedfast hert, and haue done the thynge that is pleasaunt to the. And Ezechias wepte sore. Then sayde God vnto Esay: Go & speake vnto Ezechias The LORDE God of Dauid thy father sendeth the thys worde: I haue herde thy prayer and considered thy teares: * beholde, I will put.xv. yeares mo vnto thy lyfe, and delyuer the and the cytie also, from the honde of the kynge of Assiria, for I will defende the cyte. * And take the thys token of the LORDE, ỳ he wil do it, as he hath spoken: Beholde, I will returne the shadowe of Achas dyall, ỳ now is layed out with the Sonne, and bringe it ten degrees backward. * So the Sonne turned ten degrees backward, the whiche he was descended afore.

Thankesgeuynge, which Ezechias kynge of Juda wrote, when he had bene sicke, & was recouered.

I thought I shulde haue gone to the gates of hell in my best age, and haue wanted the residue of my yeares.

I spake within my self: I shal neuer visit the LORDE God in thys life: I shall neuer se man, amonge the dwellers of the worlde.

Myne age is folden vp together and taken awaye fro me, like a shepherdes cotage: my lyfe is hewen of, like as a weauer cutteth of hys webbe.

Psa.147.b. Esa.48.a. their names. For there is nothynge hyd vnto the greatnesse of his power, strength and might. How maye then Jacob thynke, & how maye Israell saye: My wayes are hyd frō the LORDE, and my God knoweth not of my iudgementes? Knowest thou not? & hast thou not herde, that the euerlastynge God, the LORDE which made all the corners of the earth, is nether weery nor faynt, and that his wysdome can not be comprehended: but that he geueth strength vnto the weery, and power vnto the fayntē? Yonge men are weery and faynt, and the strongest may fall: * But vnto thē that haue ꝯ LORDE before their eyes, shall streight be renewed Iegles winges shall growe vpon them:

he nat breake, & the smokinge flax shal he nat quench: but faithfully and truly shal he geue iudgmēt. He shal nether be ouersene ner hastie, that he maye restore righteousnesse vnto the earth: and the gentiles also shall kepe his lawes. For thus sayeth God the LORDE vnto hym (Euen he that made the heauens, * & Esa.40.c. and.44.c. spred them abrode, & set forth the earth with hir encrease: whiche geueth breath vnto the people that is in it, & to them that dwell ther in) I the LORDE haue called ꝑ in righteousnesse, & led the by the honde * Therfore wil I Esa.49.b & Luc.2.c. also defende the, & geue the for a couenaunt of the people, & to be ꝑ ✠ light of the Gētiles. That thou mayest open the eyes of the blinde, * let out the prysoners, & them that syt in zach.9.b. darknesse, out of the dongeon house. I my Esa.48.c. selfe, whose name is the LORDE * which geue my glory to none other, nether myne honoure to the goddes: shewe you these new tydinges, and tell you them or they come, for olde thynges also are come to passe.

B * Synge therfore vnto ꝑ LORDE, a new psal.149.a songe of thākes geuynge/blow out his prayse vnto the ende of the worlde. They that be vpon the see, & all that is therin/ prayse hym/ the Iles and they that dwell in them. Let the wildernes with hir cyties lift vp hir voyce/ the townes also that be in Cedar. Let them be glad that syt vpon rockes of stone/ and let them crye downe from the hye mountaynes: ascribinge almightynes vnto the LORDE/ & magnifienge hym amonge the gētiles. The LORDE shall come forth as a gyaunte/ and take a stomacke to hym lyke a fresh man of warre. He shal roare and crie, and ouercome hys enemyes.

I haue longe holden my peace (sayeth the LORDE) shulde I therfore be styll, and kepe sylence for euer? I will crye lyke a trauelinge woman, and once will I destroye, & deuoure I will make wayst both mountayne & hyll, & drye vp euery grene thynge, that groweth theron. I will drye vp the floudes of water, & drynke vp the ryuers. I will bringe ꝑ blinde into a strete, that they knowe not: and lede them into a fotepath, that they are vnfamiliar in. I shall make darknesse light before them, & the thynge that is crooked, to be strayght. These thynges will I do, & not forget them. Esa.44.b * And therfore let them cōuerte, and be ashamed earnestly, that hope in Idols, & saye to fashioned ymages: ye are oure goddes.

C Heare, o ye deaf men, and sharpen youre Mat.15.b. sightes to se (o ye blynde) * But who is blynder, then my seruaunt? Or so deaf, as my messaūgers, whome I sent vnto them? For who is so blynde as my people, & they ꝑ haue the rule of them? They are like, as ꝑ thou hadest stodest much, and keptest nothynge: or ꝑ one herde well, but were not obedient. The LORDE be mercifull vnto them for hys righteousnesse sake, ꝑ hys worde might be magnified and praysed. But it is a myscheuous & wycked people. They? yonge men belonge all to the snare, & shalbe shut in to prysō houses. * They shal be caryed awaye captyue, and no man shall lowse them. They shalbe troden vnder fote, & no man shall laboure to bryng the agayne. * But who is he amonge you, ꝑ giueth this in hys mynde, ꝑ considereth it, & taketh it for a warnynge in tyme to come?

* Who suffred Iacob to be troden vnder fote, and Israel to be spoyled? dyd not the LORDE? Now haue we synned against him, and haue had no delite to walke in his wayes, nether bene obedient vnto his lawe. Therfore hath he poured vpon vs hys wrothful displeasure, and stroge batell, which maketh vs haue to do on euery syde, yet wyll we not vnderstonde: He burneth vs vp, yet sticketh it not in to oure hartes.

The.xliij. Chapter.

BVt now, the LORDE that made the (o Iacob) * he that fashioned the (o Israel) sayeth thus: * Feare not, for I will defende the I haue called the by thy name, thou art myne owne *. When thou wentest thorow water, I was by the, that the stroge floudes shulde not plucke the awaye: * When thou walkest in the fyre, it shall not burne the, and the flame shall not kyndle vpon the. For I am the LORDE thy God, the holyone of Israel, thy Sauioure. I gaue Egipte for thy delyueraunce, the Moryās and the Saboes for the: because thou wast deare in my sight, and because I set by the, and loued the. I led all men for the, and delyuered vp all people for thy sake, that thou shuldest not feare, for I was with the. * I will bringe thy seed from the east, and gather the together from the west. I will saye to the northyest, geue: and to the south: kepe not backe: * Bringe my sonnes from farre, and my doughters from the endes of the worlde: Namely all those that be called after my name: For them haue I created, fashioned, & made for myne honoure.

* Bringe forth that people, whether they haue eyes or be blynde, deaf or haue eares. * All nacions shal come in one, and be gathered in one people. But whiche amonge

ber goddes shall declare soch thynges, & tell vs what is to come: Let them bringe their witnesses, so shall they be fre: for then men shall heare it, and saye: it is truthe. But I bynge you witnesses (sayeth the LORDE)
even thole that are my seruauntes, whome I haue chosen: to ỹ intent ỹ ye myght be certified, & geue me faithfull credence: yee and to conlyde, *that I am he, before whom there was neuer eny God, and that there shall be none after me. I am only the LORDE. And *without me is there no Sauiour. I geue warnynge, I make hole, I teach you, that there shuld be no straūge god amonge you.
And this recorde must ye beare me toure selnes (sayeth ỹ LORDE) that I am God. And euen he am I from the begynnynge, and *there is none, ỹ can take any thinge out of my hōde. And what I do, cā no mā chaūge.

Thus sayeth the LORDE the holy one of Israel youre redemer: *For youre sake wyl
I sende to Babilon, and bringe all the strō-gest of them from thence: Namely, the Cal-
dees that boost them of theyr shyppes: Euē
I the LORDE youre holy one whiche haue made Israell, & am youre kynge. Moreouer thus sayeth the LORDE (* Euē he that ma-keth a waye in ỹ see, & and a footpath in the mightie waters: * which bringeth forth the charettes and horses, the hoost and the power, that they may fall a slepe & neuer ryse,
and be extincte, lyke as tow is quenched.

Ye remembre not thynges of olde, and re
garde nothyng ỹ is past. Therfore beholde, I shall make a newe thynge, & shortly shall
it apeare: ye shal well knowe it, I tolde it
you afore, but I wyll tell it you agayne.

I wyll make stretes in the deserte, and ry-uers of water in the wildernesse. The wilde beastes shall worshyppe me: the dragō, and the Estrich. * For I shall geue water in the wildernesse, & streames in the deserte: that I maye geue drinke to my people, whome I chose. This people haue I made for my self & they shall shewe forth my prayse. For thou (Jacob) woldest not call vpon me, but thou
laddest an vnlust toward me, O Israell.
Thou gauest me not thy yonge beastes for brentofferinges, nether didest thou honoure me ỹ thy sacrifices. Thou boughtest me no
swete spice ỹ thy money, nether pouredest me ỹ fat of thy sacrifices vpon me. * Howbeit I haue not ben chargeable vnto the in offrynges, nether greuous in Incense.
Thou hast laden me with thy synnes, & wearied me with thy vngodlynes: Where as yet I * am euen he onely, that for myne

owne selfes sake do awaye thyne offences, Jere.33.b.
and forget thy synnes: so that I wyll neuer
thinke ỹō thē. Put me now in remēbraūce (for we wyll reason together) & shewe what thou hast for the, to make the quyte. * Thy Gen.3.b.
fyrst father offended sore & & thy rulers haue & Nu.20.b
synned against me. Therfore I ether suspēded, or slewe the cheefest princes: I dyd curse
Jacob, and gaue Israell into reprofe.

A SO heare now, o Jacob my seruaunte, and Israell whom I haue chosen. For thus sayeth ỹ LORDE, that made the, that fashioned the, and helped the, euē
from thy mothers wombe: * Be not afrayde (o Jacob my seruaunte) thou righteous,
whome I haue chosen. * For I shal poure
water vpon the drye grounde, and ryuers
vpon the thyrstie. * I shall poure my spyrete vpon thy sede, and myne encrease vpon thy stocke. They shall growe together, lyke as the grasse, & as the Willies by the waters
syde. One wyll saye: I am the LORDES.
Another wyl call vnder the name of Jacob.
The thyrde shall subscrybe with his honde
vnto the LORDE, and geue hymself vnder
the name of Israell.

Moreouer, thus hath the LORDE spokē: B
euen the kynge of Israell and his auenger,
the LORDE, of hoostes: * I am the fyrst, &
the last, and without me is there no god.
For what is he, ỹ euer was lyke me, whiche am from euerlastynge? Let hym shewe his name, and do where thorowe he maye be lyckened vnto me. Let hym tell you forth planely thynges, that are past & for to come:
yee and that without any feare or stoppe.
For haue not I euer tolde you hyther to, & warned you? ye can beare me recorde youre
selues. Is there eny God exrepte me? or eny maker, that I shulde not knowe hym?

Wherfore all caruers of Idols are but vayne, and theyr labour loste. They must beare recorde them selues, that (seynge they can nether se nor vnderstonde) they shall be confolded. * Who shulde now make a god Esa.42.b or fashion an Idoll, that is profitable for no thynge: * Beholde all the felashippe of them must be brought to confusion. Let all the workmasters of them come and stonde together frō amōg men: they must be abashed
and cōfoūded one with another. The smith taketh yron, and tēpreth it with hote coles.
and fashioneth it with hāmers, and maketh
it with all the strength of his armes: yea

sometyme he is faynt for very hunger, and so thyrstie, that he hath no more power. The carpenter (or ymage caruer) taketh me ꝑ tym bre, and spredeth forth his lyne: he marketh it with some colour: he playneth it, he ruleth it & squareth it, & maketh it after the ymage of a man, and accordinge to the bewtye of a mā that it maye stonde in a temple.

Moreouer, he goeth out to hewe downe Cedre trees: He bringeth home Elmes and okes, and other tymbre of the wood. Or els the Fyrre trees which he planted him selfe, & such as the rayne hath swelled, which wodd serueth for men to burne. Of thys he taketh and warmeth hym selfe withal: he maketh a fyre of it to bake bread. And afterwarde maketh a god thereof, to honoure it: and an Idol, to knele before it. One pece he burneth in the fyre, with another he rosteth flesh, that he maye eate roste his bely full: with the thirde he warmeth hym selfe, and sayeth: A ha: I am well warmed, I haue bene at the fyre. And of the residue, he maketh hym a god, and an Idol for hym selfe. He kneleth before it, he worshippeth it, he prayeth vnto it, and sayeth: delyuer me, for thou art my god.

D *Yet men nether consider ner vnderstōde, Esa.44.c. because theyr eyes are stopped, that they can not se: and theyr hertes, that they can not perceaue. They ponder not in theyr myndes (for they haue nether knowlege ner vnderstondinge) to thynke thus: I haue brent one pece in the fyre, I haue baked bread vpō ꝑ coles therof, I haue rosted flesh withall, and eatē it: Shall I now of the residue make an abhominacion, and fall downe before a rotten pece of wodd? The kepinge of dust, and folishnesse of herte hath turned them aside: so that none of them can haue afre conscience to thynke: maye not I erre?

Consider thys (o Iacob & Israel) for thou art my seruaūt. I haue made the / that thou mightest serue me. O Israel / forget me not. Esa.43.d. *As for thyne offences / I dryue them awaye lyke the cloudes / and thy synnes as the myst Turne ꝑ agayne vnto me / & I will delyuer ꝑ

E Be glad ye heauens / whome the LORDE hath made: let all ꝑ is here beneth vpon the earth / be ioyful. Reioyse ye mountaynes and woddes / with all the trees that are in you: for ꝑ LORDE shall redeme Iacob, & shew his glory vpon Israel. For thus sayeth the LORDE thy redemer, euen he that fashioned the Rom.11.b from thy mothers wombe: * I am ꝑ LORDE 1.Cor.1.c. which do all thynges my self alone. & I only Esa.40.c. haue spred out the heauens / and I only haue layde the foundacion of the earth. I de-stroye the tokens of witches / and make the Soothsayers go wronge. As for the wyse / I turne them backward / and make their cunninge foolishnesse.

But I set vp the purpose of my seruantes / and fulfill the councel of my messangers I saye to Ierusalē: turne agayne: And to the cities of Iuda: Be ye buylded againe: And I repayre theyr decayed places. I saye to the groundē: be dryе. And I dryе vp thy watre floudes. I saye to Cirus: thou art myne hye man / so that he shall fulfill all thynges after my will. I saye to Ierusalem: Be thou buylded. And to the tēple: be thou fast grounded.

The .xlv. Chapter.

THus sayeth the LORDE vnto Cirus hys anoynted, whome he leadeth by the right honde: that the people maye fall downe before hym: * I will lowse the gyrdle of kynges / that they shall open the gates before thy face / and not to shut theyr dores. I will go before the / and make the croked straight. I shall breake the brasen dores / and burst ꝑ yron barres. I shall geue the the hyd treasure and the thynge whiche is secretly kept: that thou mayest know / that I the God of Israel haue called the by thy name: * & that for Iacob my seruaunt sake / and for Israel my chosen. For I called the by thy name / and ordened the / or euer thou knewest me: * Euen I the LORD / before whome there is none other: for without me there is no God * I haue prepared the / or euer thou knewest me: that it might be knowne from the risynge of ꝑ Sonne to the goynge downe of the same / that all is nothynge without me. For I am ꝑ LORD and there is els none. * It is I that create the lyght and darcknes / & I make peace and trouble: yee euen I the LORDE do all these thynges. The heauens above shall drop downe / and the cloudes shall rayne righteousnes. The earth shall open it self / & bryng forth health / and therby shall righteousnesse florishe. Euen I the LORDE shall bryng it to passe.

*Woo be vnto hym that chydeth with his maker / ꝑ potsherde with ꝑ potter. Shall the claye to ꝑ potter: What makest thou? or the worke serueth for not hing. Woo be vnto him that saieth to his father: why begettest thou? And to hys mother: why bearest thou? Thus sayeth the LORDE / euen ꝑ holy one & maker of Israel: Axe me of thynges for to come / concernynge my sonnes: and put me in remembraunce / as touchynge the worke of my dre: I haue made the earth, and created mā vpon it. With my hondes haue I spred forth heauen, and geuen a commaundment for all the hoost therof. I shal wake hym vp with righteousnesse, and ordre all his waies. * He shall buylde my cite, & let out my prisoners: & that nether for gift nor rewardes, sayeth the LORDE of hoostes.

The LORDE hath sayde morouer: The occupiers of Egypte, the marchauntes of the Moyans and Sabees, shall come vnto the with tribute, they shalbe thine, they shal folowe the, and go with cheynes vpon theyr fete. They shall fall downe before the, and make supplicacion vnto the. For God (vō out whō there is none other God) shall be with ỳ. * O how profounde art thou o God, thou God & Sauioure of Israel: Confounded be ye, and put to dishonoure: go hence together with shame, all ye that be worckmasters of errour (that is worshippers of Idols) But Israell shalbe saued in the LORD, which is the euerlastinge saluaciō: They shall not come to shame ner confusion, worlde without ende.

For thus sayeth the LORDE: * euen he that created heauen, the God ỳ made the earth, ỳ fashioned it, and set it forth: I haue not made it for naught, but I made it to be enhabyted: Euen I the LORDE, without whome there is none other. * I haue not spoken secretly, nether in darcke places of the earth. It is not for naught, that I sayde vnto the sede of Iacob: seke me. I am the LORDE, whiche when I speake, declare the thynge ỳ is righteous and true. Let them be gathered & come together, let them drawe nye hyther, that are escaped of the people: * Haue they eny vnderstōdinge, that set vp the stockes of theyr Idols, and praye vnto a god, that cā not helpe thē? Let men drawe nye, let them come hyther, & take councel one at another, and shewe forth What is he, that tolde thys before? or who spake of it, euer sence the begynning? Haue not I ỳ LORD done it: * without whom there is none other God: the true God and sauioure, and there is els none but I. * And therfore turne you vnto me (all ye endes of the earth) so shall ye be saued, for I am God, & there is els none. I sweare by my self: out of my mouth cōmeth the worde of righteousnesse, and that maye no man turne: but * all knees shall bowe vnto me, and all tūges shall sweare by me sayenge: Verely in the LORD is my righteousnes and strength. To him shall men come: but all they that thinke scorne of hym, shalbe confounded. And the whole sede of Israel shalbe iustified, & prayseth in the LORDE

The.xlvi. Chapter.

A Nuertheles * Bel shal fall, & Nabo shalbe broken: whose images are a burthē for the beastes & catel, to ouerlade thē, and to make them weery. They shall syncke downe, and fall together: for they maye not ease them of their burthen, therfore must they go in to captiuite. Dan. 14.c 1.Mac.5.a. Iere.50.a.

Herken vnto me, o house of Iacob, and all ye that remayne yet of the housholde of Israel: whome I haue borne from youre mothers wōbe, and brought you vp from your byrth, tyll ye were growen: I whiche shal beare you vnto youre laste age: I haue made you, I will also norish you, beare you & saue you. * Whom wyll ye make me like, in fashion or ymage, that I maye be lyke hym: & ye fooles (no doute) will take out syluer and golde out of youre purses, and weye it, and hyre a goldsmyth to make a god of it, ỳ men maye knele downe and worshipe it. * yet muste he be takē on mens shulders and borne, and set in hys place, that he maie stonde and not moue. Alas that men shulde crye vnto hym, whiche geueth no answere: and delyuereth not the man that calleth vpon hym, from hys trouble. Exo.20.b. & Es.42.a. Esa.44.c Baru.6.c.

Consider this well, and be ashamed. Go B in to youre owne selues (O ye runagates). Remembre the thynges which are past, sence the begynninge of ỳ worlde: that I am God, and that there is els no God, yee and ỳ there is nothinge lyke vnto me. In the begynninge of a thynge, I shewe the ende therof: and I tell before, thynges that are not yet come to passe. With one worde is my deuyce accōplished, & fulfilleth all my pleasure. * I call a byrde out of the east, and all that I take in hōde, out of farre countrees. As soone as I cōmaunde, I bringe it hither: as soone as I thynke to deuyse a thinge, I do it. Exo.25.f

Heare me, o ye that are of an hie stomack, but farre from righteousnesse. I shal bringe forth my righteousnesse, It is not farre, and my health shall not tarie longe awaye. I wil laye health in Siō, & gyue Israel my glory.

The.xlvii. Chapter.

But as for the (O doughter, thou A virgin Babilon) thou shalt syt in the dust. Thou shalt syt vpon the grounde, & not in a trone (o thou mayde of Chaldea). Thou shalt no more be called tender, and pleasaūt. Thou shalt bringe forthe the querne, and grynde meel, put downe thy stomacher, make bare thy knees, and shalt wayde thorow the waterpuers. * Thy shame shalbe discouered, Esa.16.b. Dan.3.a. and thy preuitties shalbe sene. For I will auenge me of the, and no man shall let me: sayeth oure redemer, whiche is called the LORDE of hoostes, the holy one of Israell.

Syt styll, holde thy tunge/ and get the in to some darcke corner (O doughter Caldea) for thou shalt no more be called lady of kyngdomes. I was so wroth with my people/ that I punyshed myne enheritaunce/ & gaue them into thy power. * Neuertheles/
Dan.10.11.b. Jere.50.b thou shewdest them no mercy/ but euen the very aged men of thē/ dydest thou oppresse ryght sore with thy yock/ and thou thoughtest thus: I shalbe lady for euer. And beside all that, thou hast not regarded these thinges, nether cast, what shulde come after.

B Heare now therfore, thou wylfull, that syttest so careles, and speakest thus in thyne herte: * I am alone, and without me is ther

Dani.5.c of an eye. * Namely, wydowhead, and desolacion. They shall myghtely fall vpon the, for the multitude of thy witches, and for the great heape of thy conurers. For thou hast conforted thy self in thy disceatfulnes, and Esa.29.c hast sayde: * No mā seith me. Thyne owne wysdome & cōnynge haue disceaued the. In that thou hast sayde: I am alone, & without me there is none. Therfore shall trouble com vpō ỹ, & thou shalt not know frō whēce it shall aryse. Myschefe shall fall vpon the, which thou shalt not be able to put of. A sodane misery shal come vpon ỹ, or euer thou be aware.

C Now go to thy conurers, and to the multitude of thy witches, (whome thou hast ben acquaynted withall from thy youth) yf they maye helpe the/ or strengthen the. Thou haste hytherto had manye counceles of them, so let the heauengasers and the beholders of starres, come on now and deliuer the: yee and let them shewe, whē these new thynges shal come vpon the. Beholde, they shalbe lyke strawe, which yf it be kynded with fyre, no man maye rydde it for the violence of the flamme. And yet it geueth no synders to warme a man by, ner cleare fyre to syt by. Euen so shall they be vnto the, whō thou hast vsed & occupied frō thy youth. Euery one shal shew ỹ his erroneous way, yet shall none of them defende the.

The.xlviii. Chapter.

HEare this, O thou house of Jacob: ye ỹ are called by the name of Israel, & are come out of the stock with Juda: which sweare by the name of ỹ LORDE, and beare witnesse by ỹ God of Israell (but not with treuth & right) whiche are called * fre

How be it I knewe that thou art obstinate, & that thy neck hath an yron synewe & that thy brow is of brasse. Neuertheles I haue euer sence the begynnynge shewed the of thynges for to come, and declared them vnto the, or euer they came to passe, ỹ thou shuldest not saye: myne Idoll hath done it, my carued or cast ymage hath shewed it. Heare & consider all these thynges, whether it was ye that prophecied them: But as for me, I tolde ỹ before at the begynnyng, new and secrete thynges ỹ thou knewest not of. * And some done nowe, not of olde tyme, wherof thou neuer herdest, before they were brought to passe, that thou canst not saye: I knewe of thē. And as for the olde, they shall neuer be thought vpon, nor kept in mynde: but mẽ shalbe glad and euermore reioyse, for the thynges, that I shall do.

For why: Beholde, I shall make a ioyfull Ierusalẽ, yee I my self will reioyse with Ierusalem, & be glad with my people. * And ỹ voyce of wepinge and waylinge shall not be herde in her from thence forth. There shal neuer be chylde nor olde mã, that haue not their full dayes. But when the chylde commeth to an hundreth yeare olde, it shal dye. And yf he ỹ is an hundreth yeare of age do wronge, he shalbe cursed. * They shall buylde houses, & dwell in them: they shall plante vynyardes, and eate the frute of them. They shall not buylde, and another possesse: they shal not plãte, and another eate. * But the life of my people shalbe like a tree, and so shal the worke of their hondes.

My chosen shal lyue longe, they shal not labour in vayne, nor beget with trouble: for they are the hye blessed sede of the LORDE, & their frutes with them. Euen hym that is of a lowly troubled spyrete, and stondeth in awe of my wordes. For who so slayeth an ore for me doth me so greate dishonoure, as he that kylleth a man. He ỹ kylleth a shepe for me, choketh a dogge. He that bryngeth me meatoffrinｇes, offreth swynes bloude: Who so maketh me a memoriall of Incense, prayseth ỹ thing that is vnright. yet take they suche wayes in honde, and their soule deliteth in these abhominacions. Esa.57.f. Esa.61.a. 1 Sal.30.h

* Therfore will I also haue pleasure in laughinge them to scorne, and the thynge that they feare, will I bringe vpon thẽ. * For whe I called, no man gaue answere: when I spake, they wolde not heare: but dyd wickednesse before myne eyes, and chose the thynges that displease me. Heare the worde of God all ye, that feare the thyng which he speaketh youre brethren that hate you, and caste you out for my names sake, saye: Let the LORDE magnifie hiself, that we maye se youre glad nesse: and yet they shalbe confounded. Job.6.b. Pro.1.b. Esa.65.a B

* For as touchinge the citie and the tẽple, I heare the voyce of the LORDE, that will rewarde, and recompence his enemie lyke as when a wyfe bringeth forth a man chylde, or euer she suffre the payne of the byrth and anguysh of the trauayle. Who euer herde or sawe suche thynges? doth the grounde beare in one daye? or are the people borne all at once, as Sion beareth hys sonnes? For thus sayeth the LORD: Am I he that maketh other to beare, and beare not my self? * Am not I he that beareth, and maketh bareu? sayeth thy God. Reioyse with Ierusalem, and be glad with her, all ye that loue her. * Be ioyfull with her, all ye that mourned for her. For ye shall sucke comforte out of hir breastes and be latisfied. ye shal taist, and haue delite in the plenteousnesse of hir power. For thus sayeth the LORDE: beholde, I will let peace in to her, lyke a water floude, & the might of the Heithen lyke a flowinge streame. Then shall ye sucke, ye shall be borne vpõ hir sydes and be ioyfull vpon hir knees. For lyke as a chylde is comforted of hys mother, so shall I comforte you, and ye shalbe comforted in Ierusalem. And when ye se thys, youre harte shall reioyse * and youre bones shall florisshe lyke an herbe. Gen.16.a. 29.f. 30.a. Mat.5.b. C Psa.7.b. Esa.37.c.

Thus shall the honde of the LORDE be knowne amonge hys seruaunntes, and hys indignacion amoge hys enemies. For beholde the LORDE shal come with fyre, and his cha-ret shal be lyke a whyrlwynde, that he maye recompence his vengeaunce in hys wrath, and hys indignacion with the flame of fyre. For the LORDE shal iudge all flesh with the fyre and with his swerde, and there shalbe a greate nombre slayne of the LORDE. Such as haue made them selues holy and cleane in the gardens, and those that haue eaten swyne flesh, myce, and other abhominacions, shalbe take awaye together, sayeth the LORDE. For I will come to gather all people & tonges, with their workes & ymaginacions: they shall come, and se my glory. Unto them shall I geue a token, and sende certayne of them (that be delyuered) amonge the Gentiles: in to Celicia, Africa & Lidia (where men can handle bowes) in to Italie also and Greke londe.

Esa. 44. a 52. a. 60. a. 65. a.

*The Iles farre of, that haue not herde speake of me, & haue not sene my glory shall preach my prayse amonge the Gentiles, and shall bringe all youre brethren for an offringe vnto the LORDE, out of all people, vpon horses, charettes and horse litters, vpon mules and cartes to Jerusalem my holy hyll (sayeth the LORDE): lyke as the chyldren of Israel bringe the offringe in cleane vessels to the house of the LORDE.

And I shall take out certayne of them for to be prestes and leuytes, sayeth the LORDE. For lyke as the new heauen & the newe earth whiche I will make, shalbe stable stablished by me: (sayeth the LORDE): So shall youre sede and youre name contynue, and there shalbe a new Moone for the other, and a new sabbath for the other and all flesh shall come to worshipe before me, (sayeth the LORDE) And they shall go forth, and loke vppon the carcases of them that haue transgressed agaynst me For their worme shall not dye, neither shall their fyre be quenched, and all fleshe shall abhorre them.

The.ii.Chapter.

MOreouer, the worde of the LORD came vnto me thus: Go thy

DE: I remembre the for the kyndnesse of thy youth, and because of thy stedfast loue: in that thou folowdest me thorow the wildernesse, in an vntilled londe. Then Is= rael was halowed vnto the LORDE, and was hys first frutes. * All they that deuoure Jer.50.a Israel, offended: misfortune fell vpon them, xlvi.
sayeth the LORDE. Heare therfore the worde of the LORD, O thou house of Jacob, and all the generacion of the house of Israel. Thus sayeth the LORDE vnto you:

What vnfaythfulnesse founde youre fa= thers in me, that they went so farre away
fro me, fallinge to lightnesse, and beyng le vayne? They thought not in their hartes:
Where haue we left the LORDE, ỹ brought vs out of the londe of Egipte: * ỹ led vs thor Deut.8.a row the wyldernesse, thorowe a desert and rough londe, thorow a drye and a deadly lon
de, yee a londe that no man had gone thorow
and wherein no man had dwelt. * And when Deut.8.a I had brought you in to a pleasaũt wel buyl
ded londe, that ye might enioye the frutes &
all the commodities of the same: ye went forth
and defyled my londe, & brought myne her=
tage to abhominacion.

The prestes thé selues saide not once: whe re is ỳ LORDE? * They ỳ haue ỳ lawe in their handes, knowe me not: The shepherdes offende agaynst me. The prophetes do seruy= se vnto Baal, & folowe such thinges as shall bringe them no profit.

Wherfore I am constrayned (sayeth the LORDE) to make my complaynte vpon you and vpon youre childzen. Go in to the Iles of Cethim, & loke wel: sende vnto Cedar, ta= ke diligent hede: & se, whether such thinges be done there, whether the Gétiles them sel= ues deale so falsly & vntruly with their god= des* (which yet are no goddes i dede.) But my people hath geuen ouer their hie honou= r, for a thinge that maye not helpe them.

Be astonied (o ye heauens) be afrayde, & abashed at such a thinge, saieth ỳ LORDE. For my people hath done two euels. They haue forsakē me the * well of the water of lyf, and digged them pittes, yee vile and bro= ken pittes, that holde no water* Is Israel a bonde seruaunt, or one of the housholde? Why is he thē so spoyled? Why do they roa= re and crie then vpon him, as a lyon? They haue made his lōde wayst, * his cities are so brent vp, that there is no man dwellinge in them. yee the childzen of Noph and Tapha nes haue defyled thy necke.

* Cōmeth not this vnto ỳ, because thou hast forsaken the LORDE thy God, euer sen= ne he led the by ỳ waye? And what hast thou now to do in the strete of Egipte? to drinke foule water? Ether, what makest thou in ỳ waye to Assiria? to dyke water of ỳ floude? Thyne owne wickednesse shal reprooue the and thy turnynge awaye shal cōdemne the: that thou mayest knowe and vnderstonde, how euel and hurtfull a thinge it is, ỳ thou hast forsaken the LORDE thy God, and not feared him, saieth ỳ LORDE God of hoostes.

* I haue euer broken thy yocke of olde, and burstē thy bondes: yet saiest thou, & I wil nomore serue, but (like an harlot) thou run= nest aboute vpon all hie hilles, & amonge all grene trees: where as I planted the out al noble grapes and good rotes. * How art thou turned then in to a bytter, vnfruitfull, & straunge grape? yee & that so sore, ỳ though thou washest the with Nitrus, and makest thicke to sauoure with that swete smellinge herbe Borith: yet i my sight thou art stay= ned with thy wickednesse, saieth the LORDE thy God.

Saye not now: I am not vnclene, and I haue not folowed the goddes. * Loke vpon thyne owne wayes in the woodes, valleis & dēnes: so shalt thou knowe, what thou hast done. Thou art like a swift Dromedary, that goeth easely his waye: and thy wanton nes is like a wilde Asse, that vseth the wil= dernesse, and that snoffeth and bloweth at his wil. Who can tame the? All they that se= ke the, shal not faple, but fynde the in thyne owne vnclennes. Thou kepest thy fote frō nakednes, and thy throte from thyrste, and thinkest thus in thy self: truly, I wil take no sorowe, I wil loue the straūge goddes, and hange vpon them,

Like as a theefe that is taken with the de= de, cōmeth to shame, euen so is the house of Israel come to confusion: the comon people their kinges and rulers, their prestes & pro= phetes. * For they saye to a stock: thou art my father, and to a stone: thou hast begotē me, * yee they haue turned their back vpon me, & not their face. & But in ỳ tyme of their trouble, when they saye: stonde vp, and hel= pe vs, I shal answere thē: Where are now thy goddes, ỳ thou hast made the? vpō them stonde vp, and helpe the i the tyme of nede? * For loke how many cities thou hast (o Juda) so many goddes hast thou also.

Wherfore thē wil ye go to lawe with me, seinge ye all are synners agaynst me, saieth the LORDE? It is but lost labour, that I smyte youre childzē, for they receaue not my correctiō. * youre owne swearde destroyeth youre prophetes, like a deuouringe lyon. ỳ ye be the people of the LORDE, then herkē vn to his worde: Am I thē become a wildernes= se vnto the people of Israel? or a londe that hath no light? Wherfore saieth my people thē: we are fallen of, and we wil come no mo re vnto the? Doth a mayden forget hir rayl= mēt, or a bryde hir stomacher? And doth my people forget me so longe? Why boastest thou thy wayes so hyhe (to optayne fauoure there thorow) when thou hast yet stayned them with blasphemies?

Upon thy wynges is founde * the bloude of poore and innocent people, and that not in corners & holes only, but openly in all the= se places. yet darrest thou saye: I am gilt= lesse: Truly, his wrath can not come vpō me. Beholde, I wil reason with ỳ, because thou darrest saye: I haue not offended. O how e= uel wil it be for the, to abyde it, when it shal be knowne, how oft thou hast gone dar war de? For thou shalt be confounded, as wel of Egipte, as of the Assirians: yee thou shalt go thy waye frō them, & smyte thyne hōdes together vpon thy heade. Because the LOR DE shal bringe that confidence and hope of sessed thyne hart: Ah my bely, ah my bely, (shalt thou crie) how is my hart so sore? my hart paunteth within me, I can not be still,

for I haue herde the crienge of the trumpe-
tes, and peales of warre.

They crie murthur vpon murthur, ỹ whō-

but to do well, they haue no wisdome. I haue loked vpon the earth, and se, it is waste and voyde. I loked towarde heauen, and it had no shyne.

I beheilde the mountaynes, and they trem
bled, & all the hylles were in a feare. I loked aboute me, and there was no body, and all ỹ byrdes of the ayre were awaye. I marked wel, and the plowed felde was become waist, yee all their cities were broken downe at the presence of the LORDE, and indignacion
of his wrath.

For thus hath the LORDE sayde: The G
whole londe shalbe desolate, yet will I not then haue done. And therfore let the earth
mourne, and let the heauen be so sory aboue:
for the thynge that I haue purposed, and taken vpon me to do, shall not repente me, and I will not go from it. The whole londe shall ake, for the noyse of the horsmen and bow-men: they shall runne in to dennes in to woo des, and clymme vpō the stony rockes. All the cities shalbe voyde, and no man dwellin

Herof cõmeth their greate substaũce and riches, herof are they fat and welthy, and are runne a praye fro me with shamefull blasphemies * They ministre not the lawe, they make no ende of the fatherlesses cause, they iudge not the poore accordinge to equite.

* Shulde I not punysh these thinges, sayeth the LORDE? Shulde I not be avenged of al soch people, as these be? Horrible and greuous thinges are done in the londe.

The prophetes teach falsely, and the preistes folowe them, & my people hath pleasure therin. What will come therof at ỹ last?

The.vi.Chapter.

FLee out of Jerusalem, ye stroge children of Beniamin: blowe vp the trompettes ye * Tecuites, set vp a token vnto Bethacarem, for a plage and a greate misery apperith out from the North.

I will lyken the doughter Sion to a fayre and tendre woman, and to her shall come the shepherdes with their flockes. Their tentes shal they pitch rounde aboute her, & euerye one shal fede with his honde. Make batel agaynst her (shal they saye:) Arise let vs go vp, while it is yet daye.

Alas, the daye goeth awaye, & the night shadowes fall downe: Arise, let vs go vp by night, & destroye hir stroge holdes, for thus hath the LORDE of hoostes commaunded.

Hew downe hir trees, and set vp bulwokes agaynst Jerusalẽ. This is the cite that must be punished, for i her is all maliciousnes. Like as a cõdyte aboundeth in water, euen so aboundeth this cite in wickednes. Robbery and vnrighteousnesse is herde in her, sorow & woundes are euer there in my sight. Amende the (o Jerusalem) lest I with drawe my herte from the, and make the desolate: & thy londe also, ỹ noman dwell in it. For thus saieth ỹ LORDE of hoostes: The residue of Israel shalbe gathered, as the remnaynt of grapes.

And therfore turne thine honde agayne in to the basket, lyke the grape gatherer. But vnto whom shal I speake, whom shal I warne, ỹ he maye take hede? * Their eares are so vncircumcised, that they maye not heare. 9.D.

Behold * they take the worde of God but for a scorne, and haue no lust therto. And therfore I am so full of thy indignacion (o LORDE) ỹ I maye suffre no longer. Shed out thy wrath vpon the children that are without, and vpon all youge men. yee the man must be taken prisoner with the wife, and the aged with the crepel. Their houses with their lõdes and wives shalbe turned vnto straungers, whe I stretche out myne hõde vpon ỹ inhabitours of this londe, saieth the LORDE * For from ỹ leest vnto ỹ most they hange all vpon covetousnes: and from the prophet vnto the preist, they go all aboute with falsede and lyes.

But how shulde they be ashamed, whe they knowe nothinge, neither of shame nor good nurture? * And ther fore they shal fall amonge the slayne, and in the houre when I shall visit them, they shalbe brought downe, saieth the LORDE.

The.vii.Chapter.

A THese are the wordes, that God spake vnto Jeremy: * Stonde Jerr.17.b. and. 26.a. vnder ỹ gates of the LORDES house, and crie out these wordes there, with a loude voyce, and saye: Heare the worde of the LORDE, all ye of Juda, that go in at this dore, to honoure the LORDE. Thus sayeth the LORDE of Esa.1.f. Jerr.29.c. hoostes the God of Israell. * Amende your wayes and your councels, and I wyll let you dwell in this place. Trust not in falsly enge wordes, sayeng: here is the temple of the LORDE, here is ỹ temple of the LORD, here is the temple of the LORDE.

Exo.22.f. zach.8.c Leui.19.g. Job.24.a. * For yf ye wyll amende your wayes & councels, yf ye wyll iudge right betwirte a man and his neighboure: yf ye wyll not oppresse the straunger, the fatherles and the wyddowe: yf ye wyll not shedde innocent bloude in this place: yf ye wyll not cleue vnto straunge goddes to your owne destruction: then wyll I let you dwell in this place, yee in the londe that I gaue afore tyme vnto your fathers for euer. But take hede, ye trust in councels, that begyle you and do you no good. For when ye haue stollen, murthured, committed aduoutrie, and periury: Whē ye haue offred vnto Baall, folowyng straung and vnknowne goddes: Then come ye, and stonde before me in 3.Reg.8.a this house (* which hath my name geuen vnto it) and saye: Tush, we are absolued quyte, though we haue done all these abhominacions.

* What? thynke you this house that beareth my name, is a denne of theues? & And these thynges are not done prively, but before myne eyes, sayeth the LORDE. Go to my place in Silo, * where vnto I gaue my name afore tyme, and loke well, * what I dyd to the same place, for the wickednes of my people of Israell. And now, though ye haue done all these dedes (sayeth the LORD) and I my selfe rose vp euer bytymes to warne you and to comon with you: yet wold ye not heare me: * I called, ye wolde not answere. * And therfore euen as I haue done vnto Silo: so wyll I do to this house, ỹ my name is geuen vnto, (and that ye putte youre trust in) yee vnto the place ỹ I haue geuen to you and your fathers. And I shal thrust you out of my syght, * as I haue cast out al your brethrē ỹ holl sede of Ephraim. * Therfore shalt thou not praye for this people, thou shalt nether geue thākes, nor bid prayer for them: thou shalt make no intercession to me for them: for in no wyse wyll I heare the. Seist thou not what they do in the cities of Juda, and without Jerusalē? * The chyldren gather stycken, the fathers kyndle the fyre, the mothers kneade the dowe, to bake cakes for the quene of heauē. They poure out drynkoffrynges vnto straunge goddes, to prouoke me vnto wrath: how beit they hurte not me (sayeth ỹ LORD) but rather confounde, and shame themselues.

And therfore thus sayeth ỹ LORDE God: beholde, my wrathe and my indignacion shall be poured out vpon this place, vpon men and catell, vpon the trees in the felde and all frute of the londe, and it shall burne so, that no man maye quench it.

Thus sayeth the LORDE of hoostes, the God of Israell: * ye heape vp your burntoffrynges with youre sacrifices, and eate the flesh. * But when I brought youre fathers out of Egipte, I spake no worde vnto them of burntoffringes and sacrifices: but this I commaunded them, sayeng: * herken and obeye my voyce, and I shall be youre God, and ye shall be my people: & that ye walke in all the wayes, which I haue cōmaūded you, that ye may prosper. * But they were not obedient, they inclined not their eares there vnto, but went after their owne ymaginacions and after the motions of their owne wicked harte, and so turned themselues awaye, and conuerted not vnto me. And this haue they done, from the tyme that your fathers came out of Egipt vnto this daye.

Jer.6.a. *Neuertheles, I sent vnto them my seruauntes all the prophetes: I rose vp early & sent them worde, yet wolde they not herken, nor ofire me their eares, but were obstinate, & worse then their fathers.

And thou shalt now speake all these wor-
des vnto them, but they shall not heare the: thou shalt crie vpon them, but they shall not answere the. Therfore shalt thou saye vnto them: this is the people, that nether heareth the voyce of the LORDE their God, nor receaueth his correction. *Faithfulnes & treuth is clene rooted out of their mouth.

*Wherfore cut of thine heere, and cast it awaye, take vp a complaynte in the whole londe: for the LORDE shall cast awaye, and forsake the people, for he is displeased withall.

For the chyldren of Juda haue doue euell in my sight, saieth the LORDE. * They haue set vp their abhominacions, in the house that hath my name, and haue defyled it. They haue also buylded an aulter *at Tophet, which is in the valley of the chyldren of Emmō: that they might burne their sonnes and doughters, which I neuer commaūded them, nether came it euer in my thought. And therfore behold, the dayes shall come (sayeth the LORDE) that it shall nomore be called Tophet, or the valley of the chyldren of Ennon, but the valley of the slayne: * for in Tophet they shal be buried, because they shall els haue no rowme *per the dead bodyes of this people shall be eaten vp of the fowles of the ayre & wilde beastes of the earth, & no man shal fraye them awaye. * And as for the voyce of myrth & gladnesse of the cities of Juda, & Jerusalem, the voyce of the bydegrome and of the bryde, I will make them ceasse, for the londe shall be desolate.

The.viij. Chapter.

AT the same tyme, saieth the LORDE, the bones of the kynges of Juda, the bones of his princes, the bones of the prestes and prophetes, yee and the bones of the citizens of Jerusalē, shalbe brought out of their graues and layed agaynst the * Sonne, the Moone and all the heauēly hooste: whome they loued, whome they serued, whome they came after, whome they sought & worshipped. They shall nether be gathered together nor buryed, but shall lye vpon the earth, to their shame and despisinge.

And all they that remayne of this wicked generacion * shall desyre rather to dye then to lyue: where so euer they remayne, & where as I scatre them, sayeth the LORDE of hoostes. This shalt thou saye vnto them also: Thus sayeth the LORDE: Do men fall so, that they aryse not vp agayne? And turne they so farre awaye, that they neuer conuerte? Wherfore then is this people and Jerusalem gone so farre backe, that they turne not again? They are euer the longer the more obstinate, and will not be conuerted.

For I haue loked, & considered: * but there is no mā, that speaketh a good worde: there is no man, that taketh repentaunce for his synne, that will so moch as saye: wherfore haue I done this? But euery man (as soone as he is turned backe) runneth forth still, like a wilde horse in a batayll. The Storke knoweth his apoynted tyme, the Turtledoue, the Swalow and the Crane, cōsidre the tyme of their trauayle: * but my people will not knowe the tyme of the punyshment of the LORD. How darre ye saye then: we are wise, we haue the lawe of the LORDE amonge vs?

Behalde, the diseatfull penne of the scribes setteth forth lies: therfore shall the wyse be confounded, they shalbe afrayed and taken: for lo, * they haue cast oute the worde of the LORDE: what wysdome can then be amonge them? Wherfore, I will geue their wyues vnto aleauntes, and their feldes to destroyers.

Deut.4.a. Esa.18.d

For from the lowest vnto the hyest, they folowe all shamefull lucre: and from the prophet vnto the preest, they deale all with lies. * Neuertheles, they heale the hurte of my people with swete wordes, sayenge: peace, peace, where there is no peace at all.

Jer.6.d Esa.56.c Ezech.13.g

Eye for shame, how abhominable thinges do they? and yet thei be not ashamed, yee they knowe of no shame.

*Wherfore in the tyme of their visitacion they shall fall amonge the dead bodyes, sayeth the LORDE.

Jer.7.h

Moreouer I will gather them in (sayeth the LORDE) so that there shal not be one grape vpon the vyne, nether one fygge vpon the fygge tree, and the leaues shalbe pluckt of.

Then will I cause them to departe, and saye: why prolonge we the tyme? Let vs gather oure selues together, & go in to the stronge cittie, there shall we be in rest: for the LORDE oure God hath put vs to sylence, and geuen vs water myrte with gall, to drynke, because we haue synned agaynst hym.

*We loked for peace, and we fayre not the better: we wayted for the tyme of health, and lo, here is nothinge but trouble.

The haruest is gone, ꝑ Sōmer hath an en-

The.x. Chapter.

HEare the worde of the LORD, ý he speaketh vnto the, o thou house of Jsrael: Thus saieth ý LORD: * ye shal not lerne after the maner of the Heithē, and ye shal not be afrayed for the tokens of heauen for the heithen are afrayed of such: for all ý customes and lawes of the Gentiles are no thinge, but vanite. * They hewe downe a tre in the wood with the hondes of the workeman, & fashion it with the axe: they couer it ouer with golde or syluer, they fasten it with nayles & hammers, that it moue not. Jt stōdeth as stiff as the palme tre, it can neither speake nor go, but must be borne. * Be not ye afrayed of such, for they cā do neither good nor euel. But there is none like vnto the (o LORDE) * thou art greate, and greate is ý name of thy power. Who wolde not feare the ry, what kinge of the Gētiles wolde not obeye the?

For amonge all the wysemen of the Gentiles, and in all their kingdomes, there is none, that maye be lickened vnto ý. They are altogether vnlearned & vnwise, All their cunynge is but vanite: namely, wood, syluer, which is brought out of Tharsis, & beate to plates: & golde frō. * Ophir, a worke ý is made with the honde of the craftesman & the caster, clothed with yalow sylck & scarlet: euen so is the worke of their wisemen altogether. But the LORD is a true God, a lyuinge God, & an euerlastinge kinge. * ý he wroth, the earth shaketh: all the Gentiles maye not abyde his indignacion.

So for their goddes, it maye wel be sayde of them: they are goddes, that made neither heuē nor earth: therfore shal they perish frō the earth, and from all thinges vnder heauē But (as for ours God) he * made the earth

My children are gone fro me, and can no where be founde. Now haue I none to spred out my tente, or to set vp my hangiges. For the hyrdmen haue done foolishly, ý they haue not sought the LORDE. Therfore haue they dealt vnwisely with their catell, & all are scatred abrode. Beholde, the noyse is harde at honde, and greate seduicion out of ý north: to make the cities of Juda a wildernesse, and a dwellinge place for Dragons. * Now I knowe (o LORD) that it is not in Pro.20.f

The.xi. Chapter.

THis is another Sermō, which I the LORDE commaunded Jeremy for to preach, sayenge:

Heare ý wordes of the couenaunt, & speake vnto all Juda, & to all them ý dwel at Jerusalem, And saye thou vnto the: Thus saieth ý LORDE God

deut.27.c. and.28.b. Gal.3.b. of Israel:* Cursed be euery one, that is not obedient vnto the wordes of thys couenaũt: which I commaunded vnto youre fathers, what tyme as I brought them out of Egipte Exo.19.a. from the yron fornace, sayenge:* Be obedient vnto my voyce, and do accordinge to all ỹ I cõmaunde you: so shall ye be my people, & I will be youre God, & wil kepe my promyse Gen.15.c. 26.a.28.c. *that I haue sworne vnto your fathers: Namely, that I wolde geue them a londe which floweth with mylke and hony, as ye se, it is come to passe vnto thys daye.

Then answered I, and sayde: Amen. It is euen so LORDE, as thou sayest. Thẽ the LORDE sayde vnto me agayne: Preach this in ỹ cities of Juda and rounde aboute Jerusalem, and saye: Heare the wordes off thys cõuenaunt, that ye maye kepe them. For I haue diligẽtly exhorted youre fathers, euer sence the tyme that I brought them out off the londe of Egipte, vnto thys daye. I gaue thẽ B warnynge by tymes, sayenge: herken vnto Jere.13.b. my voyce:* Neuertheles, they wolde not obeye me, nor enclyne theyr eares vnto me, but folowed the wicked ymaginacions of their owne hartes. And therfore haue I accused them as transgressours of all the wordes of thys conuenaunt, that I gaue them to kepe, which they (notwithstandinge) haue not kepte.

And the LORDE sayde vnto me, It is fouׅde out, that whole Israel and all the cittisens of Jerusalem are gone backe. They haue turned them selues to the blasphemies of theyr forefathers, whiche had no lust to heare my worde. Euen likewyse haue these also folowed straunge goddes, and worshipped them. The house of Israel and Juda haue broken my couenaunt, which I made with theyr fathers.

Therfore thus sayeth the LORDE: Beholde, I will sende a plage amonge you, whiche zach.7.b. ye shall not be able to escape* and though ye ¶ crie vnto me, I will not heare you. Thẽ shal the townes of Juda and the cittisens of Jeru Deu.32.c. salem go, and call vpon* their goddes, vnto whome they made their oblacions: but they are not able to helpe them in tyme of theyr Jere.2.b. trouble.* For as many cities as thou hast (o Juda) so many goddes hast thou also: And loke how many stretes there be in the (o Jerusalem) so many shamefull aulters haue ye C set vp, to offre vpon them vnto Baal.* But Jere.7.b. Jer.c.15.a. prayse not thou for thys people, byd nether prayse, nor prayer for them: for though they crie vnto me in their trouble, yet will I not heare them.

O thou beloued, why doest thou so thynke full greate blasphemies in my house, & that as though* that holy flesh might abolesshe the. Jere.11.b. specially when thou hast made thy boost of thy wickednes. The LORD called thee a gre ne olyue tree, a fayre one, a frutefull tree, a Jere.11.a. goodly one: but now that there is a contrary reporte of the abrode, he will burne the by, & destroye thy braunches. For the LORDE of hooستes that plãted the, hath deuised a plage for the (o thou house of Israel & Juda) for ỹ euell that ye haue done, to prouoke hym to wrath, in that ye byd seruyce vnto Baal.

This (o LORDE) haue I lerned of the, I D vnderstonde it, for thou hast shewed me their ymaginacions.* But I (as a meke lambe) Esa.53.a was caried awaye to be slayne: not knowynge, that they had deuysed such a councel agaynst me, sayẽge:* We will destroye his tree Jere.18.a with wood, and dryue him out of the lãde of the lyuynge, that his name shall neuer be thought vpon. Therfore* I will beleue the not Jere.20.a (o LORDE of hooستes) thou rightuous iudge, 17.b thou that tryest the reynes and the harte: let me se the auenged of them, for vnto the haue I committed my cause. The LORDE therfore spake thus of the cytezens of Anathot, that sought to slaye me, sayẽge:* Preach Esa.48.a not vnto vs in the name of the LORDE, yͤ is Jere.11.b thou shalt dye of oure hondes. Thus (I saye) spake the LORDE of hooستes. Beholde, I viset you. youre yonge men shal perish with the swearde, your sonnes & your doughters shall vtterly dye of hunger, so that none shal remayne. For vpon the cittezyns of Anathot will I bringe a plage, and the yeare of their visitacion.

The.xii.Chapter.

LORDE, thou art more rightuous, then that I shulde dispute with the: Neuertheles, let me talke with the in thinges reasonable.* Howe happeneth it, that Jere.21.a the waye of the vngodly is so prosperous? and that it goeth so well with them, which (without ony shame) offende and lyue in wickednesse? Thou plantest them, they take rote, they growe, & bringe forth frute. They boaste moche of the, yet doest thou not punysh them. But thou LORDE (to whome I am well knowen) thou that hast sene, and proued my herte, Jere.11.a *take them awaye, like as a flocke is caried to the slaughter house, and appointe them for the daye of slaughtinge.

How longe shall the lõde mourne, & all the herbes of the felde perish, for ỹ wickednes of them that dwell therin.

The catell and the byrdes are gone, yet saye they: *tusly, God will not destroye vs vtterly.

Seynge thou art weery in runninge with the fote men, how wilt thou then runne with horses? In a peaceable sure londe thou canst not be safe, but how wilt thou do in the furious pryde of Jordane? For thy brethren and thy kynred haue altogether dispised the and cried out vpon ỳ in thine absence. * Beleue them not, though they speake fayre wordes to the. Is for me (saye I) I haue forsaken myne owne dwellinge place, and left myne heretage. Myne dyle allo that I loue so wel, haue I geue in to the hodes of myne enemies * Myne heretage is become vnto me, as a lyon in the wood. It cried out vpon me, therfore haue I forsaken it. Myne heretage is vnto me, as a speckled byrde, a byrde of dyuerse colours vpon it. Go hence, and gather all the beastes of the felde together, that they maye come and eate it vp.

* Dyuerse heardmen haue broken downe my vynyarde, & trode vpon my portiõ. Of my pleasaunt portion, they haue made a wildernes & desserte. They haue layed it waist: and now that it is waist, it sigheth vnto me, yer the whole londe lieth waist, and no mã regardeth it. The distroyers come ouer the herth euery waye, for the swearde of ỳ LORDE shall consume from the one ende of ỳ londe to the other, and no fleih shall haue rest. They shall sowe wheat, and reape thornes. They shal take heretage in possession, but it shall do them no good. And ye shalbe confounded of youre owne wynnynges, because of the great wrath of the LORDE.

C Thus sayeth the LORDE vpon all myne euell neighbours, that laye hõde on myne heritage, whiche I haue geuen my people of Israel: Beholde, I will plucke them (namely Israel) out of their londe, and put out the house of Juda from amonge thẽ. * And whẽ I haue rooted thẽ out, I wilbe atone with them agayne, & wil haue mercy vpon them: * & bringe thẽ agayn, euery mã to his owne heritage, & in to his londe. And yf they (namely that trouble my people) wil lerne ỳ wayes of thẽ, to sweare by my name: The LORDE liueth (like as they lerned my people to sweare by Baal) then shall they be rekened amõge my people * But if they wil not obeye then will I rote out the same folke, and destroye them, sayeth the LORDE.

The .xiii. Chapter.

MOreouer, thus sayed the LORDE vnto me: go thy waye & get the a lynnen brethe, and gyrde it aboute thy loynes, and let it not be wet. Then I got me a brech, accordinge to the commaundemente of the LORDE, and put it aboute my loynes. After thys, the LORDE spake vnto me agayne: Take the brethe that thou hast prepared & put about the, and gett the vp, and go vnto Euphrates, and hyde it in a hole of the rocke. So went I, and hydde it, as the LORDE commaunded me. And it happened long after this, that the LORDE spake vnto me: Vp and get the to Euphrates, and fet the brethe from thence, which I commaunded the to hyde there. Then went I to Euphrates, and digged vp, and toke the brech from the place where I had hyd it: and beholde, the brech was corrupte, so that it was profytable for nothinge.

Then sayde the LORDE vnto me: Thus B sayeth the LORDE: Euen so will I corruppe the pryde of Juda, and the hye mynde of Jerusalem. This people is a wicked people, * they will not heare my worde, they folowe Jere. 7. ỳ wicked ymaginatiõs of their owne hart, & 11. b. 18. C. hange vpon straũge goddes, thẽ haue they 19. C. serued & worshipped: and therfore they shalbe as this brech, that serueth for nothinge. For as strately as a brech lieth vpon a mãs loynes, so strately dyd I brynde ỳ whole house of Israel, and the whole house of Juda vnto me, sayeth the LORDE *: that they might Deut. 4. C. be my people: ỳ they might haue a glorious 26. D name: ỳ they might be in honoure: but they Jere 13. D wolde not obeye me. Therfore laye this ryddle before them, and saye: Thus sayeth the LORD God of Israel: euery pot shal be fylled with wyne. And they shall saye: thynkest thou we knowe not, ỳ euery pot shal be fylled with wyne? Then shalt thou saye vnto them: Thus sayeth the LORDE: Beholde, I C shall fyll all the inhabitours of this londe with dronckenes, the kinges that sytt vpõ Dauids stole, the prestes and prophetes, with all that dwell at Jerusalem. And I will shute them one agaynst another, yee ỳ fathers agaynst the sonnes, sayeth the LORDE.

I will not pardõ thẽ, I will not spare thẽ nor haue pitie vpon thẽ: but destroy thẽ. Be obedient, gene eare, take no disdayne at it, for it is ỳ LORDE himself ỳ speaketh. Honour ỳ LORDE youre God herein, or he take his light fro you, & or euer your fete stõble i darknesse at ỳ hil: lest whẽ ye loke for ỳ light, he turne it i to ỳ shadow & darknes of deth. The.xv.Chapter.

Therfore I wil stretch out myne honde agaynst the, to destroye the and I will not be intreated. I wil scatre the abroade with the fanne on euery syde of the lode: I will waste my people & destroye them for they haue had no lust to turne from their owne wayes. * The Sonne shal sayle her in the cleare daye, when she shalbe confounded and farre for very heuynesse. As for those that yet ayne, I wil delyuer them vnto the swearde of their enemies, saieth the LORDE. * O mother, alas that euer thou dydest beare me, an enemie and hated of the whole londe: Though I neuer lente nor receaued vpon vsury, yet euery mā speaketh euel vpō me. And the LORDE answered me: Lede not I the then vnto good? Come not I to the, when thou art in trouble: and helpe the, whē thine enemie oppresseth the? Doth one pron hurte another, or one metall the cōmeth from the north, another? * As for poure riches & treasure, I will geue them out in to a praye, not for eny money, but because of all poure synnes, that ye haue done in al poure coastes. * And I will bringe you with poure enemies in to a londe, that ye knowe not: for the fyre that is kyndled in my indignacion, shal burne you vp.

O LORDE (sayde I then): thou knowest al thinges, therfore remembre me, and viset me, delyuer me fro my persecuters: Receaue not my cause i thy lōge wrath, yet thou knowest that for thy sake I suffre rebuke. * When I had founde thy wordes, I dyd eate them vp gredely: they haue made my hart ioyfull & glad. For I call vpō thy name, o LORDE God of hoostes. I dwell not amonge the scorners, nether is my delyte therin: but I dwell only in the feate of thy honde, for thou hast filled me with bytternes. Shal my heuynes endure for euer? Are me plages then so greate, that they maye neuer be healed? Wilt thou be as a water that falleth, and can not continue? Upon these wordes, thus sayde the LORDE vnto me: yf thou wilt turne agayne, I shall set the in my seruyce: and yf thou wilt take out the thinge that is precious from the vile, thou shalt be euen as myne owne mouth. * They shal cōuerte vnto the, but turne not thou vnto them: * and so shal I make the a brasen wall agaynst this people. not obedient vnto me.

Deu.28.c * Therfore wil I cast you out of this londe
in to a londe that ye and youre fathers kno-
we not: and there shall ye serue straūge god-
C des daye and nyght, there will I shewe you Jere.23.b no fauoure. Beholde therfore (saieth ỹ LOR DE) * the dates are come, that it shal nomo re be sayed: The LORDE lyueth, which brought the children of Israel out of the lon
de of Egypte: but (it shalbe sayde) the LOR-DE lyueth that brought the children of Israel from the North, and from all londes
where I had scatred them. For I will bryn-ge them agayne in to the londe, that I gaue
vnto their fathers.

Beholde, (saieth the LORDE) * I will sen- Ezec.4.
de out many fishers to take them, and after that wil I sende out many hunters to hun-
te them out, from al mountaynes and hilles
and out of ỹ caues of stones. For myne eyes beyolde al their wayes, and they can not be hyd fro my face, neither can their wicked de-des be kepte close out of my sight. But first will I sufficiently rewarde their shameful
blasphemies and synnes, wherwith they ha ue defyled my londe: Namely, with their stinkinge Idols and abhominacions, wher
with they haue fylled myne heritage. * O Jere.14.
LORDE, my strenght, my power, and refu ge in tyme of trouble. The Gentiles shal co me vnto the from the endes of the worlde, &
saye: Verely oure fathes haue cleued vnto lies, their Idols are but bayne and vnprof
table. How can a man make those his god-des, which are not able to be goddes? And therfore, I will once teach them (saieth the LORDE) I will shewe them my honde and my power, that they maye knowe, that my name is the LORDE.

The.xvij. Chater.

YOure synne (o ye of the tryball Juda) is written in the table of youre hartes, & grauen vpon
the edges of your alters wyth
ne of yron & with an Idamant
clawe: ỹ youre children also maye thynke vpon youre aulters, woodes, thicke trees, hy
hilles, mountaynes & feldes, * Wherfore I Jere.15.
will make al youre substaunce & treasure de spoyled, for the greate synne that ye haue do ne vpon youre hie places, throwe out all ỹ coastes off youre lōde. ye shal be cast out also from the heritage, that I gaue you. And I wil subdue you vnder the heuy bondage of youre enemies, in a londe that ye know not.
For ye haue mynistred fyre to my indignaci-
on, which shal burne euermore. Thus saieth the LORDE: * Cursed be the man ỹ putteth Jere.44.a his trust in man, & that taketh flesh for his Psal.44.a arme: and he, whose harte departeth from ỹ Psal.72.a LORDE. He shall be like the heth, that groweth in the wildernes. As for the good tha ge that is for to come, he shall not se it: but dwell in a drie place of the wildernes, in a salt and vnoccupied londe. * O Blessed is Psal.1.a man, ỹ putteth his trust in the LORDE, & whose hope ỹ LORDE is himself. For * he Psal.92.a shalbe as a tre. that is planted by the wate
syde: which spreded out the rote vnto mo-
yst nesse, whom the heate can not harme,
when it commeth, but his leaues are grene.

And though there growe but litle frute because of drouth, yet is he not carefull, but he neuer leaueth of to bringe forth frute. Amõ ge all thinges lyuinge, man hath the moost
vncreatfull and vnsercheable hart.

Who shal then knowe it? * Euen I the LORDE cape out the grounde of the hart, &
serche the reynes, * and rewarde euery man accordinge to his wayes, and accordinge to ỹ frute of his councels.

* The vncreatfull maketh a nest, but bringeth forth no ponge: he commeth by riches
but not rightuously. In ỹ middest of his life must he leaue them behinde him, and at the last be foũde a very foole. But thou (o LOR DE) whose throne is moost glorious, excellent, and of moost antiquite, which dwellest
in the place of oure holyrest: Thou art the comforte of Israel. * All they that forsake
the shalbe confounded, All they that departe
from the, shalbe writen in earth, * for they haue forsaken the LORDE, the very condi
te of the waters of life.

Heale me (o LORD) and I shalbe whole:
saue thou me, and I shalbe saued, for thou art my prayse. Beholde, these men saye vnto me: Where is the worde of the LORDE?
Let it come. Where as I neuertheles ledin ge the flock in thy wayes, haue cõpelled none by violẽce. For I neuer desyred eny mãs death, this knowest thou well. My wordes alle were right before ỹ. Be not terrible vnto me (o LORD * for thou art he, in whõ I ho pe, when I am in parel. Let my persecuters be confounded, but not me: let thẽ be afray-ed, and not me. Thou shalt bringe vpon thẽ
the tyme of their plage, & shalt destroye thẽ
twyse. ℣

Agayne, thus hath the LORD sayde vn-
to me: * Go and stonde vnder the gate, whe re thorow the people and the kinges of Juda go out and in, yee vnder all the gates of Jerusalem, and saye vnto them: Heare the wordes of the LORD, ye kinges of Juda, &
all thou people of Juda, and all ye citesyns of Jerusalem, ỹ go thorow this gate: Thus
the LORDE commaundeth: * Take hede
for youre lyues, ỹ ye carie no burthen vpon
you in the Sabbath, to bringe it thorow ỹ
gates of Jerusalem: ye shall beare no bur-
then also out of youre houses in the Sabbath: ye shall do no laboure therein, but ha-lowe the Sabbath, * as I commaũded you re fathers. How be it the obeyed me not, nether herkened they vnto me: but were obstinate and stuburne, and nether obeyed me,
nor receaued my correccion.

Neuertheles, yf ye wil heare me (saieth the LORDE) and beare no burthen in to ỹ cite thorow this gate vpon the Sabbath: yf ye will halowe the Sabbath, so that ye do no
worke therein: then shal there go thorow ỹ
gates of this cyte, kiges and prynces, ỹ shal
syt vpon ỹ seate of Dauid: They shall be ca
ried vpon charettes, and ryde vpon horses,
both they and their princes: yee whole Juda & all the citesyns of Jerusalem shal go he re thorow, and this cite shall euer be the mo re and more inhabited. There shall come men also from ỹ cities of Juda, from aboute Jerusalem, and from the londe of Ben Jamin, from the playne feldes, from the moun
taynes and from the wildernesse: which shal
bringe burntoffringes, sacrifices, oblatiõs,
and incense, and offre vp thankes geuynge
in the house of ỹ LORDE. But yf ye will not be obedient vnto me, to halowe ỹ Sabbath, so ỹ ye will beare youre burnthens tho
row the gates of Jerusalem vpon ỹ Sabbath: Then shall I set fyre vpon the gates of Jerusalem, and it shall burne vp the hou ses of Jerusalem, and no man shall be able to quench it.

The. xviii. Chapter.

This is another communica-
cion, that God had with Jeremy, sayenge.

ARise, & go downe in to the potters house, and there shall I tell ỹ more of my mynde. Now whẽ
I came to the potters house. I founde him makinge his worke
vpon a whele. The vessel that the potter ma de of claye, brake amonge his hondes: So
he beganne a new, and made another vessel
accordinge to his mynde. Then sayde ỹ LOR DE thus vnto me: * Maye not I do with you, as this potter doth, O ye house of Israel, saieth the LORDE? Beholde, ye house of Israel: ye are in my honde, euen as ỹ cla-
ye in the potters honde.

* When I take in hõde to rote out, to des-
troye, or to waist awaye eny people or kigdo me: yf that people (agaynst whom I haue
thus deuysed) cõuerte from their wickednes
I immediatly, I repente of the plage, that I deuysed to bringe vpon thẽ. * Agayne: Whẽ
I take in honde, to buylde, or to plãte a peo ple or a kingdome: yf the same people do euell before me, and heare not my voyce: Im mediatly, I repente of the good, that I de-uysed to do for them.

Speake now therfore vnto all Juda,
and to them that dwell at Jerusalẽ: Thus

saieth the LORDE: Beholde, I am deuysinge a plage for you, and am takinge a thinge in honde agaynst you.

Jone.3. Jere.25.a Jere.35.c * Therfore, let euery man turne from his euell waye, take vpon you the thinge that is good, & do right. But they saye: No more

Jer.13.b. of this, * we will folowe owre owne ymaginacions, and do euery man accordinge to the wilfulnesse of his owne mynde.

B Therfore thus saieth the LORDE: Are amonge the Heithen, yt eny man hath herde such horrible thinges, as the doughter of Israel hath done. Shal not ỳ snowe (ỳ melteth vpon the stony rockes of Libanus) moysture the feldes? Or maye ỳ springes of waters be so growē awaye, that they runne nomore, geue moystnesse, nor make frutefull? But my people hath so forgotten me, ỳ they haue made sacrifice vnto vayne goddes. And whyle they folowed their owne wayes they are come out of the hie strete, & gone in to a fote waye not vsed to be troden. Where thorow they haue brought their londe in to

Jere.11.d Then sayde they: * come, let vs ymagin somthinge agaynst this Jeremy. For see this dyd euen the prestes, to whom ỳ lawe was committed: the Senatours, ỳ were the wysest: and the prophetes, which wanted not ỳ

Trem.3.f. Ps.109.a. * Therfore let their children dye of honger and let them be oppressed with the swearde Let their wyues be robbed of their children and become wydowes: let their husbōdes be slayne, let their yonge mē be kylled with the swearde in the felde. Let ỳ noyse be herde out of their houses, when the murtherer

Jere.11.d. cōmeth sodenly vpon them: * For thy haue digged a pit to take me, & layed snares for my fete. yet LORDE, thou knowest all their councell, that thy haue deuysed, to slaye me. And therfore forgeue them not their wickednes, and let not their synne be put out of thy sight: but let them be iudged before the as ỳ giltie: This shalt thou do vnto them in the tyme of thy indignacion.

The.xix. Chapter.

MOrouer, thus sayde ỳ LORDE vnto Jeremy: Go thy waye, and bye the an erthen pytcher, and bringe forth the senatours and cheke prestes in to the valley of the children of Ennon, which lieth before the porte that is made of brick, and shewe them there the wordes, that I shall tell the, & saye thus vnto thē: Heare the worde of the LORDE, ye kinges of Juda, and ye citizyns of Jerusalem: Thus saieth the LORDE of hoostes the God of Israel: * Beholde I will bringe such a plage vpon this place, that 4.R. Jere.44.c the eares of all that hare it, shall glowe. And that because they haue forsaken me, & vnhalowed this place, and haue offred in it vnto straūge goddes: whō nether they, their fathers, nor the kinges off Juda haue knowne. They haue filled this place also ỳ the bloude of innocētes, * for they haue set Jere.7.c vp an aulter vnto Baal, to burne their children for a burtoffringe vnto Baal, which I nother commaunded, nor charged them, nother thought once there vpon.

Beholde therfore * ỳ tyme cōmeth (saieth ỳ the LORDE) ỳ this place shal nomore be called Tophet, nor the valley of ỳ children of Ennō, but the valley of slaughter. For in this place wil I slaye the Senatours of Juda & Jerusalē, & kill thē downe ỳ the swearde in ỳ sight of their enemies, and of them that seke theyr lyues. And their dead carcases wil I geue to be meate for the foules of the ayr & beastes of the felde. And I wil make this cite so desolate, and despysed: * that who so Jere.49.d goeth thereby, shalbe abashed, & pfaist vpon her, because of all hir plages.

* I will fede them also ỳ the flesh of their Jere.7.d sōnes & their doughters: & yee euery one shal eate vp another in the besegynge & straytnesse, wherwith their enemies (ỳ seke their lyues) shal kepe them in. And ỳ pitcher shal thou breake in the sight of the men, ỳ shalbe

C ỳ the, and saye vnto them: Thus saieth the LORDE of hoostes: * Euē so wil I destroye Jere.7.d this people and cite: as a potter breaketh a vessel, that can not be made whole agayne. Jere.22.d

* In Tophet shal they be buried, for they shal haue none other place. Thus will I do vnto this place also, saieth the LORDE, & to thē ỳ dwell therein: yee I wil do to this cite, as vnto Tophet (For the houses of Jerusalem & the houses of the kinges of Juda are

ed innocent bloude, to do wronge and violence.* And therfore, thus sayeth the LORDE agaynst Joachim, the sonne of Josias kyng of Juda: They shall not mourne for hym (as they vse to do) alas brother: alas sister: ether shall they saye vnto hym: Alas for, alas for ỹ noble pryncе. But as an asse shall he be buried, corrupte and be cast with out the gates of Jerusalem.

Clyme vp the hill of Libanus (o thou daughter Sion) lift vp thy voyce vpon Basan, crie tō all partes: for all thy louers are destroyed. I gaue the warninge, whyle thou wast yet in prosperite, But thou saydest: I wil not heare. And thys maner hast thou vsed from thy youth, that thou woldest neuer heare my voyce. All thy brydmen shalbe dryuen with the wynde, and thy derlynges shal be caried awaye in to captiuite: Then shalt thou be brought to shame and confusion, be cause of all thy wickednes: thou that dwellest vpon Libanus and makest thy nest in ỹ Cedre trees.* O how great shall thy mourninge be, when thy sorowes come vpon the, as on a woman trauelinge with chylde?

*As truly as I lyue (sayeth the LORDE) Though Jechonias the sonne of Joachim kynge of Juda were the signet of my right honde, yet will I plucke hym of: And I will geue the in to the power of them that seke to laye the, and in to the power of them that thou feartest, in to the power of Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babilon, and in to the power of the Caldees. Moreouer, I will sende the, and thy mother that bare ỹ, in to a straūge londe, where ye were not borne, and there shall ye dye. But as for the londe that ye wil desyre to returne vnto, ye shall neuer come at it agayne, This man Jechonias shal be like an ymage robbed and torne in peces, which pleaseth no man, for all his apparell. Wherfore both he and his sede shalbe sent a waye, and cast out in to a londe, that they knowe not.

O thou earth: earth, earth: heare the worde of the LORDE: Write this man amonge the outlawes, for no prosperite shall thys man haue all his life longe. Nether shal eny of his sede be so happie, as to syt vpō ỹ seate of Dauid, and to beare rule in Juda.

The.xxiii. Chapter.

WO be* vnto the shepherdes, that destroye, and scatre my flocke, sayeth the LORDE. Wherfore, this is the commaūdement of ỹ LORDE God of Israel, vnto the shepherdes that fede my people: ye scatre & thrust out my flocke, and loke not vpon the. Therfore, now will I vyset the wickednes of youre ymaginacions, sayeth the LORDE: And will gather together the remnaunte of my flocke from all londes that I had dryue them vnto, and will bringe them agayne to their pastures, that they maye growe and increace. I will set shepherdes also ouer them which shall fede them. They shall nomore feare and drede, for there shall none of them be lost, sayeth the LORDE.* Beholde, ỹ tyme commeth (sayeth the LORDE) that I will rayse vp the righteous braunche of Dauid,* which shall beare rule, & discusse matters with wysdome, and shal set vp equyte & righteousnes agayne in the earth. Jere.33.a

In hys tyme shall Juda be saued, & Israel shall dwell without feare. And this is ỹ name that they shall call hym: euen ỹ LORDE oure righteous maker.* And therfore beholde, the tyme commeth (saieth the LORD) that it shall nomore be sayde: the LORDE lyueth, which brought the chyldren of Israell out of the londe of Egipte: But the LORDE lyueth, which brought forth, and led the sede of the house of Israel, out of the north londe and from all countrees where I had scatred them, and they shall dwell in their owne londe agayne. B Deu.33.e. §1.10.1 b *Jere.16.f

Wo vnto the prophetes, my harte breaketh in my body because of the false prophetes, all my bones shake: I am become like a droncken man (that by the reason of wyne cā take no rest) for very feare of the LORD, and of his holy wordes: Because the londe is ful of aduouterers, where thorow it is destroyed and mourneth,* and the pleasaunt pastures of the deserte are dryed vp: yee the waye that men take, is wicked, and their gouernaunce is nothinge like the holy worde of the LORD For the prophetes and the preistes them selues are poluted hypocrites, and their wickednes haue I founde in my house, sayeth the LORDE. Wherfore, their waye shall be slippery in darcknesse, where in they maye staker and fall. For I will bringe a plage vpō them, euen the yeare of their visitatiō, saieth the LORDE. I haue sene foly amōge the prophetes of Samaria, that they preached for Baal, and disceaued my people of Israel. I haue sene also amonge the prophetes of Jerusalem foul aduoutery, and presumptuous lies. They take the moost shamefull men by the honde, flatringe them, so that they can not returne from their wickednes. All these with their citesyns are vnto me, as Sodom, and as the inhabitours of Gomorra. Jere.23.d

C Therfore thus saieth the LORDE of hoostes concernynge the prophetes * Beholde, I Jere. 9.b. will fede them with wormwood, & make the drynke the water of gall. For frõthe prophetes of Jerusalem is the sickenes of hypocrisie come in to all the londe.

And therfore the LORDE of hoostes geueth you this warninge: * Heare not ỹ wordes of the prophetes, that preach vnto you,
Jere. 27.b and. 29.b and disceaue you: for they speake the meanynge of their owne harte, and not oute of Jere. 12.a. Soph. 1.c. Jere. 5.b and 14.b Deut. 29.c the mouth of the LORDE * They saye vnto them, that despyse me: The LORDE hath spoken it: Tush, ye shall prospere right well. And vnto all them, that walke after the lust of their owne harte, they saye: Tush, there shall no misfortune happen you. For who hath sytten in the councell of the LORDE, that he hath herde and vnderstonde, what he is about to do? Who hath marked hys Jere. 30.d. dewtye, and herde it: * Beholde, the stormy wether of the LORDE (that is, his indignacion) shall go forth, and shall fal downe vpõ the heade of the vngodly. And the wrath of the LORDE shall not turne agayne, vntill he performe, and fulfyll the thought of his Jere. 30.d harte. * And in the latter dayes ye shall knowe his meaninge.

D I haue not sent these prophetes, (sayeth Jere. 14.b the LORDE) and yet they ranne. * I haue not spoken to them, and yet they preached. But yf they had continued in my councell & herde my wordes, they had turned my people from their euell wayes, and wicked ymaginacions. * Am I the God that seyeth but
Psa. 119.a Ezec. 8.b. ỹ thinge, which is nye at honde, and not that
Psa. 139.a Amos. 9.a is farre of? saieth the LORDE. * Maye eny man hyde him self so, that I shal not se him?
Esa. 66.a & 1. 7.f. and. 17.b. saeth the LORDE. * Do not I fulfill heauẽ and earth? saeth the LORDE. I haue herde well ynough, what the prophetes saye, that preach lyes in my name, sayẽge: I haue dreamed, I haue dreamed. How longe will thys cõtynue in the prophetes hartes, to tell lyes and to preach the craftie sotylte of their owne harte? Whose purpose is (with the dreames that euery one tell) to make my people forget my name, as their forefathers dyd, when Baal came vp. The prophet that hath Deut. 4.b & 6.a. 1. Esd. 4.a a dreame, let him tell it: * and he that vnderstondeth my worde, let hym shewe it faythfully.

For what hath chaffe, and wheat to do together? saeth the LORDE. Is not my worde like a fyre (saieth the LORD) and like an hãmer, ỹ breaketh the harde stone? Therfore thus saieth ỹ LORDE: beholde, I will vpõ

the prophetes, that steale my worde priuely from euery man. Beholde, here am I (saieth the LORDE) agaynst the prophetes, ỹ take vpon their tunges to speake: The LORDE hath saide it. Beholde, here am I (saieth the LORDE) against those prophetes, that datre prophecy lyes, and disceaue my people with their vanities & miracles, whom I neuer sent, nor cõmaũded them. They shal do this people great harme, saieth the LORD.

& yf this people, ether any prophete, or prieste aske the, and saye: what is the burthen of the LORDE? Thou shalt saie vnto thẽ: What burthen? Therfore will I caste you fro me (sayeth the LORDE) because ye youre sinnes are a burthen. And the prophet, preest, & people ỹ vseth this terme (ỹ burthẽ of the LORDE) him will I visit, and his house also.

But thus shall ye saye, euery one to another: What answere hath the LORD geuen? or, what is the LORDES commaundemẽt? And as for the burthen of the LORDE, ye shall speake nomore of it: for euery mãs owne worde is his burthen, because ye haue altered the wordes of the lyuynge God (the LORDE of hoostes, oure God).

Thus shall euery man saye to the prophetes: what answere hath the LORDE geuen the? Or what sayeth the LORDE? And nat once to name the burthen of the LORDE. Therfore thus sayeth the LORDE: For so much as ye haue vsed this terme (the burthẽ of the LORDE) where as I not withstondinge sent vnto you, and forbade you to speake of the LORDES burthen:

Beholde therfore, I will repute you as a burthen, and will cast you out of my presence: yee and the cite also, that I gaue you and youre fathers: & will bringe you to an euerlastinge confusion, and in to suche a shame, as shall neuer be forgotten.

The xxiiij. Chapter.

THe LORDE shewed me a vision. Beholde, there stode two maundes of figges before ỹ tẽple of 4.Reg. 24.a the LORD, after ỹ Nabuchodonosor kynge of Babilon had ledde away prysoner Jechonias the sonne of Joachim kinge of Juda, ỹ mightie men also of Juda, with the workmasters & conninge men of Jerusalem, vnto Babilon. In the one maunde were very good figges, euen like as those that be first ripe. In the other maunde were very naughtie figges, which might not be eaten, they were so euell.

Then sayde the LORDE vnto me: what

bished, like as Tophet, because of all the houses, in whose parlers they dyd sacrifice vnto all the hoost of heauen, & poured out drinke offringes vnto straunge goddes.

And so Jeremy came from Tophet, where the LORDE had sent him to prophecie, and stode in the courte of the house of the LORDE, & spake to all the people: Thus saieth the LORDE of hoostes the God of Israel: Beholde, I will bringe vpon this cite and vpon euery towne about it, all the plages that I haue deuysed agaynst the: * for they haue bene obstinate, and wolde not obeye my warnynges.

The.xx. Chapter.

When pashur the preest, the sonne of Emmer, chefe in the house of the LORDE, herde Jeremy preach so stedfastly: * he smote Jeremy, and put him in the stocke that stode by the hye gate of Ben Jamin in the house of the LORDE. The nexte daye in the morninge, Pashur brought Jeremy out of the stockes agayne. Then sayde Jeremy vnto him: The LORDE shall call the nomore Pashur (that is excellent and increasinge) but Magor (that is fearfull and afrayed) euery where. For thus saieth the LORDE: beholde, I will make the afrayed, thyselfe, and all that fauoure the: which shall perish with the swearde of their enemies, euen before thy face. And I will geue all Juda vnder the power of the kinge of Babilon, which shall carie some vnto Babilon presoners, and slaye some with the swearde. * Moreouer all the substaunce of this londe, all their precious and gorgeous workes, all costlynesse, and all treasure of the kinges of Juda, will I geue in to the handes of their enemies, which shall spoyle them, and carie them vnto Babilon. But as for the (o Pashur) thou shalt be caried vnto Babilon with all thine housholde, and to Babilon shalt thou come, where thou shalt dye, and be buried: thou & all thy fauoureres, to whom thou hast preached lies. O LORDE thou makest me weake, but thou refreshest me, and makest me stronge, agayne. * All the daye longe am I despysed, and laughed to scorne of euery man: because I haue now preached longe agaynst malicious Tyranny, and shewed them of destruction. * For the which cause they cast the worde of the LORDE in my teth, & take me euer to the worst. Wherfore, I thought from hence forth, not to speake of him, nor to preach eny more in his name. But the worde of the LORDE

was a very burnynge fyre in my hart and in my bones, which when I wolde haue stopped, I might not. For why. * I herde so many derisions & blasphemies, yee euen of myne owne companyons, and of such as were conuersaunte with me, which wente about to make me afrayed, sayenge: vpon him, let vs go vpon him, to feare him, and make him holde his tonge: that we maye ouercome him, and beauenged of him. Ps.30.

But the LORDE stode by me, like a mighty giaunte: therfore my persecuters fell, and coulde donothinge. They shall be fore confounded, for they haue done vnwisely, they shal haue an euerlastige shame. * And now, Jere.11.

O LORDE of hoostes, thou righteous sercher (which knowest the reynes and the bery hartes:) let me se them punished, for vnto the I committe my cause.

Synge vnto the LORD, and prayse him, for he hath deliuered the soule of the oppressed, from the honde of the violent. * Cursed be the daye, wherein I was borne: vnhappie be that daye, wherein my mother brought me forth. Cursed be the man, that brought my father the tidinges, to make him glad, sayenge: thou hast gotten a sonne. Let it happen vnto that man, as to the cities * which the LORDE turned vpside downe (whe he had longe herde the wicked rumoure of them) because he slewe me not, as soone as I came out of my mothers wombe, & because my mother was not my graue herselfe, that the byrth might not haue come out, but remayned still in her. * Wherfore came I forth of my mothers wombe? To haue experience of laboure & sorowe, & to lede my life in shame

Job.10.b

The.xxi. Chater.

These are the wordes that the LORDE spake vnto Jeremy, * what time as kinge Sedechias sent vnto him Pashur the sonne of Melchia, and Sophonias the sonne of Maasia preest, sayenge: * Aske counsell at the LORD (we praye the) of oure behalfe, for Naduchodonosor the kinge of Babilon besegeth vs, yf the LORDE (peraduenture) will deale with vs, accordinge to his meruelous power, and take him from vs.

Then spake Jeremy: Geue Sedechias this answere. Thus saieth the LORD God of Israel: beholde, I wil turne backe the weapens, that ye haue in youre handes, wherwith ye fight agaynst the kinge of Babilon and the Caldees, which besege you rounde about the walles: & I wil bringe them togethes in to the middest of this cite, and I my selfe will fight agaynst you, with an outstretched honde, & with a mightie arme: in greate displeasure and terrible wrath: and will smyte them, that dwel in this cite: yee both men & catell shal dye of the pestilence.

4 Reg 24.8 *And after this (saieth the LORD) I shall delyuer Sedechias the kinge of Juda, & his seruauntes, his people (and soch as are escaped in the cite, from the pestilence, sweard, and honger) in to the power of Nabuchodonosor kinge of Babilon: yee into the hõdes of their enemies, in to the hondes of those that folowe vpon their lyues, which shall smyte thẽ with the sweard: they shal not pyte thẽ, they shall not spare them, they shal haue no mercy vpon them.

Deu 30.1 Jer. 27.8 c.38.2 And vnto this people thou shalt saye: Thus saieth the LORD: *beholde, I laye before you the waye of lyfe and deeth: Whoso abydeth in this cite, shal perish: either with the sweard, with honger, or with pestilence. But whoso goeth out to holde on the Caldees parte, that besiege it, he shal saue his life, and shall wynne his soule for a pray. *For I haue set my face agaynst this cite (saieth the LORD) to plage it, and to do it no good. It must be geuen in to the honde of the kinge of Babilon, and be brent with fyre.

Jere. 32.4

And vnto the house of the kinge of Juda, saye thus: Heare the worde of the LORDE (o thou house off Dauid) for thus saieth the LORDE: *Mynistre rightuousnes, & that soone delyuer the oppressed from violent power: & for euer my terrible wrath breake out like a fyre, and burne, so that no man maye quench it because of the wickednes of youre ymaginacions. *Beholde (saieth the LORD) I will come vpõ you, that dwel in the valleis, rockes and feldes, and saye: & Tush, who will make vs afrayd? or who wil come in to oure houses? for I will vyset you (saieth the LORDE) because of the wickednes off youre inuencions, & will kyndle such a fyre in youre wood as shal consume all that is aboute you.

Jere. 21.12 Deu. 28.1 Jere. 5.6. 44.6. 23.c. Soph. 3.6.

The.xxii.Chapter.

THus sayde the LORD also: Go downe in to the house of the kinge of Juda, & speake there these wordes, and saye: Heare the worde of the LORD, thou kinge of Juda that sytteth in the kyngly seate of Dauid: thou and thy seruauntes and the people, that go in and out at this gate. Thus the LORD commaundeth: *kepe equite & righteousnesse, delyuer the oppressed frõ the power of the violent: do not greue nor oppresse the straunger, the fatherlesse nor the widowe, and shed no innocent bloude in this place.

Esa. 1.9 Jere. 21.b Zacha. 7.b

And yf ye kepe these thinges faithfully, then shal there come in at the dore of this house, kynges, to syt vpõ Dauids seate, they shal be caried in charettes, and ryde vpon horses, both they & their seruauntes, & their people. But yf ye wil not be obedient vnto these commaundementes, *I sweare by myne owne self (saieth the LORD) this house shal be waist. For thus hath the LORDE spoken vpon the kinges house of Juda: Thou art vnto me as Galaad is in Libanus: & yet wilt thou laye of it, yf I make the not so waist (& thy cities also) that no man shal dwel therein. I will prepare a destroyer with his weapens for the, to hewe downe thy speciall Cedretrees, and to cast them in the fyre.

Jere. 5.a

And all the people that go by this cite, shal speake one to another: *Wherfore hath the LORDE done thus vnto this noble cite? Then shall ye be answered: because they haue broken the couenaunt of the LORD their God, and haue worshipped and serued straunge goddes. *Mourne not ouer the dead, and be not wo for them, but be sory for him that departeth awaye: for he commeth not agayne, and seyth his natyue countre nomore. For thus saieth the LORD, as touchinge *Sellum the sonne of Josias kinge of Juda, which regned after his father, and is caried out of this place:

4 Reg 23.34

He shal neuer come hither agayne, but shal dye in the place, where vnto he is led captyue, & shal se this londe nomore. * Wo worth him, that buyldeth his house with vnrightuousnes, and his parlers with the good that he hath gotten by violence: which neuer recompenseth his neighbours labour, nor payeth him his hyre. He thinketh in himself: I wil buylde me a wyde house, & goodly parlers: & causeth wyndowes to be hewen there in, and the syliges and pales maketh he of Cedre, and paynteth them with Cynober. Thinkest thou to reigne, now that thou prouokest me to wrath with thy Cedretrees?

Thy father did not eate and drynke, and prospere wel, as longe as he dealt with equite and rightuousnesse? yee whe he helped the oppressed and poore to their right, then prospered he well.

From whence came this, but only because he had me before his eyes? saieth the LORDE. Neuertheles, as for thine eyes and thine harte, they loke vpon couetousnesse, saist thou Jeremy: I sayde: *fygges, where B of some be very good, and some so euel, that no man maye eate them.

Then came the worde of the LORDE vnto me, after this maner: Thus saieth ỳ LORDE ỳ God of Israel: like as thou knowest ỳ good fygges, so shal I knowe the men ledde awaye out of Juda, whome I haue sent out of this place in to the londe of the Caldees, for their profite: and I will set myne eyes vpon them for the best, for I will bringe thé agayne in to this londe: I will buylde them vp, and not breake them downe: I will plan
24.6 te them, and not rote them out. * And I wil
32.41 geue them an harte, to knowe me, howe that
I am the LORDE. They shalbe my people, and I wilbe their God, for they shal returne vnto me with their whole harte.

24.8 * And like as thou knowest the naughtye fygges, which maye not be eaten, they are so euel: Euen so wil I (saieth the LORDE) let Sedechias the kynge of Juda, (yee and al his princes, & the residue of Jerusalem that remayne ouer in thys londe, and them also that dwell in Egipte) to be vexed & plaged in all kyngdomes and londes. And will ma
29.18 ke them to be * a reproffe, a comon byworde, a laughinge stocke, and shame, in all the pla ces, where I shall scatre them. I will sende the swearde, honger and pestilence amonge them, vntill I haue clene cõsumed them out of the londe, that I gaue vnto thé and their fathers.

The.xxv.Chapter.

THe sermone that was geuen vnto Jeremy, vpon all the people of Juda: In the fourth yeare of Joachim the sonne of Josias kynge of Juda, that was, in the first yeare of Nabuchodonosor kynge of Babilon. Whiche sermone, Jeremy the prophet made vnto all the people of Juda, & to all the inhabitours of Jerusalem, on thys maner:

From the.xiii. yeare of Josias the sonne of Amon kynge of Juda, vnto this presente daye, (that is euen.xxiii. yeare) the worde of ỳ 25.3 LORD hath bene committed vnto me. * And

LORDE hath sent his seruauntes, all the prophetes vnto you in season: yet wolde ye not obeye, ye wolde not enclyne youre eares to heare.

He sayde: & turne agayne euery man frõ his euell waye, & from youre wicked imagi nacions, & so shall ye dwell for euer in the lõ de, that the LORDE promised you & youre fo refathers: And go not after straūge goddes, serue them not, worshipe them not, & angre me not with the workes of your hondes: thé will not I punysh you. Neuertheles, ye wol de not heare me (saieth the LORDE) but ha ue defied me with the workes of youre hondes, to youre owne great harme.

Wherfore, thus sayeth the LORDE of hoo- B

For thus hath the LORDE God of Israel C
Esa.51.b Esa.74.b spoken vnto me: * Take this wyne cuppe of indignacio fro my honde, that thou mayest cause all the people (to whome I sende the) for to drinke of it: that when they haue dron ken therof, they maye be madde, and out of their wyttes, when the swearde cõmeth that I will sende amonge thé. Then toke I ỳ cup pe from the LORDES honde, & made all the people drynke therof, vnto whome the LOR DE had sent me.

But first the cite of Jerusalem, & all the ci tties of Juda, their kynges & princes: to ma ke thé desolate, waist, despised, & cursed, acor dinge as it is come to passe this daye. yee & Pharao the kyng of Egipte, his seruauntes his princes, & hys people altogether one vp another. And all kinges of the londe of Hus all kinges of the Philistines londe, Ascalon Gaza, Accaron & the remnaunt of Asdod, ꝑ Edomites, the Moabites, and the Ammonites: all the kinges of Tirus & Sidon, ꝑ kinges of the Iles, that are beyonde the see: Dedan, Thema, Buz & * the shauen Ismaelites all the kinges of Araby, & (generally) all the kinges that dwell in the deserte: all the kynges of Simri, all the kynges of Elam, all ꝑ kinges of the Medes, all kinges towarde the north (whether they be farre or nye) euery one with his neighbours: yee and all the kingdomes that are vpon the whole earth. The kynge of Sesach (sayde he) shal drinke with them also. Jere. 9. d.

D And saye thou vnto them: this is the commaundement of the LORDE of hoostes the God of Israel: drinke and be droncken, spewe, and fall, that ye neuer ryse: and that throw the swearde, which I will sende among you. But yf they will not receaue the cuppe of thy honde, and drinke it, then tell them: Thus doth the LORDE of hoostes threate you: drinke it ye shall, and that shortly. For lo, * I begynne to plage the cite, that my name is geuen vnto: thynke ye then, that I wil leaue you vnpunyshed: ye shal not go quyte For why? I call for a swearde vpon all the inhabitours of the earth, sayeth the LORD of hoostes. Jere. 49 b. Ezec. 9. b. 1. Pet. 4. c

Therfore tell them all these wordes, and saye vnto them: * The LORDE shal crie frō aboue, and let his voyce be herde frō his holy habitacion. With a greate noyse shall he crie from his courte regall. He shall geue a greate voyce (like ꝑ grape gatherers) vpon all them that dwell on the earth, and ꝑ sounde therof shalbe herde vnto the endes of the worlde. For the LORDE hath a iudgment to geue vpō all people, & will holde his courte of iustice with all flesh and punyshe the vngodly, saieth the LORDE. Joel. 3. c. Amos. 1. a.

For thus sayeth ꝑ LORDE of hoostes: * Beholde, a miserable plage shal go frō one people to another, and a great stormy water shall arise from all the endes of the earth. And the same daye shall the LORD him selfe slaye them, from one ende of the earth to another. There shall no mone be made for any E of them, none gathered vp, none buried: but shall lie as dunge vpon the grounde. Jere. 30. d.

Mourne (o ye shepherdes) & crie: sprinckle your selues with asshes, o ye rammes of the flocke: for the tyme of youre slaughter is fulfilled, and ye shall fall like vessels coninglp made for pleasure.

* The shepherdes shall haue no waye to flie, and the rammes of the flocke shall not escape. Then shall the shepherdes crie horribly, and ꝑ rāmes of the flocke shall mourne: for the LORDE shal consume their pasture and their best feldes shal lie dead because of the horrible wrath of the LORD. They shal forsake their foldes like as a lyon: For their londes shal be waist, because of the wrath of the destroyer, and because of his fearfull indignacion.

The.xxvi. Chapter.

IN the beginninge of the reigne of Joachim the sonne of Josias kynge of Juda, came this worde from the LORDE, sayenge: Thus sayeth the LORDE: * Stonde in the courte of the LORDES house, and speake vnto all them (whiche come of the cities of Juda come to do worshipe in the LORDES house) all the wordes ꝑ I commaunde the to saye * Loke that thou kepe not one worde backe, yf (peraduenture) they will herken, and turne euery man from his wicked waye: that I maye also repente of ꝑ plage, whiche I haue determined to bringe vpon them, because of their wicked inuencions. Jere. 7. a. Jere. 23. a.

And after thys maner shalt thou speake vnto them: Thus saieth the LORDE: yf ye will not obeye me, to walke in my lawes, whiche I haue geuen you, and to heare the wordes of my seruauntes the prophetes, whome I sent vnto you, rysynge vp tymely and stil sendinge: yf ye will not folowe the (I saye) then will I do to this house, * as I dyd vnto Silo, and wil make this cite to be abhorred of all the people of the earth. And the prestes, the prophetes, and all the people herde Jeremy preach these wordes, in ꝑ house of the LORDE. Jere. 7. a.

Now when he had spoke out all the wordes, that the LORDE commaunded him to preach vnto all the people, then the prestes, the prophetes, and all the people toke holde vpon him, and sayde: thou shalt dye. How darrest thou be so bolde, as to saye in the name of the LORDE: it shal happen to this house as it dyd vnto Silo: & this cite shalbe so waist, that no man shall dwell therein.

And when all the people were gathered aboute Jeremy in the house of the LORD, the princes of Juda herde of this rumour, & they came soone out of the kynges palace in to the house of the LORDE, and sat them downe before the * new porte of the LORD Jere. 36. a.

Then shake the prestes, and the prophetes vnto the rulers, & to all the people these wor-des: * This mā is worthy to dye, for he hath preached agaynste this citie, as ye youre sel-ues haue herde it with your eares.

Then sayde Jeremy vnto the rulers and to all the people: The LORD hath sente me to preach agaynst this house, & agaynst this citie, all ỹ wordes that ye haue herde * Therfore amende your wayes, and your aduysementes, and be obedient vnto the voyce of the LORDE your God: so shall the LORD repēt of the plage, ỹ he hath deuised agaynst you. Now as for me: I am in your hondes, do with me, as ye thinke expediēt and good. But this shall ye knowe: yf ye put me to death, * ye shall make your selues, thys citie, & all the inhabitours therof, giltie of innocent bloude. For this is of a treuth: that the LOR-
DE hath sente me vnto you, to speake all the se wordes in your eares.

Then sayde the rulers & all the people vn-
to the prestes & prophetes: This man maye not be condemned to death, for he hath preached vnto vs in the name of the LORDE our God. The elders also of ỹ londe stode vp & sayde thus vnto all the people: Micheas ỹ Morasthite, * whiche was a prophet vnder Ezechias kyng of Juda, spake to all the people of Juda: Thus saieth the LORDE of hoo-stes: * Sīō shalbe plowed like a felde, Jeru-salē shalbe an heape of stones, & the hil of the LORDES house shalbe turned to an hye wood. Did Ezechias ỹ kinge of Juda & the people of Juda put hī to death for this? No surely, but rather feared ỹ LORD, & made their prayer vnto him. For ỹ which cause also ỹ LORD repēted of the plage, ỹ he had deuised against them. Shulde we then do such a shamefull dede agaynste our soules? There was a prophet also, that preacheth stiffly in the name of the LORD, called Urias the son of Semeia of Cariathiarim: this mā preached also against this citie & against this lōde, accordinge to all as Jeremy saieth. Now when * Joachim the king with all the estates, & princes had herde his wordes, the king went about to slaye hym. * When Urias perceaued that, he was afrayed, & fled, & departed in to Egipte.

Then Joachim the kyng sent seruaūtes in to the lōde of Egipte, Namely: Elnathan the sonne of Achbor, & certayne men wt hym in to Egipte, whiche fetched Urias oute of Egipte, & brought him vnto kinge Joachim that slewe hym with the swearde, & caste hys dead body in to ỹ comō peoples graue. Ba-

Ahicam the sonne of Saphan helped Jeremy, that he came not in to the hondes of the people to be slayne.

The.xxvii. Chapter.

IN the beginninge of the reigne of Joachim the sonne of Josias kyng of Juda, came this worde vnto Jeremy from the LORD, which spake thus vnto me: Make the bondes & chaynes, and put thē about thy neck, & sende them to the kynge of Edom the kynge of Moab, the kynge of Amon, ỹ kynge of Tirus, and to the kynge of Sidō: and that by the messaungers, which shal come to Jerusalem vnto Sedechias the king of Juda, and byd them saye vnto their masters: Thus saieth the LORDE of hoostes the God of Israel, speake thus vnto youre masters: * I am he ỹ made the earth, the mē & the catell that are vpon the grounde, with my great power & outstretched arme, & haue geuen it vnto whome it pleased me. * And now will I delyuer all these londes in to the power of Nabuchodonosor the kinge of Ba-bilon & my seruaūt. The beastes also of the felde shall I geue hī to do him seruice * And all people shall serue him, & his sonne, & hys childes childzen, vntill the tyme of the same lōde be come also: yee many people & great kinges shall serue hym.

Moreouer, that people & kingdome which will not serue Nabuchodonosor, & that will not put their neckes vnder ỹ yock of the kin-ge of Babilon: the same people will I visit with swearde, with honger, with pestilence, vntill I haue consumed them in his hōdes, saieth ỹ LORDE * And therfore, folowe not your prophetes, soythsayers, expounders of dreames, charmers, & witches, which saie vn-
to you: ye shall not serue the kinge of Babilon. For they preach you lies, to bynge you farre from youre londe, & that I might cast you out, & destroye you. But the people that put their neckes vnder the yock of the kyng of Babilon, & serue hym, those I will let re-mayne still in their owne lōde (saieth ỹ LOR-DE) & they shall occupie it, & dwell therin.

All these thinges tolde I Sedechias the king of Juda, and sayde: * Put your neckes vnder the yock of the kinge of Babilon, and serue him & his people, that ye maye lyue. Why wilt thou and the people perish with the swearde, with honger, with pestilence: ly-ke as the LORDE hath deuised for all people, ỹ wil not serue ỹ king of Babilō: * Therfore gene no eare vnto those prophetes,

¶ I spake to the prestes also and to all the people: Thus saieth the LORDE: Heare not the wordes of those prophetes, that preache vnto you, and saye: Beholde, * the vessels of the LORDES house shall shortly be brought hither agayne from Babilon: For they prophecie lies vnto you. Heare them not, but serue the kynge of Babilon, ꝑ ye maye lyue. Wherfore will ye make thys citie to be destroyed? But yf they be true prophetes in verey dede, and yf the worde of the LORDE be committed vnto them, then let them praye ꝑ LORDE of hoostes, that the remnaunt of ꝑ ornamentes (which remayne yet in the house of the LORD, and in the house of the kyng of Juda and at Jerusalem) be not caried to Babilon also. The.xxviij.Chapter.

A BUt in the fourth yeare of ꝑ reigne of Sedechias king of Juda in the fifth moneth, It happened, that Hananias the sonne of Assur the prophet of Gabaon spake to me in the house of the LORD, in the presence of the prestes, & of all the people, & sayde: Thus sayeth the LORDE of hoostes ꝑ God of Israel: I haue broken the yock of ꝑ Jere.27.c. kynge of Babilon * and after two yeare will I bringe agayne in to this place, all the ornamentes of the LORDES house, ꝑ Nabuchodonosor kynge of Babilon caried awaie from this place vnto Babilon. And I will bringe agayne Jechonias the sonne of Joachim the kinge of Juda him self, with all the presoners of Juda, ꝑ are caried vnto Babilon, euen in to this place, saieth ꝑ LORDE) I wil breake ꝑ yock of the king of Babilon.

Then the prophet Jeremy gaue answere vnto that prophet Hananias, before the prestes & before all the people, that were present in the house of the LORD. * And the prophet Jeremy sayde: Amen, the LORDE do that, & graunte the thinge, which thou hast prophecied: that he maye bringe agayne all the ornamētes of the LORDES house, & reliefe all the presoners from Babilon in thys place. Neuertheles, herken thou also, what I will saye, that thou & all the people maye heare. The prophetes that were before vs in tymes past, which prophecied of warre, or trouble, or pestilence, ether of peace, vpon many nations & greate kyngdomes, were proued by thys (yf God had sende them in verey dede) * when the thinge came to passe, which that prophet tolde before.

And Hananias the prophet toke the chayne from the prophet Jeremias neck, & brake it: & with that sayde Hananias, that all the people might heare: Thus hath the LORDE spoken: Euen so will I breake the yock of Nabuchodonosor kinge of Babilon, from ꝑ neck of all nations, yee & that within thys two yeare. And so the prophet Jeremy went his waye. ¶ After now that Hananias the prophet had taken the chayne from the prophet Jeremias neck, and broken it: The worde of the LORDE came vnto the prophet Jeremy sayenge: Go, and tell Hananias these wordes: Thus saieth the LORD: Thou hast broken the chayne of wood, but in stede of wood, thou shalt make chaynes of yron. For thus sayeth the LORDE of hoostes the God of Israel: I wil put a yock of yron vpon the neck of all this people, that they maye serue Nabuchodonosor the kinge of Babilon, yee & so shall they do. And I will geue him ꝑ beastes in the felde. Then sayde the prophet Jeremy vnto the prophet Hananias: Heare me (I praye the) Hananias: The LORDE hath not sent the, but thou bringest this people in to a false beleue. And therfore thus sayeth ꝑ LORDE: beholde, I will sende ꝑ out of ꝑ lande, & within a yeare thou shalt dye, because thou hast falsely spoke agaynst the LORDE. So Hananias the prophet died the same yeare in the seuenth moneth.

THis is the copie of the lettre, ꝑ Jeremy the prophet sent from Jerusalem vnto the presoners: the Senatours, prestes, prophetes, & al ꝑ people, whom Nabuchodonosor had led vnto Babilō: after the tyme ꝑ kinge Jechonias, & his quene, his chamberlaynes, ꝑ princes of Juda, & Jerusalē, & ꝑ workmasters of Jerusalem were departed thither. Which lettre, Elasa ꝑ sonne of Saphā, & Gamaria & sonne of Helchia dyd beare, whō Sedechias ꝑ kinge of Juda sent vnto Babilō to Nabuchodonosor ꝑ kinge of Babilō: these were ꝑ wordes of Jeremias lettre: Thus hath ꝑ LORD of hoostes the God of Jsrael spokē, vnto all the presoners, ꝑ were led frō Jerusalē vnto Babilon * Bylde you houses to dwell therein: plāte you gardēs, ꝑ ye maye enioye ꝑ frutes there of. * take you wiues, to beare you sonnes, & doughters: prouyde wyues for youre sōnes. & huldondes for youre doughters, that they maye get sonnes & doughters, & ꝑ ye maye multiplie there. Laboure not to be fewe, but seke after peace & prosperite of the cite, wherin ye be presoners, & * praye vnto God for it. for in ꝑ peace therof shal your peace be.

For thus saieth the LORDE of hoostes ꝑ God of Jsrael: * Let not those prophetes, & soythsaiers ꝑ be amonge you, disceaue you: and bleue not your own dreames. For why: they * preach you lies in my name, & I haue not sent them, saieth the LORDE. But thus saieth ꝑ LORD: * Whē ye haue fulfilled lxx. yeares at Babilon, I wil bringe you home, and of myne owne goodnes I wil cause you hither agayne vnto this place. For I know, what I haue deuysed for you, saieth the LORDE. My thoughtes are to geue you peace, and not trouble (which I geue you all redye) & that ye might haue hope agayne. * ye shal crie vnto me, ye shal go and call vpon me, & I shall heare you. * ye shall seke me, & fynde me: yee, yf so be that ye seke me with youre whole harte, I will be founde of you (saieth ꝑ LORD) & wil delyuer you out of prisō, & gather you together agayne frō amōge al naciōs, & out of al places, wherin I haue scatred you saieth ꝑ LORD: and wil bringe you agayne to ꝑ same place, frō whēce I caused you be caried awaye captiue.

But where as ye saye, that God hath raysed you vp prophetes at Babilō: Thus hath the LORDE spoken (concernynge the kinge that sytteth in the seate of Dauid, and all the people that dwel in this cite, youre brethren * that are not gone with you in to captiuyte.) Thus (I saye) speaketh the LORD of hoostes: Beholde, * I wil sende a sweard, honger, and pestilence vpon them, & will make the like vntymely frygges, that maye not be eaten for bytternesse. And I will persecute the wt the sweard, wt honger, & death. Jere. 24. b

I will delyuer them vp to be vexed of all kingdomes, to be cursed, abhorred, laughed to scorne, and put to confusion of al the people, amonge whom I haue scatred them: & that because they haue not bene obediēt vnto my commaundementes, (saieth the LORDE) which I sent vnto them by my seruauntes the prophetes. * I stode vp early, & sent vnto them, but they wolde not heare saieth the LORD. Heare therfore the worde of the LORD, al ye presoners, whom I sent from Jerusalē vnto Babilon: Thus hath ꝑ LORDE of hoostes the God of Jsrael spoken, of Achab ꝑ sonne of Colaias & of Sedechias the sonne of Maasia, which prophecie lyes vnto you in my name: Beholde, I wil delyuer them in to the honde of Nabuchodonosor the kinge of Babilon, that he maye slaye them before youre eyes. And all ꝑ presoners of Juda that are in Babilon, shal take vpō them this terme of cursinge, and saye: Now God do vnto ỹ, as he dyd vnto Sedechias & Achab, whō ꝑ kinge of Babilō rosted in ꝑ fyre, because they synned shamefully i Jsrael. Jere. 25. b. 44. a. D

For they haue not onely defiled their neighbours wyues, but also preached lyenge wordes in my name, which I haue not cōmaūded them. This I testifie, & assure, saieth ꝑ LORD. But as for Semeia the Nehelamite, thou shalt speake vnto him: Thus saieth the LORDE of hoostes the God of Jsrael: Because thou hast sealed letters vnder thy name, vnto al the people that is at Jerusalem, & to Sophonias the sonne of Maalia the prest, yee and sent them to all the prestes wherein thou wrytest thus vnto him. The LORDE hath ordened ỹ to be prest in stede of * Joiada ꝑ prest, that thou shuldest be the chefe in the house of the LORD aboue al prophetes, & preachers, & that thou mightest put them in prison, or in the stockes. How happeneth it then, that thou hast not reproued Jeremy of Anothot, which neuer leaueth of his prophecienge. And besides all this, he hath sent vs worde vnto Babilon, and tolde vs planely, that oure captiuyte shal longe endure: that we shulde buylde vs houses to dwell therein, & to plante vs gardens, ỹ we myght enioye the frutes therof. Which lettre Sophonias the prest dyd rede, and let Jeremy the prophet heare it. E 4. Re. 11. b. 2. Pa. 23. b

Then came the worde of the LORDE vnto Jeremy, sayenge: Sende worde to all them that be in captiuyte, on this maner: Thus hath the LORDE spoken concernynge Semeia the Nehelamite. * Because that Semeia hath prophecied vnto you without my commyssion, and brought you in to a false hope, therfore thus doth the LORD certifie you: Beholde, I wil vyset Semeia the Nehelamite, and his sede: so that none of his shall remayne amonge this people, & none of them shall se the good, that I will do for this people saieth the LORD. For he hath preached falsely of the LORDE.

Jere. 29. a.

The. xxx. Chapter.

THese are the wordes, that the LORDE shewed vnto Jeremy saienge: Thus saieth the LORDE God of Israel: * Wryte vp diligently all the wordes, that I haue spoken vnto the, in a boke. For lo, the tyme commeth (saieth the LORDE) that I will bringe agayne the preseuers of my people of Israel & Juda, saieth the LORDE: For I will restore them vnto the londe, that I gaue to their fathers, and they shall haue it in possession.

Jere. 36. c.

Agayne, these wordes spake the LORDE, concernynge Israel and Juda: Thus sayeth the LORD: We heare terrible crie, feare and disquietnesse. For what els doth this sygnifie, that I se? Namely, that all stronge men smyte, euery man his honde vpon his loynes, * as a woman in the payne of hir trauaple. Why o euer sawe a man trauayle with childe? Enquere therafter, & se, yee all their faces are maruelous pale.

Jere. 13. d.

Alas for this daye, which is so dredefull, that none maye be lykened vnto it: and alas for the tyme of Jacobs trouble, from the which he shall yet be delyuered. For in that daye saieth the LORDE, I will take this yocke from of thy neck, and breake thy bondes. They shal nomore serue straunge goddes vnder him, but they shall do seruyce vnto God their LORD, and to * Dauid their kinge, whom I wil rayse vp vnto them. * And as for the, o my seruaunt Jacob, feare not (saieth the LORD) and be not afrayed, o Israel. For lo, I will helpe the also from farre, & thy sede from the londe of their captiuyte.

Eze. 34. d
Jere. 46. a

And Jacob shall turne agayne, he shalbe in rest, and haue a prosperous life, and no man shall make him afrayed. For I am with the, to helpe the, saieth the LORDE. * And though I shal destroye all the people amonge whom I haue scatred the, yet will I not destroye the, but correcte the, * & that with discretion. For I knowe, that thou art not wise * without faute. Therfore thus saieth the LORDE: I am sory for thy hurte and woundes. There is no man to medle with thy cause, or to bynde vp thy woundes: there maye no man helpe the.

Amos. 9. b

All thy louers haue forgotten the, and care nothinge for the. For I haue geuen the a cruell stroke, and chastened the roughly: & that for the multitude of thy meldedes, for thy synnes haue had the ouerhande. Why makest thou mone for thy harme? I my self haue pitye of thy sorowe, * but for the multitude of thy meldedes and synnes, I haue done this vnto the.

* And therfore all they that deuoure the, shalbe deuoured, and all thine enemies shall be led in to the captiuyte. All they that make the wayst, shalbe wasted them selues: & all those that robbe the, will I make also be robbed. For I will geue the thy health agayne, and make thy woūdes whole, saieth the LORD: because they reuyled the, as one castawaye and despised, o Sion.

For thus saieth the LORDE: Beholde, I will set vp * Jacobs tentes agayne, & defende his dwellige place. The cite shalbe buylded in hir olde estate, and the houses shal haue their right foundacion. And out of them shal go thākesgeupnge, & the voyce of myrthe. I will multiplie them, and they shall not be mynished: I shall endue them with honoure, and no man shall subdue them. Their children shalbe as aforetyme, and their congregacion shall continue in my sight. And all those that vexe them, will I vyset.

* A captayne also shal come of them, and a prynce shal springe out from the myddes of them: him will I chalenge to my self, and he shal come vnto me. * For what is he, that geueth ouer his harte, to come vnto me? saieth the LORDE, * ye shalbe my people also and I wilbe youre God. & Beholde, on the other syde shall the wrath of the LORDE breake out as a stormy wether, as a mighty whyrlewynde: and shall fall vpon the heades of the vngodly.

The terrible displeasure of the LORDE shall not leaue of, vntill he haue done, & performed the intent of his harte, which in the latter dayes ye shall vnderstonde. In the same tyme (saieth the LORDE) shal I be the God of all the generacions of Israel, & they shalbe my people.

The. xxxi. Chapter.

THus saieth the LORDE: The people of Israel which escaped ỳ wildernesse from ỳ sweard, founde grace to come into their rest. Euē so shal ỳ LORDE now also apeare vnto me from farre, and saye: I haue loued ỳ w an euerlastinge loue therfore do I spȝede my mercy before the. I will repayre the agayne (o thou doughter of Israel,) that thou mayest be fast and sure. Thou shalt take thy tabȝettes agayne, and go forth with them, that lede the daunce.

Thou shalt plante vynes agayne vpon ỳ hylles of Samaria, & the grape gatherers shall plante, and synge.

And when it is tyme, the watchmē vpon the mount of Ephȝaim shall crie: *Arise, let vs go vp vnto Sion to oure LORDE God. For thus sayeth the LORDE: Reioyce with gladnesse because of Jacob, crie vnto ỳ heade of the Gentiles: speake out, synge, & saye The LORDE shall delyuer his people, the remnaunt of Israel, & make them whole. Beholde, I will bringe them agayne from out of the northlonde, and gather them from ỳ endes of the worlde, with the blynde and lame that are amonge them, with the women that be greate with childe, and such as be also delyuered: and the company of them that come agayne, shal be greate.

They departed from hence in heuynesse but with loye will I bringe them hither agayne. I will lede the by the ryuers of water in a straight waye, where they shall not stomble: * For I will be Israels father, and *Ephraim shalbe my firstborne.

Heare the worde of the LORD (o ye Gentiles) preach in the Iles, that lye farre off, & saye: he that hath scatred Israel, shal gather him together agayne, and shall kepe him as a shepherde doth his flocke. For the LORDE shall redeme Jacob, and rydde him from ỳ honde of the violent. And they shal come, & reioyce vpon the hil of Sion, and shal haue plenteousnes of goodes, which the LORDE shal geue them: Namely, wheate, wyne, oyle, yonge shepe, and calues. And their conscience shalbe as a wel watred garden, for they shall nomore be hongrye.

Then shall the mayde reioyce in the daunce, ye both yonge and olde folkes. For I will turne their sorow into gladnesse, and will comforte them, and make them ioyfull, euen from their hartes, I will poure plenteousnesse vpon the hartes of the prestes, and my people shalbe satisfied with good thynges, saieth the LORDE.

Thus saieth the LORDE: * The voyce of heuynes, wepinge and lamentacion came vp in to heauen: euen of Rachel mournynge for hir children, and wolde not be comforted because thy were awaye. Jere.3.f Matt.2.c.

But now saieth the LORDE: leaue of from wepinge and crienge, withholde thine eyes from teares, for thy labour shalbe rewarded, saieth the LORDE. And they shal come agayne out of the londe of their enemies: yee euen thy posterite shall haue consolacion in this (saieth the LORDE) that thy children shall come agayne in to their owne londe.

Moreouer I herde Ephraim, (that was led awaye captyue) complayne on this maner: *O LORDE, thou hast correcte me, and thy chastenynge haue I receaued, as an vntamed calfe. * Conuerte thou me, and I shall be conuerted, for thou art my LORDE God, yee as sone as thou turnest me, I shall repent me my self: and when I vnderstonde, I shall smyte vpon my thye. For verely I haue committed shamefull thinges: O let my youth beare this reproche and confusion. Ier.10.f. Lamen.3.c. Trem.5.c.

Upon this complaynte, I thought thus by my self: *is not Ephraim my deare sonne? Is he not the childe, with whom I haue had all myrth and pastyme? For sence the tyme that I first commoned with him, I haue him euer in remembraunce: therfore my very harte drycth me vnto him: gladly and louyngly will I haue mercy vpon him, saieth the LORDE. Get the watchmen, prouyde teachers for the: set thine harte vpon ỳ right wate, that thou shuldest walke, and turne agayne: (o thou doughter of Israel,) turne agayne tho these cities of thyne. How longe wilt thou go astrate, o thou shrinkinge doughter? For the LORDE will worke a new thynge vpon earth: A woman shal compasse a man. D Gen.43.a

For thus saieth the LORDE of hoostes ỳ God of Israell: It will come therto, ỳ when I haue brought Juda out of captyuyte, these worldes shalbe herde in the londe of Juda and in his cities: The LORDE, which is ỳ fayre * dwydegrome of rightuousnesse, make the frutefull, o thou holy hill: And there shall dwell Juda and all hir cities, the shepherdes and husbondemen: For * I shall fede the hongrie soule, and refresh all faynte hartes. When I herde this, I came agayne to my self, and mused, like as I had bene waked out of a swete slepe. Esa.62.a Ezech.25.a 11.a

Beholde (saieth the LORDE) the dayes come, that I will sowe the house of Israel & E

the house of Juda, with men and with catel
Deu.28.& zacha.8.c. Jere.32.c. *yee it shal come therto, that like as I haue gone about in tymes past to rote them out, to scatre them, to breake them downe, to destroye them, and chaste them: Euen so will I also go diligently about, to buylde them vp agayne, and to plante them saieth the LORDE.

Esa.18.a *Then shal it nomore be sayde: ỹ fathers haue eaten a sowre grape, and the childrens teth are set on edge: for euery one shal dye for his owne mysdede, so that whoso eateth a sowre grape, his teth shalbe set on egge.

Hebr.8.b. *Beholde, the dayes come (saieth ỹ LORDE) ỹ I will make a new couenaũt with ỹ house of Israel & with ỹ house of Juda: not after the couenaunt that I made with their fathers, when I toke them by the honde, & ledde them out of the lõde of Egipte: which couenaunt they breake, wherfore I punished

The.xxxij.Chapter.

These wordes spake the LORD vnto Jeremy, in the tenth yeare of Sedechias kinge of Juda which was ỹ.xviij. yeare of Nabuchodonosor, what tyme as ỹ kinge of Babilons hooste layed lege vnto Jerusalem. But Jeremy the prophet laye bounde in the courte of the preson, which was in the kinge of Judaes house: where Sedechias the kinge of Juda caused him to be layed, because he had prophecied of this maner: Thus saieth the LORD: * Beholde, I will delyuer this cite in to the hondes of ỹ kinge of Babilon, which shall take it. As for Sedechias ỹ kige of Juda he shal not be able to escape the Caldees, but surely he shal come in to the hondes of the kinge of Babilõ: which shal speake with him mouth to mouth, and one of thẽ shall loke another in the face. And Sedechias shalbe caried vnto Babilon, and there shall he be, vntill the tyme that I vysit him, saieth the LORDE. But yf thou takest in hõde to fight agayne the Caldees, thou shalt not prosper.

And Jeremy sayde: Thus hath the LORDE spoken vnto me: Beholde, Hanameel ỹ sonne of Sellum, thine vncles sonne shal come vnto the, and requyre the to redeme ỹ londe. ỹ lieth in Anathot vnto thy self * for by reason of kynred it is thy parte to redeme it, and te bye it out.

And so Hananeel myne vncles sonne came to me in the courte of the preson, (accordinge to the worde of the LORD,) and sayde vnto me: Bye my lõde (I praye the) that lieth in Anathot in the countre of Benjamyn: for by heretage thou hast right to lowse it out for thy self, therfore redeme it. Then I perceaued, that this was the commaundement of the LORDE, and so I lowsed the londe from Hananeel of Anathot, myne vncles sonne, and weyed him there the money euen seuen sycles, and ten syluer pens.

I caused him also to make me a writinge and to seale it, and called recorde thereby, and weyed him there the money vpon the waighte. So I toke the euydence with the copie (when it was orderly sealed and couer) & I gaue the euydence vnto Baruch the sonne of Nerias the sonne of Maasia in the sight of Hananeel my cosen, and in ꝑ presence of ꝑ witnesses, that be named in the euydence, and before all the Jewes ꝑ were therby in the courte of the prison.

I charged Baruch also before them, saiengе: The LORD of hooستes the God of Jsrael commaundeth the, to take this sealed euydence with the copie, and to laye it in an erthen vessel, that it maye longe continue.

For the LORDE of hooستes the God of Jsrael hath determined, that houses, feldes and vynyardes shalbe possessed agayne in this londe.

Now when I had delyuered the euydence vnto Baruch ꝑ sonne of Nerias, I besought the LORD, sayenge: O LORDE God * It is thou that hast made heaue & earth with thy greate power and hye arme, & there is nothige to harde for ꝑ.* Thou shewest mercy vpon thousandes, thou recompensest the wickednes of the fathers, in to the bosome of the childzen that come after them.

Thou art the greate and mightie God, whose name is the LORD of hooستes: greate in councell, and infinite in thought: Thine eyes loke vpon all the wayes of mes childzen, * to rewarde euery one after his waye and accordinge to the frutes of his inuencions. Thou hast done greate tokens & wonders in the londe of Egipte (as we se this daye) vpon the people of Jsrael and vpon tholem: to make thy name greate, as it is come to passe this daye. * Thou hast brought thy people of Jsrael out of the londe of Egipte, with tokens, with wonders, with a mightie honde, with a stretchedout arme, and with greate terriblenes: and hast geuen thē this londe, like as thou haddest promised vnto their fathers: Namely that thou woldest geue them a londe, that floweth with mylke and honye.

* Howbeit when they came therin, and possessed it, they folowed not thy voyce, and walked not in thy lawe: * but all that thou commaundedest them to do, that haue they not done, and therfore come all these plages vpon them.

Beholde there are bulwarkes made now agaynst the cite, to take it, and it shalbe wonne of the Caldees that besege it, with swearde, with honger, and death, and loke what thou hast spoken, that same shal come vpō them.

For lo, all thinges are present vnto the: yet sayest thou vnto me (O LORDE God) and commaundest me, that I shall lose out a pece of londe vnto my self, and take witnesses therto: and yet in the meane season the cite is delyuered in to the power of the Caldees.

Then came the worde of the LORDE vnto me, sayenge: Beholde, I am the LORDE God of all flesh, Is there eny thinge then to harde for me? Therfore thus sayde ꝑ LORDE: * beholde, I shall delyuer this cite in to the power of the Caldees, and in to the power of Nabuchodonosor the kinge of Babilon, they shall take it in: For the Caldees shal come, and wynne this cite, and set fyre vpon it, and burne it: with the gorgeous houses, in whose parlers they haue made sacrifice vnto Baal, and powred drynkofferinges vnto straunge goddes, to prouoke me vnto wrath. Jere. 17.b 19.b

For seinge the childzen of Jsrael and the childzen of Juda haue wrought wickednes before me euer from their youth vp, what haue they els done, but prouoked me with the workes of their owne hondes? saieth the LORDE.

Or, what hath this cite bene els, but a prouokinge of my wrath, euer sence the daye that I buylded it, vnto this houre? Wherein I cast it out of my sight, because of the greate blasphemies of the childzen of Jsrael and Juda, which they haue done to prouoke me: yee they, their kinges, their princes, their prestes, their prophetes, whole Juda, and all these citesyns of Jerusalem.

* When I rose vp early, and taught thē, and instructe thē, they turned their backes to me, and not their faces. They wolde not heare, to be refourmed and correcte. * They haue set (their goddes in the house, that is hallowed vnto my name, to defyle it. They haue buylded hie places for Baal, in the valley of the childzen of Ennon, to bowe their sonnes and doughters vnto Moloch: which I neuer commaunded them, nether came it euer in my thought, to make Juda to synne with such abhomination. Jere. 2.b Jere. 7.a b

Moreouer thus hath the LORDE God of Jsrael spoken, concernynge this cite, which (as ye youre selues cōfesse) shalbe delyuered in to the honde of the kinge of Babilon, whē it is wonne with ꝑ swearde, with honger, & with pestilence. * Beholde, I will gather them together from all londes, wherein I haue scatred them in my wrath, in my fearfull, and greate displeasure: and will bringe them agayne vnto this place, where they shal dwel safely. And they shalbe my people and I wilbe their God. Deu. 30.a

waye, that thy maye feare me all the dayes of their life, that they and their children after them maye prospere. And* I will set vp
Etc. 36. c. an euerlastinge couenaunt with them, Namely: that I will neuer ceasse to do them good and that I will put my feare in their hartes, so that they shall not runne awaye fro me.

Deut. 30 b. Jere. 32. c. *yee I will haue a lust and pleasure to do them good, and faithfully to plante them in this londe, with my whole harte, and with all my soule.

For thus saieth the LORDE: like as I haue brought all this greate plage vpon this people: so will I also bringe vpon them all the good, that I haue promysed them. And men shall haue their possessions in this londe, wherof ye saye now, that it shal nether be inhabited of people nor of catell, but be deliuered in to ỹ handes of the Caldees, yee londe shalbe bought for money, & euidences made therupon & sealed before witnesses in the countre of Ben Jamin, & rounde aboute Jerusalem: in the cities of Juda, in the cities that are vpon ỹ mountaynes, & in them that lie beneth, yee and in the cities ỹ are in the deserte. For I wil bringe their prisoners hither agayne, saieth the LORDE.

The xxxiij. Chapter

Jere. 10. a. 32. a. MOreouer the worde of the LORDE came vnto Jeremy on this maner, * when he was yet bounde in ỹ courte of ỹ prison: Thus saieth the LORD, which fulfilleth the thinge that he speaketh the LORDE which performeth the thinge that he saieth in honde: euen he whose name is the LORDE: Thou hast cried vnto me, and I haue harde the: I haue shewed greate and hye thinges, which were vnknowne vnto you.

Thus (I saye) speaketh the LORD God of Israel, concernynge the houses of this cite, and ỹ houses of the kinges of Juda: that they shalbe broken thorow the ordinaunce, and weapens, when the Caldees come to besege them: & they shalbe fylled with ỹ dead carcases of men, whom I will slaye in my wrath & displeasure: when I turne my face from this cite, because of all hir wickednes Beholde, (saieth the LORDE) I will heale their woundes, and make them whole: I will open them the treasure of peace and treuth.

B And I will returne the captiuyte of Juda and Israel: and wil set them vp agayne, as they where a fore. * From al mischedes (wherein they haue offended agaynst me) I will clense the: And all their blasphemies which they haue done agaynst me, whe they regarded me not, I will forgeue them.

And this shal get me a name, a prayse and honoure, amonge all people of the earth, which shall heare all the good, that I will shewe vnto them: yee they shall be afrayed and astonied at all the good dedes and benefites, that I will doo for them. Moreouer, thus saieth the LORDE: * In this place, where of ye saye that it shalbe a wildernesse, wherin nether people nor catell shall dwell: In like maner in the cities of Juda & without Jerusalem (which also shalbe so voyde, that nether people nor catell shall dwell there) shal the voyce of gladnesse be herde agayne, the voyce of the bryde degrome, and of the bryde, the voyce of them that shall synge: * (Prayse the LORDE of hoostes, for he is iust) synge, and his mercy endureth for euer) and the voyce of them that shall offre vp gifts in the house of the LORDE For I will restore the captiuite of this londe, as it was afore, saieth the LORD. Thus saieth the LORDE of hoostes. It shal come yet therto, that in this londe, which is voyde from men and catell, and in all the cities of the londe, there shal be set vp shepherdes cotages: in the cities vpon the mountaynes, and in the cities that lie vpon ỹ playne, and in the deserte.

In the londe of Ben Jamin, in the feldes of Jerusalem, and in the cities of Juda shal the shepe be nombred agayne, vnder the hode of him, that telleth them, saieth the LORDE. * Beholde, the tyme commeth (saieth ỹ LORDE) that I wil performe that good thige, which I haue promised vnto the house of Israel and to ỹ house of Juda. In those daies, and at the same tyme, I will bringe forth vnto Dauid, the braunch of righteousnes, and he shall do equite, and righteousnesse in the londe. In those daies shall Juda be helped, * and Jerusalē shall dwell safe, and he thath shall call her, is euen God oure righteous maker. For thus the LORDE promyseth: * Dauid shall neuer want one, to syt vpon the seate of the house of Israel: * nether shall the prestes, and Leuites want one to offre alwaye before me, burnt offeringes, to kyndle the meatofferinges, & to prepare the sacrifices.

D And the worde of the LORDE came vnto Jeremy after this maner: Thus saieth the LORD: Haye the couenaunt * which I haue made with daye and night, be broken

that there shulde not be daye and nighte in due season: Then maye my couenaunt also be broken, whiche I made with Dauid my seruaunte, and so he not to haue a sonne to reigne in his Trone.* So shall also the prestes, and Leuites neuer fayle, but serue me.
* Jer.33.a. * Fo: like as the starres of heauen maye not be nombred, nether the sonde of the see measured: so will I multiplie the sede of Dauid my seruaunte, and of the Leuites my ministers.

Moreouer, the worde of the LORDE came to Jeremy, saienge: Cõsidrest thou not what this people speaketh? Two kynredded (saye they) had the LORDE chosen, & those same two hath he cast awaye. (For so farre is my people come, þ they haue no hope to come together ony more, and to be one people agayne). Therfore thus saieth the LORDE: yf I haue made no couenaunt with daye & night and gyuē no statute vnto heauen and earth: then will I also cast awaye the sede of Dauid my seruaunt: so that I will take no prince out of his sede, to rule þ posterite of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob. But yet I will turne agayne they captiuite, and be mercifull vnto them.

The.xxxiiij. Chapter.

THese are the wordes whiche the LORDE spake vnto Jeremy, * what tyme as Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babilon, & all his hooste (out of all þ kingdomes þ were vnder his power) and all his people, fought against Jerusalem and all the cities therof. Thus saieth the LORDE God of Israel: Go, & speake to Sedechias the king of Juda, & tell him: The LORDE sendeth the
2.Par.36.a. this worde: Beholde, * I will deliuer this cite in to the honde of the kinge of Babilon, he shall burne it, and thou shalt not escape hys hondes, but shalt be led awaie presoner, and delyuered into his power: Thou shalt loke the kinge of Babilon in the face, and he shal speake with the mouth to mouth, and then shalt thou go to Babilon. yet heare the worde of the LORDE, o Sedechias thou king of Juda: Thus saieth the LORDE vnto þ: Thou shalt not be slayne with the swearde,
2.Par.36.a. but shalt dye in peace. * Like as thy forefathers, þ kinges, thy progenitours were brēt: so shall thou be brent also, & in the mournynge they shall saye: oh lorde. For thus haue I determined, saieth the LORDE.

Then spake Jeremy the prophet all these wordes vnto Sedechias kynge of Juda in Jerusalem: what tyme as the kinge of Babilons hooste beseged Jerusalem, and the remnaūt of the cities: of Juda Namely, Lachis & Azecha, which yet remayned of the * stronge defenced cities of Juda.
2.Par.11.a.

These are the wordes þ the LORDE spake vnto Jeremy the prophet, whē Sedechias was agreed with all the people at Jerusalem, that there shuld be proclamed * a liberte: so that euery man shulde let go fro his seruaunt, and handemayde, Hebrue & Hebruel se, & no Jewe to holde hys brother as a bondeman In this also dyd all the princes & all the peple consente, which agreed vnto thys couenaūt, þ euery one shulde let his seruaūt & his handmayde go fre & nomore to holde them as bonde. Now as they had cõsented, euē so they were obediēt, & let thē go fre. But afterwarde they repēted, & toke againe þ seruaunts & hādemaydens, whom they had letten go fre, & so made them bonde agayne.
Exo.21.c. Leui.25.c. Deu.15.b.

For the which cause the worde of þ LORDE came vnto Jeremy frō the LORDE him self, sayenge: Thus saieth the LORDE God of Israel: I made a couenaunte with youre fathers, when I brought them out of Egipte, (that they shulde no more be bondmen,) sayenge: * When seuē yeares are out, euery man shal let go fre his bought seruaunt, an Hebrue, yf he haue serued him sixe yeares. But your fathers obeied me not & herkened not vnto me. As for you, ye were now turned & dyd right before me, in þ ye proclamed, euery mā to let his neghboure go fre, & in þ ye made a couenaūt before me, in the temple þ beareth my name: But yet ye haue turned your selues agayne, and blasphemed my name In this, that euery mā hath requyred his seruaunt and hādemayden agayne, whome ye had letten go quyte and fre, and compelled them to serue you agayne, and to be your bondemen. And therfore thus sayeth the LORDE: ye haue not obeyed me, euery mā to proclame fredome vnto hys brother and neghbour: wherfore, I will call you vnto a fredome, saieth þ LORDE: euen vnto þ swearde, to the pestilence, and to honger, and wyll make you to be plaged in all þ kyngdomes of the earth. yee those men that haue broken my couenaunt, and not kepte the wordes of the apoyntmēt, which they made before me:

Psa.79.a Jere.7.b * And their dead bodyes shall be meate for the foules of the ayre, and beastes of the felde. As for Sedechias the kynge of Juda & his prynces, I wil delyuer them in to the power of theyr enemyes, and of them that desyre to slaye them, and in to the honde of the Jere.37.a. kynge of Babylons hoost * which now is departed from you. But thorow my commaundement (sayeth the LORDE) they shall come agayne before this cite, they shal fight against it, wynne it, and burne it. Moreouer I will laye the cities of Juda so waste, that no man shall dwell therin.

The.xxxv. Chapter.

A THe wordes whiche the LORDE spake vnto Jeremy, (in ỳ reigne of Joachim the sonne of Josias kynge of Juda) are these: Go vn to the house of * the Rechabites, & call thẽ out, & bringe them to ỳ house of the LORDE in to some commodious place, and geue them wyne to drynke. Then toke I Jasantas the sonne of Jeremy, the sonne of Habasanta, and his brethrẽ, and all his sonnes and the whole housholde of the Rechabites: and brought them in to the house of ỳ LORDE, in to the closet of the chyldren of Hanan the sonne of Igdalia the man of God: which was by the closet of the prynces, that is aboue the closet of Maasia the sonne of Sellum, which is the chefe of the treasury. And before the sonnes of the kynred of ỳ Rechabites, I set pottes full of wyne, and cuppes, and sayde vnto them: drynke wyne. But they sayde: we drynke no wyne, For Jonadab the sonne of Rechab oure father cõmaũded vs, sayenge: ye and youre sonnes shall Jere.19.b. neuer drinke wyne, * buylde no houses, sowe no sede, plante no vynes, yee ye shal haue no vnyardes: but for all youre tyme ye shall dwell in tentes, that ye maye lyue longe in ỳ londe, wherin ye be straungers.

B Thus haue we obeyed the cõmaundemẽt of Jonadab, ỳ sonne of Rechab oure father, in all ỳ he hath charged vs, & so we drynke no wyne all oure lyue longe: we, our wyues, our sonnes, & our doughters. Neither buylde we any house to dwell therin, we haue also amonge vs neither vnyardes, no; corne lõde to sowe: but we dwell in tentes, we obeye, & do accordinge vnto all, that Jonadab our father commaunded vs.

But now, ỳ Nabuchadnosor the kynge of Babylon came vp in to ỳ londe, we sayde: come, let vs go to Jerusalẽ, ỳ we maye escape the hoost of the Caldees & the Assirians: & so we dwell now at Jerusalẽ. Then came the worde of ỳ LORD vnto Jeremy, sayeng: Thus sayeth the LORD of hoostes the God of Israel: Go & tell whole Juda & all the inhabitours of Jerusalẽ: Will ye not be reformed, to obeye my wordes, sayeth the LORD? The wordes whiche Jonadab the sonne of Rechab cõmaunded his sonnes, ỳ they shulde drynke no wyne, are fast & surely kept: for vnto this daye they drynke no wyne: but obeye their fathers cõmaundement. But as for me, * I haue stõde vp early, I haue spoken Jere.44. vnto you, & geuen you earnest warnynge: & yet haue ye not bene obediẽt vnto me. per I haue sent my seruaũtes, all ỳ prophetes vnto you, I rose vp early, & sẽt you worde, sayenge: O turne you, euery man from his wicked waye: amende your lyues, & go not after straunge goddes, to worshippe thẽ: ỳ ye maye continue in the londe, which I haue geuen vnto you and youre fathers, but ye wolde neither heare me, nor folowe me.

The children of Jonadab Rechabs sonne haue stedfastly kepte their fathers cõmaundement, that he gaue thẽ, but thys people is not obedient vnto me. And therfore thus sayeth the LORD of hoostes ỳ God of Israel: Beholde, I wil bringe vpõ Juda & vpõ euery one ỳ dwelleth in Jerusalẽ, all the trouble ỳ I haue deuysed against thẽ. * For I haue Jere. spoke vnto thẽ, but they wolde not heare: I haue called vnto them, neuertheles they wolde geue me no answere. Jeremy also spake vnto the housholde of the Rechabites: Thus sayeth the LORD of hoostes the God of Israel: For so moche as ye haue obeyed the cõmaundement of Jonadab your father, & kept all his preceptes, & done accordynge vnto all ỳ he hath bidden you: Therfore thus sayeth the LORD of hoostes ỳ God of Israel: * Jonadab the sonne of Rechab shal not lacke, but haue one out of his stocke, to stande alwaye before me.

The.xxxvi. Chapter.

IN the fourth yeare of Joachim the sonne of Josias kynge of Juda, came the worde of the LORDE vnto Jeremy, sayenge: Take a boke, & write ther in all the wordes, that I haue spoke to the, in Israel, to Juda, & to all the people, from the tyme I beganne for to speake vnto the in ỳ tyme of Josias, vnto this daye. That if houlde of Juda heareth of the plage, which I

haue deuised for the, they maye peraduenture turne euery man frō his wicked waye, ✠ I
maye forgeue theyr offences and synnes.

Then dyd Jeremy call Baruch the sonne of Nerias, ✠ Baruch wrote in the boke at the mouth of Jeremy, all the wordes of the LORD, which he had spokē vnto him. And Jeremy commaunded Baruch sayenge: I am let, so that I maye not come in to the house of the LORD: therfore go thou thither, & rede the boke, that thou hast written at my mouth: Namely, the wordes of the LORD, & rede the in the LORDES house vpō the fas tinge daye: that the people, whole Juda, &
all they that come out of the cities of Juda, maye heare. Peraduenture they will praye
meekely before the face of the LORD, & turne, euery one frō his wicked waye. For great is the wrath & displeasure, that the LORDE
hath taken agaynst this people.

So Baruch the sonne of Nerias dyd ac-cordinge vnto all that Jeremy the prophet comaūded him, readinge the wordes of the LORD, out of the boke in the LORDES hou se. And this was done in the fyfth yeare of Joachim the sonne of Josias king of Juda
in the.ix.moneth ✠ when it was cōmaunded,
that all the people of Jerusalem shulde faste
before the LORDE, & they also the were come from the cytyes of Juda vnto Jerusalem.

Then red Baruch the wordes of Jeremy out of the boke within the house of the LORD
out of the treasury of Gamarias the sonne of Saphan the scribe, whiche is beside the hyer lofte of the ✠ new porte of the LORDES house: that all the people might heare. Now when Micheas the sonne of Gamarias the sonne of Saphan had herde all the wordes
of the LORD out of the boke, he wēte downe
to the kinges palace in to the scribes chābre ther all the princes were set: Elisama the scribe, Dalias the sonne of Semei, Elnathā
the sonne of Achbor, Gamaria the sonne of Sydi, Sedechias the sonne of Hananias, with all the princes. And Micheas tolde the all the wordes, that he herde Baruch rede out of the boke before the people.

Then all the princes sent Jehudi the sonne of Nathanias, the sonne of Salamia, the sonne of Chusi, vnto Baruch, sayeng: Take in thine honde the boke, wherout thou haste red before all the people, and come. So Baruch the sonne of Nerias toke the boke in his honde, and came vnto them. And they sayde vnto him: Syt downe, and rede the boke, that we maye heare also. So Baruch red, that they might heare. Now when they had herde all the wordes, they were abashed one vpō another, and sayde vnto Baruch: We will certi fie the kynge of all these wordes. And they examined Baruch, sayenge: Tell vs, how di
dest thou wryte all these wordes out of hys mouthe? Then Baruch answered them: He spake all these wordes vnto me with his mo uth, and I alone was with hym and wrote
them in the boke.

Then sayde the prynces vnto Baruch:
Go thy waye, and hyde the with Jeremy, so that no man knowe where ye be. And they went in to the kynge to the courte. But they kepte the boke in the chambre of Elisama the scrybe, and tolde the kynge all the wordes, that he might heare. So the kynge sent Je-hudi to fetch him the boke, whiche he brought out of Elisama the scribes chābre. And Je-hudi red it, that the kynge and all the pryn-
ces, whiche were aboute him, might heare.
Now the kynge sat in the wynter house, for
it was in the.ix.moneth, & there was a good fyre before hym. And when Jehudi had red thre or foure leaues therof, he cut the boke in peces with a penne knyfe, ✠ and cast it in to 1.Reg.1.1.
the fyre vpon the herth, vntil the boke was all brente in the fyre vpon the herth.

Yet no man was abashed therof, or rente
his clothes: nether the kynge hym selfe, nor his seruauntes, though they herde all these wordes. Neuertheles Elnathan, Dalias & Gamarias, besoughte the king, that he wol de not burne the boke: notwithstondinge the kynge wolde not heare them, but commaun
ded Jeramphel the sonne of Amalech, Sa-rias the sonne of Esriel, and Selamia the son
ne of Abdiel, to laye hondes vpon Baruch
the scribe, and vpō Jeremy the prophet; but the LORD kepte the out of sight. After now that the kinge had brente the boke, and the ser mons which Baruch wrote at the mouth of Jeremy: The worde of the LORDE came vnto Jeremy sayenge: Take another boke,
and write in it all the forsayde sermons, that were written in the first boke, which Joachi
the kynge of Juda hath brente.

And tell Joachim the kynge of Juda, Thus sayeth the LORD: thou hast brente the boke, and thoughtest within thy selfe: Why hast thou written therin, that the kynge of Babilon shal come, & make this londe waist
so that he shall make both people and catell
be out of it: Therfore thus the LORD sayeth
of Joachim the kynge of Juda: ✠ There 4.Reg.24.b

out, that the heat of the daye, and the frost of the night maye come vpon him: And I will vyset the wickednes of him, of his sede, and of his seruauntes. Moreouer all the euel that I haue promised the (though they herde me not) will I bringe vpon them, vpon the inhabitours of Jerusalem, and vpon all Juda. The toke Jeremy another boke, and gaue it Baruch the scribe the sonne of Nerias, which wrote therin out of the mouth of Jeremy: all the sermons that were in the firste boke, which Joachim the kyng of Juda dyd burne. And there were added vnto them many mo sermons, then before.

The.xxxvii. Chapter.

4.Reg.24.b. Sedechias the sonne of Josias, *(which was made kynge thorow Nabuchodonosor kyng of Babilon) reigned in the lōde of Juda, in ꝑ steade of Jechonias the sonne of Joachim. But nether he, nor his seruauntes, nor the people in the londe wolde obeye the wordes of the LORDE, which Jere.21.a. 42.a. he spake by the prophet Jeremy. *Neuertheles Sedechias the kynge sent Juchal ꝑ sonne of Selamia and Sophonias the sonne of Maasia the preest to the prophet Jeremy, sayenge: O praye thou vnto the LORD oure God for vs. Now Jeremy walked frē amonge the people at that tyme, and was not put Exe.17.b. in preson as yet. *Pharaos hooste also was come out of Egipte: which when the Caldees that beseged Jerusalem, perceaued, they departed from thence.

Then came the worde of the LORD vnto Jeremy the prophet, sayēge: Thus saieth ꝑ LORD God of Israel, This answere shal
B ye geue to the kynge of Juda, that sent you
Jere.46.a vnto me for councell: *Beholde, Pharaos hooste which is come forth to helpe you, shal returne to Egipte in to his owne lōde: But the Caldees shall come agayne, & fight agaynst this citie, wynne it, and set fyre vpon it. For thus saieth ꝑ LORD: disceaue not your owne myndes, thinkynge on thys maner: Tush, the Caldees go now their waye from vs. No, they shall not go their waye. For though ye had slayne the whole hooste of the Caldees, that besege you, and euery one off the slayne laye in hys tent: yet shulde they stonde vp, and set fyre vpon thys citie. Now when the hooste of the Caldees was broken vp from Jerusalē for feare of the Egiptians armye, Jeremy went out of Jerusalē towar
C de ꝑ lōde of Ben Jamin, to do certayne busynesse there amonge ꝑ people. And whē he came vnder Ben Jamins porte, there was a porter called Jerias the sonne of Selamia ꝑ sonne of *Hananias, which fell vpō him & toke him, sayēge: thy mynde is to runne to ꝑ Caldees. Then saide Jeremy: It is not so, I go not to the Caldees. Neuertheles Jerias wolde not beleue him, but brought Jeremy boūde before the princes. Wherfore ꝑ princes were angrie with Jeremy, causinge hym to be beaten, & to be layed in preson in the house of Jonathas the scribe. For he was the maister of the preson. Thus was Jeremy put in to the doūgeon & preson, and so laye there a longe tyme. *Thē Sedechias the kyng sent for him, & called him, & axed hym quietly in his owne house, sayenge: thinkest thou ꝑ thys busynes (that now is in honde) cōmeth of the LORD? Jeremy answered: ye ꝑ it doth: thou (sayde he) shalt be delyuered in to the kynge of Babilons power.

Moreouer, Jeremy sayde vnto kynge Sedechias: What haue I offended agaynst ꝑ, agaynst thy seruaūtes, or agaynst thys people, that ye haue caused me to be put in prison? *Where are youre prophetes, whiche haue prophecied vnto you & sayde, ꝑ the kyng of Babilō shulde not come agaynst you & thys londe? And therfore heare now, o my lorde ꝑ kynge: let my prayer be accepte before the, & sende me nomore in to ꝑ house of Jonathas the scribe, that I dye not there. Then Sedechias the kynge commaunded to put Jeremy in the fore entre of the preson, and dayly to be geuen hym a cake af bread, and dis dyghte meate, vntill all the bread in the citie was eaten vp. Thus Jeremy remayned in ꝑ fore entre of the preson.

The.xxxviii. Chapter.

Saphatias the sonne of Mathan, & Godolias the sonne of Pasur, Juchal the sonne of Selamia, & Pasur the sonne of Melchias perceaued the wordes, that Jeremy had spoken vnto all the people, namely on this maner: Thus sayeth the LORDE:
Jere.21.a. *Who so remayneth in this citie, shal perish ether with the swearde, with honger, or with Jere.27.a. pestilence: But who so falleth vnto the Caldees, shall escape, wynnynge hys soule for a Jere.39.a. praye, & shall lyue. *For thus saieth ꝑ LORD: Thys citie (no doute) muste be delyuered in to the power of the kynge of Babilon, and he also shall wynne it. Then sayde the princes vnto ꝑ kyng: Syr we beseche you let this mā be put to death. For thus he discouragith the hondes of ꝑ soudyers ꝑ be in this citie, &

the hõdes of all the people, whé he speaketh
such wordes vnto thé This mã verely labou
reth not for peace of ỳ people, but mischefe.
Sedechias the kinge answered & sayde: lo,
he is in your hõdes, for ỳ kig maye deny you nothinge. Thé toke they Jeremy, & cast him in to ỳ doũgeõ of Malchias the sonne of A-melech, that dwelt in the forcentre of the pri son. And they let downe Jeremy w coardes
in to a doũgeon, where there was no water,
but myre. So Jeremy stack fast in the myre
B Now when Abdemelech the Morian beyng
a chamberlayne in the kynges courte, vn-derstode, that they had cast Jeremy into the doũgeon: he went out of the kynges house,
and spake to the kynge (whiche then sat vnder the porte of Ben Jamin) these wordes:
My lorde the kynge, where as these mẽ ined
le with Jeremy ỳ prophet, they do him wron
ge: Namely, in that they haue put him in pri son, there to dye of honger, for there is no more bread in the cite. Then the kynge commaunded Abdemelech the Morian, & sayde:
Take from hence .xxx. men whom thou wilt,
and drawe vp Jeremy the prophet out of ỳ doũgeon, before he dye. So Abdemelech to-ke the men with him, & went to the house of Amelech, & there vnder an almery he gat olde ragges & woezne cloutes, & let them down
by a coarde, in to the doũgen to Jeremy.
And Abdemelech the Morian sayde vn-
to the prophet Jeremy: O put these ragges & cloutes vnder thine arme holes, betwirte
them and the coardes: and Jeremy dyd so.
So they drewe vp Jeremy with coardes, &
toke him out of the doũgen, and he remayned in the fore entrie of the prison. Then C * Sedechias the kyng sent and caused Jere my the prophet be called vnto him, in to the thirde entrie, that was by the house of the LORD. And the kynge sayde vnto Jeremy
I will aske the somwhat, but hyde nothinge
from me. Then Jeremy answerde Sedechias
yf I be playne vnto the, thou wilt cause me
suffre death: yf I geue the coũcell, thou wilt not folowe me. So the kynge swore an ooth secretly vnto Jeremy, saienge: As truly as ỳ LORDE lyueth, that made vs the soules,
I wil not slaye the, nor geue the in to the hõ
des of them, that seke after thy life.
Then sayde Jeremy vnto Sedechias:
Thus saieth ỳ LORDE of hoostes the God
of Israel: * yf case be, that thou wilt go forth
vnto the kynge of Babylons prynces, thou shalt saue thy life, and this citie shall not be brent, yee both thou and thy housholde shal escape with poure liues. But yf thou wilt not go forth to the kynge of Babilons pryn ces, then shal this citie be deliuered in to the hondes of the Caldees whiche shall set fyre
vpon it, and thou shalt not be able to escape them. And Sedechias sayde vnto Jeremy:
I am afrayde for the Jewes, that are fled
vnto the Caldees, lest I come in their hon-
des, and so they to haue me in derision.
But Jeremy answerede: No, they shal not D
betraye the: O herken vnto the voyce of the LORD (I beseke the) whiche I speake vnto
the, so shalt thou be well, and saue thy life.
But yf thou wilt not go forth, the LORDE hath tolde me this planely: Beholde, all the women that are left in the kynge of Judas house, shall go out to the kyng of Babilons prynces. For they thynke, ỳ thou art disceа-ued: and that the men in whome thou didest
put thy trust, haue gotten the vnder, and set thy fete fast in the myre, and gone their waie from the. Therfore all thy wyues with their children shall flie vnto the Caldees, and thou shalt not escape their hondes, but shalt be ỳ kynge of Babilons prisoner, & this citie shal be brent. Then sayde Sedechias vnto Jere
my: loke ỳ no body knowe of these wordes,
and thou shalt not dye. But yf the prynces perceaue, that I haue talked with the, and come vnto the, sayenge: O speake, what sayde the kynge to the: hyde it not from vs, and we wil not put ỳ to death. Tell vs (we praie
the) what sayde the kynge to the: Se thou geue them this answere: I haue humbly besought the kynge, that he will let my lye no-
more in Jonathas house, ỳ I dye not there.
Then came all the prynces vnto Jeremy,
and axed hym. And he tolde them, after the maner as the kyng bad hym. Then they hel
de their peace, for they perceaued nothinge.
* So Jeremy abode still in the forcentrie of Jere.39.xl
the prison, vntill the daye that Jerusalem was wonne.

Jere.32.d. bilons lordes, sent for Jeremy, * and caused him be fet out of the fore entrie of the prison and committed him vnto Godolias the sonne of Ahicam the sonne of Saphan: that he
Jere.40.b shulde carie him home, * and so he dwelt amonge the people. Now whyle Jeremy laye yet bounde in the fore entrie of the prison the worde of the LORDE came vnto him sayenge: Go, and tell Abdemelech the Morian: Thus saieth the LORDE of hoostes, the God of Israel: Beholde, the cruell and sharpe plage that I haue deuysed for this cite, will I bringe vpon them, that thou shalt se it: but I will delyuer the (saieth the LORDE) and thou shalt not come in ỳ hondes of those men, whom thou fearest. For doutles I will saue the, so that thou shalt not perish with the swearde: but thy lyfe shal be saued, and that because thou hast put thy trust in me, saieth the LORDE.

The.xl. Chater

THis is the maner, how ỳ LORDE intreated Jeremy, * when Nebuzaradan the chefe captayne had let him go fre from * Rama, whither as he had led him bounde, amonge all the preseners, that were caried from Jerusalem and Juda vnto Babilon. The chefe captayne called for Jeremy, and sayde vnto him: The LORDE thy God spake mightely before of the mystery vpon this place: Now the LORDE hath sent it, and performed it, as he had promised: For ye haue synned agaynst the LORD and haue not bene obedient vnto his voyce therfore commeth this plage vpon you. Beholde, I lowse the bondes from thy hondes this daye: yf thou wilt now go with me vnto Babilon, vp then: For I will se to the, I prouyde for the: But yf thou wilt not go with me to Babilon, then remayne here. * Beholde, all the londe is at thy will: loke where thou thinkest conuenient, and good for the to abyde, there dwell. yf thou canst not be content to dwell alone, then remayne with Godolias the sonne, of Ahican the sonne of Saphan, * whõ the kynge of Babilon hath made gouernoure ouer the cities of Juda, & dwell with him amonge the people, or remayne, where so euer it pleaseth the. So the chefe captayne gaue him his expenses with a rewarde, and let him go. * Then went Jeremy vnto Godolias the sonne of Ahicam to Masphat, and dwelt there with him amonge the people that were left in the londe.

Now when the captaynes of the hoost of Juda (which with their felowes were scatred abrode on euery syde in the londe) vnderstode, ỳ the kynge of Babilon had made Godolias the sonne of Ahican gouernour in the londe, and that man, wife, and childe, yee and the poore men in the londe (that were not led captyue to Babilon) shulde be vnder his iurisdiction: They came to Godolias vnto Masphat: Namely, Jsmael the sonne of Nathanias, Johanna, and Jonathas the sonnes of Carea, Saraias ỳ sonne of Thanhometh, the sonnes of Opheus the Netophetite, Jesanias the sonne of Machati, with their companions. And Godolias the sonne of Ahicam the sonne of Saphan swore vnto them and their felowes on this

dees, dwell in the londe, and do the kynge

of Babilon seruice, so shall ye prospere. Beholde, I dwel at Maspha to be an officer in the Caldees behalfe, & to satisfie such as come to vs. Therfore gather you wyne, corne, & oyle, & kepe them in youre warehouses, & dwell in youre cities, þ ye haue in keppynge.

Yee all the Iewes also þ dwelt in Moab vnder the Ammonites, in Idumea & in all þ countrees, whe they herde, þ the kynge of Babilō had made Godolias the sonne of Ahicā the sonne of Saphā, gouernoure vpō the þ were left in Juda: All the Iewes (I saye) returned out of all places where they were fled vnto: & came in to the londe of Juda to Godolias vnto Maspha, & gathered wyne and other fruites, and that very much.

Moreouer Johanna the sonne of Carea & all the captaynes of þ hoolte, þ were scatred in euery syde in the londe, came to Godolias in Maspha, & saide vnto hym: knowest thou not þ Baalis kynge of þ Ammonites hath sent Ismael the sonne of Nathanias, to slay the? But Godolias þ sonne of Ahicā beleued hym not. Thē sayde Johāna the sonne of Carea vnto Godolias in Maspha these wordes secretly: Let me go (I praye the) & I will slaye Ismael the sonne of Nathanias, so þ no body shal knowe it. Wherfore will he kyll the, þ all the Iewes which resorte vnto the, might be scatred, & the remnaūt in Juda perishe? Thē sayde Godolias the sonne of Ahicam vnto Johanna the sonne of Carea: Thou shalt not do it, for they are but lies, that men saye of Ismael.

The.xli. Chapter.

But in the seuēth moneth it happened, þ Ismaell the sonne of Nathanias þ sonne of Elisama (one of þ kynges bloude) came with them that were greatest about the kynge, & ten men that were swore with hym: vnto Godolias the sonne of Ahicam to Maspha, and dyd eate there together. And Ismael þ sōne of Nathanias vp stode ten men that were swome to him, starte vp, and smote Godolias the sonne of Ahicam the sonne of Saphan vp the swearde, & slewe hym, whome the kynge of Babilō had made gouernoure of the londe. Ismael also slewe all the Iewes that were with Godolias at Maspha, and all the Caldees that he founde there waytinge vpon hym.

The nexte daye after that he had slayne Godolias (the matter beyng yet vnknowne) there came certayne men from Sichem, frō Silo and Samaria, to the nombre of.lxxx. which had shauen their beerdes, rente their clothes, & were all heuye, bringinge meat offrynges and incense in their hondes, to offre it in the house of the LORDE. And Ismael the sonne of Nathanias went forth of Maspha ✱ wepinge, to mete them. Now when he met them, he sayde: Go youre waye to Godolias the sonne of Ahicam. And when they came in the myddest of the cite, Ismael the sonne of Nathanias (with them that were swome vnto hym) slewe them, euen at the middest of the pyt. Amonge these.lxxx. me there were ten, that saide vnto Ismael: Oh slaye vs not for we haue yet a great treasure in the felde, of wheate, barley, oyle and hony. So he spared them, and slewe them not with their brethren. Now the ✱ pyt wherin Ismael dyd cast the dead bodyes of the men (whom he slewe because of Godolias) had kynge Asa caused to be made, for feare of Baasa the kynge of Israel, and the same pyt dyd Ismael þ sonne of Nathanias fyl with slayne men. As for the remnaunt of the people, þ kynges doughters & all þ people that were yet left at Maspha, ✱ vpō whome Nabuzaradan the chefe captayne had made Godolias the sonne of Ahicam gouernoure: Ismael the sonne of Nathanias caryed them awaye prysoners towarde the Ammonites. But when Johanna the sonne of Carea and all they whiche had bene captaynes ouer the kynges hoolte with hym, herde of all the wickednes that Ismael the sonne of Nathanias had done: ✱ they toke their companyons, and wēte out for to fight with Ismael the sonne of Nathanias, and founde hym by the waters of Rabim in Gabaon. Now when all the people, whome Ismael led captyue, sawe Johanna the sonne of Carea & all the other captaynes of the hoolte, they were glad. So all the people that Ismael had caried awaye frō Maspha, were brought agayne,

And whē they returned, they came to Johanna the sonne of Carea. But Ismael the sonne of Nathanias fled from Johāna with eyght of his swome companyons, and went to the Ammonites. Then Johanna the sonne of Carea and all the captaynes of the hoolte that were vp hym, toke the remnaunt of the people, whome Ismael the sonne of Nathanias had led awaye (When he had slayne Godolias the sonne of Ahicā) whom they also had relcued from hym: fightinge mē, women & chyldren, and gelded men, whom they brought agayne from Gabaon: and went from thence, and sat them downe at Geruth Chimham, whiche lieth beyde Bethlē. ✱ þ they might go in to Egipte for feare of the

Caldees: of whom they were afrayed, becau se that Jsmael the sonne of Nathanias had slayne Godolias Ahicams sonne * whome ꝓ

The.xlii.Chapter.

THen all the rulers, and Johanna
the sonne of Carea, Jesanias ꝓ sonne of Osias came with all the people frō the least vnto ꝓ moost
and sayde vnto Jeremy the ꝓ-Jere.12.a. phet: * O heare oure petition, ꝓ thou mayest
Jere.37.a. ꝓraye for vs vnto the LORDE thy God, & for the remnaunt, wherof there be very fewe left of many, as thou seyst vs: that the LORDE thy God maye shewe vs & waye to go in and tell vs, what we shulde do. Then Jeremy the prophete sayde vnto them: I haue herde you. Beholde, I will ꝓraye vnto God youre LORDE, as ye haue requyred me & lo-
4 ke what answere the LORDE geueth you. I shall certifie you therof, and kepe nothynge back frō you. And they sayde vnto Jeremy:
Josue 1.c. * The LORDE of treuth & faithfulnes be our 7.Mac.2.d recorde, that we will do all, that the LORDE
Jere.42.a thy God cōmaudeth vs, whether it be good, or euell. We will herken vnto the voyce of oure LORDE God, to whome we sende the: ꝓ we maye ꝓsꝑre, when we haue folowed ꝓ voyce of the LORDE our God.

B And after ten dayes came the worde of ꝓ LORDE vnto Jeremy. Then called he Johāna the sonne of Carea, and all the captaynes of the people that were with him: yee & all the people frō the least to the moost, and sayde vnto them: Thus saieth the LORDE God of Jsrael vnto whom ye sent me, to lay Jere.21.b forth youre ꝓrayers before him: * yf ye will dwell in this londe, I shall buylde you vp, & not breake you downe: I shall plante you, & not rote you out: for I am pacified, as cōcernynge the trouble that I haue done vnto you. Feare not the kynge of Babilon, of whome ye stonde in awe: O be not afrayed of hym, saieth the LORDE: for I will be with you, to helpe you, and delyuer you from his honde. I will pardon you, I wyll haue mercy vpon you, & bryngе you agayne in to youre owne londe.

C Neuertheles, yf ye purpose not to dwell in this londe, nor to folowe the voyce off the LORDE your God: but will saye thus: we will not dwell here, but go in to Egipte: where we shall nether se warre, heare the noyse of batayl, nor suffre hōger, there will we dwel Then heare the worde of the LORDE, o

ye remnaunt of Juda. Thus sayeth the LORDE of hoostes the God of Jsrael:
* yf ye be whole purposed to go in to Egipte
and to be there as straungers: the swearde,
* that ye feare shall ouertake you in Egipte
and the honger wherof ye be here afrayed,
shall hange vpō you in to Egipte, and there
ye shall dye. For all they, that of set purpose vndertake to go in to Egipte, there to eate them selues of their mysery, shal perish with
the swearde, with honger and pestylence:
not one of them shall remayne, there shall none escape the plage, that I will bryng
vpon them.

For thus sayeth the LORDE of hoostes
the God of Jsrael: lyke as my wrath and in dignacion is come vpon the inhabitours of Jerusalem, so shall my displeasure go forth
vpō you also, yf ye go in to Egipte: for there ye shalbe reuyled, abhorred, brought to shame and confusion: and as for this place, ye shall neuer se it more. The LORDE forbyddeth you (o ye remnaunt of Juda) that ye shal not go in to Egipte. And forget not that I haue warned you earnestly this daye: for shal ye beggyle youre selues. * For ye sent me
vnto the LORDE youre God, and sayde: O ꝓraye thou the LORDE oure God for vs: and loke what answere the LORDE our God geueth the, that bringe vs agayne, and we shal do thereafter. Now haue I shewed, and declared vnto you the voyce of the LORDE your God, for the whiche cause he hath sent me to you. * yf ye will not folowe it, beleue ꝓ
ye shall perishe with the swearde, with hon-ger & pestilēce: euen in the same place, where youre lust was to go, and dwell.

The.xliii.Chapter.

NOwe whē Jeremy had ended all
the wordes of the LORDE God
vnto the people, (for their lorde to whome God had sente hym) Azarias the sonne of Osias, and Johāna ꝓ sonne of Carea, with all the pro-
de personnes, sayde vnto Jeremy: * Thou lyest, the LORDE our God hath not sente to speake vnto vs, that we shulde not go in to Egipte, and dwell there: But Baruch the sonne of Nerias prouoketh the agayne vs,
that he might bryng vs in to the captyuyte
off the Caldees: that they might slaye vs,
and carye vs awaye ꝓsoners vnto Ba-bilon.

So Johanna the sonne of Carea, and all the captaynes of the hoolte, and all the people folowed not the commaundement of the LORDE: Namely, to dwell in the londe of Juda: But Johanna the sonne of Carea & all the captaynes of the hooste, carted awaie all the remnaunt in Juda, * that were come together agayne from the Heithen (amonge whome they had bene scatred) to dwel in the londe of Juda: Men, women, chyldren, the kynges doughters: all those that Nabusara dan the cheke captayne had left with Godolias the sonne of Ahicam. They caried away also the prophet Jeremy, Baruch the sonne of Nerias, and so came in to Egipte: for they were not obedyent vnto the commaundemente of God. Thus came they to Taphnis.

And in Taphnis the worde of the LORDE happened vnto Jeremy, sayeng: Take greate stones in thine honde, and hyde them in the brick wall, vnder the gate of Pharaos houle in Taphnis, that all the men of Juda maie se, and saie vnto them: Thus saieth the LORDE of hoostes the God of Israel: * Beholde, I will sende & call for Nabuchodonoser the kynge of Babilon my seruaunt, and will set his seate vpon these stones that I have hyd, and he shall spreade hys tente ouer them.

And when he commeth, he shal smyte the londe of Egipte with slaughter, with prison ment, and with the swearde. He shall set fyre vpon the temples of the Egipcias goddes, and burne them vp, & take the selues prisoners. Moreouer he shall araye hym self with the lande of Egipte, lyke as a shepherde putteth on his cote, and shal departe awaye from thence in peace. The pylers also of the temple of the Sonne that is in Egypte, shall he breake in peces, and burne the temples of the Egipcians goddes.

The .xliii. Chapter.

THis is the worde that was shewed to Jeremy concerninge all the Jewes, which dwelt in Egipte at Magdal, at Taphnis, at Memphis, and in the londe of Patures. Thus saieth the LORDE of hoostes the God of Israel: ye have sene all the misery, that I have brought vpon Jerusalem, and vpon all the cities of Juda: so that thys daye they are desolate, and no man dwellinge therin: & that because of the greate blasphemies, whiche they committed, to prouoke me vnto anger: In that they wente backe to do sacrifice and worshippe vnto straunge goddes: whom neither they, nor ye, nor your fathers have knowen. Now be it, I sent vnto the my seruauntes all the prophetes: * I rose vp early, I sent vnto them, & gaue them warninge: O do no such abhominable thinges, & thinges that I hate. But they wolde not folowe nor herke, to turne from their wickednes, and to do no more sacrifice vnto straunge goddes. Jere. 25. a. 29. a.

Wherfore my indignacion & wrath was kyndled, and it brent vp the cities of Juda, the feldes with the stretes of Jerusalem: so that they were made waist and desolate, as it is come to passe this daye. Now therfore thus saieth the LORDE of hoostes the God of Israel: How happeneth it, that ye do so greate euell vnto your owne soules, thus to destroye the men & women, chyldren and babes of Juda: so that none of you is lefte, because ye prouoke me vnto wrath with the workes of your owne hondes: when ye offre vnto straunge goddes in the londe of Egipte, where as ye be gone to dwell: That ye might vtterly perishe, and that ye might be reuyled and shamfully intreated of all nacions. Or, have ye now forgotten the wickednes of your forefathers, the wickednes of the kynges of Juda and their wyues, the wickednes that ye youre selues and your wyues have done in the londe of Juda, in the citie and in the londe of Jerusalem?

Yet are ye not sory this daye, ye feare not nether walke ye in my lawe and in my commaundementes, that I have geue vnto you and youre forefathers.

Therfore thus saieth the LORD of hoostes the God of Israel: I am stedfastly aduysed and determyned, to punyshe you, and to rote out all Juda. As for the remnaunt of Juda that purposly wente in to Egipte, there to ease them of their mysery: I will take them, * & they shall all be destroyed. In the londe of Egipte shall they perishe, beynge consumed with the swearde and with honger. For from the leest vnto the moost, they shal perishe with the swearde and with honger. Moreouer they shalbe reuyled, abhorred, shamed, and confounded. For I will visit them that dwell in Egipte, * as I have visited Jerusalem: with the swearde, with honger and with pestilence: So that none of the remnaunt of Juda, whiche are gone to dwell in Egipte, shal be left to come agayne in to the londe of Juda: although they thynke to come thyther agayne, and to dwell there. For none shall come agayn but suche as are fled awaye. Jere. 44. a. 42. a. Jere. 44. a.

Then all the men which knew that their wyues had offred vnto straunge goddes, & a greate sorte of wyues that stode there, ye and all the people that dwelt there in Egipte in the cite of Patures, answered Jeremy, & sayde: As for the wordes that thou hast spoken vnto vs in the name of the LORD, we will in no wyse heare them: but what so euer goeth out of oure owne mouth, that will we do: We will do sacrifice, and offre oblacions

Jere.7.b. vnto the Quene of heauen: * like as we and our forefathers, our kinges and our heades haue done in the cities of Juda, and in the stretes and feldes of Jerusalem. For then had we plenteousnesse of vytales, then were we in prosperite, and no myshortune came vpon vs.

2.Mac.1.b * But sens we left of, to offre, and to do sacrifice vnto the Quene of heauen, we haue had scarcenes of all thinges, and perish with the swearde & honger. Laste of all, when we wome did sacrifice & offred vnto the Quene of heauen, did we make her cakes, & pour vn to her drinkoffringes, to do her seruice, with out oure husbondes wylles?

Then sayde Jeremy vnto all the people
D to the men, to the women, and to all the folke whiche had geuen hym that answere: Dyd not the LORD remembre the sacrifices that ye, your forefathers, youre kynges & rulers (with all the people) haue offred in ỳ cities of Juda, in the stretes and londe of Jerusalem? and hath he not considered thys in hys mynde? In so much, that the LORD might no longer suffre the wickednes of youre inuencions, and the abhompnable thynges
Esa.1.a. which ye dyd? * Is not youre londe desolate & voyde, yee and abhorred, so that no mã dwelleth therin ony more, as it is come to passe this daye?

2.Ma.28.b. Jere.2.c Jac.5.a. * Dyd not all this happē vnto you, because ye made sacrifice, and synned against Baru.3.a. the LORD? * ye haue not folowed his voyce, to walke in his lawe, in his ordinaunces and statutes.

Yee this is the cause, that all myshortune happened vnto you, as it is come to passe this daye.

Moreouer, Jeremy spake vnto al the people & to all the women: Heare the worde of ỳ LORD all Juda, ye that be in the londe of Egipte: Thus saieth the LORD of hoostes the God of Israel: ye and your wyues haue spoken with your owne mouth, the thinge ỳ ye haue fulfilled in dede.

E * Yee thus haue ye sayde: We will not kay
Jer.44.c le, but do the thynge that pleaseth vs: we wil do sacrifice and poure out drynkoffrynges to the Quene of heauen. Purposly haue ye set vp youre owne good meanynges, and hastely haue ye fulfilled youre owne intentes. And therfore, heare the worde of the LORD all Juda, ye that dwell in the londe of Egipte.

Beholde, * I haue swore by my great name (saieth the LORDE) that my name shall Gen.21.a.
not be rehearsed therow any mās mouth of Juda, in all ỳ londe of Egipte: to saye: The LORD God lyueth, for I wil watch, to plage them, and not for their wealth. * And all Jere.42.a.
the men of Juda that be in the lõde of Egipte, shall perish with the swearde & with honger vntill they be vtterly destroyed.

Neuertheles, those that fled awaye for ỳ swearde, shall come agayne in to the lõde of Juda (but there shal be very fewe of them) And all the remnaũt of Juda, that are gone in to Egipte, there to dwell, shall knowe whose wordes shalbe founde true, theirs, or myne. Take thys for a token, that I wil visit you in this place (saieth the LORD) and that ye maye knowe, howe that I (without doute) will perfourme my purpose vpon you to punysh you. Beholde (saieth the LORD) I will delyuer Pharao Ophram kyng of Egipte in to ỳ hondes of hys enemies, ỳ stake after his life: * euē as I gaue Sedechias 4.Reg.
the kynge of Juda in to the hondes of Nebuchodonosor kyng of Babiló, which sought after hys lyfe. Jere.39.

The.xlvi. Chapter.

These are the wordes ỳ Jeremy 1
the prophet spake vnto Baruch the sonne of Nerias, * after that Jere.36.a.
he had written these sermons in a boke at the mouth of Jeremy, in the fourth yeare of Joachim ỳ sonne of Josias kynge of Juda.

Thus saieth the LORD God of Israel vnto the, O Baruch: In so muche as thou thoughtest thus (when thou wast wryting) Wo is me, the LORD hath geuen me payne for my trauayle: I haue wearied myselfe in sighinge, and shall I fynde no rest? Therfore tell him (O Jeremy) ỳ the LORD saieth 2
thus: Beholde, The thyng that I haue buylded, will I breake downe agayne, and roote out the thynge, that I haue planted, yee this whole londe. And seke thou yet promocion? Loke not for it, and desyre it not. For I will 3 bringe a miserable plage vpon all flesh, saieth the LORDE. * But thy lyfe will Jere.
I geue for a praye, where so euer thou goest.

HEre folowe the wordes of the LORD to the prophet Jeremy, whiche he spake vnto the gentiles. These wordes folowing preached he to the * Egipcians concerninge the hoost of Pharao Necho kynge of Egipte, when he was in Charcamis beside the water of Euphrates: what tyme as Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babilon slew hym, In the fourth yeare of Joachim ꝑ sonne of Josias kyng of Juda.

* Ye make redy buckler and shylde, ye go forth to fight: yee harnesse youre horses, and set your selues vpon them: ye set youre salettes fast on, ye bringe forth speares, ye scoure youre swoordes, and put on youre brestplates.

But alas, howe happeneth it, that I se you so afrayed? why shrincke ye backe? where lye are youre worthies slayne? yee they rune so fast awaye, that none of them loketh behynde him. Fearfulnesse is fallen vpon euerychone of them, saieth the LORD. The lightest of foote shall not flye awaye, & the worthies shall not escape.

Towarde the north by the water of Euphrates they shall stomble and fall. But what is he this, that swelleth vp, as it were a flode, roaringe & ragynge lyke the streames of water? It is Egipte that ryseth vp lyke the floude, and casteth oute the waters with so great noyse.

For they saye: We will go vp, and wil couer the earth: we will destroye ꝑ cities, with them that dwell therin. Get you to horse backe, roll forth ꝑ charettes, come forth ye worthies: ye Morians, ye Libeans with youre buclers, ye Lidians with youre bowes: For shall this daye be vnto the LORD God of hoostes a daye of vengeaunce, that he maye auenge him of his enemies. The sword shal deuoure, it shalbe satisfied & bathed in theyr bloude: For the LORD God of hoostes shal haue a slayne offringe towarde the North, by the water of Euphrates. Go vp (o Galaad) and bringe triacle vnto the doughter of Egipte.

But in vayne shalt thou go to surgery, for thy wounde shall not be stopped. The Heithen shall heare of thy shame, & the lōde shalbe full of thy confusion: for one stronge man shall stomble vpon another, how then shuld they not fall both to gether?

* These are the wordes that the LORD spake to the prophet Jeremy, concerninge ꝑ hoost of Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babilon, whiche was to destroye the londe of Egipte: Preach out thorow the londe of Egipte, and cause it be proclamed at Migdal Memphis and Taphnis, and saye: Stonde still, make the redie, for the swearde shall consume the rounde aboute.

How happeneth it that thy mightie worthies are fallen? why stode they not fast? Euen because the LORD thrust thē downe. The slaughter was greate, for one fell euer still vpon another. One cried vpon another: Up let vs go agayne to oure owne people, and to oure owne natuetall countre, frō the swearde of oure enemie.

Crie euen there: O Pharao kynge of Egipte, the tyme will bringe sedicion. As truly as I lyue (saieth the kinge, * whose name is the LORD of hoostes) it shal come as ꝑ mount of Thabor, & as Libanus ꝑ it stode in the see. O thou doughter of Egipte, make redy thy geat to flyt. For Memphis shalbe voyde & desolate, so that noman shall dwell therin. The londe of Egipte is like a goodly fayre calfe, but one shal come oute of ꝑ north to driue her forwarde. Hir wagied souldiers that be with her, are like fat calues.

They also shall flie awaye together, & not abyde: for the daye of their slaughter & ꝑ tyme of their visitacion shal come vpon them.

The crie of their enemies shall make a noyse, as the blast of a trompet. For they shal entre in with their hoost, and come vp ares, as it were hewers downe of wood. And they shall cut down hir wood (saieth the LORD) without any discretion. For they shal be mo in nombre then the greshoppers, so that no man shalbe able to tell them. The doughter of Egipte shalbe confoūded, when she shalbe delyuered in to the hondes of the people off the north.

Moreouer thus saieth the LORD of hoostes the God of Israel: Beholde I wyll vyset that restlesse people of Alexandria, Pharao and Egipte, yee bothe their goddes and their kynges: euen Pharao, * and all them ꝑ trust vnto hym. yee I will delyuer them in to the hondes of those, that seke after their lyues: Namely, in to the power of Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babilon, and in to the power of hys seruauntes. And * after all these thinges, it shalbe inhabited as afore tyme, saieth the LORD.

* But be not thou afrayed (o my seruaunt Jacob) feare not thou, o Israel. For lo, I wil helpe the from farre, and thy sede from the londe of thy captyuyte. Jacob also shall come agayne, and be in rest: he shall be ryche, and no mā shall do him harme. * Feare thou not(o Jacob my seruaunt)sayeth the LORDE,for I am with the and will destroye all nations,amonge whom I haue scatred the. Neuertheles I will not cõsume the,but chasten the and correcte the: yee and that with discrecion:nether will I spare the, as one ỳ were fautelesse.

Gen.14.c. Exe.25.c. Soph.2.a

THese are the wordes,ỳ the LORDE spake vnto Jeremy the prophet agaynst the* Philistines, before that Pharao smote ỳ cite of Gaza. Thus sayeth the LORDE:Beholde, there shall waters aryse out of the north:and shal growe to a great flould runninge ouer and couerynge the londe,the cities,and them that dwell therin.

And the men shall crie, and all they that dwell in the londe, shall mourne at the noyse and stampynge of their stronge barded horses,at the shakynge off their charettes, and at the romlinge of the wheles. The fathers shall not loke to their chyldren, so feable and weery shall theyr hondes be: at the same tyme, when he shal be there,to destroye

B the whole londe of the Philistynes, he shall make waist both Tirus, Sidon & all other that are sworne vnto them.

For the LORDE will destroye all Palestina,and the other Iles,that be deuyded frõ the countre. Baldnesse is come vpon Gaza, Ascalon with hir other valleys shall kepe hir peace.

Jere.48.b How lõge wilt thou slaye, O thou*sweard of the LORDE? Turne agayne in to thy sheeth,reste,and leaue of. But howe can it ceasse,when the LORDE hym selfe hath geuen it a charge agaynste Ascalon, and raysed it vp agaynste the cytyes of the see coaste.

The.xlviii.Chapter.

Esa.15.a. 16.a.25.b. Exe.25.b. Soph.2.b

THus sayeth the LORD of hoostes the God of Israel agaynste Moab:Wo be to the cite of Nebo, for it shall be layed waiste, brought to confusiõ, & take. yee

Josu.13.c. the stronge cite of* Cariathaim shalbe brought to shame, and afrayed: Moab shall nomore be had in honoure: Wicked councell shalbe taken vpon Heseboh.Come (shall they saye) let vs rote them out, that they maye be nomore amonge the nombre of the Gentiles, yee that they maye nomore be thought vpõ: Thus the swearde shall persecute the. I voyce shall crye frome Horonaim: Wuh greate waistinge and destruction, is Moab made desolate.

And this crie shalbe herde in all hir cities At the goynge vp vnto Luhith there shall arise a lametacion:and downe towarde Horonaim, there shall be herde a cruell and a deadly crie: Get you awaie, saue your lyues & be lyke vnto the heeth in the wildernesse.

Jere.17.c. *For,because thou hast trusted in thy stronge holdes and treasure,thou shalt be taken. Chamos with his prestes and princes shall Esa.46.a go awaye in to captiuite.

The destroyer shall come vpon all cities & none shall escape. The valleys shalbe destroyed,and the feldes shall be layed waist:like as the LORDE hath determined.

Make a token vnto Moab, that she get hir awaye spedely:for hir cites shalbe made so desolate,that no man shall dwell therin. Cursed be he that doth the worke of ỳ LORDE negligently, and cursed be he that kepeth backe his*sweard from shedynge of Jere. blounde.

Moab hath euer bene riche and carlesse from hir youth vp,she hath sytten and taken hir ease with hir treasure. She was neuer yet put oute of one vessel in to another:(that is)she neuer wente awaye in to captyuite, therfore hir tayst remayneth,and hir sauour is not yet chaunged.

But lo, the tyme commeth (sayeth the LORDE) that I shall sende hir trussers to trusse her vp, to prepare and season hir vessels:yee hir tankerdes rattell,and shake to & fro. And Moab shalbe ashamed of Chamos like as Israel was ashamed of* Bethel, Jere.48. wherin she put hir trust.

Wherfore do ye thinke thus:we are mighty,and stronge men of warre? Moab shall be destroied,and hir cities brente vp:hir chosen yonge men shall be slayne, saieth the kinge,whose name is the LORDE of hoostes. The destruction of Moab cõmeth on apace, and hir fall is at honde.

All hir neighbours shall mourne for her, and all they that knowe hir name, shal saye O how happeneth it, that the stronge staffe the goodly rod is thus broken? And thou doughter Dibõ,come downe from thy glory and syt in powerte. For he ỳ destroyeth Moab,shal come vp to the assa,& breake downe thy stronge holdes.

And thou that dwellest in Aroer, get the to the strete,& loke about the: axe them that are fled and escaped,and saye: what thyng is happened? O, Moab is confounded and ouercome.

Mourne and crie, tell it out at Arnon, ỹ Moab is destroyed. And mysery shall come vpon the playne londe: Namely, vpon Holō and Jaza: vpon Mephat and Dibon, vpon Nebo and the house of Diplathaim, vpon Cariatharim and Bethgamul, vpon Bethmaon and Carioth, vpon Bosra and al the cities in the londe of Moab, whether they be farre or neare.

The horne of Moab shalbe smytten downe, & hir arme broken, saieth the LORDE. Make hir dronke (for she magnified hir selfe aboue the LORDE:) that men maye clappe their hondes at hir bompte, and that she also maye be laughed to scorne. O Israell, shalt thou not laughe him to scorne, when he is take amonge theues? * yee because of thy wordes that thou hast spoken agaynst him, thou shalt be dryuen awaye. ye Moabites shal leaue ỹ cities, and dwell in rockes of stone, and become like doues, that make their nestes in holes.

* Is for Moabs pryde, we haue herde of it, she is very hie mynded. I knowe hir stoutnesse, hir boastinge, hir arrogācy and the pryde of hir stomake saieth the LORD. For hir furiousnes maye nother vpholde her with strēgth, nor dede. Therfore shal there mourninge be made for Moab, & euery man shal crie for Moabs sake: a lamentacion shalbe made, to the men that stonde vpon the wall. So will I mourne for the also (o Jazer) and for the, O thou vnyparde of Sybma.

Thy wyne braūches shal come ouer ỹ see, and the braunches of Jazer but vnto ỹ see: the destroyer shal breake in to thy harueste & grapegatheringe. Myrth and cheare shalbe taken awaye from the tymbre felde, and from the whole londe of Moab.

There shal be no swete wyne in the pressle, the treader shall haue no stomake to crie, for there shall be none to crie vnto hi: which afore tyme were herde from Hesebon to Eleale and Jaaz, which lifted vp their voyce frō Zoar vnto Horonaim, that bullock of thre yeare olde. The waters also of Nērim shalbe dried vp.

Moreouer I will make Moab ceasse (sayeth the LORDE) from the offringes and censinge that she hath made vnto hir goddes in hie places. Wherfore my harte mourneth for Moab, like a crowde playenge an heuy songe: and for the mens sake of the brycke wall my harte mourneth also, euen as a pype, that pipeth a dolefull songe: for they shal be very fewe, and destroyed.

All heades shall be shauen, and all beerdes clipped of: all hondes bounde, and all loynes gyrded aboute with sackcloth. Upō all the house toppes and stretes of Moab, there shalbe mournynge: For I will breake Moab like an vnprofitable vessell saieth the LORDE. O how fearfull is she! O how mourneth she! O how doth Moab hange downe hir heade, and is ashamed! Thus shal Moab be a laughinge stocke, and had in derision of all them, that be rounde about her. f

* For thus sayeth the LORD: Beholde, the enemie shall come flyenge as an Egle, and spreade his wynges vpon Moab. They shal clymme ouer the walles, and wynne ỹ stronge holdes. Then the myghty mens hartes in Moab, shalbe like the harte of a woman trauelinge with childe. Deu.28.c. Jere.49.b

And Moab shalbe made so desolate, that she shal nomore be a people, because he hath set vp her selfe agaynst the LORD *. Feare, pyt, and snare shall come vpon the (o Moab) saieth the LORDE. Who so escapeth ỹ feare, shal fall in to the pyt: and who so getteth out of the pyt, shal be taken in the snare. Esa.24.b.

For I will bringe a yeare of visitacion vpon Moab, saieth the LORDE. They that are able to flye, shall stonde vnder the shadowe of Hesebon. For there shall go a fyre out of Hesebon, and a flame from Sion, & shall burne vp that proude people of Moab, both before and behynde.

Wo be vnto the (o Moab) for thou people of Chamos shalt perish: yee thy sonnes and doughters shall be led awaye captyue. yet at the last will I bringe Moab out of captyuyte agayne, saieth ỹ LORDE. Thus farre of the plage of Moab.

The.xlix.Chapter.

So concerninge the * Ammonites, thus the LORDE saieth: Hath Israel no childre, or is he without an heyre? Why hath youre kynge then taken Gad in? wherfore doth his people dwell in his cities? Beholde therfore, the tyme commeth (saieth the LORDE) I will bringe a noyse of warre in to Rabath of the Ammonites. Amos.1.c. Esa.22.b. 25.a.

Habel shalbe desolate, and hir cities brent vp: and the Israelites shall be lordes ouer those, that had thē in possession afore, saieth the LORDE. Hesebō shal mourne, for it shal be roted out of the grounde, saieth the LORDE. The cities of Rabath shall crie out, and gyrde them selues with sackcloth: they shall mourne, and runne aboute the walles for their kinge shall be led awaye prisoner: yee his prestes and princes with him.

Wherfore trustest thou in the water stremes, that flowe to and fro, o thou fearce doughter: and thynkest thou art so safe (by reason of thy treasure) that no man shal come to the?

Beholde, I will bringe a feare vpon the, saieth the LORDE God of hoostes, from all those that be aboute the: so that ye shall be scatred euery man from another, and no mã shall gather them together agayne, that be fled. But after that, I wil bringe the Ammonites also out of captiuyte agayne.

B *Upon the Edomites hath the LORDE of hoostes spoken on this maner: Is there nomore wysdome in Theman? Is there no more good councell amonge his people? Is their wisdome then turned clene to naught. Get you hence, turne youre backes crepe downe in to the depe, O ye citesyns of Dedan.

Esa.21.b. Jere.25.b. 32.f 35.a.

For I will bringe destruction vpõ Esau, yee and the daye of his visitacion. If ỹ grapegatherers came vpon the, shulde they not leaue some grapes? If the night robbers came vpon the, shulde they not take so much as they thought were yough?

But I will make Esau bare, and discouer his secretes, so that he shal not be able to hyde them. His sede shalbe wasted awaye, yee his brethren and his neghbours, and he himself shal not be left behinde.

Thou shalt leaue thy fatherlesse children behinde the, and I will kepe them and thy wydowes shall take their comforth in me.

Jere.25.d. Ezec.9.b. 1.Pet.4.c. For thus hath the LORDE spoken: *Beholde, they that men thought were vnmete to drinke of the cuppe, haue dronken with ỹ first: and thynkest thou then to be free?

No, no: thou shalt nether be quyte no free but thou must drynke also. For why, I haue swome by my self (saieth the LORDE) that Bosra shall become a wildernesse, an open shame, a laughinge stocke, and curlynge: & hir cities shalbe a continuall deserte.

C For I am perfectly informed of ỹ LORDE, that he hath sent a message already vn to the Heithen. Gather you together, and go forth agaynst them: make you ready to the battayle, for lo: *I will make the but small amonge the Heithen, and litle ragarded amonge men.

Abdie.1.a.

Esa.47.d Jere.48.b *Thy hie stomack and the pryde of thy harte haue deceaued the, because thou wilt dwell in the holes of stony rockes, and haue the hye mountaynes in possession. Neuer theles though thy nest were as hie as the Aegles, yet will I cast thy downe, saieth the LORDE. Moreouer Idumea shall be a wildernesse: *whoso goeth by it, shalbe astonished, & wondre at all hir miserable plages. *Like as Sodom, Gomor and the cities ỹ laye there aboute, were turned vpsyde downe (saieth the LORDE) so shall no body dwell in Idumea, and no mã shal haue his habitacion there. Beholde like as the Lyon commeth vp from the pleasaunt medowes of Jordane vnto ỹ grene pasturers of Ethi: so will I dryue him, and make him runne agaynst her. But who is the ponge man that I will ordeyn therto? Who is like vnto me? What is he that will stryue with me? What shepherde maye stonde in my handes?

tours of Hasor, saieth the LORDE: for Nabuchodonosor the kinge of Babilon hath holde a coūcel concernynge you, and concluded his deuyce agaynst you. Arise, and get you vp agaynst yonder riche & clarelesse people (saieth the LORDE) which haue no ther gates nor dorebarres, and that dwell not together. Their camels shalbe stollen, and the droues of their catel dryuen awaye.

Moreouer these that be shauen will I scatre towarde all the wyndes, and bringe the to destruction: yee & that thorow their owne familiers, saieth the LORDE. Hasor also shal be a dwellinge for Dragons, and an euerlastige wildernesse: so that no body shal dwel there, and no man shall haue there his habitacion.

These are the wordes, that the LORDE spake to the prophet Jeremy concernynge Elam, in the begynnynge of the reigne of Sedechias kinge of Juda Thus saieth the LORDE of hoostes: Beholde, I wil breake the bowe of Elam, and take awaye their strength: and vpon Elam I wil bringe the foure wyndes frō the foure quarters of heauen, and wil scatre them agaynst the same foure wyndes. And there shal be no people, but some of Elam shal flye vnto them.

For I wil cause Elam be afrayed of their enemies, and of them that seke their lyues: & wil bringe vpō them ye indignacion of my wrath, saieth the LORDE. And I wil persue after them with the swearde, so longe til I haue brought them to naught. I wil set my seate in Elam, I wil destroye both the kinge & ye princes from thence, saieth the LORDE But in processe of tyme, I wil bringe Elam out of captiuyte agayne, saieth the LORDE.

The.l. Chapter.

The wordes that the LORDE spake vnto the prophet Jeremy concernynge Babilon, and the londe of the Caldees: * Preach amonge the Gentiles, set youre boyce be herde, make a token: crie out, kepe no silence, but saye: Babilon shalbe wonne * Bel shalbe confounded, & and Merodach shalbe ouercome.

Yee their goddes shall be brought to shame, and their ymages shal stonde in feare. For out of the north there shall come a people agaynst her, which shal make hir londe so waste, that no body shal dwel therein: no ther man nor beast, for they shal flye and departe from thence. * In those dayes and at that tyme (saieth the LORDE) the children of Israel shal come, they & the children of Juda, wepinge and makinge haste, and shal seke the LORDE their God. They shal aske the waye to Sion, thyther shal they turne their faces, and come, and hange vpon the, in a couenaunt that neuer shal be broken.

My people hath bene a lost * flocke my shepherdes haue deceaued them, and haue the made go astraye vpō the hilles. They haue gone from ye mountayne to the litle hill and forgotten their folde. All they that came vpon them, haue deuoured them, and their enemies sayde: We haue made no faute agaynst the, for they haue displeased ye LORDE, yee euen the LORDE which is the dewtie of their rightuousnes, & that defeded their fathers. yet shal ye flye from Babilon and departe out of the londe of the Caldees and yee shal be as the rammes that go before ye flocke. * For lo, I will rayse vp an hoost of people from the northzen londe, and bringe them vpon Babilon: these shal laye sege to it, and wynne it: Their arowes shall not mysse, like as a connynge archer shuteth not wronge. And the Caldees shalbe spoyled, & all they that spoyle them, shalbe satisfied, sayeth ye LORDE: * because ye were so chearfull and glad, to treade downe myn heretage, and fulfilled youre pleasures, as the calues in the grasse: and triumphed ouer them like the bulles, when ye had gotten the victory. youre mother shalbe sore confounded, and she that bare you, shal come to shame. She shal be the least setby amonge the nacions, voyde, waist, & dried vp. No man shall be able to dwell there, for the feare of ye LORDE, but she shalbe whole desolate * All they that go by Babilon, shall stonde still, & be abashed, and shall wonder at all hir plages

Go forth in your araye agaynst Babilon rounde aboute, al ye that can hāndle bowes shute at her, spare no arowes, for she hath synned agaynst the LORDE. Crie out: vpon her, vpon her, agaynst her rounde aboute she shal yelde herselfe, her foundacions shal fal, & hir walles shal come downe, for it shal be the vengeaunce of ye LORDE. yee vengeaunce shalbe take of her, * & as she hath done so shal she be dealt withall. They shall rote out the sower from Babilon, & him that handleth the sickle in harueste. For feare of the swearde of the enemie, euery man shal get him to his owne people, & euery man shall flye to his owne lāde. Israel is a scatred flocke, the Lyons haue dispersed them. * First ye kinge of the Assirians deuoured them, * last of all this Nabuchodonosor kinge of Babilon hath bruled al their bones.

Go vp (o thou auenger) in to the enemies londe, and viset them that dwell therein: downe with them, and smyte them vpon the backes, saieth the LORDE: do accordinge to all, that I haue commaunded the. There is gone aboute ꝓ londe a crie of a slaughter and greate murthur, namely on this maner How hapeneth it, ꝓ the hammer of the whole worlde is thus broken and bruised in sonder? How chanceth it, ꝓ Babilon is become a wildernesse amonge the Heithen on this maner? I my selfe haue layed wayte for the, and thou art taken: vnwares art thou trapped and snared: for whye? thou hast prouoked the LORDE vnto anger: The LORDE hath opened his house of ordinaunce, & brought forth the weapés of his wrath. For the thinge ꝑ is done in the londe of the Caldees, it is the LORDE of hoostes worke.
E These thinges shall come vpon her at ꝓ last, they shall breake in to hir preuy chambres, they shall leaue her as bare as stones, that be layed together vpon heapes. They shall so destroye her, ꝓ nothinge shalbe left. & they shall slay all hir mightie souldyers, put them to death. Wo be vnto them, for ꝓ daye and tyme of their visitacion is at honde. We thinke I heare already a crie, of the that be fled and escaped out of the londe of Babilon, which shewe in Sion the vengeaunce of the LORDE oure God, the vengeaunce of his temple: yee a voyce of the, that crie agaynst Babilon: Call vp all the archers agaynst Babilon, pytch youre tentes

2 Tess.2.a she hath * set vp herselfe agaynst the LORD agaynst the holy one of Israel. Therfore shall hir yonge men fall downe in the stretes and all hir men of warre shal be roted out in ꝓ daye, saieth the LORDE. Beholde, I speake vnto the (o thou proude) saieth the LORDE God of hoostes: for thy daye shal come, euen the tyme of thy visitacion. And the proude shal stomble & fal, and no man shal helpe hi vp. I wil burne vp his cities with fyre, and it shall consume all that is rounde aboute him.

Thus saieth the LORDE of hoostes: The children of Israel and Juda suffre violence together. All they that haue them in captiuyte, kepe them fast, and will not let them go: but their auenger and redemer is mightie, whose name is the LORD of hoostes: he shall maintayne their cause, he shall make the londe shake, and iudge them that dwell therein, one with another. The sworde shall come vpon the Caldees (saieth the LORDE) vpon them that dwell in Babil vpon their princes, and vpon their wyse men. The sworde vpon their soothsayers (as in those, they shall become fooles.) The sworde vpon their worthies, so that they shal be in feare: The sworde vpon their horsmen and charetes, and vpon all the comon people that dwell amonge them: so that they all shal become like women: The sworde vpō their treasure, so that it shall be stole awaye. The sworde vpon their waters, so ꝑ they shalbe dryed vp: For the londe worshippeth ymages, and delyteth in straunge wonderful thinges. Therfore shall wylde beastes, apes, and estriches dwell therein: for there shal neuer mã dwell there, nother shall ony man haue his habitacion there for euermore. Like as God * destroyed Sodom and Gomorre, with the cities that laye there aboute, saieth ꝓ LORDE: So shall nomans dwell there also, nother shall ony man haue there his habitacion. * Behalde, there shall come a people from the north, with a great bonde of men, and many kinges shall be raysed vp from the endes of the earth: They beare bowes and bouclers, cruel are they and vnmercifull.

Therfore the LORDE hath sayde vnto the bowemen, and to the that clymme ouer the walles in brestplates: ye shal not spare hir youngemen, kyll downe all hir hoost. Thus the slayne shal fall downe in the londe of the Caldees, and the wounded in the stretes. Thorow the I haue scatred the shepherde, and his flocke, the husbandman and his cattell, the princes and the rulers. Therfore will I rewarde the cite of Babilon and all his citesyns the Caldees, with all the euell which they haue done vnto Sion: yee that ye youre selues shal se it, saieth the LORDE Beholde, I come vpon the (thou noysome hill) saieth the LORDE, thou that destroyest all londes. I wyll stretch out my hōde ouer the, and cast the downe from the stony rockes: and will make the a brente hill, so that nether cornes stones, nor pinnacles, nor foūdacions stones shalbe taken thy more out of the: but wayst and desolate shalt thou lie for euermore, saieth the LORDE.

E Set vp a token in the londe: blowe the trompettes amonge the Heithen, prouoke the nacions agaynst her, call the kyngdomes, of Ararat, Menni & Ascanes agaynst her: nōbre out Taphsar agaynst her, bringe as grea

The londe also shal shake and be afrayed when the deuyce of the LORDE shall come forth agaynst Babilonto make the londe of Babilon so wast, that no man shall dwell emymore therein. The worthies of Babilon shal leaue the batayll, and kepe the sic nes in stronge holdes, their strength hath fayled them, they shalbe like women. Their dwellinge places shalbe brent vp, their barres shalbe broken. One pursuyuaunt shal mete another, yee one post shall come by another, to bringe the kinge of Babilon tydinges: that his cite is taken in on euery syde, ꝑ fordes occupyed, the fennes brent vp, and ꝑ souldyers sore afrayed.

¶ For thus saieth the LORDE of hoostes the God of Israel: The doughter of Babilō hath bene in hir tyme like as a threshing floore, but shortly shal hir harnest come. Nabuchodonosor the kinge of Babilon hath deuoured and destroyed me, he hath made me an emptye vessel. He swalowed me vp like a dragon, and fylled his belly with my delicates: he hath cast me out, he hath taken my substaunce awaye, and the thinge that was left me hath he caried vnto Babilon, saieth the doughter, that dwelleth in Sion: yee and my bloude also vnto the Caldees saieth Jerusalem. Therfore thus saieth the LORDE: Beholde, I will defende thy cause, and auenge the: I wil drynke vp hir see, and drye vp hir waterspynges.

Esa. 21.c *Babilon shal become an heape of stones a dwellinge place for dragons, a fearfulnes and wondringe, because no man dwelleth there. They shal roare together like lyons, and as the ponge lyons when they be angrye so shal they bende them selues. In their hea Jer. 51.b te shall I set drynke before them, and they shalbe dronken for ioye: * Then shal they slepe an euerlastinge slepe, and neuer wake saieth ꝑ LORDE. I shal cause them downe to be slayne like shepe, like wethers, & goates. O how was Sesak wōne? O, how was the glory of the whole londe taken? how happeneth it, that Babilon is so wondred at amonge the heithen? There is risen ouer Babilon, & hath couered her with his greate wawes. Hir cities are layed wayst, the londe lieth vnbuylded and voyde: it is a londe where no man dwelleth, and where no man trauelleth thorow. Moreouer, I will vyset *Bel at Babilō: and the thinge that he hath swalowed vp, that same shal I plucke out of his mouth. The Gentiles also shall renne nomore vnto him, yee and the walles of Babilon shall fall.

O my people, *come out of Babilon, that euery man maye saue his life, from the fearfull wrath of the LORDE. Be not faynthearted, and feare not at euery rumoure that shalbe herde in the lōde: for euery yeare bringeth newe tydinges, yee strange wickednes and lordshipe. And lo, the tyme commeth that I will vyset the ymages of Babilon, & the whole londe shalbe confounded, & all hir slayne shall lye in the myddest of her. *Heauen and earth with all that is therin shall reioyce ouer Babilon, when the destroyers shal come vpon her from the north saieth the LORDE.

*Like as Babilon hath bestes broght to slaynge many out of Israel: so shal there fall many, and be slayne in al hir kingdome. ye that haue escaped the sworde, haste you, & abide not still, remembre the LORDE a farre off, & thinke vpon Jerusalem, for we be confounded to heare the blasphemies: our faces were couered with shame, because the strange aleauntes came in to the Sanctuary of the LORDE. Wherfore beholde (saieth the LORDE) the tyme commeth, that I will vyset the ymages of Babilon, and throughout the whole londe they shall mourne and fall. * Though Babilon clymmed vp vnto heauen, and kepte her power on hir yet shal I sende her destroyers saieth the LORDE.

A pitieous crie shal be herde from Babilon, and a greate myserye from the londe of the Caldees: when the LORDE destroyeth them, and when he dryueth out the hie make and proude boastinge, wherewith they haue bene as furious as ꝑ waues of great waterfloudes, and made great crakes with their wordes. For the destroyers shall come vpon her (euen vpon Babilon) which shal take hir worthies, and drynke their bowes: for God is disposed to auenge himself vpon them, and sufficiently to recompence them. yee (saieth the LORDE) I will make their princes, their wise men, their chefe rulers and all their worthies, dronken: & ꝑ they shal slepe an euerlastinge slepe, and neuer wake: Thus saieth the kinge, whose name is the LORDE of hoostes.

Moreouer thus saieth the LORDE of hoostes: The thicke wall of Babilō shal be broken, and hir proude gates shalbe brent vp. And the thinge that the Gētiles and the peo ple haue wrought with greate trauayle and labour, shall come to naught, and be consumed in the fyre.

This is the charge that Jeremy gaue vn to Sarias the sonne of Nerias, the sonne of Maasia, when he wente towarde Babilon with Sedechias the kynge of Juda, in the fourth yeare of his reygne. Now thys Sarias was a peareable prynce Jeremy wrote in a boke, all ỹ misery that shulde come vpõ Babilon, yee and all these sermons that be writen agaynst Babilon, and gaue Sarias this charge: When thou comest vnto Babilon, se that thou rede all these wordes, and saye: O LORD, thou art determined to rote out this place, so that nether people nor catell shall dwel there ony more, but to lie waist forever: and when thou hast redde out ỹ boke, bynde a stone to it, & cast in the middest of Euphrates, & saye: * Euen thus shall Babilon synke, & be thrust downe with the burthe of trouble, that I will bringe vpon her: so ỹ she shall never come vp agayne. Thus farre the prechinges of Jeremy.

The.lij. Chapter.

SEdechias * was .xxi. yeare olde, when he was made kynge, & he raigned .xi. yeares in Jerusalē. His mothers name was Hamithal, Jeremies doughter of Lobna. He lyued wickedly before the LORDE euen as Joachim dyd. Wherfore the LORD was angry at Jerusalem & Juda, so longe till he had cast thē out of his presence. And Sedechias fell from the kynge of Babilon. * But in ỹ .ix. yeare of his raigne. In the tēth moneth, the tenth daye of the moneth it happened, that Nabuchodonosor kynge of Babilon with all his hoost came before Jerusalem, and beleged it, & made them bulwarkes rounde about it. And thys beseginge of the cite endured vnto the .xi. yeare of kyng Sedechias.

And in the fourth moneth, the .ix. daye of the moneth, there was so greate honger in the cite: that there were no more vitayles for the people of the londe. So all the soulyers brake awaye, and fled out of the cytye by nyght, thorow ỹ waye of the porte betwene the two walles by the kynges garden. Now the Caldees had cōpassed the cite rounde about, yet went these men their waye towarde the wildernesse.

And so the Caldees folowed vpon them, and toke Sedechias the kyng in the felde of Jericho, when hys hoost was runne from hym. So they caryed the kynge awaye prisoner to Reblatha, vnto the kynge of Babilon in the londe of Hemath * where he gaue iudgment vpon hym. Jere.36.b

The kynge of Babilon also caused Sedechias sonnes be slayne before his face, yee & put all the prynces of Juda to death at Reblatha. Moreouer he put out the eyes of Sedechias, caused him be bounde with cheynes, to be caried vnto Babilon: & let hym lye in prison, till he dyed.

Now ỹ tenth daye of the fyfth moneth in the .xix. yeare of Nabuchodonosor kynge of Babilon, Nabularadan the chefe captayne and the kynge of Babilons seruauntes came vnto Jerusalem, & brent vp the house of the LORDE. He brent vp also the kynges palace, all the houses & all the gorgeous buyldinges in Jerusalē. And the whole hoost of the Caldees that were with the chefe captayne, brake downe all the walles of Jerusalem rounde about.

As for the poore people & such folke as yet was left in the cite, which also were falle to the kyng of Babylon, yet & what people as yet remayned: Nabularadan the chefe captayne caried them awaye prisoners. But ỹ poore people of the countre, dyd Nabularadan the chefe captayne leaue in the londe, to occupie the vynyardes & feldes. The Caldees also brake the brasen pyllers, that were in the house of the LORDE, yee the seates & the brasen lauer that was in the house of the LORD: & caried all the metall of them vnto Babilon. They toke awaye also the cauldrons, shoules, flesshookes, sprinklers, spones & all ỹ brasen vessel that was occupied in the seruyce: with the basens, colepānes, sprinklers, pottes, candelsticckes, spones, & cuppes wherof some were of golde, and some of syluer.

The chefe captayne toke also the two pyllers, the lauer, the .xii. brasen bullockes ỹ stode vnder ỹ seate * which kyng Salomō made in the house of the LORD: & all the vessel conteyned so much metal, that it might not be weyed. For euery piler was .xviii. cubites hye, & the rope that went about it, was .xii. cubites, & foure fingers thick and rounde: Now vpon the rope were brasen knoppes, euery knoppe was fyue cubites hye: & vpon the knoppes were whoopes, & pōgranates rounde about of clene brasse. 3.Reg.7.d

After thys maner were both the pyllers fashioned with ỹ pōgranates, wherof there were an hundreth and .xxti. whiche hanged vpon the whoopes rounde about. The chefe captayne also toke Sarias ꝓ hie prest, & Sophonias that was chefe next him, and ꝓ thre kepers of the treasury. He toke out of ꝓ citie a chamberlayne which was a captayne of ꝓ souldyers, & seuen men that were the kinges seruauntes, which were founde in the cite: & Sepher a captayne that vsed to muster the men of warre: with lx. men of the countre ꝓ were taken in the citie. These Nabu aradan the chefe captayne toke, and caried them to the kynge of Babilon vnto Reblatha: and ꝓ kynge of Babilon caused them to be put to death at Reblatha in the londe of Hemath. And thus Juda was ledde awaye captyue, out of his owne londe.

This is the summe of the people, whom Nabuchodonosor ledde awaye captyue.

¶ In the seuenth yeare of hys reigne, he caried awaye of the Jewes, thre thousande thre and xxxty. In the xviii. yeare Nabuchodonosor caried awaye from Jeru sale eyght hundreth & xxxii. personnes In the xxiii. yeare of Nabuchodonosor Nabu aradā ꝓ chefe captayne, toke awaye seuen hundreth xlv. Jewes prisoners. The whole summe of all the prisoners, is fourethousande and syxhundreth.

4.Re.25. *In the xxviii. yeare after that Joachim the kynge of Juda was caried awaye in the xxv. daye of the xii. moneth, Euilmerodach kynge of Babilon (the same yeare that he reigned) gaue Joachim the kynge of Juda his pardon, and let hym out of prison, and spake louyngly to hym: And set hys trone aboue the trones of the other kynges ꝓ were with hym in Babilon He chaūged also the clothes of his prison, yee and he dyd eate with him all hys lyfe longe. And he had a continuall lyuynge geuen hym of the kynge of Babilō, euery daye a certayne thynge alowed hym, all dayes of hys lyfe, vntyl he dyed.

¶ The ende of the prophet Jeremy.

The Lamentacions of Jeremy.

¶ And it came to passe (after Israel was brought in to captyuyte, and Jerusalem destroyed) that Jeremy the prophet sat weepynge, mourenynge and makynge hys mone in Jerusalē: so that with an heuy harte he syghed, and sobbed, & wepte.

The. ij. Chapter.

Alas, how sytteth the citie so desolate, that sometyme was full of people: how is she become like a wedowe, * whiche was the lady of all nacions: & howe is she brought vnyet tribute, that ruled all londes?

She wepeth sore in the night, so that the teares runne downe hir chekes: for amonge all hir louers there is none, that geueth her ony comforte: * yee hir nerre frendes haue dealt vnfaythfully with her, & are become hir enemies.

Juda is taken prisoner, because she was defyled & for seruytude so many straunge people, she dwelleth now amonge the Heithen. She fyndeth no rest: all they that persecuted her, toke her, and so she dwelleth amōge hir enemies.

The stretes of Sion mourne, because no man commeth more to the solempne feastes. All hir gates are desolate, hir prestes make lamentacion, hir maydens are carefull, and she her self is in greate heuynesse.

Hir enemies are fallen vpon hir heade, & haue put her to shame: for the LORD hath chastened her, because of hir greate wickednesse: * hir children are ledde awaye captyue before their enemie.

All the bewtye of the doughter of Sion is awaye. hir prynces are become like wethers, that fynde no pasture. They are dryuē away before their enemie, so ꝓ they haue no more power.

Now doth Jerusalem remembre the tyme of hir misery & dislobedience, yee the ryches & pleasure ꝓ she hath had in tymes past. Synge hir people is brought downe thorowe the power of their enemie, & there is no man that wyll helpe her: hir enemies stode lokinge at her, and laugh hir Sabbath dayes to scorne.

Jerusalem synned euer more & more, therefore is she come in decaye. All they that honour her, dispise her: for they haue sene hir vnthinesse, yee she syghyth, and is ashamed of her selfe.

Hir skyrtes are defyled, she remembred not what wolde folowe: therefore is hir fall so greate, & there is no man to comforte her. O

LORD, consider my trouble, for myne enemie hath the vpperhonde.

The enemie hath put hys honde to all the precious thinges that she had, yee euen before her eyes came the Heythen in and oute of the Sanctuary: * whome thou (neuertheles) hast forbydden to come within thy congregacion.

* All hir people seke their bread with heuynesse, & loke what precious thinge euery mã hath, that geueth he for meate, to saue his life. Consider (O LORDE) & se, howe vyle I am become.

O ye all that go forbyd, beholde and se, yf there be ony sorowe like vnto myne, wherwith the LORDE hath troubled me, in the daye of hys fearefull wrath.

From aboue hath he sent downe a fyre, into my bones & chastened me: he hath laied a net for my fete, and throwne me wyde ope: he hath made me desolate, so that I muste ever be mourninge.

The yocke of my transgression is come at the last, with hys honde hath he taken it vp, and put it aboute my neck. My strength is gone: the LORDE hath delyuered me in to euele handes, wherout I can not quyte my self.

The LORD hath destroyed all the mighty men, that were in me. He hath proclamed a feast, to slaughter all my best me. The LORD hath troden downe the doughter of Juda, lyke as it were in a wyne presse.

* Therfore do I wepe, and myne eyes gush out of water: for the cõforter that shulde quycken me, is farre fro me. My children are loren awaye, for why? the enemie hat gotten the ouerhonde.

Sion casteth out hir handes, & there is no man to comforte her. The LORD hath layed the enemies rounde about Jacob, and Jerusalem is as it were a menstruous woman, in the myddest of them.

* The LORD is righteous, for I haue prouoked his countenance vnto anger: O take heede all ye people, and consider my heuynes. My maydens and my yongemen are ledde awaye in to captiuite.

I called for my louers (but they begyled me: for my prestes and counceliers, but they perished: euen whyle they sought for meate, to saue their lyues.

Consider (O LORDE) how I am troubled, & my bowde is disquieted, my hart turneth aboute in me, & I am full of heuynesse. The swearde hurteth me without, and within, I am lyke vnto death.

They heare my mo urnynge, but there is none that will cõforte me. All myne enemies haue herde of my trouble, & are glad therof because thou hast done it. But thou shalt bringe forth the tyme, when they also shall be lyke vnto me.

From the shall come all theyr aduersite: thou shalt plucke them awaye, euen as thou hast plucked me, because of all my wickednesse. For my sorowe is very great, & my harte is heuy.

The.ij.Chapter.

ALas * howe hath the LORDE darckened the doughter of Sion so sore in hys wrath: As for the honoure of Israell, he hath casten it downe from heaue vpon the earth: how happeneth it, þ he remembred not his owne * fotestole, whe he was angrie? Exo.4.a 1.par.29.a

The LORD hath cast downe all the glory of Jacob without ony fauoure: All the stronge places of the doughter Juda hath he broken in his wrath, & throwne thẽ downe to the grounde: hir kyngdome & hir princes hath he suspended. Psa.98.a.

In the wrath of his indignacion he hath broken all the horne of Israel: he hath withdrawen his right hõde from the enemie: yea a flame of fyre is kyndled in Jacob, & hath consumed vp all rounde aboute.

He hath bent his bowe lyke an enemie, he hath fastened his right honde as an aduersary: and euery thynge that was pleasaũt to se, he hath smyten it downe. He hath poured out hys wrath lyke a fyre, in to the tabernacle of the doughter Sion.

The LORDE is become, like as it were an enemie, he hath cast downe Israel & all his places: yee all his stroge holdes hath he destroyed, & fylled the doughter of Juda wt much sorow and heuynesse.

B

* Hir tabernacle (which was lyke a garde of pleasure) hath he destroyed: hir hye solẽpne feastes hath he put downe. The LORD hath brought it so to passe, that the hie solẽpne feastes & Sabbathes in Sion, are clene forgotte. In his heuy displeasure hath he made the kynge & prestes to be despised. Jer.7.b.

The LORD hath forsaken his owne auter, & is wroth with his owne Sanctuary, & hath geuen the walles of their towres into þ hondes of the enemie. Their enemies made a noyse in the house of the LORD, as it had bene in a solempne feastdaye.

The LORD thought to breake downe þ walles of the doughter Sion, he spredout his lyne, & drewe not in his hõde, tyll he had destroyed them. Therfore mourne the turrettes and the broken walles together.

Hir portes are casten downe to the groũde, hir barres are broken & smytte in sonder:
Jere.52.b. *his kyng & princes are caried awaye to the Gentiles. They haue nether lawe nor prophetes, nor yet ony vision from the LORDE.

C The Senatours of the doughter Sion sit vpon the grounde in silence, they haue strowed asshes vpon their heades, and gyrded them selues with sackcloth. The maydens of Jerusalem hange downe their heades to the grounde.

What shall I saye of the? (O thou doughter Jerusalem) to whome shal I lyken the? To whome shall I cõpare the, o thou doughter Sion) to comforte the withall? Thy hurte is lyke a mayne see, who maye heale the?

D All they that go by the, clappe their hondes at the: hissinge and waggynge their heades vpõ the doughter Jerusalem, and saye: is this the cite that men call so fayre, wherin the whole londe reioyseth?

All thine enemies gape vpon the, whispe tinge and bytinge their teth, sayenge: let vs deuoure, for the ỹme that we loked for, is come: we haue founde and sene it.

The LORDE hath fulfilled the thinge, that he was purposed to do: and performed that he had deuysed longe agoo: he hath destroyed, and not spared. He hath caused thyne aduersary to trumphe ouer the, and set vp the horne of thine enemie.
Dan.4.f. 10.a. *Let thine hart crie vnto the LORDE, O
Jere.29.c. thou cite of the doughter Sion: let thy teares rũne downe like a riuer daye & night: rest not, & let not the aple of thine eye leaue of.

E Stonde vp, and make thy prayer in the first watch of the night, poure out thine hart like water before the LORDE: lift vp thine hondes to hym, for the lyues of thy põge chil dren, that dye of honger in the stretes.

Beholde (O LORDE) & consider, why hast thou gathered me vp so clene? Shall ỹ wo men then eate their owne frute, euen chyldren of a spanne longe? Shal the preistes and prophetes be slayne thus in the Sanctuary of the LORDE?

Yonge & olde lye behynde the stretes vpõ the grounde, my maydens & youngemen are slayne with the swearde: whome thou in the daye of thy wrothfull indignacion hast put to death: yee euen thou hast put the to death and not spared them.

Thy neighbours that are rounde about me, hast thou called, as it were to a feastinge so that in the daye of the LORDE wrath none escaped, nether was any left behinde. Those that I had brought vp & nursshed, hath myne enemy destroyed.

The. iii. Chapter.

I Am the man, that (vnder ỹ rode of hys wrath) haue experience of myserye.

He dryue me forth, and led me per in to darknesse, but not in ighe.

Agaynst me only he turneth hys honde, & layeth it euer vpon me.

My flesh & my skynne hath he made old, and my bones hath he bruised.

He hath buylded rounde about me, & fylled me in with gall and trauaple.

He hath set me in darknesse, as they that be dead for euer.

He hath so hedged me in, that I cannot get out, & hath layed heuy lynkes vpon me.

Though I crie & call pitcously, yet putteth he not my prayer.

He hath stopped vp my wayes with hewen squared stones, & made my pathes croked.

He layeth waite for me like a bear, and as a lyon in a hole.

He hath marred my wayes, and brused me in peces, he hath layed me waste altogether.

He hath bent his bowe, and made me as it were a mark to shute at.

The arowes of his quyuer hath he shot, euen in to my reynes.

I am laughed to scorne of all my people, & they make songes vpon me all ỹ daye long.

He hath fylled me with bytternesse, & turned me wormwood to drynke.

He hath smytte my teth in peces, & couered me in the dust.

He hath put my soule out of rest, I forget all good thynges.

I thought in my self: I am vndone, for

is no hope for me in the LORDE.

Remembre yet my mysery and my trouble, the wormwood and the gall.

Yee thou shalt remembre them, for my soule
melteth awaye in me.

Whyle I cõsidre these thinges in my hart,
I get a hope agayne.

Namely, that the mercies of the LORD
are not clene gone, & that his louinge kyndnesse ceaseth not.

His faithfulnesse is greate, and reneweth
it self as the morninge.

C *The LORD is my portion (sayeth my soule) therfore will I hope in hym.

O how good is the LORD vnto the, that put their trust in hym, and to the soule that seketh after hym?

O how good is it with stilnesse to wayte &
tarie, for the saluacion of the LORDE.

O howe good is it for a man, to take the
yock vpon him from his youth vpe

He sitteth alone, he holdeth him still, and dwelleth quietly by hym self.

He layeth his face vpon the earth, yf (per case) there happen to be ony hope.

He offereth his cheke to the smyter, he will be content with reproues.

For the LORD will not forsake forever.

*But though he do cast of, yet (acordinge to ꝑ multitude of hys mercies) he receaueth
to grace agayne.

For he doth not plage, & cast out the chyl-
dren of men from hys harte.

To treade all the presoners of the earth

What is he then that sayeth: there shulde
some thinge be done without ꝑ LORDES commaundement.

Out of the mouth of the moost hyghest
goeth not euell and good.

Wherfore then murmureth the lyuynge
man: let him mutmure at hys owne synne.

*Let vs loke well vpon oure owne wayes & remembre oure selues, and turne agayne
to the LORDE.

Let vs lift vp oure hartes with our hon-
des vnto the LORD, that is in heauen.

We haue bene dyssemblers & haue offended, wilt thou therfore not be intreated?

Thou hast couered vs in thy wrath, & persecuted vs, thou hast slayne vs without ony fauoure.

*Thou hast hyd thy self in a cloude, that

Thou hast enclyned thy self vnto me, whe
I called vpon the, & hast sayde: feare not.

Thou (O LORD) hast mayntened ꝑ cau se of my soule, and hast redemed my lyfe.

O LORD, thou hast sene my blasphemers, &
take thou my cause vpon the.

Thou hast well consydred howe they go aboute to do me harme, & that all their coun
cels are agaynst me.

Thou hast herde their despyteful wordes

Thou seyst also their sittinge downe, and their ryssinge vp, they make their songes of nothinge but of me.

Rewarde them (O LORDE) acordynge
to the workes of their hondes.

Geue the the thunge, that their owne har
te is afrayed of: euen thy curse.

Persecute them, (O LORD) with thy in-dignacion, & rote them out from vnder the heauen.

Leui.26.f. handes: that they might be their meate, in ꝑ miserable destruccion of the doughter of my people.

Trē.2.a. * The LORDE hath performed his heuy wrath: he hath poured out the furiousnes of his displeasure He hath kyndled a fyre in Sion, whiche hath consumed the foundacions therof.

Nether the kynges of the earth, nor all ꝑ inhabitours of the worlde, wolde haue be-
C lieued, that the enemie & aduersary shulde haue come in at the gates of ꝑ citie of Jerusalem.

Which neuertheles is come to passe for ꝑ synnes of hir prophetes, and for the wickednesse of hir prestes, that haue shed * innocentes bloude within her.

Soo that these blynde men wēte stomblinge in the stretes, and stayned them selues vñ bloude, whiche els wolde touche no bloudy cloth.

But they cried vnto euery man: kepe ꝑ stay nynge, awaye, get you hēce, touch it not. For (sayde they) ye must be vyent, ye must dwell amonge the Gentiles, & byde no longer here.

The countenaunce of the LORDE hath bānyshed them, & shall neuer loke more vpō them: For they them selues nether regarded the prestes, nor pitied their elders.

Wherfore yet oure eyes fayle vs, whyle we loke for vayne helpe: seynge we be euer
D waytinge vpon a people, that can do vs no good.

They laye so sharpe waite for vs, that we can not go safe vpon the stretes: for oure ende is come, ourē dayes are fulfilled, oure ende is here.

* Oure persecuters are swifter then egles
Jer.4.f. Thren.4.a. of the ayre: they folowed vpon vs oure the mountaynes, layed waite for vs in the wildernesse.

The very * breth of oure mouth: euen the
Gen.2.a. anoynted LORD himself shalbe taken in oure synnes, of whom we saye: Under his shadowe we shalbe preserued amonge the Heithen.

And thou (O doughter Edom) that dwellest in the lōde of Hus, be glad and reioyce: for the cuppe shal come vnto the also, which whē thou suppest of, thou shalt be dronken
Thy sinne is wel punished (O thou doughter Sion) he shall not suffre the to be caried awaye ony more. But thy wickednesse (O doughter Edom) shall he vyset, and for thy synnes sake, he shal lede the in to captiuyte.

The.v. Chapter.

All to remembrance (O LORD) what we haue suffred, cōsider & sye our cōfusiō. Our enheritance is turned to ſtraūgers, oure houses to the aleauntes. We are become carefull and fatherlesse, and oure mothers are as ꝑ wydowes. We are fayne to dryncke oure owne water for money, & oure owne wood must we bye with money. Oure neckes are vnder persecucion we are weery, and haue no rest.

Afore tyme we yelded oure selues to the Egipcians, and now to the Assirians, only
Jer.31.a. that we might haue bread ynough. * Oure
Ezech.16.a fathers (which now are gone) haue synned, and we must beare their wickednesse. Seruauntes haue the rule of vs, and no man delyuereth vs out of their handes. We must get our lyuynge with ꝑ parell of oure lyues, because of the drouth of the wildernesse.

Oure skynne is as it had bene brent in an ouen, for very sore hōger. The wyues are ra-wished in Sion, and the maydens in the cities of Juda. The prynces are hanged vp with the honde of ỳ enemies, they haue not shewed the olde sagemen, they haue taken youngmens lyues from them, and the boyes are hanged vp vpon trees. The elders syt no more vnder the gates, and the yonge men no more playenge of musick. The ioye of oure harte is gone, oure mery quete is turned to mourninge. The garlande of oure heade is fallen: alas, that euer we synned so sore.

Therfore oure hart is full of heuynesse, and oure eyes dymme: because of the hill of Sion that is destroyed, In so much, ỳ the foxes renne vpon it. But thou (O LORD) that remaynest for euermore, and thy seate endure with out ende: wherfore wilt thou still forget vs, and forsake vs so longe? *O LORDE: Turne thou vs vnto the, and so shall we be turned. Renewe oure dayes as in olde tyme, for thou hast now banished vs longe ynough, and bene sore displeased at vs.

The.first.Chapter.

IT chaunced, in the. xxx. yeare þ fifth daye of þ fourth Moneth that I was amonge the presonets by þ ryuer of Cobar: where the heauens opened, and I sawe a vision of God. Now the fifth daye of the moneth, made full the fyfthe yeare off kynge Joachims captiuyte. At the same tyme came the worde of the LORDE vnto Ezechiel the sonne of Buzi preest, in the londe of the Caldees by the water of Cobar, Ezr.10.f. * where the honde of the LORDE came vpon him. And I loked: and beholde, a stormy wynde came out of þ north with a greate cloude full of fyre, which with his glistre lightened all round aboute.

And in the middest of the fyre it was all cleare, and as it were the likenesse of foure beastes, which were fashioned like a man: saue ynge, that euery one had foure faces, and foure wynges.

B Their legges were straight, but their fete were like bullokes fete, and they glistred, as it had bene fayre scoured metall. Vnder their wynges vpon all the foure corners, they had mens hondes. Their faces & their wynges were towarde þ foure corners: yet were the wynges so, þ one euer touched another. When they wente, they turned the not aboute: but eche one wete straigth forwarde

Ezr.10.b. * * Upon the righthside of these foure, were their faces like the face of a man, and the face of a Lyon: But vpon the lefthside, they had the face of an ore and the face off an aegle.

Their faces also and their wynges were spred out aboue: so that two wynges off one touched euer two wynges of another, and with the other two they couered their bodies. Euery one when it wente, it wente straight forwarde.

T Where as the spyrete led them, thither
r. they wente, * and turned not aboute in their goynge.

The fashion and countenaunce of the beastes was like hote coales of fyre, euen as though burnynge cresshettes had bene amonge the beastes: and the fyre gaue a glistre, and out off the fyre there wente lightninge. When the beastes wente forwarde and backwarde, one wolde haue thought, it had lightened. ¶ Now when I had well considered the beastes, I sawe a worke off wheles vpon the earth with foure faces also like the beastes.

The fashion & worke of the wheles was D like the see. The foure wheles were ioyned and made (to loke vpon) as it had bene one whele in another. When one wente forwarde they wente all foure, and turned them not aboute in their goinge. They were hye, greate, and horrible to loke vpon.

Their bodies were full off eyes rounde aboute them all foure. When the beastes wente, the wheles wente also with them. And when the beastes lift the selues vp fro the earth, the wheles were lift vp also. Whyther so euer the spyrete wente, thither wente they also, and the wheles were lift vp and folowed them, for the spyrete of life was in the wheles. When the beastes wente forth, stode still, or lift them selues vp from the earth: then the wheles also wente, stode still and were lift vp, for the breth off life was in the wheles.

Aboue ouer the heades off the beastes there was a firmament, which was fashioned as it had bene off the moost pure cristall, and that was spred out aboue vpon their heades: vnder the same firmamet were their wynges layed abrode, one towarde another and two wynges couered the body off euery beast. And when they wente forth, I herde the noyse off their wynges, like the noyse of greate waters, as it had bene the voyce of the greate God, and a rushinge together as it were off an hoost off men. And when they stode still, they let downe their wynges. Now when they stode still, and had letten downe their wynges, it thondred in the firmament, that was aboue their heades.

Aboue the firmamet that was ouer their heades, there was the fashion of a seate, as it had bene made off Saphir. Upon the seate there sat one like a man. I beheld him, and he was like a cleare light, as it had bene all off fyre within from his loynes vpwarde.

And beneth when I loked vpon him vnder the loynes, me thought he was like shyninge fyre, þ geueth light on euery syde.

ge the shyne and glistre that lightened rou de about, was like a raynbowe, which in a rayny daye apeareth in the cloudes. Euē so was the similitude, wherein the glory off the LORDE apeared. When I sawe it, I fell vpon my face, and herkened vnto the voyce of him, that spake.

The.ii.Chapter.

Then sayde he vnto me: Stonde vp vpon thy fete (O thou sonne of mā) and I will talke with the. * And as he was commonynge with me, the spyrete came in to me, and set me vp vpon my fete: so that I marked the thynge that he sayde vnto me. And he sayde: Beholde, thou sonne off man: I will sende the to the children off Israel to these runnagates and obstinate people: for they haue taken parte agaynst me, and are runne awaye fro me: * both they, & their forefathers, vnto this daye.

yet I will sende vnto the a people that haue rough vsages and stiff stomackes: vnto whom thou shalt saye on this maner: This the LORDE God him self hath spoken, that whether they be obedient or no (for it is a frowarde housholde) they maye knowe yet that there hath bene a prophet amonge them.

* Therfore (thou sonne of man) feare them not, nether be afrayed of their wordes: for they shal rebell agaynst the, and despise the yet thou shalt dwell amonge scorpions: but feare not their wordes, be not abashed at their lokes, for it is a frowarde housholde.

Se that thou speake my wordes vnto them, wether they be obedient or not, for they are obstinate. ¶ Therfore (thou sonne of man) obeye thou all thinges, that I saye vnto the and be not thou stifnecked, like as they are a stifnecked housholde. Open thy mouth, and eate that I geue the.

And as I was lokynge vp, beholde, there was sent vnto me an hande, wherein was a closed boke: and the hande opened it before me, and it was written within and without full off carefull mournynges: alas and wo.

The.iii.Chapter.

Then sayde he vnto me: thou sonne of man, * eate that, what so euer it be: yee eate that closed boke, and go thy waye and speake vnto the children of Israel. So I opened my mouth, and he gaue me the boke for to eate. and sayde vnto me:

Thou sonne of man, thy belly shal eate, and thy bowels shalbe filled with the boke, that I geue the. Then dyd I eate the boke, * and it was in my mouth sweter then hony. Apo.10.b.

And he sayde vnto me: * thou sonne of man get the foorth vnto the house of Israel, and shewe them the wordes, that I commaūde the: for I sende the not to a people that hath a straunge, vnknowne, or harde speache, but vnto the house of Israel: Not to many nacions, which haue diuerse speaches and harde languages, whose wordes thou vnderstondest not: * Neuertheles, yf I sent the to those people, they wolde folowe the: But the house of Israel will not folowe the, for they wil not folowe me: yee al the house of Israel haue stif foreheades and harde hartes. * Beholde therfore, I will make thy face preuayle agaynst their faces, and harden thy forehead agaynst theyr forheades, so yt thy forehead shal be harder then an * Adamant or flyntstone: that thou mayest feare them the lesse, and be lesse afrayed of the, for they are a frowarde housholde.

He sayde moreouer vnto me: thou sonne of man, take diligent hede with thine eares, to the wordes that I speake vnto the, fasten them in thine harte: and go to the preseners off thy people, speake vnto them, and saye on this maner:

Thus the LORDE God hath spoken! Wheter ye heare, or heare not. With that, the spyrete toke me vp. And I herde the noyse of a greate rushinge and remouynge off the moost blessed glory of the LORDE out of his place.

I herde also the noyse of the wynges off the beastes, that rushed one agaynst another, yee and the rattlynge of the wheles, that were by them, which rushinge and noyse was very greate.

* Now when the spyrete toke me vp, and caried me awaye, I wēte with an heuy and a sorowfull mynde, but the honde of ỳ LORDE comforted me right sone.

And so in the begynnynge of the month Abib. I came to the preseners, * that dwelt by the water off Cobar, and remayned in that place, where they were: and so continued I amonge them seuen dayes, being very sory.

And when the seuen dayes were expyred, the LORDE sayde vnto me: * Thou sonne of man, I haue made the a watchman vnto the house of Israel: therfore take good hede to the wordes, of my mouth and gyue them warnynge at my commaundement.

If I saye vnto the, concernynge ꝑ vngodly mā, that (without doute) he muste dye, and thow geuest hym not warnige, nor speakest vnto him, that he maye turne from his euel waye, and so to lyue: Then shall the same vngodly man dye in his owne vnrighteousnes: but his bloude will I requyre of thyne honde. Neuertheles, yf thou geue warnynge vnto the wicked, and he yet forsake not his vngodlynesse: then shall he dye in his owne wickednesse, but thou hast discharged thy soule.

Eze. 18. d. Now yf a righteous man go from, *his righteousnesse, and do the vnge that is euel: I will laye a stomblinge blocke before him, and he shall dye, because thou hast not geuen him warninge: yee, dye shall he in his owne synne, so that the vertue, which he dyd before, shall not be thought vpon: but his bloude will I requyre of thyne honde.

Neuertheles, yf thou exhortest the righteous, that he synne not, and so the righteous do not synne: Then shall he lyue, because he hath receaued thy warnynge, and thou hast discharged thy soule. And there came the honde of the LORDE vpon me, and he sayde vnto me: Stonde vp, and go in to the felde, that I maye there talke with the.

D So when I had rysen vp, and gone forth in to the felde: Beholde, the glory of ꝑ LORDE stode there, *like as I sawe it afore, by the water of Cobar.

Eze. 1. a.

Eze. 2. f. *Then fell I downe vpon my face, and ꝑ spyrite came in to me, which set me vp vpō my fete, and sayde thus vnto me: Go thy waye, and sparre thy selfe in thyne house. Beholde (O thou sonne of man) there shall chaynes be brought for the, to bynde the withall, so that thou shalt not escape out of thē. And I wil make thy tūge so to cleue to ꝑ rofe of thy mouth, that thou shalt be domme and not be as a chider with them: for it is an obstinate housholde.

But when I speake vnto the, then open thy mouth, and saye: Thus sayeth the LORDE God: whoso heareth, let him heare: whoso will not, let him leaue: for it is a frowarde housholde.

The.xiiii. Chapter.

Thou sonne of man: take a tyle stone, and laye it before the, and describe vpon it the cite of Jerusalem: how it is beseged, how boulwerkes and stronge diches are grauen on euery syde of it: describe also tentes, ꝛ an hoost of men rounde about it.

Moreouer, take an yron panne, and set it betwixte the, and the cite in steade of an yō wall. Thē set thy face towarde it, beseege it, and laye ordinaunce agaynst it, to wynne it. This shall be a token vnto the house of Israel. But thou shalt slepe vpō thy left syde, ꝛ laye ꝑ synne of the house of Israel vpon ꝑ.

Certayne dayes appointed, shalt thou slepe vpon that syde, and beare their synnes.

*Neuertheles I will appointe the a tyme (to put of their synnes) and the nombre of ꝑ dayes: Thre hundreth, and.xc. dayes must thou beare the wickednesse of the house of Israel. Whē thou hast fulfilled these dayes lye downe agayne, and slepe vpon thy right syde. xl. dayes, and beare the synnes of the house of Juda.

Dan. 9. a. *I daye for a yeare, a daye (I saye) for a yeare, will I euer laye vpon the. Therfore ꝑ set now thy face agaynst that beseged Jerusalem, and discouer thine arme, that thou mayest prophecie agaynst it.

Beholde I will laye chaynes vpon the, that thou shalt not turne the from one syde to another, till thou hast ended the dayes of thy syege.

Wherfore, take vnto the wheate, barly, beanes, lentylles, mylle, and fitches: and put these together in a vessell, ꝛ make ꝑ loaues of bread therof, acordinge to the nombre of the dayes that thou must lye vpon that syde that thou mayest haue bread to eate, for thre hundreth and.xc. dayes.

And the meate that thou eatest, shall haue a certayne waight appointed: Namely twentie sycles euery daye. This appointed meate shalt thou eate daylye, frō the begynnynge to the ende.

Thou shalt drynke also a certayne measure of water: Namely, the.vi. parte of an Hin shalt thou drynke daylye from the begynnynge to the ende. Barly cakes shalt thou eate, yet shalt thou first strake them ouer with mans donge, that they maye seme

C And with that, sayde the LORDE: *Euen thus shal the children of Israel eate their defyled bread in the myddest of the Gentiles, amonge whom I will scatre them.

Then sayde I: O LORDE God beholde my soule was yet neuer stayned: for frō my youth vp vnto this houre, I dyd neuer eate of a dead carcase, or of that which was slayne of wilde beastes, nether came there eny vnclene flesh in my mouth.

Whereunto he answered me, and sayde: Wellenow, I will graunte ꝑ to take cowes wonge, by the bounge of a man, & to strake the bread ouer withall, before them.

And he sayde vnto me: Beholde thou son of man, I will myniche all the prouysion of bread in Jerusalem, so that they shall eate their bread, and eate it with scarcenesse. But as for watre, they shall haue a very litle measure therof, to drynke. And when they haue nomore bread nor water, one shall be destroyed with another, & samisly awaye for their wickednesse.

The.v. Chapter.

Take the then a sharpe knyfe (O thou sonne of man) namely, a rasoure. Take that, and shaue the heere of thy heade & beerd. Then take the scoales and the weight, and deuyde the heere asunder. And burne the thirde parte therof in the fyre in the myddest of the cite, whā the dayes of the syege are ended, and cut the other thirde parte in peces with a knyfe. * As for the thirde parte that remayneth, cast it in the wynde, and then shewe the bare knyfe.

Put afterwarde take a litle of the same, & binde it in thy coate lappe. Then take a cuert ha it, and cast it in the middest of the fyre, and burne it in the fyre. Out of the same fyre shall there goe a flame, vpon the whole house of Israel.

Moreouer thus sayde the LORDE God Thus saieth Jerusalem. I set her in ꝓ mid dest of the heithen and nations, that are rounde aboute her, but she hath despised my iudgementes more then the Gentiles them selues and broken my commaundementes more then the nations, that lye rounde about her: for they haue cast out myne ordinaūces, and not walked in my lawes. Therfore thus saieth ꝓ LORD god. * For so much as ye with youre wickednesse farre exceade the heithen, that dwel rounde aboute you: (for ye haue not walked in my lawes, nother haue ye kepte myne ordinaunces) Therfore thus saieth the LORDE God.

I will also rowe vpon the, for in the myddest of the, will I syt in iudgment, in ꝓ sight of the heithen, and will handle the of such a fashion, as I neuer dyd before, and as I neuer will do seeing that tyme forth, and that because of all thy abhominations. * For ſ ſ the fathers ſhall be layne to eate their owne ſo , and the ſonnes their owne fa there . a couete will I kepe in the, and the whole ſcatter will I ſcatre in to all the wynde,

Therfore, as truly as I lyue (saieth the LORDE God) seynge thou hast defyled my sanctuary, with all maner of abhominacions and with all thy shamefull offences: For this cause will I also destroye the. Myne eye shall not pytie the, nother will I spare the. C

* One thirde parte within the shall dye of the pestilence and of honger: Another thirde parte shall be layne downe rounde about the, with the swearde: The other thirde parte that remayneth, will I scatre abrode to warde all the wyndes, and drawe out the swearde after them. Thus will I performe my indignacion and set my wrath vpon them, and ease my selfe. So that when I haue fulfilled myne anger vpon them, they shall knowe, that I am the LORDE which with a feruent gelousy haue spoken it. & Jer. 15, 2

Moreouer I will make the waist, and abhorred, before all the heithen that dwell rounde about the, and in the sight of all them, that go by the: so that when I punish the in my wrath, in myne anger, and with ꝓ plage of my whote displeasure: thou shalt be a very abhomination, shame, a gasinge and wonder, to bringe flocke, amonge the heithen that lye aboute the. D

Euen I the LORDE haue spoken it, and it shal come to passe, when I shute amonge them the parlous darts of honger, which shalbe but death: yee therfore shall I shute thee, because I wil destroye you. * And I will increase hunger, and myntly all the prouysion of bread amonge you. Ezr. 4.5, Plages and mysery will I sende you, yee and wylde beastes also to destroye you. Pestilence & bloudshedding shall come vpon you, and the swearde wil I bringe ouer you Euen I the LORDE, haue sayde it.

The.vi. Chapter.

The worde of the LORDE came vnto me, sayenge: O thou son of man, turne thy face to the * mountaynes of Israel, & prophecie vnto them, & saye: Heare the worde of the LORDE God, ye mountaynes of Israel: Thus hath the LORDE God spoken to the mountaynes, hilles, baleyes, and dales: A Ezr. 36.4

Beholde, I will bringe a swearde ouer you, and destroye youre hye places: I will cast downe youre aulters, and breake downe youre temples. Youre slayne men will I laye before youre goddes, and the dead carcases of ꝓ children of Israel will I cast before their ymages, youre bones will I strowe

rounde aboute youre aulters, and dwellinge places.

The cities shalbe desolate, the hillchapels layed waist: youre aulters destroyed, & broken: youre goddes cast downe, and take awaye, youre tempels layde euen with the grounde, youre owne workes clene roted out. youre slayne men shall lie amonge you
B that ye maye learne to knowe, how that I am the LORDE. Those that amonge you haue escaped the swearde, will I leaue amonge the Gentiles, for I will scatre you amonge the nacions. And they that escape from you, shall thinke vpon me amonge the heithen, wher they shalbe in captiuyte.

As for that whorish and vnfaithfull harte of theirs, wherwith they runne awaye fro me. I will breake it: yee and put out those eyes of theirs, that commune fornication with their Idols.

Then shal they be ashamed, and displeased with their selues, for the wickednesses & abhominacions, which they haue done: and shal learne to knowe, how that it is not in vayne, that I the LORDE speake, to bringe such mystery vpon them.

C The LORDE sayde moreouer vnto me: Smyte thine hondes togeth r, and stampe with thy fete, and saye: Wo worth al the abhominacios and wickednesses of the house of Israel, for because of the, they shal perish with the swearde, with honger, and with pestilece. Who so is farre of, shal dye of ꝑ pestilece he ꝑ is at honde, shal dye with the swearde: & ꝑ other ꝑ are beseged, shal dye of höger.

Thus will I satisfie my worthfull displeasure vpon them. And so shall ye learne to knowe, that I am the LORDE, when youre slayne men lye amonge youre goddes and aboute youre aulters: vpon all hye hilles and toppes of mountaynes, amonge al greue trees, amonge all thicke okes: euen in ꝑ places where they dyd sacrifice to al their Idols. I will stretch myne honde out vpon them, and will make the londe waist: So that it shal lye desolate and voyde, from the wildernesse of Deblat forth, throwout al their habitacions: to learne them for to knowe, that I am the LORDE.

The.vii. Chapter.

THe worde of the LORDE came vnto me, on this maner: The I call, O thou sonne of man. Thus saieth the LORDE God vnto the londe of Israel: The ende commeth, yee verely the ende commeth vpon the foure corners of the earth.

But now shall the ende come vpon the: for I will sende my wrath vpon the, and will punysh the: according to the wayes, and towarde the after all thy abhominacions.

* Myne eye shall not pytie the, neither will I spare the: but rewarde the, according to thy wayes, and declare thy abhominacions. Then shall ye knowe, that I am the LORDE.

Thus saieth the LORDE God. Beholde, one mystery and plage shall come after another: the ende is here. The ende (I saye) that wayteth for the, is come already the houre is come agaynst the, that dwelleth in the londe.

The tyme is at honde, the daye of feare is nye, and no glad tidinges vpon the mountaynes. Therfore, I will hereby poure out my sore displeasure ouer the, and fulfill my wrath vpon the. I will iudge the after thy wayes, and recompence the all thy abhominacions.

* Myne eye shall not pytie the, neither will I spare the: but rewarde the after thy wayes, and shewe thy abhominacions: to learne you for to knowe, how that I am the LORDE, that smyteth. Beholde the daye is here, the daye is come, the houre is runne out. The rodde florysheth, wyl fulnesse waxeth grene, malicious violence is growne vp, and the vngodly waxen to a staff. yet shall there no complaynte be made for them, nor for ꝑ mysery that shall come of these thinges.

The tyme cōmeth, the daye draweth nye. * Who so byeth, let him not reioyce: he that selleth, let hi not be sory: for wrath shall come in the myddest of all resort, that the seller shall not come agayne to the byer, for nother of them both shall lyue. For the vision shall come so greatly ouer all, that it shall not be hyndred: no man also with his wickednesse shall be able to saue his owne lyfe.

The trompettes shall ye blowe, and make you all ready, but no man shall go to the batayll, for I am wroth with all the whole multitude.

The swearde shalbe without pestilence, and honger within: so yt at whose is in the felde, shalbe slayne with the swearde: and he that is in the cite, * shall perish with honger and pestilence.

And such as escape and flye from amonge them, shall be vp on the hilles, like as the doues in the felde: al ouer one shal be alayne

bicause of their owne wickednesse.

All handes shalbe letten downe, and all knees shalbe weake as the water: they shall gyrde them selues with sackcloth, feare shall fall vpon them. Their faces shall be confoūded, and their heades balde: their syluer shall cast in the stretes, and their golde shalbe defiled: for their syluer and golde maye not deliuer them, in ye daye of the fearfull wrath of the LORDE.

They shall not satisfie their hongrie soules, neither fyll their emptie bellies therwith: for it is become their owne decaye thorowe their wickednes: because they * made therof not only costly iewelles for their pompe and pryde, but also abhominable ymages and Idols, for this cause will I make them to be vnclene. Moreouer, I will geue it in to ye handes of the straungers to be spoyled: and ye wicked, for to be robbed, and they shall defile it.

My face will I turne from the, my treasure shall be defyled: for the theues shall go in vnto it, and vnpende it. I will make clene rid of the lande, for the londe is whole defyled with bloudy iudgment of innocent bloude, & the cite is full of abhominactions.

Therefore, I will bringe the moost cruel of the Heithen, to take their houses in possession. I will make ye pryde of the proude to ceasse, and they shall take in their Sanctuary. When this trouble is come, they shall seke peare, but they shal haue none. One mischefe and sorowe shal follow another, & one rumoure shall come after another. Then shal they seke visions in vayne of their prophetes. The lawe shall be gone from the preistes, and wysdome from ye elders. The kyng shall mourne, the princes shalbe clothed with heynesse, and the handes of the people in the londe shall tremble for feare. I will do vnto the after their owne wayes, & accordinge to their owne iudgmentes will I iudge them: to learne them for to know, that I am the LORDE.

The.viij.Chapter.

IT happened, ye in the sixte yeare, the fifth daye of the sixte moneth I sat in my house, and the Elders of the councell of Iuda sate with me: & the honde of the LORDE God fell euen there, vpon me.

And as I loked vp, I sawe as it were a likenesse of fyre from his loynes dowarde, and from his loynes vpwarde it shyned marueilous cleare.

* This ſymilitude stretched out an honde, and take me vp by the heery lockes of my heade, and the spyrite lift me vp betwixte heauen and earth: and God brought me in a vision to Ierusalem, in to the coūte of the inwarde pyrte that lieth towarde the north: there stode an ymage, with whiche he that hath all thynges in his power, was very wroth. Ezec.1.b. and 11.b.

And beholde, the glory of the God of Israel was in the same place: euen * as I had sene it afore in the felde. And he sayde vnto me: Thou sonne of man, Lifte vp thine eyes and loke towarde the north. Then lift I vp myne eyes towarde the north, and beholde: Beyonde the porte northwarde, there was an aulter made with the ymage of ielousie in the very entrynge in. Ezec.1.a.

And he sayde furthermore vnto me: Thou sonne of man, Seest thou what these do? Seest thou the greate abhominactions that the house of Israel committe in this place? whiche ought not to be done in my Sanctuary?

But turne the about, and thou shalt seye yet greater abhominactions. And with ye dyd he bringe me to the coūte gate: & when I loked, beholde, there was an hole in the wall.

Then sayde he vnto me: Thou sonne of man, dygge thorowe the wall. And when I dygged thorowe the wall, beholde, there was a doze. And he sayde vnto me: go thy waye in, & loke what wicked abhominactions they do there.

So I wente in, and sawe: and beholde, there were all maner ymages of wormes & beastes, all Idols and abhominactions of ye house of Israel paynted euerye hoont rounde about the wall.

There stode also before the ymages *.lxx. lordes of the councell of the house of Israel: and in the myddest of them stode Iaasanias the sonne of Saphan: And euery one of the had a censoure in hys honde, and out of the incense, there wente vp a smoke, as it had bene a cloude. Exo.24.d. Num.11.d

Then sayde he vnto me: Thou sonne of man, hast thou sene what the Senatours of the house of Israel do secretly, euery one in hys chambre * for they saye: The LORDE seyeth vs not, the LORDE forsaketh not the worlde. And he sayde vnto me: Turne the yet agayne, and thou shalt se the greate abhominactions that they do. Exo.32.d. Iob.22.b. Iere.23.b. Ezec.9.c.

And with that, he brought me to the doore of the porte of the LORDES house, towarde the north. And beholde, there sate women mournynge for Thamus. Then sayde he vnto me: hast thou sene this, thou sonne of man? Turne the about, & thou shalt se yet greater abhominacions. And so he brought me in to the inwarde courte of the LORDES house: & beholde, at the porche of the LORDES house, betwixte the porche & the aulter there were fyue and twenty men, that had turned their backes vpon the temple of the LORD & their faces towarde the east, and these worshipped the Sonne.

And he sayde vnto me: hast thou sene this thou sonne of man? Thinketh the house of Iuda, that it is but a litle, to do these abhominacions here? Shulde they fyll the lande full of wickednesse, and vndertake to prouoke me vnto anger? see & pursuyle to cast vp their noses vpon me? Therfore will I also do some thinge in my wrothfull displeasure, so that myne eye shall not pytie them, neither will I spare them. * yee and though they crie in myne eares with a loude voyce, yet will I not heare them.

Ezec. 1.c. Jere. 11.b. 14.b. Mich. 3.a.

The. ix. Chapter.

I Cried also with a loude voyce in myne eares, sayenge: Come here ye rulers of the citie, euery man with his weapened honde to the slaughter. Then came there sixe men out of the strete of the vpper porte towarde the northe, and euery man a weapon in hys honde to the slaughter. There was one amongst them, that had on hym a lynnen rayment, and a writers ynkhorne by hys syde.

These went in, and stode beside the brasen alter: for the glory of the God of Israel was goue awaye from the Cherub (* where it was wōte to be vpon,) & was come downe to the threshold of the house, and he called the man, that had the lynnen rayment vpō him, and the writers ynkhorne by hys syde, and the LORDE sayde vnto hym: Go thy waye thorow the citie of Jerusalem, and set thys marck Thau vpon the foreheades of them, that mourne, and are sory for all the abhominacions, that be done therin. And to the other, he sayde that I might heare: * Go ye after hym thorow the cytye, slaye, pytye none, spare none: kyll, and destroye both olde men and ponge, maydens, chyldren, and wyues.

Exo. 40.c. Nu. 9.c. 2. Ma. 8. b.

Judit. 2.a.

But as for those, that haue thys marck Thau vpon the: see that ye touch the not, * and begynne at my Sanctury. Then they beganne at the elders, which were in the temple, for he had sayde vnto them: When ye haue defyled the temple, and fylled the courte with the slayne, then go youre waye forth: & they went out and slewe as were throwe the citie. Now whē they had done slayenge and I yet escaped: I fell downe vpon my face, cried, sayenge: O LORDE, wilt thou then destroye all the residue of Israel in thy sore displeasure, that thou hast poured out on Jerusalem?

Then sayde he vnto me: The wickednesse of the house of Israel and Juda is verye great: so that the londe is full of bloude, and the cite full of vnfaithfulnesse: for they saye: * Tush, the LORDE regardeth not the earth, he seyeth vs not. Therfore will I vpon them, & myne eye shall not pytie them, neither will I spare them, but will recompence their wickednesse vpon their heades.

Ezec. 8.c. 11.b.

And beholde, the mā that had the lynnen rayment vpon him, & the writers, ynkhorne by hys syde: tolde all the matter how it happened, and sayde: LORDE, as thou hast commaunded me, so haue I done.

The. x. Chapter.

AND as I loked, behalde, In the firmament that was aboue the Cherubins there apeared the likenesse of a seate of Saphir vpon the: * Then sayde he vnto the man that had the lynnen rayment vpon hym: Crepe in betwene the wheles that are vnder the Cherubins, and take thine honde full of hote coales out from betwene the Cherubins, & caste them ouer the citie. And he crepte in, that I might se.

Ezec. 1.c.

Now the Cherubins stode vpō the right syde of the house, when the man went in, & the cloude fylled the vttermost courte. * Then the glory of the LORDE remoued from the Cherubins, and came vpon the threshold of the house: so that the temple was full of cloudes, and the courte was full of the lyght of the LORDES glory. yee and the sounde of the Cherubins wynges was herde vnto the forecourte, like as it had bene the voyce of the almightie God, when he speaketh. Now when he had bydden the mā that was clothed in lynnen, to go and take the hote coales from the myddest of the wheles, which were vnder the Cherubins: he went and stode beside the wheles. Then the one Cherub reached forth his honde from vnder the Cherubins, vnto the fyre that was betwene the Cherubins, and toke therof, and gaue it vp to hym (that had on the lynnen rayment) in hys honde: whiche toke it, and went out. And vnder the wynges of the Cher-

lous, there apeared the lykneſſe of a mans hande: I ſawe alſo foure wheles beſyde the Cherubins, ſo ꝓ by euery Cherub there ſtode a whele. And ꝓ wheles were (to loke vpō) after the faſhiō of ꝓ precious ſtone of Thar-ſis: yee (vnto the ſight) were they faſhioned lyke, as yf one whele had bene in another.

When they wente forth, they wēte all.iiii. together, not turnynge aboute in their goinge: But where the firſt wente, thither wente they after alſo, ſo that they turned not about in their goinge. Their whole bodies, their backes, their hōdes & wynges, yee & the wheles alſo, were all full of eyes rounde aboute them all foure. And I herde him call ꝓ wheles, Galgal (that is) a rounde boul. * Euery one of them had foure faces: ſo that the one face was the face of a Cherub, the ſeconde of a man, the thirde of a lyon, the fourthe of an Aegle, & they were lifted vp aboue. This is the beaſt, that I ſawe at the water of Cobar. Nowe when the Cherubins wente, the wheles wente with the: & when ꝓ Cherubins lyfted their wynges to lift the ſelues vpwarde, the wheles remayned not behynde, but were with them alſo. Shortly, whē they ſtode, they ſtode alſo: And when they were lift vp, ꝓ wheles were lift vp alſo with them, for ꝓ ſpirit of life was in the wheles.

* Then the glory of the LORDE was lift vp from the threſholde of the temple, and remayned vpon the Cherubins: And the Cherubins ſtackred with their wynges, and lift them ſelues vp frō the earth: ſo that I ſawe them they went, and the wheles with them. And they ſtode at the eaſte ſyde of the porte that is in the houſe of the LORD. So ꝓ glory of the God of Iſrael was vpon the. This is the beaſt ꝓ I ſawe vnder the God off Iſrael, by the water of Cobar. And I perceaued, that it was the Cherubins. Euery one had foure faces, & euery one foure wynges, & vnder their wynges, as it were mēs hōdes. And the figure of their faces, was euen as I had ſene them, by the water of Cobar, & ſo was the countenance of the: Euery one in his goinge wente ſtraight forwarde.

The.xi.Chapter.

MOreouer, the ſpirite of ꝓ LORDE lift me vp, & brought me vnto ꝓ eaſtporte of the LORDES houſe. And beholde, there were.xxv. men vnder the dore: amonge whom I ſawe Iaaſamias the ſonne of Aſur, and Pheltias the ſonne of Banias, the rulers of the people. Then ſaide the LORDE vnto me: Thou ſonne of man: Theſe men ymagin myſchefe, and a wicked coūcel take they in this citte, ſayenge: Tuſh, there is no deſtruccion at honde, let vs buylde houſes: This Ieruſalem is the cauldron, & we be ꝓ fleſh. Therfore ſhalt thou prophecie vnto them, yee prophecie ſhalt thou vnto them, O ſonne of man. And with that, fell the ſpirite of the LORD vpon me, and ſayde vnto me: Speake, thus ſaieth ꝓ LORD: On this maner haue yee ſpoke (O ye houſe of Iſrael) & I knowe the ymaginacions of youre hartes. Many one haue ye murthured in this citte, and filled the ſtretes full of the ſlayne.

Therfore, thus ſaieth the LORDE God The ſlayne men that ye haue layed on the grounde in this citte, are the fleſh, & this citte is the * cauldrō: But I wil bringe you oute of it: ye haue drawē out the ſwearde, euē ſo will I alſo bringe a ſwearde ouer you, ſaieth the LORD God. I will dryue you out of this citte, & delyuer you in to youre enemies honde, & will cōdēne you. ye ſhal be ſlayne with ꝓ ſwearde in all ꝓ coaſtes of Iſrael, I wil be auenged of you: to lerne you for to knowe, ꝓ I am ꝓ LORD. This citte ſhall not be your cauldron, nether ſhal ye be the fleſh therin: but in ꝓ coaſtes of Iſrael wil I punyſh you, that ye maye knowe, ꝓ I am the LORD: in whoſe commaundementes ye haue not walked, nor kepte his lawes: * but haue done after the cuſtomes of the Heythen, ꝓ lye rounde aboute you.

Now when I preached, Pheltias the ſonne of Banias dyed. Then fell I downe vpō my face, & cried with a loude voyce: O LORDE God, wilt thou then vtterly deſtroye all the remnaunt in Iſrael? And ſo the worde of the LORD came to me on this maner: Thou ſonne of man: Thy brethren, thy kynſfolke, & ꝓ whole houſe of Iuda, which dwel at Ieruſalem, ſaye: They be gone farre from ꝓ LORDE, but the londe is geuen vs in poſſeſſiō. Therfore tell them, thus ſayeth the LORD God: I will ſende you farre of amonge the Gentiles, & ſcatre you amonge the nacions, & I will halowe you but a litle, in the lōdes where ye ſhall come. Tell them alſo, thus ſaieth the LORDE God: I will gather you agayne out of ꝓ nacions, & bringe you from the countrees where ye be ſcatred, & will geue you the londe of Iſrael agayne: & thither ſhall ye come. And as for all impedimentes, and all your abhominacios: I will take the awaye.

* And I wil geue you one harte, & will plāte a new ſpirite with in your bowels. That is Eze.18.c. 36.f. ny hart wyll I take out of your body, and geue you a fleshy hart: that ye maye walke in my cõmaundementes, and kepe myne ordynaunces, and doo them: & ye maye be my people & I your God. But loke whose harres are disposed to folowe their abhominacions and wyked lyuinges: Those mes dedes wyl I bringe vpõ theyr own heades, sayeth the LORDE God. After thys dyd & Cherubins lyft vp theyr wynges, and the whiles wente with them, and the glory of & God of Israel was vpon them. * So the glory off the LORDE wente vp from the myddest of the cite, and stode vpon the mount of the cite towarde & east. * But the wynde toke me vp, and in a vision (which came by the spirite of God) it brought me agayne in to Caldee amonge the preseners. Then the vision & I had sene, vanyshed awaye fro me. So I spake vnto the preseners, all the wordes of the LORDE, which he had shewed me.

Eze.10.c. 43.a.

Eze.3.b. 8.a.

The.xii.Chapter.

THe worde of the LORDE came vnto me, sayenge: Thou sõne of mãn, thou dwellest in the myddest of a frowarde housholde: * which haue eyes to se, and yet se not: eares haue they to heare, and yet hear they not, for they are an obstinate housholde. Therfore (O thou sonne of man) make thy geare redy to flyt, and go forth by fayre daye light, that they maye se. yee euen in their sight shalt thou go from thy place to another place: yf peraduenture they will cõsidre, & they be a disobedient housholde, thy geare & thou haste made redy to flit withal, shalt thou beare out by fayre daye light, & they maie seye, & thou thy self shalt go forth also at euen in their sight, as a man doth when he flitteth.

Dygge thorow the wall, that they maye se, and beare thorow it, the same thinge, that thou takest vp in their sight. As for thy self thou shalt go forth in the darke, hyde thy face that thou sey not & earth, for I haue made the a shewtoke vnto the house of Israel.

Now as & LORD cõmaũded me, so I dyd: & gere that I had made redy, brought, I out by daye. At euen I brake downe an hole thorow the wall with my honde: and when it was darke, I toke the geare vpon my shulders, and bare them out in their sight.

And in the mornynge, came the worde of the LORDE vnto me, sayẽge: Thou sonne of man, yf Israel, that frowarde housholde are the, & saye: what dost thou there? Then tell them: Thus sayeth the LORDE God, This punishement toucheth the chefe rulers at Jerusalem, and all the house of Israel that dwell amonge them: Tell them: I am youre shewtoke: like as I haue done, so shal it happen vnto you: Fyrt shal ye also and go in to captiuyte. * The chefest & is amonge you, shall lade his shulders in the darke, and get him awaye. He shall breake downe the wall, to carie stuff there thorow: He shall couer his face, that he seye not the grounde with his eyes.

Jer.2.b. 34.b. 52.a.

* My lyne will I spredе out vpon him, & I catch him in my nett and carie him to Babilon, in the lõde of the Caldees: which he shal not se, and yet shal he dye there. As for all his helpers, and all his hoostes that be about him: I will scatre them towarde all the wyndes, and drawe out a swearde after them.

Ezr.12.a.

* So when I haue scatred the amonge the Heithen, and strowed them in the londes: they shall knowe, that I am the LORDE But, I wil leaue a litle nombre of them, fro the swearde, hunger and pestilence: to tell al their abhominacions amonge the Heithen where they come: that they maye knowe, how that I am the LORDE.

Moreouer, the worde of the LORD came vnto me sayenge: Thou sonne of man: with a fearful trẽblinge shalt thou eate thy breed with carefulnesse & sorowe shalt thou drynke thy water. And vnto the people of & londe, speake thou on this maner: Thus sayeth the LORD God, to them that dwell in Jerusalem, and to the londe of Israel: ye shall eate youre breed with sorowe, & drynke youre water with heuynesse: yee the londe with the fulnesse therof shalbe layde waist, for & wickednesse of them that dwell therin. And the cities that now be well occupied, shalbe voyde, and the londe desolate: that ye maye knowe, how that I am the LORDE.

yet came the worde of the LORDE vnto me agayne, sayenge: Thou sonne of man, what maner of by worde is & which ye vse in the londe of Israel, sayenge: Tusk, & seyge that the dayes are so slacke in commynge al the visions are of none effecte? Tell them therfore, thus sayeth the LORDE God: I will make that by worde to ceasse, so that it shall nomore be comonly vsed in Israel.

But saye this vnto them: The dayes are at honde, that euery thinge which hath ben prophecied, shalbe fulfilled. There shall no vision be in vayne, nother ony prophecie fayle amonge the children of Israel: For I is I the LORDE, that speake it: and what soeuer I & LORD speake, it shal be perfour neb, and not be slake in commynge.

per euen in youre dayes (O ye frowarde housholde) will I deuyse some thynge, & bryn ge it to passe, sayeth the LORDE God. And the worde of the LORDE came vnto me, sayenge: Behold, thou sonne of man: The house of Israel saye in this maner: Tushy, as for the vision that he hath sene, it will be many a daye or it come to passe: It is farre of yet the thynge that he prophecieth. Therfore saye vnto them: Thus saieth the LORDE God: All my wordes shall nomore be slacke: Loke what I speake, that same shal come to passe, sayeth the LORDE God.

The.xiii. Chapter.

THe worde of the LORDE came vnto me, sayenge: Thou sonne of mā, Speak prophecie agaīst those prophetes, that preach in Israel: and saye thou vnto thē that prophecie out of their owne hartes: Hea re the worde of the LORDE, thus sayeth ỹ LORD God: * Wo be vnto those folishe pro phetes, that folowe their owne spyrete, & spea ke where they se nothinge. O Israel, thy pro phetes are like the foxes vpon the dyte felde: for they rōde not in the gappes, nether ma de they an hedge for the house of Israel, that men might abyde the parell in the daye of ỹ LORD. Vayne thinges they seye, & tell lies, & in mayntene their preachinges withall. The LORDE (saye they) hath spokē it, whē in dede the LORDE hath not sent thē. Vayne visions haue ye sene, & spoken false prophecies, when ye saye: the LORDE hath spoken it, where as I neuer sayde it.

Therfore, thus saieth the LORDE God: Be cause youre wordes be vayne, & ye seke oute lies: Behold, I wil vpon you, saieth ỹ LOR DE God. Myne hondes shall come vpon ỹ prophetes, that loke out vayne thinges, and preach lyes: he shall not be in the cōcell off my people, nor written in the boke of the hou se of Israel, nether shall they come in the lō de of Israel: that ye maye knowe, how that I am the LORDE God. And that for thys cause they haue deceaued my people, * & tol de them of peace, where no peace was. One bylt vp a wall, & they dawbe it with lowse mortar. Therfore tell them whiche dawbe itt with vntempered mortar, that it shall fall. There shall come a great shower of ray ne, great stones shal fall vpon it, and a sore tempest of wynde shall breake it, so shal ỹ wal fall downe. Shal it not then be sayde vnto you: where is now the morter, that ye dawbed it withall. Therfore thus saieth ỹ LOR DE God: I will breake out in my wrothful displeasure with a stormy wynde, so that in myne anger there shall come a mightie shower of rayne, & hayle stones in my wrath, to destroye withall.

As for the wall, that ye haue dawbed with vntempered morter, I will breake it downe & make it eauen with ỹ grounde: so that the foundacion therof shall remoue, & it shall fal yee & ye youre selues shall perish in the myd dest therof: to learne you for to knowe, that I am the LORDE. Thus will I perfourme my wrath vpon this wall, & vpon them ỹ ha ue dawbed it with vntempered morter, and then will I saye vnto you: The wal is gone & the dawbers are awaye. These are the pro phetes of Israel, whiche prophecie vnto the cite of Jerusalem, & loke out visions of peace for them, where as no peace is, sayeth the LORDE God. Wherfore (o thou sonne of man,) set thy face agaīst ỹ doughters of thy people, which prophecie out of theyr owne hartes: & speake thou prophecie agaynst thē & saye, Thus saieth the LORD God: Wo be vnto you, that sowe pilowes vnder all arme holes, and bolsters vnder the heades both of yōge and olde, to catch soules withal. * For when ye haue gott the soules of my people in youre captiuite, ye promyse them lyfe, and dishonoure me to my people for an handful of barly, & for a pece of bread: when ye kyll ỹ soules of them that dye not: and promise lyf to them that lyue not. Thus ye dissemble vnto me people, ỹ beleueth your lyes. D Esa. 5.c. Mich. 3.b.

Wherfore thus sayeth the LORD God: Beholde, I will also vpon ỹ pilowes, wher with ye catch the soules in flyeng: them wil I take from your armes, & let the soules go, that ye catch in flyenge. Youre bolsters also will I teare in peces, and deliuer my people out of your honde: so ỹ they shal come nomo re in your hōdes to be spoyled, & ye shall kno we, that I am the LORDE. Seinge ỹ with your lyes ye discomforte the harte of ỹ righ teous, whom I haue not discōforted: Agay ne: for so muche as * ye corage the honde of the wicked, so that he maye not turne from hys wicked waye, & lyue: therfore shall ye spie out nomore vanyte, nor prophecie your owne gesslinges: for I will delyuer my peo ple out of your honde, that ye maye knowe, how that I am the LORDE. Ezec. 4.b.

The.xiiii. Chapter.

THere * resorted vnto me certayne of ỹ elderes of Israel, and sat downe by me. The came ỹ worde of ỹ LOR Ezec. 20.c.

DE vnto me, sayenge: Thou sonne of man, these men beare their Idols in their hartes, & go purposly vpō þ stōblinge bloke of their owne wickednesse: howe darre they then are councell at me? Therfore speake vnto them & saye: thus saieth the LORDE God: Euery man of the house of Israel that beareth hys Idols in his harte, purposynge to stōble in his owne wickednesse, & commeth to a prophet, to enquere ony thinge at me by him: vnto that mā wil I the LORDE my selfe geue answere, accordinge to the multitude of hys Idols: that the house of Israel maye be snared in their owne hartes, because they be clene gone fro me, for their Idols sakes.

Wherfore, tell þ house of Israel: thus saieth the LORD God: * Be conuerted, forsake youre Idols, and turne youre faces from all your abhominacions. For euerymā (whether he be of the house of Israel, or a straunger, that setioureth in Israel) which departeth fro me, and carieth Idols in his harte, purposinge to go still stomblige in hys own wickednesse, and commeth to a prophet, for to aske councell at me thorow hym: vnto þ man wil I þ LORD geue answere, by myn owne selfe.

Etc. 20.f.

I will set my face agaynst that man, and wil make him to be an example for other, yee and a comon by worde: and wil rote him out of my people, that he maye knowe, how þ I am the LORD. * And yf that prophet be deceaued, when he telleth him a worde: then I the LORD myselfe haue deceaued that prophet, and will stretch forth myne honde vpō him, to rote him out of my people of Israel: and they both shalbe punyshed for their wickednesse.

3. Re. 22.d
Job 12.f.

Accordinge to þ synne of hym that aseth, shall the synne of the prophet be, that þ house of Israel be led nomore fro me thorow erroure: & be nomore defyled in their wickednesse: but that they maye be my people, and I their God, saieth the LORDE God. And the worde of the LORDE came vnto me, saynge: Thou sonne of man, when the londe synneth agaynst me, and goeth forth in wickednesse: I will stretch out myne honde vpō it, * and destroye all the prouysion of their bread, and sende derth vpō them, to destroye man & beast in the lōde. * And though Noe, Daniel, and Job these thre men were amonge them, yet shall they in their righteousnes delyuer but their owne soules: saieth the LORDE God.

Iere. 15.a

If I bringe noysome beastes in to the lōde, to waste it vp, and it be so desolate, that no man maye go therin for beastes: yf these thre men also were in the londe, as truly as I lyue (saieth the LORD God) they shal saue nother sonnes nor doughters, but be only delyuered them selues: and as for the londe, it shal be waste.

Or, yf I bringe a sweard in to the lande, and charge it to go thorowe the londe: so that I slaye downe man and beast in it, and yf these thre men were therin: As truly as I lyue (saieth the LORDE God) they shall delyuer nother sonnes nor doughters, but only be saued them selues.

If I sende a pestilence in to the londe, and poure out my sore indignacion vpon it in bloude, so that I rote out of it both man and beast, and yf Noe, Daniel, and Job were therin: As truly as I lyue (saieth the LORDE God) they shall delyuer nother sonnes nor doughters, but saue their owne soules in theyr righteousnesse.

Moreouer, thus saieth the LORDE God Though I sende my * foure trubious plages vpon Jerusalem: the sweard, honger, perilous beastes, and pestilence, to destroye man and beast out of it: yet shall there a remnāt be saued therin, which shall bringe forth theyr sonnes and doughters. Beholde, they shall come forth vnto you, and ye shall se their waye, and what they take in honde, & ye shalbe confforted, as touchinge all the plages þ I haue brought vpon Jerusalem.

They shall confforte you, when ye se their waye and workes: and ye shall knowe, how þ it is not without a cause, that I haue done so agaynst Jerusalem, as I dyd, saieth the LORDE God.

The.xv.Chapter.

THe worde of the LORDE came vnto me, sayenge: Thou sonne of man, What commeth of þ wyne amonge all other trees? & of the wyne stocke, amonge all other tymbre of the groue? Doo men take wood of it, to make ony worke withall? Or maye there a nayle be made of it, to hange ony thynge vpon? Behold, it is cast in þ fyre to be brent, the fyre consumeth both the endes of it, the myddest is brent to asshes. Is it mete then for ony worke? No.

Seinge then, that it was meete for no worke, beinge whole, much lesse maye there ony thinge be made of it, when the fyre hath consumed and brent it. And therfore thus saieth the LORDE God, Like as I call the wyne in to the fyre for to be brent, as other trees of the wood: Euen so will I do vnto them that dwell in Jerusalem, and set my face agaynst them: they shal go out from the fyre, and yet the fyre shal consume them. * Then shall ye Exod. 6.b. knowe, that I am the LORDE, when I set my face agaynst them, and make the londe waste, because they haue so sore offended, sayeth the LORDE God.

The.xvi. Chapter.

AGayne, the worde of LORD spake vnto me, sayenge: Thou sonne of man, shewe the cite of Jerusalem their abhominacions, and saye: thus saieth the LORDE God vnto Jerusalem: Thy progeny and kynred came out of the londe, of Canaā, thy father was an Amorite, thy mother an Hethite. In ye daye of thy byrth whē thou wast borne, ye stringe of thy nauel was not cut of: thou wast not bathed in water to make ye clene: thou wast neither rubbed vp salt, nor swadled in cloutes: No man regarded the so much, as to do ony of these thinges for the, or to shewe the such fauoure, but thou wast vtterly cast out vpō the felde, yee despised wast thou in the daye of thy byrth.

Then came I by the, and sawe the trode downe in thine owne bloude, & sayde vnto the thou shalt be pourged from thine owne bloude, for thine owne bloude (I saye) shalt thou be cleused. * So I planted the, as the braūche of the felde: thou art growen vp, & waxen greate, thou hast gotte a maruelous pleasaunt beutie, thy breues are come vp, thy hayre is goodly growen, where as thou wast naked and bare afore.

Now when I went by the, & loked vpon the, beholde, thy tyme was come, yee euen ye tyme to wowe the. Then spred I my clothes ouer the, to couer thy dishonestie, yee I made an oath vnto the, * and maried my self with the (saieth the LORDE God) & so thou becamest myne owne. Then washed I the with water, and pourged thy bloude from the, I anoynted the with oyle, I gaue the chaunge of raymentes, I made ye shues of goodly lether, I gyrded the about w̄ white silke, I clothed ye with kercheues, I decked the w̄ costly apparell, I put rynges vpon thy fyngers, & chayne about the necke, spā gles vpon thy forehead, eare rynges vpon thyne eares, & set a beutyful crowne vpon thine heade. Thus wast thou deckt w̄ syluer and golde, and thy rayment was of fyne white silke, of needle worke and of diuerse colours.

Thou dydest eate nothinge but symnels, honye & oyle, maruelous goodly wast thou & beutifull, ye euen a very Quene wast thou. In so much, that thy beuty was spoken of amonge the Heithen, for thou wast exellēt in my beuty, which I put vpon the, saieth ye LORD God. But thou hast put confidence in thine owne beuty, & played the harlot, when thou haddest gotte the a name. Thou hast committed whordome, w̄ all that went by the, & hast fulfilled their desyres, yee thou hast taken thy garmētes of dyuerse colours, & deckt thine aulters therwith, where vpō thou mightest fulfil thine whordome * of such a fashion, as neuer was none, nor shalbe * The goodly ornamentes & iewels which I gaue the of myne owne golde & syluer hast thou take, & made ye mens ymages therof, and committed whordome with all.

And this came also to passe, saieth the LORDE God: * Thou hast take thine owne sonnes & doughters, whom thou haddest begotte vnto me: and these hast thou offred vp vnto them, to be their meate. Is this but a small whordome of thine (thinkest thou) that thou slayest my children, and geuest them ouer, to be brent vnto them? And yet in all thy abhominaciōs & whordome, thou hast not remembred the dayes of thy youth, how naked & bare thou wast at that tyme, & troden downe in thine owne bloude. After all these thy wickednesses (wo wo vnto ye saieth ye LORDE God) thou hast buylded thy stewes and brodelhouses in euery place: yee at the heade of euery strete hast thou buylded the aulter. Thou hast made thy beuty to be abhorred: thou hast layd out thy legges to euerye one that came by, and multiplied thine whordome. * Thou hast committed fornication with the Egipcians thy neighbours, which had much flesh: and thus hast thou vexed thine whordome, to anger me.

Thus hast thou stil cōmitted thy fornication from the londe of Canaan vnto the Caldees and yet thy lust not satisfied. How shulde I circumcise thine harte (saieth the LORDE God) seinge thou doest all these thinges, thou pretious whore: buyldinge thy stewes at the heade of euery streit, and thy brodelhouses in al places. Thou hast not ben as another whore, that maketh boaste of hir wynnynge but as a wyfe that breaketh wedlocke, and taketh other in steade of hir husbonde. Giftes are geuen to all other whores, but thou geuest rewardes vnto all thy louers: and ofrest them gyftes, to come vnto the out of all places, and to committe fornication with the. It is come to passe with the in thy whordomes, contrary to the vse of other wome: yee there hath no such fornication bene committed after the, seinge that thou proferest giftes vnto other, and no reward is geuen the: this is a contrary thinge. Therfore heare the worde of the LORD, o thou harlot: Thus D saieth the LORDE God: For so much as thou hast spent thy moneye, and discouered thy shame, thorow thy whordome w all thy louers, and with all the Idols of thy abhominacions in the bloude of the childzen, 4.Reg.16.a. 17.a * whom thou hast geuen them: Beholde therfore, I will gather together all thy louers, vnto whom thou hast made thy self common, yee and al them whom thou fauourest Esa.47.a and euery one that thou hatest: and wil * discouer thy shame before them, that they all Naū. 3.a. may se thy filthinesse.

Ezec.23.f. * Moreouer, I will iudge the as a breaker of wedlocke and a murthurer, and recompence the thine owne bloude in wrath and gelousy, I will geue the ouer in to their power that shal brake downe thy stewes, and destroye thy brodelhouses: they shal stripe the out of thy clothes, all thy fayre and beutfull iewels shall they take from the, and so lett Leui. 20.b the syt naked and bare: * yee they shal bringe the comon people vpon the, which shall stone the, and slaye the downe with their 4.Reg. 25.b. swordes. * They shall burne vp thy houses, and punish the in the syght of many women. Thus will I make thy whordome to ceasse, so that thou shalt geue out no more rewardes.

Shulde I make my wrath to be still, take my gelousy from the, be content, and nomore to be displeased, seinge thou remembrest not the dayes of thy youth, but hast prouoked me to wrath in all these thinges? Beholde therfore, I will bringe thine owne wayes vpon thine heade, saieth the LORDE God: howbeit, I neuer dyd vnto the accordinge to thy wickednesse and all thy abhominacions. Beholde, all they that vse comon prouerbes, shall vse this prouerbe also agaynst the: Such a mother, such a doughter.

E Thou art euen thy mothers owne doughter, that hath cast of hir husbonde and hir childzen: yee thou art the sister of thy sisters which forsoke their husbondes and their childzen. * Youre mother is a Hethite, and Ezec.16.a. youre father an Ammonite thyne eldest sister is Samaria, she and hir doughters þ dwel vpon thy left houde.

But thy yongest sister that dwelleth on the right houde, is Sodoma and hir doughters. Yet hast thou not walked after their wayes, nor done after their abhominacios: But in all thy wayes thou hast bene more corrupte then they.

As truely as I lyue, saieth the LORDE God: * Sodoma thy sister with hir Ezec.16.a. doughters, hath not done so euel, as thou & thy doughters. Beholde, the synnes of thy sister Sodoma were these: Pryde, fulnesse of meate, abundance, and ydelnesse: these thinges had she and hir doughters. Besides that, they reached not their houde to the poore and nedy, but were proude, and dyd abhominable thinges before me: therfore syn I toke them awaye, when I had sene it. Nether hath Samaria done half of thy synnes Ezec.16.a. * yee thou hast exceaded them in wickednesse: In so much that in comparison of all the abhominacions which thou hast done, thou hast made thy sisters good women. Therfore beare thine owne shame, thou that in thyne hast ouercome thy sisters: seinge thou hast done so abhominably, þ they were better then thou. Be ashamed therfore (I saye) and beare thine owne confusion, thou that makest thy sisters good women.

As for their captiuyte, namely the captiuyte of Sodoma and hir doughters: the captiuyte of Samaria & hir doughters I wil bringe them agayne, so will I also bringe agayne thy captiuyte amonge them: that thou mayest take thine owne confusion vpō the and be ashamed of all that thou hast done, and to comforte them.

Thus thy sisters (namely) Sodoma and hir doughters: Samaria and hir doughters with the self and thy doughters, shalbe brought agayne to youre olde estate. When thou wast in thy pryde, and before thy wickednesse came to light: thou woldest not here speake of thy sister Sodoma, vntill the tyme that the Syrians with all their townis and the Philistines with all that lye rounde about them, brought the to shame and confusion: that thou mightest beare thine owne filthines and abhominacion, saieth the LORDE.

For thus saieth the LORDE God: I shalde (by right) deale with the, as thou hast done. Thou hast despysed the ooth, and broken the couenaunte. Neuertheles, I will remembre my couenaunt, that I made with the in thy youth, in so much that it shal be an euerlastinge couenaunt: So that thou also remembre thy wayes, and be ashamed of the then shalt thou receaue of me thy elder and yonger sisters, whō I will make thy doughters, and that beside thy couenaunt. * And I will renue my couenaunt with the, that thou mayest knowe, that I am the LORD that thou mayest thinke vpon it, be ashamed, and excuse thine owne confusion nomore: when I haue forgeuen the all that thou hast done saieth the LORDE God.

The.xvii.Chapter.

THe worde of the LORDE came vnto me, sayēge, Thou sonne of man, put forth * a darcke speakynge and a parable, vnto the house of Israel, and saye, Thus saieth the LORDE God, There came a greate * Aegle with greate wynges, yer with mightie longe wynges, & full of fethers of dyuerse colours, vpō the mount off Libanus, and toke a braunch from a Cedre tre, and brake of the toppe of his twygge, & caried it in to the londe of Canaan, and set it in a citie of marchauntes. He toke also a braunch of the londe, and planted it in a fruitefull grounde, he brought it vnto greate waters, and set it as a willye tre therby. Then dyd it growe, and was a greate wyne stocke but lowe by thy grounde: thus therof came of it a vyne, and it brought forth blossomes and spred out braunches.

But there was another Aegle, a greate one, which had greate wynges and many fethers: and beholde, the rotes of this vyne had an hunger after him, and spred out his braunches towarde him to water his frutes: Neuertheles it was planted vpō a good grounde beside greate waters: so that (by reason) it shulde haue brought out braūches and frute, and haue bene a goodly vyne.

Speake thou therfore, thus saieth ꝑ LORDE God: Shall this vyne prospere: shall not his rotes be pluckt out, his frute brok & al, his grene braunches wythered and fade away? yee without ether stronge arme or many people, shall it be plucked vp by the rotes. Beholde, it was planted: shall it prospere therfore? Shall it not be dryed vp and withered, yee euen in the shuttinge out off his blossomes, as soone as the east wynde bloweth?

Moreouer, the worde of the LORDE came vnto me sayenge: Speake to that frowarde housholde: knowe ye not, what these thinges do signifie? Tell them: Beholde, * the kinge of Babilon came to Jerusalem and toke the kinge and his princes, and led them to Babilon. 4.Re.24.8

He toke of the kinges sede, and made a couenaunt with him, and toke an ooth of him: the princes of the londe toke he with him also, that the londe might be holden in subiection, and not to rebelle, but kepe the couenaunt, and fulfill it. But he fell from him, and sent his embassatours in to Egipte, that he might haue horses, and much people. Shulde that prospere? Shulde he be kepte safe, that doth such thinges? Or shulde he escape, that breaketh his couenaūt.

As truely as I lyue, saieth the LORDE God: he shall dye at Babilon, in the place where the kinge dwelleth, that made him kinge: whose ooth he hath despised, & whose couenaunt he hath broken. Nother shall Pharao with his greate hoost and multitude of people, mayntayne him in the warre: when they cast vp diches, and set vp bulwarkes to destroye much people. For seinge he hath despysed the ooth, and broken the couenaunt (where as he yet gaue his honde therupon) and done all these thinges, he shall not escape.

Therfore thus saieth the LORDE God As truely as I lyue, I will bringe myne ooth that he hath despised, and my couenaunt that he hath broken, vpon his owne heade. * I will cast my net aboute hi, and catch him in my yarne. To Babilon will I cary him, there will I punish him, because off the greate offence that he made me. As for those that flye from him out of ꝑ hoost, they shal be slayne with the sweande. The residue shalbe scatred towarde all the windes: and ye shall knowe, that I the LORDE haue spoken it. Eze.12.b. 12.a.

Thus saieth the LORDE God: I will also take a braunch from an hie cedretre, and will set it, and take ꝑ vppermost twyg of it, that yet is but tendre, and plante it vpon an hie hil: Namely vpon the hie hil of Sion will I plante it, that it maye bringe forth

twygges, and geue frute, and be a greate cedertre: so ỳ all maner of foules maye bide in it, and make their nestes vnder the shadowe of his braunches.

And all the trees of the felde shall knowe that I the LORDE haue brought downe the hie tre, and set the lowe tre vp: that I haue dryed vp the grene tre, and made the drye tre to florish: Euen I the LORD that spake it, haue also brought it to passe.

The.xviii. Chapter.

THe worde of the LORDE came vnto me, on this maner: What meane ye by this comon prouerbe, that ye vse in the londe of Israel, sayenge: * The fathers haue eaten soure grapes, and the chil drens teth are set on edge? As treuly as I liue saieth the LORDE God, ye shal vse this byworde nomore in Israel.

Ierem. 31. c. Ierem. 31. c.

Beholde, * all soules are myne. Like as the father is myne, so is the sonne myne also. The soule ỳ synneth, shal dye. * If a man be godly, and do the thinge that is equall & right, he eateth not vpon the hilles: he lifteth not his eyes vp to the Idols of Israel: he defyleth not his neighbours wife: he medleth with no menstrous woman: he greueth no body: he geueth his detter his pledge agayne: he taketh none other mans good by violence: * he partyth his meate with ỳ hongrie: he clotheth the naked: * he lendeth nothinge vpon vsury: he taketh nothige ouer, he withdraweth his honde from doinge wronge: he handleth faithfully betwixte man and man: he walketh in my commaundementes, and kepeth my lawes, and performeth them faithfully: This is a righteous man, * he shall surely liue saieth the LORDE God.

Ezech. 33. a. Leuit. 18. a. Deut. 24. c. Psa. 24. a. Leuit. 25. c. Ezech. 33. a.

If he now get a sonne that is a murthurer, a sheder of blonde: yf he do one of these thinges (* though he do not all) he eateth vpon the hilles: he defyleth his neighbours wife: he greueth the poore and nedy: he robbeth, and spoyleth: he geueth not the detter his pledge agayne: he lifteth vp his eyes vnto Idols, and medleth with abhominable thinges: he lendeth vpō vsury, & taketh more ouer. Shal this man liue? He shal not liue. Seinge he hath done all these abhominacions he shall dye: his blonde shalbe vpō hym.

Exod. 20. b.

Now yf this man get a sonne also, that seith all his fathers synnes, which he hath done: and feareth, nother doth such like: Namely, he eateth not vpon the mountaynes:

he lifteth not his eyes vp to the Idols of Israel: he defyleth not his neighbours wife: he vexeth no man: he kepeth no mans pledge, he nother spoyleth, nor robbeth ony man: he dealeth his meate with the hungrie: he clotheth the naked: he oppresseth not the poore, he receaueth no vsury, nor ony thinge ouer: he kepeth my lawes, and walketh in my commaundementes: This man shall not dye in his fathers synne, but shall liue without fayle. As for his father: because he oppressed and spoyled his brother, and dyd wyckedly amonge his people: lo, he is dead in his owne synne. And yet saye ye: Wherfore then shulde not this sonne beare his fathers synne? Therfore because the sonne hath done equyte and right, hath kepte all my commaundementes, and done ỳ: therfore, shall he liue in dede.

The same soule thath synneth, shal dye. * The sonne shall not beare the fathers offence, nother shall the father beare the sonnes offence. The righteousnes of the righteous shall be vpon himself, and the wickednes of the wicked shall be vpon himself also. * But yf the vngodly will turne awaye, fro all his synnes that he hath done, and kepe all my commaundementes, and do the thinge ỳ is equal and right: doutles he shall liue, and not dye. As for all his synnes that he dyd before, they shall not be thought vpon: but in his righteousnes that he hath done he shall liue. * For I haue no pleasure in the death of a synner, saieth the LORDE God, but rather that he conuerte, and liue.

Agayne: yf the righteous turne awaye from his righteousnes, and do vngodyte according to all the abhominacions, that the wickedman doth: shall he liue? All the righteousnes that he hath done, shall not be thought vpon: but in the sawce that he hath offended with all, and in the synne that he hath done he shall dye.

And yet ye saye: Tuly the waye of the LORDE is not indifferent. Heare therfore ye house of Israel: Is not my waye right? Or, are not youre wayes rather wicked? * Whē a righteous man turneth awaye fro his righteousnesse, and medleth with vngodlynes: he must dye therein: yee for the vnrighteousnes that he hath done, must he dye. Agayne: * whē the wicked man turneth awaye from his wickednesse, that he hath done, and doth the thinge which is equall and right, he shall saue his soule alyue. For in so much as he remembreth himself, and turneth him from all the vngodlynes, that

The.xix. Chapter.

But mourne thou for the princes of Israel, and saye: Wherefore laie thy mother that lyonesse amonge thy lyons? and nourished hir yongeones amonge the yonge whelpes? One of hir whelpes she brought vp, and it became a lyon: it learned to spoyle, and to deuoure folke. The Heithen herd of him, and toke him in their nettes, and brought him in chaynes vnto the lond of Egipte.

Now when the damme sawe, that all hir hope and comforth was awaie, she toke another of hir whelpes, and made a lyon of him: which went amonge the lyons, and became a fearse lyon: learned to spoyle, and to deuoure folcke: he destroyed their palaces, and made their cities waist: In so much ye the whole londe and euery thinge therin, was vtterly desolate, throwe the very voyce of his roaringe.

Then came the Heithen together on euery syde out of all countrees against him, spred their nettes for him, and toke him, in their pytt. So they bounde him with chaynes, and brought him to the kinge of Babilon, which put him in prison, that his voyce should nomore be herde vpon the mountaynes of Israel. As for thy mother, she is like a vyne in thy bloude, plated by the waterside: hir frutes and braunches are growen out of many waters, hir stalkes were so stro ge that men might haue made staues therof for officers: she grewe so hie in hir stalkes.

So when men sawe that she exceaded the height and multitude of hir braunches, she was cast out in displeasure, and cast downe to the grounde. The east wynde dryed vp hir frute, hir stronge stalkes were broken of, withered and brent in the fyre. But now she is planted in the wildernesse, in a drye, and thirstie grounde. And there is a fyre gone out of hir stalkes, which hath deuoured vp hir braunches and hir frute: so that she hath nomo stronge stalkes, to be staues for officers. This is a pitious & miserable thinge,

The.xx. Chapter.

IN the .vii. yeare the .x. daye of the .v. Moneth, it happened, ✠ certayne of the elders of Israel came vnto me for to aske counsell at the LORDE, and sat them downe by me. Then came the worde of the LORDE vnto me on this maner: O thou sonne of man, Speake to the elders of Israel, and saye vnto them, Thus saieth the LORDE God, Are ye come hither to aske ony thinge at me? As truely as I liue (saieth the LORDE) I will geue you no answere. Wilt thou not reproue them (thou sonne of man) wilt thou not reproue them? Shewe them the abhominacions of their forefathers, and tell them. Thus saieth the LORDE God, * In the daye when I chose Israel, and lift vp myne honde vpon the sede of the house of Jacob, and shewed my self vnto them in the londe of Egipte, yee when I lifte vp myne honde ouer them, and sayde I am the LORDE youre God, euen in the daye that I lift vp myne honde ouer them, to bringe them out of the londe of Egipte, in to a londe that I had prouyded for them, which floweth with mylke and hony, and is a pleasaūt lōde amōge all other. The sayde I vnto them. * Cast awaye euery man the abhominations that he hath before him, and defyle not youre selues with the Idols of Egipte, for I am the LORDE youre God.

But they rebelled against me, and wolde not folowe me, to cast awaye euery man the abhominacions of his eyes, and to forsake the Idols of Egipte. Then I made me to poure my indignacion ouer them, and to fulfille my wrath vpon them, yee euen in the myddest of the londe of Egipte. But I wolde not do it, for my names sake, that it shulde not be vnhalowed before the heithen, amōge whom they dwelt, and amonge whom I shewed my self vnto the, that I wolde bringe them out of the londe of Egipte. Now when I had caried them out of the londe of Egipte, and brought them in to the wildernesse, I gaue them my commaundementes & shewed them my lawes: * which who so kepeth shall lyue in them, & I gaue them also my holy dayes, to be a token betwixte me & them, and therby to knowe, that I am the LORD, which haloweth them. * And yet the house of Israel rebelled agaynst me in the wildernesse, they wolde not walke in my cõmaundementes, they haue cast awaye my lawes: which who so kepeth shulde lyue in them,) and my Sabbath dayes haue they greatly vnhalowed.

* Then I made me to poure out my indignacion vpon them, and to cõsume them in the wildernesse. yet I wolde not do it, for my names sake: lest it shulde be dishonored before the Heithen, from the which I had caried them awaye. But I swore vnto them in the wildernesse, that I wolde not bringe them in to the londe, which I gaue them: a londe that floweth with mylcke and hony, and is a pleasure of all londes, and for because they refused my lawes, and walked not in my commaundementes, but had vnhalowed my Sabbathes, for their harte was gone after their Idols. Neuertheles myne eye spared them, so that I wolde not vtterly slaye them, and consume them in the wildernesse. Moreouer, I sayde vnto their sõnes in the wildernesse: * walke not in the statutes of your forefathers, kepe not their ordinaunces, and defyle not youre selues with their Idols, for I am the LORDE youre God. But walke in my statutes, kepe my lawes, and do the, halowe my Sabbathes for they are a token betwixte me & you, that ye maye knowe, how that I am the LORDE. Not withstondinge, * their sonnes rebelled agaynst me also: they walked not in my statutes, they kepte not my lawes to fulfill them, * (which he that doth shal lyue in the) nether halowed they my sabbath dayes Then I made me agayne to poure out my indignacion ouer them, and to satisfie my wrath vpon them in the wildernesse. Neuertheles I withdrewe my hõde for my names sake, lest it shulde be vnhalowed amonge the Heithen, before whem I had brought them forth. I lift vp myne honde ouer them also in the wildernesse, that I wolde scatre them amonge the Heithen, and strowe them amõge the nacions: because they had not kepte my lawes, but cast aside my commaundementes, vnhalowed my Sabbathes, and lift vp their eyes to their fathers Idols. Wherfore I gaue them also commaundemẽtes not good, and lawes thorow which they shulde not lyue, and I vnhalowed the in their owne gifftes: * (when I caused them for my self all their first borne to passe through the fyre) to make them desolate: that they might knowe, how that I am the LORDE.

Exo.20.c Leui.18.a. Deu.12.a. Nu.25.a. Leui.18.a. Gala.3.b Eze.20.a.

Therfore (O thou sonne of man) tell the house of Israel, thus saieth the LORDE God: Beside al this, your fathers haue yet blasphemed me there, and greatly offended agaist me. For after I had brought them in to the londe, that I promysed to gyue them, when they saue euery hie hill and all the thicke trees: they made their sacrifices, and prouoked me with their oblacions, makinge swete sauours there, & poured out their drinckofferinges. Then I said them: what haue ye to do with the hie place, that ye go thyther. And therfore is it called the hie place vnto this daye. Wherfore, speake vnto the house of Israel: Thus saieth the LORDE God: ye are euen as vnclene as your forefathers, and committe whordome also with their abhominacions. In all youre dedes, where vnto ye bringe youre oblacions, and * to whose honoure ye burne youre children, ye defyle youre selues, euen vnto this daye: how darre ye thẽ come, and aske any question at me? O ye household of Israel: As truly as I lyue (saieth the LORDE God) yet get no answere of me: and as for the thinge that ye go aboute, it shall not come to pas, where as ye saye: we will be as the Heithen, and do as other people in the londe, hewe stone will we worshippe.

Eze.16.c 31.c. Nu.25.a. Leui.18.a. Gala.3.b Eze.20.a.

As truely as I lyue (saieth the LORDE God) I myself will rule you with a mighty honde, with a stretched out arme, and with indignacion poured out ouer you: and will bringe you out of the nacions & lãdes, wherin ye are scatred: and gather you together with a mighty honde, with a stretched out arme, & with indignacion poured out vpon you: and will bringe you in to the wildernesse of the people, & there will I reason with you face to face. Like as I punished your forefathers in the wildernesse, so will I punish you also, sayeth the LORDE God. I will bringe you vnder my iurisdiction, and vnder the bonde of the couenaunt. The traitors also and the transgressours will I take from amonge you, and bringe them out of the londe of youre habitacion: as for the lande of Israel, they shall not come in it: that they maye knowe, how that I am the LORDE.

Eze.11.

Go now then (saieth the LORDE God) ye house of Israel, * cast awaye, & deliuer euery man his Idols: then shal ye heare me and no more blaspheme my holy name with youre offrynges and Idols. But vpon my holy hill, euen vpon the hie hil of Israel shal all the house of Israel and all that is in the londe, worshippe me saieth the LORD God and * in the same place will I fauoure the, and there will I requyre youre heaueoffrin ges, and the firstlinges of youre oblacions, with all youre holy thynges.

I wil accepte youre swete sauoure, when I bringe you from the nacions, and gather you together out of the londes, wherin ye be scatred: that I maye be halowed in you before the Heithen, and that ye maye knowe, that I am the LORDE, which haue brought you in to the londe of Israel: yee in to the same londe, that I swore to geue vnto youre fathers. There shall ye call to remembraunce youre owne wayes and all youre imaginacions, wherin ye haue bene defyled: and ye shal be * displeased with youre owne selues, for al youre wickednesses, that ye haue done. And ye shal knowe, that I am the LORDE: when I entreate you after my name, not after youre wicked wayes, nor according to youre corrupte workes: o ye house of Israel, saieth the LORDE God.

Moreouer the worde of the LORD came vnto me, sayenge: Thou sonne of man, set thy face towarde the south, and speake to the south wynde, and saye to the wood towarde the south: Heare the worde of the LORDE, thus saieth the LORDE God: Behold I will kyndle a fyre in the, that shall consume the grene trees vnto the dye, no man shalbe able to quenche his flame, but al that is from the south to the north, shall be burnt therin: and all flesh shal sey, that I the LORDE haue kyndled it, so that no man may quench it. Then sayde I: O LORDE God they will saye of me: Tush, they are but fables, that he telleth.

The.xxi.Chapter.

THe worde of the LORDE came to me, sayenge: Thou sonne of man, set thy face towarde Jerusalem, speake agaynst the Sanctuary, & prophecie agaynst the londe of Israel, saye to the londe of Israel: Thus saieth the LORDE God: Behold, I will vpon the, and will drawe my swearde out of the sheath, and rote out of the righteous and the wicked. Seinge then that I will rote out of the both the righteous and wicked, therfore shall my swearde go out of his sheath, agaynst all flesh from the north to the south: that al flesh maye knowe, how that I the LORDE haue drawen my swearde out of the sheath, & it shall not be put in agayne.

Mourne therfore (o thou sonne of man) with thy loynes crack withall, yee mourne bytterly for them: And yf they saye, wherfore mournest thou? Then tell them: for the tydinges that commeth, at the which all hartes shall melt, all hondes shal be letten downe, al stomarkes shal saynte, and all knees shal ware feble. Beholde, it commeth and shall be fulfilled, saieth the LORD God.

Agayne, the worde of the LORDE came vnto me, sayenge: Thou sonne of man, prophecie, and speake: Thus saieth the LORDE God: speake, the swearde is sharpened and well scoured, Sharpened is it for the slaughter, & scoured that it maye be bright. O the destroyenge * staff of my sonne, shall bringe downe all wode. He hath put his swearde to the dightinge, that good holde maye be taken of it. This swearde is sharpened and dight, that it maye be geue in to the hond of the manslayer.

Crie (o thou sonne of man) and howle, for this swearde shall smyte my people, and all the rulers in Israel, which with my people shall be slayne downe to the grounde thorow this swearde. Smyte thou vpō thy thee, for wherfore shulde not the plage and staff of iudgment come? Prophecy thou sonne of man, and smyte thine hondes together: make the swearde twoegged, yee make it thre egged, that manslayers swearde, that swearde of the greate slaughter, which shall smyte them, cuē in their priuy chambres: to make them abashed and saynte at the hartes, and in all gates to make some of them fall. O how bright & sharpe is it, how wel dight and mete for the slaughter? Get the to some place alone, other vpon the right honde or on the lefte, whither so euer thy face turneth. I will smyte my hondes together also, and satisfie my wrothfull indignacion: euen I the LORDE haue sayde it.

The worde of the LORDE came yet vnto me agayne, sayenge: Thou sonne of man make the two streetes, that the swearde of the kinge of Babylon maye come. Both the se streetes shall go out of the londe. He shall set him vp a place, at the heade of the strete shall he chose him out a comer. Make the strete, that the swearde maye come towarde Rabath of the Ammonites, and to the stronge cite of Jerusalem. For the kinge of Babylon shal stonde in the turnynge of the waye,

Leuit. 9. f 20. a. Deu. 18. b

at the heade of the two stretes: to * are councell at the soothsayers, castinge the lottes w his arowes, to are councell at the Idols, and to loke in the lyuer. But the soothsayenge shall poynte to the right syde vpon Ierusalem, that he maye set men off warre, to smyte it with a greate noyse, to crie out Alarum, to set battelrammes agaynst the gates, to graue vp dyches, and to make bulwarkes.

Neuertheles, as for the soothsayenge, they shall holde it but for vanite, euen as though a yest were tolde them: yee and they them selues remembre their wickednesse, so that by right they must be taken & wonne. Therfore sayeth the LORDE God: For so much as ye youre selues shewe youre offence, and haue opened youre wickednesse, so that in al youre workes mē may se youre synnes: yee in so much (I saye) that ye youre selues haue made mencion therof, ye shalbe taken by violence.

O thou shamefull wicked gyde of Israel, whose daye is come euen the tyme that wickednesse shal haue an ende: Thus saieth the LORDE God: take awaye the mytre, & put of the crowne, and so is it awaye: the humble is exalted, and the proude brought lowe. Punysh, punish, yee, punysh them will I, and destroye them: and that shall not be fulfilled, vntil he come, tho whom the iudgment belongeth, and to whom I haue geuen it. And thou (o sonne of man) prophecy, and speake: Thus saieth the LORDE God to ꝑ childrē of * Ammō, & to their blasphemy speake thou: The swearde, swarde is drawē forth alredy to the slaughter, and scoured that it glistreth (because thou hast loked the out vanities, and prophecied lyes) that it maye come vpon thy necke, like as vpon ꝑ other vngodly, which be slayne: whose daye came when their wickednesse was full.

Jerr. 49. a Eze. 25. a Amos. 1. c

Though it were put vp agayne into the sheath, yet will I punysh the, in the londe where thou wast norished and borne, and poure my indignacion vpon the, and will blowe vpon the in the fyre off my wrath, and delyuer the vnto cruell people, which are learned to destroye. Thou shalt fede the fyre, and thy bloude shall be shed in the londe, that thou mayest be put out off remembraunce. Euen I the LORDE haue spoken it.

The.xxii. Chapter.

MOreouer, the worde of the LORDE came vnto me, and sayde: Thou sonne of man, wilt thou not reproue this bloudthurstie cite? Shewe them their abhominacions, & tell them: Thus saieth the LORDE God, O thou cite, that shedest bloude in the myddest of the, that thy tyme maye come also: and makest the Idols to defyle the withal, Thou hast made thy self gilty, in the bloude that thou hast shed: and defyled the in the ydols, which thou hast made. Thou hast caused thy dayes to drawe nye, and made the tyme of thy yeares to come. Therfore will I make the to be confounded amonge the heithen, and to be despysed in all the londes, whether they be neye or farre from the: they shall laugh the to scorne, thou that hast gotten the so foule a name, and art ful of myschefe. Beholde, the rulers of Israel haue brought euery man his power, to shed bloude in the. * In the haue they despysed father and mother, in the haue they oppressed the straunger, in ꝑ haue they vexed the lyndowe, and the fatherlesse. Thou hast despised my Sanctuary, & vnhalowed my Sabbath. Murthurers are there in the, that shed bloude, and * eate vpō the hilles, and in the they vse vnhappynesse.

Deu. 27. Dan. 7.

* In ꝑ haue they discouered their fathers shame, in the haue they vexed wome in their sicknesse. * Euery man hath dealte shamefully with his neighbours wife, and abhominably defyled his doughter in lawe. In the hath euery man forced his owne sister, euen his fathers doughter: yee * gyftes haue bene receaued in the, to shed bloude. & Thou hast taken vsury and encrease, thou hast oppressed thy neighbours by extorcion, and forgotten me, saieth the LORDE God. Beholde, I haue smytten my handes vpon thy couetounesse, that thou hast vsed, and vpon ꝑ bloude which hath bene shed in the. Is thy harte able to endure it? or maye thy handes defende them selues, in the tyme that I shal bringe vpon the? Euen I the LORDE that speake it, will bringe it also to passe.

Leui. 18. Deu. 27. Eze. 18. Exo. 22. Leui. 25. Deu. 23. Psal. 15.

* I will scatre the amonge the heithen, & strowe ꝑ aboute in ꝑ londes, & wil cause thy filthynes to ceasse out of ꝑ: yee & I will haue the in possession in ꝑ sight of the heithen, ꝑ thou mayest knowe ꝑ I am the LORDE.

Eze. 36.

And the worde of the LORDE came vnto me, sayenge: Thou sonne of man, * house of Israel is turned to drosse. All they that shulde be brasse, tynne, yron & leade, are in the fyre become drosse. Therfore thus saieth the LORDE God: For so much as ye all are turned in to drosse, beholde: I will bringe you together vnto Jerusalē, like as syluer, lattē, yron, tynne and leade are put together in the fornace, and the fyre blowen there vnder to melte them: Euen so will I gather you in my wrath and indignacion, I will bringe you together, and kyndle the fyre of my cruell displeasure vnder you, that ye maye be melted therin.

Like as the syluer is melted in the fyre, so shall ye also be melted therin: that ye maye knowe, how that I the LORDE haue powred my wrath vpon you.

And the worde of the LORDE came vnto me, sayenge: Thou sonne of man, tell her: Thou art an vnclene londe, which is not rayned vpon the daye of the cruell wrath: e the prophetes that are in the, are swozne to gether to deuoure soules, like as a roaringe lyon, that ryueth by his praye, They receaue riches and good, and make many wyddowes in the. Thy prestes breake my lawe, and defyle my Sanctuary. * They put no difference betwene the holy and vnholy: no difference betwene the clene and vnclene they turne their eyes fro my Sabbathes, & I am vnhalowed amonge them.

Thy rulers in the are like raueninge wolues, to shed bloude, & to destroye soules for their owne couetous lucre. * As for thy prophetes, they dawbe with vntempered claye false vanities and prophecie lies vnto the people: the LORDE God saieth so: where as the LORDE hath not spoken. The people in the londe vseth wicked extorcion, and robbery. They vexe the poore and nedy: and * oppresse the straunger agaynst right. And I sought in the londe for a man, that wolde make vp the hedge, and set him selfe in the gappe before me in the landes behalfe, that I shulde not vtterly destroye it: but I coulde fynde none. Therfore will I poure out my cruell displeasure vpon them and burne the in the fyre of my wrath: their owne wayes will I recompense vpō their heades, saieth the LORDE God.

The.xxiij. Chapter.

THe worde of the LORDE came vnto me, sayēge: Thou sonne of man, there were two women, that had one mother: They fell (when they were yonge) begā to playe the harlotes * in Egipte. There were their brestes vsed, and the pappes of their maydenheade destroyed. The eldest of them was called Oola, and hyr yongest syster Oolība. These two were myne, and bare sonnes and doughters. Their names were, Samaria, (that was Oola: and Jerusalem, that was Oolība. As for Oola, she beganne to go a whorynge, when I had taken her to me. * She was set on fyre vpon hir louers the Assirians, which had to do with her: euen the rulers and lordes, that were decked in costly araye: fayre yonge men, lusty ryders of horses. 4.xx.17.d.

Thus thorow hir whordome, she cleued vnto all the yonge men of Assiria: yee she was madde vpon them, and defyled herself with all their Idols. Neither ceased she frō the fornication, that she vsed with the Egiptians: for in hir youth they laye with her, they vsed the brestes of hir maydenheade and poured their whordome vpō her therfore. * I delyuered her in to the handes of hir louers, euen the Assirians, whom she so loued. These discouered hir shame, toke hir sonnes and doughters, and slewe hyr with the swearde: An euel name gat she of all people, and they punished her. 4.Ba.17.b

* Hir sister Oolība sawe this, & destroyed herself with inordinate loue, more then she, and exceaded hir sister in whordome * she loued the Assirians (which also laye with her) namely, the rulers and greate lordes, that were clothed with al maner of gorgious apparell, all lusty horsme and fayre yonge persōnes. Then I sawe, that they both were defyled alike. But she increased stil in whordome: for when she sawe men paynted vpon the wall, the ymages of the Caldees set forth with freshe colours, with fayre gyrdles about them, and goodly bonettes vpon their heades, lokynge all lyke princes (after the maner of the Babilonians and Caldees in their owne londe, where they be borne) Immediatly, as soone as she sawe them, she brent in loue vpon them, and sent messaungers for them in to the londe, of the Caldees. B Jer.3.b 4.Re.16.b Ezec.16.b

Now when the Babilonians came to her they laye with her, & defyled her with their whordome, and so was she poluted with them. And when hir lust was abated from them, * hir whordome and shame was discouered and sene: then my harte forsoke her like as my harte was gone from hir sister also. Neuertheles she vsed hir whordome euer the longer the more, and remembred the dayes of hir youth, wherin she had played the harlot in the londe of Egipte: * she brent in lust vpon them, whose flesh was like the Ezec.7.d Num.3.b Ezec.16.d. Ezec.16.b.

flesh of asses, and their syde like the syde off horses. Thus thou hast renued the fylthynesse off thy youth, when thy louers bruised thy pappes, and marred thy brestes in Egipte.

Therfore (o Oholiba) thus saieth ☞ LORDE God. I will rayse vp thy louers (with whom thou hast satisfied thy lust) agaynst the, and gather them together rounde about the: Namely, the Babilonians, and al the Caldees: Pecod, Schoa, and Coa, with all the Assirians: al ponge and fayre louers pynces and lordes, knyghtes and gentelmen, which be al good horsmen: These shal come vpon the with horses, charettes, and a greate multitude off people: which shalbe harnessed aboute the on euery syde, with brestplates, sheldes, and helmettes. I will punysh the before them, yee they themselues shall punyshe the, according to theyr owne iudgment. I will put my gelousy vpō the, so that they shall deale cruelly with the. Thy shall cut off thy nose and thine eares, and the remnaunt shal fall thorow the sweard. They shal cary awaye thy sonnes and doughters, and the residue shalbe brent in the fyre. They shal stripe the out off thy clothes, and cary thy costly iewels awaye with them.

Thus will I make an ende off thy fylthynesse and whordome, which thou hast brought out of the londe off Egipte: so that thou shalt turne thyne eyes nomore after them, and call thy mynde nomore vpon Egipte. For thus saieth the LORDE. Behold, I will delyuer the into the hondes off them, whom thou hatest: yee euen in to the hondes of them, with whom thou hast fulfylled thy lust, which shal deale cruelly with the. All thy labour shall they take with thē and leaue the naked and bare, and thus the shame off thy fylthy whordome shall come to light. All these thinges shall happen vnto the, because off thy whordome, which thou hast vsed amonge the Gentiles, with whose Idols thou hast defyled thy self.

Thou hast walked in the waye off thy syster, therfore will I geue the hir cuppe in thy honde.

Thus saieth the LORDE God: Thou shalt drynke of thy sisters cuppe, how depe, and large so euer it be to the botome. Thou shalt be laughed to scorne, and had as greatly in derision, as is possible. Thou shalt be full of dronkennesse & sorowe, for the cuppe of thy sister Samaria is a cuppe of destruction and wastinge. the same shalt thou drinke, and suppe it out euen to the dregges, yee thou shalt eate vp the broken prees off it, and so teare thine owne brestes: For euen I haue spoken it, saieth the LORDE God.

Therfore thus saieth the LORDE God. For so much as thou hast forgotten me, and cast me aside, so beare now thine owne fylthinesse and whordome. The LORDE sayde moreouer vnto me: Thou sonne of man, wilt thou not reproue Hola, and Holiba: Shewe them their abhominacions: namely, that they haue broken their wedlocke, & stayned their hondes with blonde: yee euen with their Idols haue they committed aduoutry, * & offred them their owne children (to be deuoured) whō they had borne vnto me. Ezec. 16. Gen. 4.

Yee & this haue they done to me also: they haue defyled my Sanctuary in that same daye, & haue vnhalowed my Sabbath. For when they had slayne their children for their Idols, they came the same daye into my Sanctuary to defyle it. Lo, this haue they done in my house. Beside all this, thou hast sent thy messaungers for men out of farre countres and when they came, thou hast bathed, trymmed, and set forth thy self of the best fashion thou sattest vpon a goodly bed, and a table spred before the: wherupon thou hast set myne * incense and myne oyle. Ezec. 23.

Then was there greate cheare with her, and the men that were sent from farre countrees ouer the deserte: vnto these they gaue brachalettes vpon their hondes, and set glorious crownes vpon their heades. Then thought I: no doute, these will vse theyr harlottry also with yonder olde whore. And they wente in to the her, as vnto a comon harlot: Euen so wēte they also to Hola and Holiba, those fylthy women.

O ye all that loue vertue and righteousnes, iudge them, punysh them: * as aduoutrers and murtherers ought to be iudged & punyshed. For they are breakers of wedlocke, and the blonde is in their hōdes. Wherfore thus, saieth the LORDE God: bringe a greate multitude off people vpon them, & make them be scatred and spoiled, these shal stone them, and gorge them with their sweardes. They shall slaye their sōnes & doughters and burne vp their houses with fyre. Ezec. 23. Iohn. 8.

Thus wil I destroye all such fylthynesse out of the londe, that all women maye learne, not to do after your vnclennesse. And so they shall laye your fylthynesse vpon your owne selues, and ye shalbe punyshed for the synnes, that ye haue committed with your Idols, & ye shal knowe, ☞ I am the LORD

IN the.ix. yeare, in the.x. Moneth, the.x. daye of the Moneth came the worde of the LORD vnto me, sayenge: O thou sonne of man, wryte vp the name, of this daye, yee euen the houre of this present daye: when the kinge of Babilon set himself against Jerusalem. Shewe that obstinate housholde a * parable, and speake vnto them: Thus saieth the LORDE God Set a pot, set it on, & poure water into it, put all the peces together in it, all the good peces: the loyne and the shulder, and fyll it with the best bones. Take one of the best shepe, and an heape of bones withall: let it boyle well, & let the bones seeth wel therin. Wherof that, sayde the LORDE God on this maner: * Wo be vn to the bloudy cite of the pot, wherupon the rustynesse hangeth, and is not yet scoured awaye. Take out the peces that are in it, one after another: there nede no lottes be cast therfore, for the bloude is yet in it. Vpō a playne drye stone hath she poured it, & not vpon the grounde, that it might be couered with dust. And therfore haue I laten her poure hir bloude vpon a playne drye stony rocke, because it shulde not be hid, and that I might brynge my wrathfull indignacion and vengeaunce vpon her.

Wherfore, thus saieth the LORDE God O, wo be vnto that bloudthyrsty cite, for lyke I will prepare a heape off woode: bringe thou the bones together, kyndle thou the fyre, seeth the flesh, let all be well sodden that the bones maye be suckte out. Moreouer, set the potemptye vpon the coales, that it maye be warme, and the metall hote: that the filth and rustynesse maye be consumed. But it will not go off, there is so much of it: the rustynesse must be brent out. Thy filthinesse is abhominable, for I haue clensed the but thou woldest not be clensed. Thou canst not be purged from thine vnclennesse, till I haue poured my wrothfull indignacion vpon the. Euen I the LORDE haue so decreed: yee it is come therto alredy, that I will do it. I wil not go backe, I wil not spare, I will not be intreated: but accordinge to thy wayes and ymaginacions, thou shalt be punyshed, saieth the LORD God.

And the worde of the LORDE came vnto me, sayenge: Thou sonne of man, beholde, I will take awaye the pleasure off thine eyes with a plage: yet shalt thou nother mourne no wepe, no water thy chekes therfore: thou mayest mourne by thy self alone, but vse no deadly lamentacion. Holde on thy bonet, and put on thy shues vpon thy fete, couer not thy face, and eate no mourners bread. So I spake vnto the people by tymes in the morninge, and at euen my wyfe deyed: then vpon the nexte morow, I dyd as I was commaunded. And the people sayde vnto me: wilt thou not tell vs, what that signifieth, which thou doeste? I answered the, the worde of the LORDE came vnto me, sayenge: Tell the house of Israel, thus saieth the LORDE God: beholde I will suspende my Sanctuary: euen the glory of your power, the pleasure of your eyes, and the thinge that ye loue: youre sonnes and doughters whom ye haue left, shall fal thorow the swearde.

Like as I haue done, so shall ye do also: ye shall not hyde youre faces, ye shall eate no mourners bread, youre bonettes shall ye haue vpon youre heades, and shues vpon youre fete, ye shall nother mourne no wepe, but in youre synnes ye shalbe sorowful and one repente with another. Thus Ezechiel is youre shewtoken. For loke as he hath done, so (when this commeth) ye shall do also, that ye maye learne to knowe, that I am the LORDE God. But beholde, O thou sonne of man, In the daye when I take from them their power, their ioye and honoure, the lust of their eyes, the burthen of their bodies, namely, their sonnes and doughters, Than shal there one escape, and come vnto the, for to shewe? In that daye shall thy mouth be opened to hi, which is escaped, that thou mayest speake, and be no more domme, yee and thou shalt be their shewtoken, that they maye knowe, how that I am the LORDE.

The.xxv.Chapter.

THe worde of the LORDE came vnto me, sayenge, Thou sonne of man, set thy face agaynst the * Ammonites, prophecy vpō them, and saye vnto the Ammonites, Heare the worde of the LORD God Thus saieth LORDE God: For so much as thou speakest ouer my Sanctuary, wha I trow it be now suspended: and ouer the londe of Israel, I trow it be now desolate: yee and ouer the house of Juda, I trow they be now led awaye prisoners. Beholde, I wil delyuer the to the people of the east, that they maye haue the in possession, these shall Ezec.21.b. Jere.49.a set their castels and houses in ꝑ. They shall eate thy frute, and drynke vp thy mylke. 5 For Rabath, I will make of it a stall for camels, and of Ammon a shepefolde, and ye shall knowe, that I am the LORDE.

For thus saieth the LORDE God: In so much as thou hast clapped with thine hōdes, and stamped with thy fete, yee retoysed in thine harte ouer the londe of Israel with despyte: beholde, I wil stretch out myne hōde ouer the also, and deliuer the, to be spoyled off the Heithen, and rote the out from among the people, and cause the be destroyed out of all londes: yee I will make the be layed waist, that thou mayest knowe, that I am the LORDE.

Thus saieth the LORDE God: For so much as * Moab and Seir do saye: Is for the house of Juda, it is but like as all other Gentiles be: Therfore beholde, I will make the cities of Moab weaponlesse, and take awaye their strenght: their cities and chefe coastes of their londe, which are the pleasures of ꝑ countre: As namely. Beth Jesimoth Baalmeon, and Cariathaim: these will I open vnto them of the east, that they maye fall vpon the Ammonites: and will geue the these in possession: so ꝑ the Ammonites shall nomore be had in remembraunce amōge the Heithen. Euen thus will I punysh Moab also, that they maye knowe, how ꝑ I am the LORDE.

Moreouer, thus saieth the LORDE God, Because that * Edom hath auenged & eased himself vpon the house of Juda, therfore thus saieth the LORDE: I will reach out myne honde vpon Edom, and take awaye man and beast out of it. From Theman vn to Dedan will I make it desolate, they shall be slayne with the swearde. * Thorow my people of Israel, will I auenge me agayne vpon Edom: they shall handle him, acordinge to my wrath and indignacion, so ꝑ they shall knowe my vengeaunce sayeth the LORDE God.

Thus saieth the LORDE God: For so much as the * Philistines haue done thee: namely, take vengeaunce with despyteful stomackes, & of an olde euel wil set them selues to destroye: Therfore thus saieth ꝑ LORDE God: Beholde. I wil stretch out myne hōde ouer ꝑ Philistynes, & destroye ꝑ destroyer, and cause all the remnaunt of the see coast to perish. I greate vengeaunce wil I take vpon them, and punish them cruelly: that they maye knowe, how that I am the LORDE, which haue auenged me of them

The .xxvi. Chapter.

IT happened, that in the .xi. yeare, the first daye of the moneth the worde of the LORDE came vnto me, sayenge: * Thou sonne of man, Because that Tyre hath spoken vpon Jerusalem. Aha, now I trow the portes of the people be broken, and she turned vnto me, for I haue destroyed my bely full. yee therfore saieth the LORDE God. Beholde O Tyre, I wil vpō the, I wil bringe a greate multitude of people agaynst ꝑ, like as whē the see aryseth with his wawes: These shal breake the walles of Tyre, and cast downe hir towres: I wil scrape the grounde from her, & make her a bare stone, yee as the drynge place, where the fyshers hange vp their netters by the see syde. Euen I haue spoken it, saieth the LORDE God. The Gētiles shal spoyle her, hir doughters vpon the felde shal perish wt the swearde, ꝑ they maye knowe, how that I am the LORDE.

For thus saieth the LORDE God: Beholde, I will bringe hither Nabuchodonesor (which is the kinge of Babilon & a kynge of kynges) from the North, vpon Tyre, with horses, charettes, horsmen, and with a greate multitude of people. Thy doughters that are in the londe, shall he slaye with the swearde. But agaynst the, he shal make bulwarkes and graue vp dyches about the, & lift vp his shylde agaynst the. His kynges and batelraunmes shall he prepare for thy walles, and with his weapons breake downe thy towres. The dust of his horses shall couer the, they shalbe so many, thy walles shall shake at the noyse of the horsemen, charettes and wheles, when he commeth to thy portes, as men do in to an open cite. With the hoffes of his horse fete, shall he treade downe all thy stretes.

He shal slaye thy people wt the swearde, and breake downe the pilers of thy stright. They shall watst awaye thy riches, & spoyle thy marchaundise. Thy walles shall they breake downe, & destroye thy houses of pleasure. Thy stones, thy tymbre & foūdacions, shal they cast in ꝑ water. * Thus wil I bringe ꝑ melody of thy songes, & the voice of thy mynstrelsy to an ende, so ꝑ they shall nomore be herde. I will make a bare stone of the, yee a drynge place for nettes, & thou shalt neuer be buylded agayne, For euē I ꝑ LORD haue spoken it, saieth the LORDE God, thus hath the LORD God spoken concernynge Tyre, The Iles shal be moued at the noyse of thy fall, & at the crie of the slayne, ꝑ shall be murthured in the. All kynges of the see shall come downe from their seates regall:

they shall laye awaye their roabes, and put
of their costly clothynge: yee with trembln-
ge shall they be clothed, they shall syt vpon
the grounde: they shal be afrayed at thy sodane
fall, and be abashed at the.

They shal mourne for the, and saye vnto
the: O thou noble cite, that hast bene so greatly occupyed of olde, thou that hast bene the strongest vpon the see wt thine inhabitours,
whome all men stode in feare: Howe art thou now so vtterly destroyed? Now at the tyme of thy fall the inhabitours of the Iles, yee and the Iles them selues shall stonde in feare at thine ende. For thus sayeth the LORDE God: when I make the a desolate cite (as other cities be, that noman dwelleth in) & when I bringe the depe vpon the, that great waters maye couer the: Then will I caste downe vnto them, that descende in to the pyt:
vnto a people that hath bene longe dead,
and set the in a londe that is beneth, like the
olde wildernesse, with them which go downe
to their graues, so that noman shal dwel moze in the. And I wil make the to be no moze in honour, in the londe of the lyuynge. I will make an ende of the, and thou shalt be gone
though thou be sought for, yet shalt thou
not be founde for euermoze, saieth the LORDE God.

The.xrbij.Chapter.

THe woorde of the LORDE came vnto me, saienge: O thou sonne
of man make a lamentable co-playnte vpon *Tyre, & saye vn to Tyre, which is a porte of the see, & occupieth with muche people: & many Iles: thus speaketh the LORDE God: O Tyre thou haste sayde: I am a noble cite, Thy borders are in the myddest of the see, and thy buylders haue made the maruelous goodly
All thy tables haue they made of Cipze trees of the mount Senir. Fro Libanus haue they take Cede trees, to make the maistes: & the Okes of Basan to make the owers.

They boordes haue they made of yuery, & of costly wood out of the Ile of Cethim. Thy sayle was of whyte small nedle woorke out of the londe of Egipte, to hange vpo thy mast: &
thy hangynges of yalow sylke and purple,
out of the Iles of Elisa. They of Sidon & Ar-uad were thy maryners, & the wyseste in Ty re were thy shipmasters. The eldest & wyseste at Gebal were they, that mended & stopped
thy shippes.

All shippes of the see with their shipmen occupied their marchaundies in the. The Perles, Lydians, and Lybians were in thy-ne hoost, and helped the to fight: these hāged vp their shildes & helmettes with the, these set forth thy beuty.

They of Aruad were with thine hoost roū
de aboute thy walles, & were thy watchmen
vpon thy towres: these hanged vp their shil des rounde aboute thy walles, & made thy maruelous goodly. Tharsis occupied with the in all maner of wares, in syluer, prō, tyn
ne, and lead, and made thy market greate.
Iauan, Tubail and Meschech were thy mar-
chauntes, which brought the men, and orna mentes of metall for thy occuppenge. They of the house of Thogarma brought vnto the
at the tyme of thy marte, horse, horsmen and mules. They of *Dedan were thy marchaū tes: and many other Iles that occupied with the, brought the wethers, Elephant bones & Paycokes for a present. The Syrians occu pied with the, because of thy diuerse worke
and increased thy marchaūdies, with Sma ragdes, with scarlet, with nedle woorke, with whyte lynnen clothe, with sylke, and with Christall.

Iuda and the londe of Israel occuppyed with the, and brought vnto thy marketes, wheate, balme, hony, oyle, & triacle. Damascus also vsed marchaundies with the, in the best wyne and whyte woll: because thy occupienge was so greate, and thy wares so many. Dan, Iauan, and Mesial haue brought vnto thy marketes, yron redy made, with casia and calamus, accordinge to thyne occupienge. Dedan occupied with the, in fayre tapestry woorke and quylshins. Arabia and all the princes of Cedar haue occupied with the, in shepe, wethers, and goates.

The marchauntes of Seba & Rema haue occupied also with the, in all costly spices
in all precious stones and golde, which they brought vnto thy marketes. Haran, Chene and Eden, the marchauntes of Saba, Assiria and Chelmad, were all doers with the & occupied with the: In costly raymēt, of yalow sylke & nedlewoorke (very precious, & therfoze pakte & bounde together with roapes). yee
and in cedre woode, at the tyme of thy mar
kettes. The shippes of Tharsis were the chefe of thy occuppenge.

Thus thou art ful, and in great worship
pe, euen in the myddest of the see. Thy mary ners were euer bringinge vnto the out of many waters. But the easte wynde shal ouerbeate the in to the myddest of the see: so that thy wares, thy marchaūdies, thy ryches, thy maryners, thy shipmasters, thy helpers, thy occupiers (that brought the thynges necessary) the men of warre that are in the: yee and all thy comons shall perish in the middest of the see, in the daye of thy fall. The suburbes shall shake at the loude crie of thy shipmen. All whirrymen, and all maryners vpō the see, shall leape out of their boates, & set themselues vpon the lande. They shall lifte vp their voyce because of the, and make a lamentable crye. They shall cast dust vpon their heades, and lye downe in the asshes. They shal shaue them selues, & put sacke cloth vpō them for thy sake:

They shall mourne for the with hartfull sorow and heuy lamentation, yee their chyldren also shall wepe for the: Alas, what citie hath so bene destroyed in the see, as Tyre is? When thy wares & marchaundies came fro the seas, thou ganest all people ynough. The kynges of the earth hast thou made ryche. thorow the multitude of thy wares and occupienge. But now art thou cast downe in to the depe of the see, all thy resorte of people is perished with the. All they that dwell in the Iles are abashed at the, and all their kinges are afrayed, yee their faces haue chaunged colour. The marchauntes of the nations wōdre at the, In ỳ thou art so clene brought to naught, & commest nomore vp.

The.xrviii. Chapter.

A THe worde of the LORDE came vnto me, sayenge: Thou sonne of mā, tell the prynce of * Tyre: Thus sayeth the LORD God: because thou hast hast a proude hart & hast sayde: * I am a God, I haue my seate in the middest of the see like a god: where as thou art but a man & not God, & yet stōdest in thyne owne conceate, that thou arte God: Beholde, thou thynkest thy selfe wyser then * Daniel, that there is no secretes hyd from ỳ. With thy wisdome & thy vnderstondinge, thou hast gotte the greate welthynesse, and gathered treasure of syluer & golde. With thy greate wisdome and occupienge, hast thou increased thy power, and because of thy great riches thy hart is proude.

Therfore thus saieth ỳ LORD God: For so much as thou hast lift vp thine harte, as though thou werst God: beholde, I wil bringe enemies vpon the, euen the tyraunces of the Heithē: these shall drawe out their swordes vpon thy beuty and wisdome, and shall B defyle thy glory. They shall caste the downe to the pytte, so that thou shalt dye in the middest of the see, as they that be slayne. Let se, yf thou wilt saye then (before thē that slaye the) I am God: where as thou art but a mā, and not God, in the hondes of thē that slaye the. Dye shalt thou, euen as the vncircumcised in the hōdes of ỳ enemies: for I my selfe haue spoken it, saieth the LORD God.

Moreouer, the worde of the LORD came vnto me, sayenge: Thou sonne of man, make a lamentable complaynte ouer the kynge of Tyre, & tell him: Thus saieth the LORD God: Thou art a seale of a lykenesse, full of wysdome & excellent beuty. Thou hast bene in ỳ pleasaūt gardē of God: thou art decked with all maner of precious stones: with Rubye, Topas, Christall, Iacyncte, Onyx, Jaspis, Saphir, Smaragde, Carbuncle, & golde. Thy beuty & the holes ỳ be in the, were set forth in the daye of thy creacion. Thou art a sayre Cherub, stretched wyde out for to couer.

I haue set the vpon the holy mount of God, there hast thou bene, and walked amōge the fayre glisteringe stones. From the tyme of thy creacion thou hast bene tight excellent, tyll wickednesse was founde in the.

C * Because of thy greate marchaundise, thy hart is full of wickednesse, & thou hast offended. Therfore will I cast the from the mount of God, (O thou coueringe Cherub) and destroye the amōge the glisteringe stones. Thy hart was proude in thy fayre beuty, & thorow thy beuty thou hast destroyed thy wisdome. I will cast ỳ downe to ỳ groūde, & in ỳ sight of kinges. Thou hast defyled thy Sanctuary, with the great wickednesse of thy vnrighteous occuppenge. I will bringe a fyre from the myddest of the, to consume the: and wil make the to asshes, in the sight of all thē that loke vpon ỳ. All they that haue bene acquaynted with the amonge ỳ Heithen shall be abashed at the: seynge thou arte so clene brought to naught, & commest no more vp.

And the worde of the LORD came vnto me, saienge: Thou sonne of man, set thy face agaynst * Sidō, Prophecie vpō it, & speake. Thus saieth the LORD God: Beholde o Sidon, I will vpō the, & get me honoure in the that it maye be knowne, how that I am the LORD, whē I punysh her, & get me honoure in her. For I wil sende pestilence & blood shedding in to hir stretes, so ỳ those which be slayne with the sworde, shall lye rōde about in the myddest of her: & they shall knowe, that I am the LORD. She shal nomore be a prickinge thorne, & an hurtinge byrre vnto the house of Israel, nor vnto them that lye rounde about her and hate her: and they shall knowe, that I am the LORDE.

Thus saieth the LORDE God: when I gather ꝑ housholde of Israel together agayne from the nations amonge whom they be scatred: then shall I be sanctified in the, in ꝑ sight of the Gētiles: & they shall dwell in the londe, ꝑ I gaue to my seruaūt Jacob. They & shal dwel safely therin, buylde houses, and plante vynyardes: yee safely shal they dwel therin, when I haue punyshed all those, that dispyse them rounde aboute: and then shall they knowe, ꝑ I am ꝑ LORDE their God.

The.xxix. Chapter.

In the.x. yeare, vpō the.xii. daye of the.x. moneth, the worde of ꝑ LORDE came vnto me, sayenge * O thou sonne of man, set now thy face agaynst Pharao ꝑ king of Egipte, Prophecye agaynst hym & agaīst the whole londe of Egipte: Speake: and tel him, thus saieth the LORDE God: beholde, o Pharao thou kynge of Egipte, I will vpon the, thou great whalfysh, that lyest in thy waters: Thou that sayest: the water is myne, I haue made it my self, I will put an hoke in thy chawes, & hāge all the fish in thy waters vpō thy skales: after ꝑ I will drawe the out of thy waters, yee & all the fish of thy waters that hange vpon thy skales.

I will caste the out vpon dry londe with the fish of thy waters, so that thou shalt lye vpon the felde. Thou shalt not be gathered nor taken vp, but shalt be meate for the beastes of the felde, & for the foules of the ayre: ꝑ all they which dwel in Egipte, maye knowe that I am the LORDE: becaule thou haste bene a * staf of rede to the house of Israell. When they toke holde of the with their hōde thou brakest and pyckedest them on euery syde: and yf they leaned vpō the, thou brakest, & hurtest the reynes of their backes. Therfore thus saieth the LORDE God: beholde, I will bringe a swearde vpon the, and rote out of the both man and beast, yee the londe of Egipte shalbe desolate and wayst, & they shall knowe, that I am the LORDE: Becaule he sayde: the water is mine, I my self haue made it. Beholde therfore, I wil vpon the, & vpon thy waters: I will make the londe off Egipte waist and desolate, from the towre of Syenes vnto the borders of the Morians londe. So that in.xl. yeares there shall no fote of man walke there, nether fote of catell go there, nether shall it be inhabited. I will make the londe of Egipte to be desolate amōge other waist countrees, & her cities to lye voyde.xl. yeares, amonge other voyde cities: And I will scatre the Egipcians amonge ꝑ Heithen and nations.

Agayne, thus sayeth the LORDE God: * Whē the.xl. yeares are expyred, I will gather the Egipcians together agayne, out of the nacīōs, amōge whom they were scatred, & will bringe ꝑ prisoners of Egipte agayne in to the londe of Pathures their owne nature countre, that they maye be there a lowly finall kyngdome: yee they shal be the smallest amonge other kyngdomes, lest they exalte them selues aboue the Heithen: for I will so mynish them, that they shall nomore rule the Heithen. They shall nomore be an hope vnto the house of Israel, nether prouoke the enymore to wickednesse, to cause them turne backe, and to folowe them: & they shall knowe, that I am the LORDE God.

In the.xxvii. yeare, the first date of the first moneth, came ꝑ worde of the LORDE vnto me, sayenge: Thou sonne of man Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babilō hath made his hoost, with greate trauayle and laboure to come before Tyre: that euery heade maye be balde, and euery shulder bare. Yet hath Tyre geuen nether him nor his hoost ony reward, for the great trauayle that he hath taken there. Therfore thus saieth ꝑ LORDE God: beholde I will geue the londe of Egipte vnto Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babilon, ꝑ he maye take awaye all hir substaūce, robbe hir robberies, & spoyle hir spoyles, to paye his hoost their wages withal. I wil geue him the londe of Egipte for his laboure, that he toke for me before Tyre. At the same tyme will I cause the horne of the house of Israel to growe forth, & open thy mouth agayne amonge them: that they maye knowe, how that I am the LORDE.

The.xxx. Chapter.

Moreouer, the worde of ꝑ LORDE came vnto me, sayenge: Thou sonne of man, prophecye & speake, thus saieth the LORDE God: Mourne, wo worth thys daye, for the daye is here, the daye of the LORDE is come: the darke daye of ꝑ Heithen ꝑ houre is at honde, the swearde commeth vpō Egipte. When the wounded men fall downe in Egipte, when hir people are taken awaye, & when hir foundacions are destroyed: ꝑ Morians londe shal be afrayed, yee the Morians londe, Lybia & Lydia, all their comon people, & Chub, & all that be cōfederate vnto the shall fall with them thorow the swearde,

Thus saieth ꝓ LORD: The maynteners of the londe of Egipte shall fall, the pryde of hir power shall come downe: euē vnto the to wre of Syenes shall they be slayne downe
B vb the swearde, saieth ꝓ LORD God: amonge other desolate countrees they shal be made desolate, & amōge other waste cities they shalbe wasted. And they shal knowe, ꝓ I am ꝓ LORD, when I kyndle a fyre in Egipte, & when all hir helpers are destroyed.

At that tyme, shall messaungers go forth fro me in shippes, to make the carlesse Mo-rians afrayed: and sorowe shall come vpon thē in the daye of Egipte, for doutles it shal come. Thus saieth the LORDE God: I wil make an ende of ꝓ people of Egipte thorow the honde of Nabuchodonosor kynge of Babilon, he and his people with hym, yee and the cruell tyraūtes of the Heithen shalbe brought to destroye the londe. They shall drawe out their sweardes vpon Egipte and fyll the londe full of slaynmen. I will drye vp their floudes of water, & sell the londe in to the hondes of wicked people. The londe & all ꝓ is therin, wil I destroye thorow ꝓ enemies. Euen I the LORDE haue sayde it.

C And thus saieth ꝓ LORD God: * I will Isay.19.a. destroye the Idols, and dryue the ymages of Noph to an ende. There shal nomore be a prynce of Egipte, and a fearfulnesse will I sende in to the Egipcians londe. As for Pathures, I will make it desolate, and kyndle a fyre in Zoan. Alexandria will I punysh, & poure my wrothfull indignaciō vpon Sin, which is the strength of Egipte. All the substaunce of Alexādria will I destroye, & kyndle a fyre in Egipte.

Sin shalbe in greate heuynesse, Alexandria shalbe roted out, and Noph shall haue daylie sorowe. The best men of Heliopolis & Bubasto shalbe slayne with the swearde, & caried awaye captiue. At Taphnis the daye shalbe darke, when I breake there the cepter of the londe of Egipte, and when ꝓ pompe of hir power shall haue an ende. A cloude shall couer her, and hir doughters shalbe led de awaye in to the captiuite. Thus will I punysh Egipte, that they maye knowe, how that I am the LORDE.

D It happened in the .xi. yeare, vpon the se-uenth daye of ꝓ first moneth, ꝓ LORDES worde came vnto me, sayēge: Beholde, thou sonne of mā, I wil breake ꝓ arme of Pharao kyng of Egipte: and lo, it shall not be bounde vp to be healed, nether shall ony playstre be layed vpon it, for to ease it, or to make it so ströge, as to holde a swearde. Therfore, thus saieth the LORD God: beholde, I will hyt Pharao ꝓ kyng of Egipte, & bruse hys stron ge arme (yet is it but a broke one) & will lay te the swearde out of his honde.

As for the Egipcians, I will scatre them amonge the Heithen, & strowe thē in the lon des aboute. Agayne I will strength ꝓ arme of the kyng of Babilō, & gene him my swear de in his honde: but I will breake Pharaos arme, so that he shall holde it before him pi-teously, lyke a wounded man.

yee I will stablish the kynge of Babilōs arme, & the armes of Pharao shal fall dow-ne: that it maye be knowne, that I am the LORDE, which gene ꝓ kynge of Babylon my swearde in his hōde, that he maye drawe it out vpon the londe of Egipte: & that when I scatre the Egipcians amonge the Gētiles and strowe thē in the londes aboute, ꝓ they maye knowe, that I am the LORDE.

The .xxxi. Chapter.

MOreouer, it happened in ꝓ .xi. yea re the firste daye of the third mo-neth, that the worde of ꝓ LOR-DE came vnto me, sayenge: Thou sonne of mā, speake vnto Pharao the kynge of Egipte, and to all hys people: Whome art thou lyke in thy grea-nesse? Beholde, Assur was lyke a Cedre vpon the mount of Libanus, with fayre bran ches: so thicke, that he gaue shadowes, and shot out very hye. His toppe reached vnto ꝓ cloudes. The waters made hym greate, and and ꝓ depe set him vp an hye. Rodde about the rotes of him ranne there floudes of wa-ter, he sent oute hys little ryuers vnto all the trees of the felde. Therfore was he hyer then all the trees of the felde, and thorow ꝓ multi tude of waters that he sent from hym, he ex-tayned many and longe braunches. All fow-les of the ayre made their nestes in his bran ches, vnder his bowes gendred all ꝓ beastes of ꝓ felde, & vnder his shadow dwelt all peo ple. Fayre and beutifull was he in his great nesse, and in the length of his braunches, for hys rote stode besyde great waters: no ceder tree mighte hyde him. In the pleasaūt gar-den of God, there was no fyre tree lyke hys brauches, ꝓ playne trees were not lyke ꝓ bow-ghes of him. All the trees in the garden of God might not be cōpared vnto hym in his beuty: so fayre and goodly had I made him with the multitude of his braunches. And so much, ꝓ all ꝓ trees in the pleasaūt garden of God, had enuye at hi. Therfore, thus saieth ꝓ LORDE God: For so much as he hath hi-

vp himself so hye, & stretched his toppe vn to ꝓ cloudes, & seinge his hart is proude in his highnesse: I will deliuer hym in to ꝓ hondes of ỹ mightiest amonge ꝓ Heithē, which shall cast hi out. Accordinge to his wickednes wil
I cast him away, the enemies shal destroye
him, & the mighty men of the Heithen shal so scatter him, that his braunches shall lye vpō
all mountaynes & in all valleys: his bowes
shall be broken downe to the grounde thor-ow out the londe. Then all the people of ỹ londe shall go from his shadowe, and forsake him. When he is fallē, all the foules of ỹ ayre shall sytt vpō him, and all wilde beastes
of the felde shall go aboute amōge his braū-ches: so that from hence forth, no tree in the water shal attayne to his hyghnes, nor reach his toppe vnto the cloudes, nether shall ony
mo of ỹ water stonde so hye, as he hath done
for vnto death shall they all be delyuered
vnder the earth, and go downe to the graue
like other men.

C Moreouer, thus saieth the LORD God:
In the daye when he goeth downe to ỹ graue, I will cause a lamentacion to be made.
I will couer the depe vpō him, I wil stauch
his fountes, and the great waters shalbe restrayned. I shall cause Libanus to be sorow-full for his sake, and all the trees of the felde shall be smytten. I wil make the Heithē shake at the sounde of his fall, when I cast him
downe to hell, with them ỹ descēde in to the
pyt. All the trees of Eden, with all the cho sen and beste trees of Libanus, yee & all they
that are planted vpō the waters, shal mour
ne with him also in the lower habitacions:
for they shall go downe to hell wt him, vnto
them that be slayne with the sweard, which dwelt alwe vnder the shadowe of hys arme amonge the Heithen. To whome shalt thou be lykened, that art so glorious and greate,
amonge the trees of Eden? yet art thou cast downe vnder the earth (amonge the trees of Eden) where thou must lye amonge the vn-circumcised, with them that be slayne with ỹ sweard. Euen thus is it with Pharao & all his people, saieth the LORDE God.

The.xxxii.Chapter.

IN the.xii.yeare, the first daye of the.xii.moneth, the worde of the LORDE came vnto me, sayeng
Thou sonne of man, take vp a la-mentacion vpon * Pharao the kynge of Egipte, and saye vnto hym: Thou art reputed as a lyon of the Heithen and as a whalfish in the see. Thou castest thy waters about the, thou troublest the waters wt thy fete, and stampest in their floudes. Thus sayeth the LORD God: * I will spreade my net Eze. 12. B. 17. C.
ouer ỹ, namely, a great multitude of people:
these shal dryue the in to my patne, for I wil cast the vpō ỹ londe, and let the lye vpon the felde, that all the foules of the ayre maye sit vpon ỹ: I wil geue all ỹ beastes of the felde ynough of the. Thy flesh wil I cast vpon the hilles, and fyll ỹ valleys with thy highnesse
I will water the londe with the abundaūce of thy bloude euen to the mountaynes, & the valleys shal be ful of the.

B When thou art put out, I will couer the heauen, & make his starres dymme. * I wil Esa. 13. b.
spreade a cloude ouer the sonne, and ỹ moone shall not geue hir light. All the lightes of heauen will I put out ouer the, and bringe
darknesse vpon thy londe, saieth the LORD God. I will trouble the hartes of many peo ple, when I bringe thy destruccion amonge
the Heithen and countrees, whom thou kno west not. yee I wil make many people with their kynges so afrayed thorow ỹ, that their heere shal stōde vp, whē I shake my sweard
at their faces. Sodenly shall they be astonn-yed, euery man in hym selfe, at the daye of thy fall.

For thus saieth the LORD God: the kyng
of Babilons sweard shal come vpon the, wt
the swerdes of the worthies will I smyte downe thy people. All they that be mighty amonge the Gentiles, shal wast the proude
pompe of Egipte, and bringe downe all hir people. All the catel also of Egipte wil I de-stroye, that they shall come nomore vpon the waters: so that nether mans fote nor beastes clawe, shall stere them ony more. Then wil I C make their waters cleare, & cause their flou-
des to runne lyke oyle, sayeth the LORDE
God: when I make the londe of Egipte desolate, and when the countre with all that is therin, shalbe layde waist: and whē I smyte
all thē which dwel in it, that they maye kno-
we, that I am ỹ LORD. This is the mour-nynge, that the doughters of the Heithē shal make: yee a sorow & lamentacion shall they take vp, vpon Egipte & all hir people, saieth
the LORDE God.

In the.xii.yeare, the.xv. daye of the mo-
neth, came the worde of the LORD vnto me
sayenge: Thou sonne of man, Take vp a la-mētacion vpon the people of Egipte, & cast them downe, yee and the mighty people of the Heithen also, euen with them * that dwel Esa. 14. c.
beneth: and with them that go downe in to Eze. 31. c.
ỹ graue. Downe (how fayre so euer thou be) and laye the with the vncircumcised. Amõg those that be slayne with the swearde, shall they lye. The swearde is geuen alredy, he shall be drawen forth & all his people. The D mightie worthies & hys helpers, þ be gone downe & lye with the vncircumcised & with them that be slayne with the swearde shall speake to hym out of the hell.

Assur is there also with his company, & their graues roũde aboute, which were slayne & fell all with the swearde, whose graues lye besyde him in the lowe pytte. His comõs are buried rounde aboute his graue: altogether wounded and slayne with the swearde, which men afore tyme brought feare in to þ londe of the lyuynge.

Jere. 49, f Dan. 8. a. There is * Elam also with all his people and their graues rounde aboute: whiche all beynge wouñded and slayne with the sword, are gone downe vncircũcised vnder þ earth, which neuertheles somtyme brought feare in to the londe of the lyuynge: for the whiche cause they beare their shame, with the other that be gone downe to the graue.

E Their buryall is geuen them & all theyr people, amonge them that be slayne. Theyr graues are rounde aboute all thẽ, which be vncircumcised, and with them that be slayne thorow the swearde: for seynge that in tymes past they made the londe of the lyuynge afrayed, they must now beare their owne shame, with them þ go downe to the pytte, and lye amonge them, that be slayne.

There is Meschech also, and Tubal, & their people, & their graues rounde aboute. These all are amonge the vncircumcised, and thẽ that be slayne with the swearde, because afore tyme they made the londe of the lyuynge afrayed.

Shulde not they then lye also amonge þ worthies, & vncircumcised Giauntes, which with their weapons are gone downe to hell: whose sweardes are layed vnder their heades, whose wickednesse is vpon their bones because that as worthies, they haue brought feare in to þ londe of þ lyuynge: yee amõge the vncircumcised shalt thou be destroyed, & slepe with them, that perished thorow the swearde.

F There is the lõde of * Edom with hir kinges and princes also, which ỽ their strẽgth are layed by them that were slayne with the swearde, yee amonge the vncircumcised, and them which are gone downe in to the pytte.
Jere. 49. b Ezec. 25. b. Joel 3. Moreouer, there be all the princes of þ north with all the Sidonians, whiche are gone downe to the slayne.

With their feare & strength they are come to confusion, and lye there vncircumcised, amonge those that be slayne with the swearde and beare their owne shame, with them that be gone downe to the pytte. Now lyke Pharao seyth this, he shal be comforted ouer all his people, that is slayne with the swearde: both Pharao & all his hoost, saieth the LORDE God. For I haue geuen my feare in the londe of the lyuynge. But Pharao & all hys people shall lye amonge the vncircumcised, and amonge them that be slayne with the swearde, saieth the LORDE God.

The .xxxiii. Chapter.

AGayne, the worde of þ LORDE came vnto me, sayenge: Thou sonne of man, speake to þ children of thy people, and tell thẽ: When I sende a swearde vpon a londe, yf the people of the londe take a man of their countre, & set him to be their * watchman: the same man (whã he seyth þ swearde come vpon the londe) shal blowe the trompet, and warne the people.

yf a man now heare the noyse of the trompe & will not be warned, and the swearde come and take hym awaye: hys bloude shall be vpõ his owne heade: For he herde the noyse of the trompe, and wolde not take heede, therfore his bloude be vpon him. But yf he will receaue warnynge, he shal saue his life.
Agayne, yf the watchmã sey the swearde come, and blowe it not with the trompe, that the people is not warned: yf the swearde come then, & take any man from amõge them, the same shall be taken awaye in hys owne synne, but his bloude will I requyre of the watchmans honde.

* And now (O thou sonne of man) I haue made the a watchman vnto the house of Israel: that where as thou hearest any thynge out of my mouth, thou mayest warne them on my behalfe. yf I saye vnto the wicked: thou wicked, thou shalt surely dye: and thou geuest him not warnynge, that he maye beware of his vngodly waye: then shall þ wicked dye in hys owne synne, but his bloude will I requyre of thy honde. Neuertheles yf thou warne the wicked of his waye, to turne from it, where as he yet wil not be conuerted it: then shall he dye because of his synne, but thou hast delyuered thy soule.

Therfore (O thou sonne of man) speake vnto the house of Israel, ye saye thus: Our offences and synnes lye vpon vs, and we are corrupte in them: how shulde we then belyued vnto like? Tell them: * As truly as I liue (saieth ꝓ LORD God) I haue no plea sure in the death of the wicked, but muche

rather that the wicked turne from his waye and lyue. Turne you, turne you from your vngodly wayes, o ye of the house of Israel
Oh, wherfore will ye dye?

Thou sonne of man, tell the childzen of thy people: * The righteousnesse of ꝓ righte ous shal not saue him, whansoeuer he turneth awaye vnfaithfully: Agayne, the wickednesse of the wicked shall not hurte him, whensoeuer he conuerteth from his vngod lynesse.

And ꝓ righteousnesse of the righteous
shall not saue his life, whensoeuer he synneth. ꝓ I saye vnto the righteous, that he shall surely lyue, and so he trust to his own righteousnesse, and do synne: then shall his righteousnesse be nomoze thought vpõ, but in the wickednesse that he hath done, he shall dye.

* Agayne, ꝓ I saye to the wicked: thou shalt surely dye: & so he turne frõ his synnes vnto the thinge that is lawfull & righte: In so much that the same wicked man geueth
the pledge agayne, restozeth ꝓ he hath take awaye by robbery, walketh in the cõmaun
dements of life, and doth no wzonge:

Then shall he surely lyue, and not dye.
All the synnes that he had done, shal neuer
be thought vpõ: Foz in so much as he doth
vnto the thynge that is lawfull and right,
he shall lyue. And yet the childzẽ of thy peo ple saye: Tushe, the waye of the LORDE is not right, where as their owne waye is nothing right.

When the righteous turneth from hys
righteousnesse, and doeth the thynge ꝓ is wicked, he shall dye therfoze. But yf ꝓ wicked turne from his wickednesse, doinge the thinge that is lawfull & right, he shall lyue thereby. yet ye saye: * the waye of ꝓ LORD is not equall. O ye house of Israel, * I wil
iudge eue[r]yone of you after his wayes.

In the.xii.yeare, the.v.daye of the.x.mo
neth of our captiuite, it happened, that one which was fled out of Jerusalẽ, came vnto me, & saide: the citie is destroyed. Now the hande of the LORD had bene vpon me ꝓ
euenynge afoze this man (which was esca
ped) came vnto me, & had opened my mouth
tyll the mozynge that he came to me: so he opened my mouth, so that I was no more domme. Then came the wozde of the Lord vnto me, and saide: Thou sonne of man, theyr that dwel in the waylted lõde of Israel, saye: Abzaham was but one man, &
he had ꝓ londe in possessiõ: now are we many, and the londe is geuẽ vs to possesse also
And therfoze tell them: Thus saieth the LORD: * In ꝓ bloude haue ye eaten, your eyes haue ye lift vp to Idols, & * haue shed
bloude: shal ye then haue the londe in possession?

ye leane vpõ youre swoardes, ye wozke
abhominaciõs, euery one defyleth his negh
bours wife: & shall ye then possesse the lõde?
Saye thou these wozdes vnto them: Thus saieth ꝓ LORD God: As truly as I lyue,
all ye that dwell in this wildernesse, shalbe slayne wt the swearde: what so is vpon the felde, will I geue vnto the beastes to be de-uoured: those that be in stronge holdes and denned, shall dye of the pestilẽce. Foz I will make the londe desolate & waist, & ꝓ pompe of hir strength shall come to an ende. The mountaynes in Israel shall be so wayste ꝓ
no man shall trauayle therby.

* Then shall they learne to knowe, ꝓ I am ꝓ LORD, whẽ I make the londe wayst
and desolate, because of all their abhomina cions, that they haue wzought. And thou sonne of man, the childzen of thy people ꝓ talke of the, by the walles & in the dozes of their houses, sayenge one to another: come,
let vs heare, what wozde is gone fozth from
the LORD: These come vnto ꝓ, after ꝓ ma
ner of a greate people: yee my people syt downe before the, and heare thy wozdes, but they do not therafter * Foz in their mouthes
they shewe them selues, as though they we re feruent, but their harte goeth after theyr owne couetous lucre. And as a ballet ꝓ hath a swete tune, & is pleasaũt to synge, so shalt thou be vnto them: thy wozdes shal they hea re, but they will not do therafter. Whẽ this commeth to passe (foz lo, it cõmeth in dede)
then shal they knowe, that there hath bene a prophet amonge them.

The.xxxiiij.Chapter.

AND the wozde of the LORDE
came vnto me, sayenge: Thou sonne of mã, prophecye agaynst
the shepherdes of Israel, prophe cy, & speake vnto them: Thus saieth ꝓ LORD God: * Woo be vnto ꝓ shepherdes of Israel, ꝓ fede thẽ selues. Shulde not the shepherdes fede the flockes?

ye haue eaten vp the fatte, ye haue clothed you with the woll: the best fedde haue
ye slayne, but ꝓ flocke haue ye not nozished:
The weake haue ye not holden vp, * ꝓ sicke

haue ye not healed: the broken haue ye not bounde together, the outcastes haue ye not brought agayne: þ lost haue ye not sought,
1.Pet.5. *but churlishly & cruelly haue ye ruled thẽ. Thus are they scatred here and there without a shepherde: yee all the beastes of þ felde deuoure them, and they go astraye.

My shepe go wandringe vpon all mountaynes and vpon euery hye hill, yee they be scatred abrode in all feldes, and there is no man, that careth for them, or seketh after them.

B Therfore o ye shepherdes, heare the worde of the LORD, Thus saieth þ LORDE God: As truly as I lyue, for so much as my shepe are robbed, and deuoured of all þ wylde beastes of the felde, haupnge no shepeherde: and seynge that my shepherdes take no regarde of my shepe, but fede them selues only, and not my shepe: Therfore heare the worde of the LORD, o ye shepherdes: Thus saieth the LORDE God: Beholde, I my selfe will vpon the shepherdes, and requyre my shepe from their hondes, and make thẽ ceasse from fedinge of my shepe: yee the shepherdes shall fede them selues nomore: For I will delyuer my shepe out of their mouthes so that they shall not deuoure them after thys.

Ioh.10.a. Ezech.13.b. 1.pe.2.c.5.a For thus saieth the LORD God: * Behold, I will loke to my shepe my selfe, and seke them. Like as a shepherde amõge the flocke seketh after the shepe that are scatred abrode, euen so wil I seke after my shepe, and gather them together out of all places, where they haue bene scatred in the cloudy & darke daye. I will bringe them out from all people, and gather them together out of all londes. I will bringe them in to their owne londe, and fede them vpon the mountaynes of Israel, by the riuers, and in all the places of the countre. I will fede them in righte good pastures, and vpon the hye mountaynes of Israel shall theyr foldes be. There shal they lye in a good folde, and in a fat pasture shal they fede: euen vpon the mountaynes of Israell.

I will fede my shepe my selfe, and bringe them to their rest, saieth the LORDE God.
Luce.4.b. Ioh.10.a. * Such as be lost, will I seke: such as go astraye, wil I bringe agayne: such as be wounded, wil I bynde vp: such as be weake, will I make stronge: such as be fat & wel lykinge, those will I preserue, & fede them with the thinge that is lawfull. And as for you (o my Mat.25.c. shepe) saieth the LORD God: * I wil put a difference amonge the shepe, amonge the wethers & the goates. Was it not ynough for you, to eate vp the good pasture, but ye must treade downe the residue of youre pasture vnder youre fete also? Was it not ynough for you to drynke cleare water, but ye muste trouble the residue also with youre fete?

Thus my shepe must be fayne to eate thinge, that ye haue trode downe with youre fete, and to drynke, that ye with youre fete haue defyled.

Therfore, thus saieth the LORDE God vnto them: Beholde, I will seuer the fat shepe from the leane: for so muche as ye haue shoue the weake shepe vpon þ sydes, & shulders, and runne vpon them with youre hornes, so longe till ye haue vtterly scatred them abrode. I wil helpe my shepe, so þ they shal nomore be spoyled: yee I will discerne one shepe from another. I wil rayse vp vnto them one only shepherde, euen my seruaunt * Dauid, he shal fede thẽ, & he shal be their shepherde. I the LORDE wil be them God and my seruaunt Dauid shal be their prince. Euen I the LORDE haue spoken it.

Iere.30.a. Ezech.34.a. Moreouer, I wil make a couenaũt of peace with them, and dryue all euel beastes out of the londe: so that they maye dwell safely in the wildernesse, and slepe in the woodes. Good fortune & prosperite wil I geue them, and vnto all that be rounde about my hyll.
Deut.11.a. * A prosperous showre & rayne will I sende them in due season, that þ trees in the wood maye bringe forth their frutes, & the grounde hir increase. They shalbe safe in their londe, ād shal knowe, that I am the LORDE, which haue broke their poche, and delyuered them out of the hondes of those, that helde them in subiection.

They shal nomore be spoyled of the heithen, nor deuoured with the beastes of the lande: but safely shall they dwell, & no man shal fraye them. I wil set vp an excellẽt plant for them, so þ they shal suffre nomore hunger in the londe, neither beare the reproffe of þ heithen onymore. Thus shal they vnderstonde, that I þ LORD their God am with them, & þ they (euen the house of Israel) are my people, saieth þ LORDE God, ye men are my flocke, * ye are the shepe of my pasture: and I am youre God, saieth the LORDE God.
Gen.13.a. Psal.95.a.

The xxxv. Chapter.

MOreouer, the worde of the LORDE came vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, turne thy face towarde the mount Seir, Gen.36.a. & prophecy vpon it, & saye vnto it:

that sayeth the LORD God: Beholde, (o thou mount Seir) I will vpon the, I will stretch out myne hande ouer the, yee waste & de solate will I make the. Thy cities will I bring to wildernesse, & thou shalt lye wayde: that thou mayest knowe how that I am the LORD. Forasmuche as thou beareste an olde enemyes grudge & malice vnto the children of Israel, & vnto a cruel death hast made them afrayed, what tyme as they were troubled & punyshed for theyr synne therfore, as truely as I lyue (saieth the LORD God) I will prepare the vnto bloude, & bloude shall followe vpon the: * seinge thou hast hated bloude, therfore shal bloude pursue the. Thus will I make the mount Seir desolate & waste, and bringe to passe, that there shall no man go thither, nor come from thence. His mountaynes will I fyll with slayne men: thy hilles, dales, and valleys shall be full of them, that are slayne with the sworde. I will make the a perpetual wildernesse, so that no man shal dwell in thy cities: & ye shall knowe, how that I am the LORD.

And because thou hast sayde: what, both these nations and both theese landes muste be myne, & I will haue the in possession, * where as the LORD was there. Therfore, thus saieth the LORD God: As truly as I lyue, I will handle the accordinge to thy wrath & enuye, lyke as thou hast dealt cruelly with them: that I maye be knowne amonge the, when I haue punyshed the. yee and that thou also mayest be sure, that I the LORD haue harde all thy dispytefull wordes, which thou hast spoken agaynst the mountaynes of Israel, sayenge: Lo, they are made waste, & geuen vs to deuoure.

Thus with your mouthes ye haue made your boast agaynst me, ye & multiplied your spytefull wordes agaynst me, which I haue harde altogether. Therefore vnto, thus saieth the LORD God: when the whole worlde is in rest, that will I make the waste. * And like as thou (o mount Seir) madest glad, because the enheritage of the house of Israel was desolate: so will I do vnto the also, that mount and whole Edom shall be destroyed, & knowe, that I am the LORDE.

The.xxxvi. Chapter.

Thou sonne of man, prophecie vnto the mountaynes of Israel, & speake: * heare the worde of the LORDE, o ye mountaynes of Israel: Thus saieth the LORD God: Because your enemie hath sayde vpon you: Aha, the hye euerlastynge places are now become ours: prophecy therfore, & speake: thus saieth the LORD God: Seinge ye be wasted & trode downe on euery syde, & become a possession vnto the residue of the Gentiles which haue brought you in to mes mouthes & vnto an euel name amonge the people: Therfore, heare the worde of the LORD God, o ye mountaynes of Israel: Thus saieth the LORD God vnto the mountaynes and hilles, valleys, & dales, to the voyde wildernesses & desolate cities, which are spoyled, & had in derision on euery syde, amonge the residue of the Heithē: yee euen thus saieth the LORD God: In the fyre of my gelousy haue I taken a deuice, agaynst the residue of the Gētiles, and agaynst all God: which haue take in my lō de vnto the selues for a possession: which also reioyced frō their whole harte & dispytefull stomache, to waste it, and to spoyle it. Ezech.35.

Prophecy therfore vpon the lande of Israel, speake vnto the mountaynes and hilles, to valleys and dales, thus saieth the LORD God: Beholde, this haue I deuised in my gelousy and terrible wrath: For so much as ye haue suffred reproche of the Heithen, therfore thus saieth the LORDE God: I haue sworne, that the Gentiles which lye about you, shall beare youre cōfusion them selues. And as for you (o mountaynes of Israel) ye shall shute out youre braunches, and bringe forth youre fruite to my people of Israell, for it is harde by, that it will come.

Beholde, I come vnto you, and vnto you will I turne me, that ye maye be tylled, and sowen. I will sende you much people, which shalbe all of the house of Israel: the cytyes shalbe inhabited, and the decayed places shal be repayred againe. I will prouyde you with much people and catell, which shal increase & bringe fruite. I will restore you also to your olde estate, and shew you more kindnesse then euer ye had before: whereby ye shall knowe, that I am the LORD. yee people will I sende vnto you (o my folke of Israel) which shall haue the in possession, and thou shalt be their inheritaunce, so that thou shalt nomore be without them. Agayne, thus saieth the LORDE God: For so much as they say vnto you thou art an eatar vp of me, and a waster of thy people: therfore thou shalt eate no mo men, neither destroye thy people any more, saieth the LORDE God. And I will not suffre the, for to heare thine owne confusion amonge the Gentiles from henceforth. Thou shalt not beare the reproche of the nations, nor cast out thine owne people anymore, sayeth the LORDE God.

Moreouer, the worde of the LORD came vnto me, saienge: O thou sonne of mā, when the house of Israel dwelt vpon their owne grounde, they defyled them selues with their owne wayes & ymaginacions, so that in my sighte their waye was like ꝧ vnclennes of a menstruous woman. Wherfore I poured my wrothfull displeasure vpō them, because of the bloude that they had shed in the lōde, & because of their Idols, wherwith they had defyled them selues. I scatred the also amonge the Heithen, so that they were strowed about in the lōdes. Accordinge to their wayes & after their owne inuencions, so dyd I punysh them.

Rom. 2. c. Esa. 52. b. D *Now when they were gone vnto ꝧ Heithen, and came in amonge them, they dishonoured my holy name: so that it was sayde of them: Are these the people of God, & must go out of their owne londe? Then spared I my holy name, which ꝧ house of Israel had dishonoured amonge the Gētiles, to whom they came. Therfore tell ꝧ house of Israell: Thus saieth the LORD God: I do not this for your sakes (O house of Israel) but for my holy names sake, which ye dishonoured amōge the Heithen, when ye came to thē. Therfore, I will halowe my great name agayne, which amonge the Gētiles is euel spoken of for ye youre selues haue dishonoured it amōge them. And the Gentiles shal knowe, that I am the LORD, when I am honoured in you before their eyes, saieth the LORD God.

Esa. 44. a. Ier. 17. c. Is for you, I wil take you from amonge the Heithen, and gather you together out of all countrees, and bringe you agayne in to youre owne lōde. *Then will I poure cleare water vpon you, & ye shalbe clene: yee from all youre vnclennesse & from all your Idols shall I clēse you. Eze. 11. b. 18. c. *A new harte also wil I geue you, and a newe spyrite will I put in to you. Is for that stony hart, I will take it out of youre body, and geue you a fleshly harte. Deut. 8. d. I will geue you my spyrite amonge you, *& cause you to walke in my commaundemētes, to kepe my lawes, and to fulfill them.

And so ye shall dwell in the londe, that I gaue to your forefathers, & ye shalbe my people, & I will be your God. & I will helpe you out of all youre vnclennesse, I wil call for the corne, and will increase it, & will let you haue no honger. I will multiplie the frutes of the trees and ꝧ increase of the felde for you, so that ye shal beare nomore reproche of honger amōge ꝧ Heithē. Then shall ye remēbre your owne wicked wayes, & youre ymaginaciōs, which were not good: so that ye shal take displeasure at your owne selues by reason of youre synnes and abhominacions.

But I will not do this for your sakes (saieth ꝧ LORDE God) be ye sure of it. Therfore (o ye house of Israel) be ashamed & confounded for youre synnes. Moreouer, thus saieth the LORDE God: what tyme as I shal clēse you from all your offences, then wil I make the cities to be occupied againe, and wil repayre the places that be decayed. The desolate londe shal be buylded agayne, whiche afore tyme laye wayst, in the sight of all them, that laide by. Then shal it be sayde: This wayst lōde is become like a garden of pleasure, and the wyde, desolate, & broken downe cities, are now stronge, and fensed agayne. Then the rellues of the Heithen that lye rounde about you, shal knowe, that I am the LORD, which haue payre that was broken downe, and planted agayne, that was made wayst. Euen I the LORDE haue spoken it & will do it in dede.

Thus saieth the LORD God: I will yet once be founde agayne of ꝧ house of Israel, & do this for thē: * I shal increase them as a flocke of men. Like as the holy flocke, and ꝧ flocke of Jerusalem are in the hie solempne feastes: so shall also the wilde wasted cities be fylled with flockes of men: and they shall knowe, that I am the LORD.

The xxxvij. Chapter.

The honde of the LORDE came vpon me, & caried me out in the spyrite of the LORDE, & let me downe in a playne felde, ꝧ laye full of bones, & he led me rounde about by them: & beholde, the bones that laye vpon the felde, were very many, & maruelous dyre also. Then sayde he vnto me: Thou sonne of man: thinkest thou that these bones maye lyue againe? I answered: O LORDE God, thou knowest. And he sayde vnto me: Prophecy thou vpō these bones, & speake vnto them: ye dyre bones, heare ꝧ worde of the LORDE. Thus saieth ꝧ LORD God vnto these bones: Beholde, I wil put breth into you, ꝧ ye maye lyue: I will geue you synowes, & make fleshe grow vpon you & couer you ouer with skynne: & so geue you *breth, that ye maye lyue, & knowe, that I am the LORDE.

So I prophecied, as he had commaūded me. *And as I was prophecienge, there came a noyse & a great mocion, so that ꝧ bones rāne euery one to another. Now whē I had loked, beholde, they had synowes, and fleshe grewe vpon them: & aboue they were couered with skynne, but there was no breth in them. Then sayde he vnto me: Thou sonne of man, prophecie thou towarde ꝓ wynde: prophecy, and speake to the wynde: Thus saieth the LORD God: Come (o thou ayre) from the foure wyndes, & blowe vpon these slayne, that they maye be restored to life. So I prophecied, as he had commaunded me: Then came the breth vnto them, and they receaued life, and stode vp vpon their fete, a maruelous greate sorte.

Moreouer, he sayde vnto me: Thou sonne of man, these bones are the whole house of Israel. Beholde, they saye: oure bones are dryed vp, oure hope is gone, we are clene cut of. Therfore prophecie thou, & speake vnto them. Thus saieth ꝓ LORDE God: Beholde, I will open youre graues (o my people) & take you out of youre sepulcres, & bringe you into ꝓ londe of Israel agayne. So shal ye knowe ꝓ I am the LORDE, when I opē youre graues, & bringe you out of them. Myne spirite also wil I put in you, & ye shal lyue, I will set you agayne in youre owne lōde, and ye shal knowe, that I am the LORD, which haue sayde it, and fulfilled in dede.

The worde of the LORD came vnto me, saynge: Thou sonne of man, take a sticke & write vpon it: Vnto Juda & to the chyldren of Israel his compayons. Then take another sticke, and wryte vpon it: Vnto Joseph the stocke of Ephraim, and to all ꝓ houshold of Israel hys companyons And thā take both these together in thine honde, so shall there be one stycke therof. Now ꝓ the chyldren of thy people saye vnto the: wilt thou not shewe vs, what thou meanest by these? Then geue them this answere: Thus saieth the LORDE God: Beholde, * I will take the stocke of Joseph, which is in the honde of Ephraim, and of the trybes of Israel hys felowes, and will put them to the stocke of Juda, & make them one stocke, and they shal be one in my hōde. And ꝓ two stickes where vpon thou wryteste, shalt thou haue in thine honde, that they maye se, and thou shalt saie vnto them:

Thus saieth the LORDE God: beholde I will take awaye the children of Israel from amōge ꝓ heithen, vnto whom they be gone, and wil gather them together on euery syde and bringe them agayne in to their owne lō deryee I will make one people of thē in the londe, vpon the mountaynes of Israel, and they all shall haue but one kyng. They shall nomore be two peoples from henceforth, neither be deuyded in to two kyngdomes: they shal also defyle thē selues nomore with their abhomynacions, Idols and all their wicked dounges I wil helpe thē out of all their dwellinge places, wherin they haue synned: and will so clense them, that they shalbe my people, and I their God.

Dauid my seruaunt shalbe their king, & *they all shall haue one shepherde only. They shall walke in my lawes, & my cōmaūdementes shal they both kepe & fulfil. They shall dwel in the londe, that I gaue vnto Jacob my seruaunt, where as youre fathers also haue dwelt. yee euē in the same londe shal they, their children, & their childers children dwell for euermore: and my seruaunt Dauid shal be their euerlastinge prynce. Moreouer, I will make a bonde of peace with them, which shal be vnto them an euerlastinge couenaunt. I wil settle thē also, and multiplie them, my Sanctuary will I set amonge thē for euermore. Ezr.34.B. Joh.10.B.

* My dwellinge shalbe with thē, yee I will be their God, & they shalbe my people. Thus the heithen also shal knowe, that ꝓ LORDE am ꝓ holy maker of Israel: when my Sanctuary shal be amōge thē for euermore. Leui.:9 b.

The.xxxviij.Chapter.

AND the worde of the LORDE I came vnto me, sayenge: Thou sonne of man, turne thy face towarde Gog in the londe of Magog, which is the chefe prynce at Meiech & Tubal: prophecy agaynst hym, & saye: Thus saieth ꝓ LORD God: * O Gog thou chefe prynce of Meiech and Tubal: beholde, I wil vpō the, and wil turne ꝓ aboute and put a bytt in thy chawes: I will bringe the forth and all thine hooste, both horse and horsmen, which be all weapened of the beste fashion: a greate people, that handle altogether speares, shyldes, and swordes: the Perses, Moryans and with them the Lydians, which all beare shyldes and helmettes: Gomer and all his hoostes: the house of Thogorma out of the north quarters, and all his hoostes, yee and much people with the. Ezr.39. Apo.20.

Therfore prepare the, set thy self in araye with all thy people, that are come vnto the by heapes, and be thou their defence. After many dayes thou shalt be visited, and in the latter yeares thou shalt come in to the lōde, that hath bene destroyed with the sworde, & now is replenished agayne with diuerse people vpon the mountaynes of Israel, whiche haue lōge lyē waist. yee they be brought out of the nacions, & dwell all safe. Thou shalt come vp like a stormy wether, to couer the lõde, and as it were a darke cloude: thou with all thine hoostes, and a greate multitude of people with the.

B Moreouer, thus saieth the LORDE God: At the same tyme shall many thynges come in to thy mynde, so that thou shalt ymagyn myscheefe, and saye: I wil vp to yonder playne londe, seynge they syt at ease, and dwel so safely (for they dwell all without ony walles they haue nether barres nor dores) to spoyle them, to robbe thẽ, to laye honde vpon their so wel inhabited wildernesses: agaynst that people, þ is gathered together from amõge the Heythen, whiche haue gotten catell and good, and dwell in the myddest of the londe Then shall Saba and Dedan and the marchauntes of Tharsis wt all their worthies, saye vnto the: Art thou come to robbe? Hast thou gathered thy people together, because thou wilt spoyle, to take siluer and golde: to carry awaye catell and good: and to haue a great praye?

Therfore, o thou sonne of man, thou shalt prophecie, and saye vnto Gog: Thus saieth the LORDE God: In that daye thou shalt knowe, þ my people of Israel dwelleth safe: and shalt come from thy place, out of þ northy partes: thou and much people with þ, which ryde vpon horses, wherof there is a greate multitude and innumerable sorte. yee thou shalt come vpon my people of Israell, as a cloude to couer the lõde. This shall come to passe in the latter dayes: I will bringe the vp in to my londe, that the Heythen maye knowe me, when I get me honoure vpõ the (o Gog) before their eyes.

Thus saieth the LORD God: Thou art he, of whome I haue spoken afore tyme, by my seruauntes þ prophetes of Israel, which C prophecied in those dayes & yeares, that I shulde bringe the vpon them. At the same tyme, when Gog commeth vp in to the londe of Israel (saieth the LORDE God) shal my indignaciõ go forth in my wrath. For in my gelousy & hote displeasure I haue deuysed, *that there shalbe a greate trouble in þ londe of Israel at that tyme. The very fysshes in the see, the foules of the ayre, the beastes of the felde, and all the men that are vpon þ earth, shall tremble for feare of me.

Dan. 12.a Mat. 24.b Luce. 21.c

The hilles also shalbe turned vpside downe the stayers of stone shall fall, and all walles shall syncke to the grounde. I will call for a swearde vpon them in all my mountaynes, saieth the LORDE God: so þ euery mans swearde shal be vpon another. With pestilẽce and bloude wil I punysh him: stormy rayne and haleستones, fyre and brymstone, wil I cause to rayne vpon him and all hys heape, yee and vpon all that great people that is wt him. Thus wil I be magnified, honoured, & knowne amonge the Heythe: that they maye be sure, how that I am the LORDE.

The xxxix. Chapter.

THerfore o thou sonne of mã, prophecie agaynst Gog, and speake: Thus saieth the LORDE god: *Behold, o Gog: thoucheef a prynce at Mesech and Tubal, I will vpon the, and turne the aboute, and carie the forth, & lede the from the northy partes, and bringe the vp to the mountaynes of Israel. As for thy bowe, I will smyte it out of thy lefthonde, and cast thine arowes out of thy righthonde. Thou with all thine heape, and all the people that is with the, muste fall vpon the mountaynes of Israel. Then will I geue the vnto þ foules and wilde beastes of the felde, to be deuoured: there muste thou lye vpon the felde: for euẽ I the LORD haue spoken it, saieth the LORDE God.

In to Magog, and amonge those þ litte so carlesse in the Iles: wil I sende a fyre, and they shal knowe, þ I am the LORD. I will make also the name of my holynesse to be knowne amonge my people of Israel: and I will not let my holy name be euell spoken of onymore: but the very Heythen also shal knowe, that I am the LORDE, the holy one of Israel. Beholde, it commeth, and shalbe fulfilled in dede, saieth the LORD God. This is the daye, wherof I haue spoken: They þ dwell in the cities of Israell, shall go forth and set fyre vpon the weapens, and burne them: shyldes, and speares, bowes, and arowes, bylles, and cloubbes: seuen yeares shal they be burnynge therof, so that they shal cs bringe no sticks from the felde, nether haue nede to hew downe ony out of þ wood: for they shall haue weapens ynough to burne. They shall robbe those that robbed them, & spoyle those that spoyled them, saieth the LORDE God.

At the same tyme will I geue vnto Gog, C a place to be buried in, in Israel: euẽ the valley, where thorow men go from the east to the see warde. Those that trauayle therby, shal abhorre it. There shal Gog and all hys people be buried: and it shalbe called the valley of the people of Gog. Seuen monethes longe shall the house of Israell be burienge of them, that they maye clense þ londe: yea

all the people of the londe shall burye them. And it shall be a glorious daye, whē I get me that honoure, saieth the LORDE God. They shall ordene men also to be deadburiers, euer goinge thorow the londe, and appointe them certayne places to bury those in, which remayne vpon the felde, that the londe maye be clensed. From ende to ende shall they seke, and that. viii. monetes longe. And those that go thorow the londe, where they se a mans bone, they shall set vp a token by it, till ỹ deadburiers haue buried it also, in the valley the of the people of Gog. And name of ỹ cite shalbe called Hamona: Thus shall they make the londe clene.

And thou sonne of man: thus saieth the LORDE God: Speake vnto all the foules and euery wynde, yee and to all the wilde beastes of the felde: heape you together and come gather you rounde aboute vpon my slaughter, that I haue slayne for you: euen a great slaughter vpō the mountaynes of Israel: eate flesh, and drynke bloude. ye shall eate the flesh of ỹ worthies, and drynke the bloude of the princes of the londe: of the wethers, of the lambes, of the goates, and off the oxen that be all slayne at Basan. Eate the fat poure deply full, and drynke bloude, till ye dronken of the slaughter, which I haue slayne vnto you. Fyl you at my table with horses and stronge horsmen: with captaynes & all men of warre, saieth the LORDE God.

I will bringe my glory also amonge the Gentiles, that all the Heithen maye se my iudgment, that I haue kepte, and my honde which I haue layed vpon them: that the house of Israel maye knowe, how ỹ I am the LORDE their God from that daye forth. And the Heithē shall knowe, that whē as the house of Israel were led in to captyuyte: it was for their wickednes sake, because they offended me.

For the which cause I hyd my face from them and delyuered them in to the hondes of their enemies, that they might all be slayne with the swearde. Accordinge to their vncleanesse and vnfaithfull dealinges, so haue I entreated them, and hyd my face from them. Therfore thus saieth the LORDE God: Now will I bringe agayne the captynes of Jacob, and haue mercy vpō the whole house of Israel, and be gelous for my holy names sake. All their confusion and offence that they haue done againste me, shall be taken awaye: and so safely shall they dwell in their londe, that no man shall make them afrayed. And when I haue brought them agayne from amonge the people, when I haue gathered them together out of their enemies londes, and am prayse in them before many Heithen: then shall they knowe, that I am the LORDE their God, which suffred thē to be led in to captiuyte amonge the Heithen, but now haue brought thē agayne in to their owne londe, and not left one of them ponder.

After that, will I hyde my face nomore from them, * but will poure out my spyrite vpon the house of Israel, saieth the LORDE God. * Ezec. 36. d.

The. xl. Chapter.

In the. xxv. yeare of oure captiuyte, in the begynnynge of the yeare, the. x. daye of the moneth that is ỹ. xiiii. yeare, after that the cite was smytē downe: the same daye came the honde of the LORDE vpon me, and caried me forth: euen in to the londe of Israel brought he me, in the visions of God: and set me downe vpon a marueilous hie mountayne, wherupō there was al buyldinge (as it had bene of a cite) towarde the south.

Thither he caried me, and beholde, there was a man, whose similitude was like brasse, which had a threde of flax in his honde, and a meterodde also. He stode in the doore, and sayde vnto me: marcke well with thyne eyes, herken to with thine eares, and fasten it in thine hart, what so euer I shal shewe the, for to the intent that they might be shewed the, therfore art thou brought hither. And whatsoeuer thou seyst, thou shalt certifie the house of Israel therof.

Beholde, there was a wall on the outside roūde aboute the house: the meterodde that he had in his honde, was six cubites lōge & a spanne. So he measured the bredth of the buyldinge, which was a meterodde, and the heyght also a meterodde. Thē came he vnto the east doore, and wente vp the stayers, and measured ỹ postes of the doore: wherof euery one was a meterodde thicke. Euery chābre was a meterodde longe and brode: betwene the chambers were fyue cubites. The poste of the doore within the porche, was one meterodde. He measured also ỹ porche of the vnnermer doore, which conteyned a meterodde. Thē measured he the entrie of the doore, that cōteyned eyght cubites, and his piers two cubites: and this entrie stode inwarde.

The chambers of ꝑ doore eastwarde, were thre on euery syde alike brode and longe. The pilers also that stode of both the sydes, were of one measure. After this, he measured the wydenesse of the doore: which was.x. cubites, and the heyght of the doore.xiii. cubites. The edge before the chambres was one cubite brode vpon both the sydes, and the chambres lix cubites wyde of either syde.

He measured the doore from the rygge of one chambre to another, whose wydenesse was xxv. cubites, and one doore stode against another. He made pilers also. lx. cubites hye, rounde aboute the courtedoore. Before the inwarde porte vnto the forecentre of the vnnermer doore, were fiftie cubites. The chambers and their pilers within, rounde aboute vnto the doore, had syde wyndowes: So had ꝑ fore entries also, whose wyndowes wente rounde aboute within. And vpon the pilers there stode datetrees.

C Then brought he me in to the fore courte, where as where chambres & paued workes, made in the forecourte rounde aboute xxx. chãbres vpon one paued worke. Now the paued worke was alonge besyde the doores, and that was the lower paued worke. After this, he measured the bredth from the lowerdoore, vnto the vnnermer courte of the out syde, which had an hundreth cubites vpon the east and the north parte. And the doore in the vttemost courte towarde ꝑ north measured he after the length and bredth: his thre chambres also on either syde, with his pilers and fore entries: which had euen the measure of the first doore. His heyght was fiftie cubites, the bredth.xxv. cubites: his wyndowes and porches with his date trees, had euen like measure as the doore towarde the east: there where.viii. steppes to go vp vpon and their porche before them. Now the doore of the vnnermer courte stode straight ouer agaynst the doore, that was towarde ꝑ north east. From one doore to another, he measured an.C. cubites.

After that, he brought me to the south syde, where there stode a doore towarde ꝑ south whose pilers and porches he measured, these had the fyrst measure, and with their porches they had wyndowes rounde aboute, like ꝑ first wyndowes. The heyght was.l. cubites, the bredth.xxv, with steppes to go vp vpon: his porche stode before him, with his pilers and date trees on either syde. And the doore of the vnnermer courte stode towarde the south, and he measured from one doore to
D another an.C. cubites. So he brought me in to the vnnermer courte, thorow the doore of the south syde: which he measured, and it had the measure afore sayde. In like maner his chambres, pilers, and forecentries, had euen the foresaide measure also. And he had with his porches rounde aboute, wyndowes of.l. cubites hye, and.xxv. cubites brode. The porches rounde aboute were.xxv. cubites lõge, & v. cubites brode: & his porch reached vnto the vttemost courte: vpon his pilers there were date trees, and.viii. steppes to go vp vpon.

He brought me also in to the vnnost courte vpon the east syde, and measured the doore acordinge to the measure afore sayde. His chambers, pilers, and porches had euen the same measure, as ꝑ first had: & his porches he had wyndowes rounde aboute. The heyght was.l cubites, ꝑ bredth .xxv. cubites His porches reached vnto ꝑ vttemost courte: his pilers also had date trees on either syde, and, viii. steppes to go vp vpon. And he brought me to the north doore, and measured it, which also had the foresayde measure His chambres, pilers, and porches had wyndowes rounde about: whose heyght was.l cubites, and the bredth.xxv. His pilers stode towarde the vttemost courte, and vpon them both were date trees, and. viii. steppes to go vp vpon. There stode a chambre also, whose intraunce was at the doore pilers, and there the burntoffrynges were washed.

In the doore porche, there stode on eche syde two tables for the slaughtinge: to slaye the burntoffringes, synneoffringes, and trespaceoffringes ther vpon. And on the one syde as men go forth to the north doore, there stode two tables. Foure tables stode on ether syde of the doore, that is. viii. tables, wherupon they slaughted. Foure tables were of hewen stone for the burntoffringes, of a cubite and a halfe lõge and brode, and one cubite hie: wherupõ were layed the vessels and ornamentes, which were vsed to the burnt and slayne offeringes, when they were slaughted. And within there were holes foure fyngers brode, fastened rounde aboute, to hãge flesh vpon, & vpon the tables was layed the offringe flesh. On the outside of the vnnermer doore were the syngers chambers in the inwarde courte beside the north doore ouer agaynst the south. There stode one also, beside the east doore northwarde.

And he sayde vnto me: This chambre on ꝑ the south syde belongeth to the preistes, that

The xli. Chapter.

Afterwarde he brought me to the temple, & measured the postes:
which were of both the sydes,
cubites, thicke, accordinge to
the wydenesse of the tabernacle.
The bredth of the doze was. x. cubites,

He measured the lengthe there of which were two cubites thicke:

The foundacion of the syde chābers was made (that is syxe cubites) rounde The
of the syde wall without; contey-

the chambers of the house.
Betwene the chambers, was the wyde-
nesse of xx. cubites rounde about the house.
The chambers doze stode ouer agaynst the wall, the one doze was toward the north, the other toward the south: and the thicknesse of the outwall was. v. cubites rounde about. Now the buyldinge that was separated toward the west, was lxx. cubi-
tes wyde: the wall of the buyldynge was. v.
cubites thicke rounde about, and the length
fourscore cubites and ten. So he measured C
the house which was an. C. cubites longe, and the separated buyldinge with the wall
there an. C. cubites longe also. The wyd-nesse before the fore front of it that was separated toward the east, was an. C. cubites.
And he measured the length of the buyl-
dinge before and behinde with the chābers
vpō both the sydes, and it contened an. C.
cubites. The ynnermer temple, the porch of the foure courts, the syde postes, these thre
had syde wyndowes, pylers rounde about te ouer agaynst the postes, from the grou-
de vp to the wyndowes: The wyndowes
them selues were syled ouer with bordes: &
thus was it about ye doze, into the ynnoste
house, and without also: yee the whole wal on euery syde, both within and without was syled ouer with greate bordes. There were Cherubins and datetrees made also, so that one datetre stode euer betwixte two Cherubin: One Cherub had two faces, the face of a man lokynge aside towarde the date tre,
and a lyons face on the other syde. Thus D was it made rounde about in all the house: yee the Cherubins and datetrees were made from the grounde vp about the doze,
and so stode they also vpon the wall of the temple.
The bypostes of the temple were foure-
quared, and the fashion of the Sanctuary Exo. 1.
was, ✠ euen as it appeared vnto me afore Exo. 25. D
in the vision. ✠ The table was of wood,
three cubites hie, and two cubites longe: his corners, the length, and the walles were of woode. And he sayde vnto me: This is the table, that shall stonde before the ✠ LORDE. The temple and the holyest of all had either of the two dores, and euery doze had two litle wicketes which were folde in one vpon another, on euery syde two. And vpō
the dozes of the tēple there were made Che-rubins and datetrees, like as vpon the wal-les: & a greate thicke balke of woode was before on the out syde of the porche. Vpon
both the sydes of the walles, of the porche
there were made hepe wyndowes and datetrees, hauynge beames and balkes, lyke
as the house had.

The xlii. Chapter.

Then caried he me out in to the fore courte towarde the north, &
brought me in to the chambre
that stode ouer against the bar
kebuyldinge northwarde, which had the length of an. C. cubites, whose dore turned towarde the north. The wydenesse conteyned. L. cubites ouer against the. xx. cu bites of the vttermer courte, and against ye paued worke that was in ye fore courte. Be syde all these thre there stode piles one ouer
against another: And before this chambre
there was a galery of. x. cubites wyde, and within was a waye of one cubite wyde, and their dores towarde the north. Thus the hyest chambres were alwaye narower then
the lowest and middelmost of the buyldinge
for they bare chambre vpon chambre, & sto
de thre together one vpon another, not ha
uynge piles like the fore courte: therfore were they smaller then those beneth and in the myddest, to reken from the grounde vp warde.

The wall without that stode by the cham
bres towarde the vttermost courte vpon the fore syde of the chambres, was. L. cubites longe: for the length of the vttermost cham bers in the forecourte was. L. cubites also but the length therof before the temple was an. C. cubites. These chambres had vnder them an entraunce of the east syde, wherby
a man might go in to them out of the fore
courte, through the thicke wall of the fore courte towarde the east, right ouer against the separated buyldinge. Before the same buyldinge vpon this syde there were cham bers also which, had alwaye vnto them, like
as the chambers on the north syde of the sa me length and wydenesse.

Their entraunce, fassyon, and dores we re all of the same maner. yee euen like as other chamber dores were, so were those al so of the south syde. And before the waye to warde the syngers steppes on the east syde there stode a dore to go in at. Then sayde he vnto me: The chambers towarde the north and the south, which stonde before the bac
ke buyldinge: those be holy habitacions, whe
in the preistes that do serueye before the LORDE, must eate the moost holy offrin
ges: and there must they late the moost holy offriges, meatoffriges, synne offriges, & trei pace offriges, for it is an holy place. When ye preistes come therin, they shall not go out in to the fore courte: but (seynge they be holy)
they shal leaue the clothes of their ministra cion, and put on other garmentes, when they haue ony thinge to do with the people.

Now when he had measured all the in wermer house, he brought me forth towarde
the east porte, and measured the same rounde about. He measured the east syde with the meterrodde, which rounde about con teyned. v. C. meterrodes. And the north sy de measured he, which conteyned rounde
about euen so much. The other two sydes also towarde the south and the west (which he measured) conteyned ether of them. v. C.
meterrodes. So he measured all the foure sydes where there stode a wall rounde a boute. v. C. meterrodes longe, and as hyde also, which separated the holy from the vnholy.

The xlvij. Chapter.

So he brought me to the dore
that turneth towarde the east.
Beholde, then came the glory of the God of Israel from out of the east, whose voyce was like a gre
ate noyse of waters, and the earth was light ened with his glory. His sight ye like was destroyed: * and like the vision that I sawe

by the water of Cobar. Then fell I vpon my face, but the glory of the LORDE came in to the house through the east dore. And wynde toke me vp, and brought me in to the vnnermer courte: and beholde, ye house was full of the glory of the LORDE.

I herde one speakinge vnto me out of the house, and there stode one by me, that spake vnto me: O thou sonne of man, ye place of me is my seate, and the place of my soles
pes: where as I will dwell amonge ye chil dren of Israel for euermore: so that the hou se of Israel shall nomore defyle my holy na me: nether they, nor their kinges, throu
their whoredome, throu their hie places & throu ye dead bodies of their kinges, which haue buylded their thresholdes in mine
harde vpon my thresholdes, & their postes almoost at my postes: so that there is but a bare wall betwixte me and them.

Thus haue they defyled my holy name
with their abhominacions, that they haue committed. Wherfore I haue destroyed in my wrath: But now they shall put away their whoredome and ye dead bodies of their kinges out of my sight, that I may dwell amonge them for euermore. Therfore (o thou sonne of man) shewe thou the hou se of Israel a temple, ye they maye be asha

and of their wickednesse, and measure them selues an example therat.

And when they be ashamed of all they haue done, then shewe them the fourme & fashion of the temple: the commynge in, the goynge out, all the maner and descripcion therof, yee all the ordes and ordinaunces of it, and describe yt before the, that they maye kepe and fulfill all the fashions and customes therof.

This is the descripcion of the house: Vpon the mount rounde aboute all the corners, it shalbe the holyest of all. Beholde that is the descripcion and fashion of the house. This is the measure of the aulter (after the true cubite: which is a spanne longer then another cubite) his botome in the mydst was a cubite longe and wyde, and the ledge that were rounde aboute it, was a spanne wyde. This is the heyght of the aulter: from the grounde to the lower steppes the length is two cubites, and the bredth one cubite: and from the lower steppes to the higher are foure cubites, and the bredth but one cubite.

The aulter was foure cubite hye, and from the aulter vpwarde stode foure hornes and it was, xii. cubites longe and. xii. cubites wyde, vpon the foure corners: the couerynge of the aulter was. xviii. cubites longe and wyde vpon the foure corners, and the ledge that wente rounde aboute, had half a cubite: and the botome therof rounde about was one cubite: his steppes stode towarde the east. And he sayde vnto me: Thou sonne of man, thus saieth the LORDE God: these are the ordinaunces and lawes of the aulter in the daye when it is made, to offre burntoffringes, and to sprenkle bloude ther vpon. To the priestes, to the Leuites that be of the seed of Sadoch, and treade before me to do me seruice, saieth the LORDE God: Unto these geue thou a ponge bullocke, for a synoffringe: and take the bloude of him, & sprenkle his foure hornes withall, and the foure corners of the aulter coueringe, with the ledge that goeth rounde aboute: here with shalt thou clense it, and reconcile it.

Thou shalt take the bullock also of the synoffringe, and burne him in a seuerall place without of the Sanctuary.

The nexte daye, take a goatbuck without blemish for a synoffringe, to reconcile the aulter withall: like as it was reconciled with the bullocke. Now when thou hast made it clene, then offre a ponge bullocke without blemish, and a ramme out of the flocke without blemish also: Offre them before the LORDE, and let the priest cast salt therupon, and geue them so vnto the LORDE for a burntoffringe. Seuē dayes shalt thou bringe, euery daye a goatbucke. A ponge bullocke and a ramme of the flocke (both without blemish) shal they offre. Seuen dayes shall they reconcile and clense the aulter and offre vpon it. When these dayes are expired, then vpō the. viii. daye and so forth the priestes shall offre their burntoffringes, and healthoffringes vpon the aulter: so wil I be mercifull vnto you, saieth the LORDE God. Leui.2.b.

The.xliiij. Chapter.

After this, he brought me agayne to the outwarde dore of the Sanctuary on the east syde, and that was shut. Then sayde the LORDE vnto me. This dore shall be still shut, and not opened for ony man to go thorow it, but only for the LORDE God of Israel: yet he shall go thorow it els shall it be shut still. The prince himself shal come thorow it that he maye eate bread before the LORDE. At the porche shal he come in, and there shall he go out agayne. Then brought he me thorow the dore, vpon the north syde, of the house. And as I loked aboute me, beholde, * the glory of the LORDE fylled the house: and I fell downe vpō my face. So the LORDE spake vnto me. O thou sonne of man, fasten this to thine harte, beholde, and take diligent hede to all the ordinaunces of the LORDE, and all his lawes: ponder well with thine harte the commynge in of the house and the goynge forth of the Sanctuary, and tell that obstinate housholde of Israel. Thus saieth the LORDE God, O house of Israel, ye haue now done ynough vnto all youre abhominacions, seynge that ye haue brought into my Sanctuary straūgers, hauynge vncircūcised hartes and flesh, where thorow my Sanctuary is defiled, when ye offre my bread fatt, and bloude. Exo.40.f 24.d. Nu.9.f. 3.Re.8.b. 2.Pa.7.a.

Thus with all youre abhominacions ye haue broken my couenaunt, and not kepte the holy ordinaunces of my Sanctuary: but set keepers of my Sanctuary, euen after youre owne mynde. Therfor thus saieth the LORDE God: Of all the straungers that dwell amōge the children of Israel, no straūger (whose harte & flesh is not circumcised) shall come within my Sanctuary: No nor the Leuites that be gone backe fro me, and

haue deceaued the people of Israel with er
roures, goynge after their Idols: therfore
shall they beare their owne wickednesse.
Shulde they be set and ordened to ministre
vnder the dores of the house of my Sanctuary, and to do seruyce in þ house: to slaye
burntoffringes and sacrifices for the people: to stonde before them, and to serue the:
seynge the seruyce that they do them, is before their Idols, and cause the house of Israel to stomble thorow wickednesse.

3. Reg. 2. f *For the which cause I haue pluckt out myne hõde ouer them (saieth the LORDE)
so that now they must beare their owne ini-quyte, and not to come nye me, to serue me
with their prestheade, in my Sanctuary,
and moost holyest of al: that they maye bea
re their owne shame and abhominacions, which they haue done. Shulde I vse them to be porters of the house, and to all the ser-uyce that is done therin? But the prestes Ezec. 43. d. 48. b the Leuites the sonnes of * Sadoch, that kepte the holy ordinaunces of my Sanctuary, when the children of Israel were gone fro me: shall come to the, to do me seruyce, to stonde before me, and to offre me the fat and the bloude, saieth the LORDE God.

They shall go in to my Sanctuary, and treade before my table, to do me seruice, and to wayte vpon myne ordinaunces. Now when they go in at the dores of the vnner-mer courte, they shall put on lynnyne clothes, so that no wollyne come vpon them:
whyle they do seruyce vnder the dores of the vnnermer courte, and within. They shal
haue fayre lynnyn bonettes vpon their hea
des, and lynnyn breches vpon their loynes
which in their laboure they shall not put a-boute them: And when they go forth to the people in to the outwarde courte, they shall put of the clothes, wherin they haue ministred, and laye them in the habitacion of the Sanctuary, and put on other apparell, lest they vnhalowe the people with their clothes.

D *They shall not shaue their heades, nor

The.xlv. Chapter

When ye deuyde the londe by the Ezec. 48. a. lott, ye shall put a syde one parte for the LORDE to be holy from other londes: namely. xxv
M. meteroddes longe, and. x.
M brode. This shalbe holy, as wyde as it is rounde aboute. Of this parte there shall belonge vnto the Sanctuary. b. C. mete-roddes in all the foure corners, and. l. cubi-
tes wyde rounde aboute to the suburbes.
And from the measure, namely of. xxv. M.
metteroddes longe, and. x. M. brode, thou shalt measure, wherin the Sanctuary and the holiest of all maye stonde.

The residue of that holy grounde shall be the prestes, which do seruyce in the San-tuary of the LORDE, and go in before the LORDE to serue him, that they maye haue rowme to dwell in.

As for the Sanctuary it shall stonde for it self: and to the Leuites that serue in the house, there shalbe geuen. xx. habitacions, of the. xxv. M length. and. x. M. brede. ye shall geue also vnto the cite a possession of
v. M. meteroddes brode, and. xxv M longe beside the parte of the Sanctuary: that shal
be for the whole house of Israel. * Upon Ezec. 48.
both the sydes of the Sanctuaryes parte, ‡

by the citie, there shalbe geuen vnto the prynce, what so euer lyeth ouer agaynst the citie, as farre as reacheth westwarde & eastwarde which shalbe as longe as one parte, from the west vnto the east.

This shalbe his owne lode in Israel, that my princes be nomore chargeable vnto my people. And such as remayneth yet ouer in þ lande, shalbe geuen to the house of Israel according to their tribes. Thus sayeth the LORD God: O ye princes, ye haue now oppressed and destroyed ynough: now leaue of violence and robbinge, & do according to the thinge, that is equall & lawful: & thrust out my people nomore, saieth the LORD God. ye shall haue a true weight, a true Epha, & a true Bat.

The Epha & the bat shal be alyke. One Bat shall cõtayne þ tenth parte of an Homer, and þ shall one Epha do: their measure shal be after þ Homer. * One sycle maketh .xx. Gerah. So .xx. sycles, & .xxv. & .xv. sycles make a pounde. This is the heaueofferynge, that ye shall geue to be heaued: namely, the .xvi. parte of an Epha, out of an Homer of wheat and the .xvi. parte of an Epha, out of an Homer of barlie. The oyle shal be measured with the Bat: euen the .x. parte of one Bat out of a Cor.

Ten Battes make an Homer: for one Homer maketh ten Battes. And one lambe frõ two hundreth shepe out of the pasture of Israel, for a meatofferynge, burntofferynge and healthofferynge, to reconcile them, saieth the LORD God. All the people of the londe shall geue this heaueofferynge with a fre will offeringe. It shall be the princes parte to offre burntofferynges, meatofferynges and drynkofferynges vnto the LORDE, in the holy dayes, new moones, Sabbathes, and in all the hye feastes of the house of Israell. The sinofferynge, meatofferynge, burntofferinge & healthofferynge shall he geue, to reconcile the house of Israel. Thus sayeth þ LORD God: The first date of the first moneth thou shalt take a yõge bullocke without blemysh and clense the Sanctuary.

So the preest shall take of the bloude of þ sinofferynge, and sprenkle it vpon the postes of the house, and vpon the foure corners of the aulter, with the dorepostes of the vnnermer courte. And thus shalt thou do also the seuenth daye of the moneth (for such as haue erred of ignorannce, or beynge deceaued) to reconcile the house withall. * Vpõ þ .xiiij. daye of the first moneth ye shall kepe Easter. Seuen dayes shal the feast cõtinue, wherin there shal no sower nor leuended bread be eate

Vpon the same daye shall þ prynce geue for himself and all the people of the londe, a bullocke for a synofferinge. And in the feaste of the seuen dayes he shal offre euery daye a bullocke & a ram, that are without blemysh, for a burntofferinge vnto the LORDE: & an hegoate daily for a synofferynge. For þ meat offrynges he shall geue euer an Epha to a bullocke, an Epha to a ram, & an Hin of oyle to an Epha. Vpon þ .xv. daye of the seuenth moneth, he shall kepe the seuen dayes holy one after another, euẽ as þ other .vii. dayes: with the synofferynge, burntofferynge, meatofferinge, and with the oyle.

The.xlvi.Chapter.

THus sayeth the LORD God: The doore of the vnnermer courte towarde the east, shall be shutte the .vi. worke dayes: but in the Sabbath and in the daye of the new moone, it shalbe opened. Then shall þ prynce come vnder the doore porche, & stonde still without by the dore poste. So þ preestes shall offre vp hys burnt & healthofferynges. And he shall worshippe at the dore post, and go his waye forth agayne: but the dore shall nomore be shut till the euenynge.

On the same maner shall the people of þ lõde also do their worshippe before þ LORDE, without this dore vpõ the Sabbathes and new moones. This is now the burntofferynge, that the prynce shall bringe vnto the LORDE vpon the Sabbath: sire lambes without blemysh, & a ram without blemysh, and an Epha for a meatofferinge, with the ram. As for the lãbes, he maye geue as many meatofferynges to thẽ as he will, & an Hin of oyle to an Epha. In the daye of the new moneth, it shalbe a yonge bullocke without blemysh, sire lambes & a ram also without blemysh. With the bullocke he shall geue an Epha, and with the ram an Epha also for a meatofferinge: but to þ lambes, what he maye come by: And euer an Hin of oyle to an Epha. When the prynce cõmeth, he shall go vnder the dore porche, and eben there de parte forth agayne. But when the people of the londe come before the LORD in the hye solẽpne feast, as many as come in by þ north dore to do worshippe, shall go out agayn at the south dore. And they that come in at the south dore, shall go forth agayne at þ north dore. There shall none go out at þ dore whe re he came in, but shall go forth right ouer on the other syde, and the prynce shall go in and out amonge them.

Upon the solempne and hie feast dayes, this shalbe the meatofferinge: In Epha to a bullock, and an Epha to a ramme: & to the lambes, as many as he wil, but euer an Hin of oyle to an Epha. Now when the prynce bryngeth a burntofferinge or an healthoffe rynge with a fre will vnto the LORD, the east doze shalbe opened vnto hym, that he maye do with hys burnt and healthofferin C ges, as he doth vpon the Sabbath: & whē he goeth forth, the doze shall be shut after hym agayne. He shall daylie brynge vnto ꝓ LORDE a lambe of a yeare olde without blemish for a burntofferynge: this shall he do euery morynge. And for a meatofferyn ge he shall geue the sixte parte of an Epha, and the thirde parte of an Hin of oyle (to mynge with the cakes) euery morynge. Lee this shalbe a daily meatofferinge vnto the LORDE, for an euerlastinge ordinaun ce: and thus shall the lambe, the meatoffe rynge and oyle be geuen euery morynge, for a daylie burntofferinge, Morouer, thus saieth the LORD God: yf the prynce geue a gifte vnto ony of hys sonnes, then shall it be his sonnes heretage perpetuall, that he maye possesse it. But yf he will geue one of his seruauntes some off his heretage, it shall be his to the * fre yea re, & thē to returne agayne vnto the prynce: for his heretage shalbe his sonnes onely.

3.Re.21.a 2.Mcb.b * The prynce also shall take none of the peo ples enherytaunce, nor putt them from their possession: but to his owne sonnes shal he geue his possession, that my people be not scatred abrode, but that euery mā maye haue his owne.

D And he brought me thorow the intraun ce at the syde of the doze to ꝓ habitacion of the Sanctuary, that belongeth to ꝓ prestes and stode towarde the north, & beholde, there was a place vpon the west syde, then sayde he vnto me: This is the place, where the prestes shall dight the trespace and synoffe rynges, & bake ꝓ meatofferynges: that they nede not beare thē in to the outwarde courte, and so vnhalowe the people. So he brought me in to the vttemost courte, roun de aboute all the foure corners. Beholde, in euery corner of ꝓ forecourte, there was yet a litle courte. Lee in all the foure corners of the courte, there was made a litle courte of xl. cubites longe, and xxx. cubites brode: the se foure litle courtes were of one like measu re, & there went a tygge wal rounde aboute them all foure, vnder the which there were harthes made rounde aboute. Then sayde he vnto me: This is the ketchin, where ꝓ mi nisters of the house shall dight the sacry fe rynges of the people.

The xlvii. Chapter.

After this he brought me agayn before the doze of the house: & beholde, there gushed out wa ters from vnder the postes of ꝓ house eastwarde (for the house stode towarde the east) that ranne downe vpon the rightsyde of ꝓ house, whiche lyeth to the aulter southwarde. Thē caried he me out to the north doze, and brought me forth there rounde aboute by the vttemoste doze, that turneth eastward. * Beholde, there ca. pa.2. me forth ꝓ water vpon the rightsyde. Now whan the man ꝓ had the metercorde in hys honde wente out vnto the east doze, he mea sured a. M. cubites, & thē he brought me thro row ꝓ water, euē to the ancles: so he mea sured yet a thousande, & brought me thorow ꝓ water agayne vnto the knees: yet measured he a thousande, and brought me thorow the water vnto the loynes. After this he mea sured a thousande agayne, then was it such a ryuer, ꝓ I might not wade thorow it: The water was so depe, that it was nedefull to haue swymmed, for it might not be waded ouer. And he sayde vnto me: haste thou seē this, o thou sonne of man: and with that, he brought me to the ryuer banck agayne.

Now when I came there, there stode ma ny trees vpon ether syde of the ryuer bāke. Then sayde he vnto me: This water that floweth out towarde the east, and runneth downe in to the playne feldē, commeth in to the see: and from the see it runneth out, & ma keth the waters whole. yee all that line and moue, where vnto this ryuer commeth, shal recouer. And where this water cōmeth, the re shalbe many fysh. For all that commeth to this water, shall be lusty and whole. By this ryuer shal the fyshers stonde from En gaddi vnto En Eglaim, & there sprede out their nettes: for there shalbe greate heapes of fysh, like as in the mayne see. As for hys claye and pyttes, they shal not be whole, for why, it shalbe occupied for salt.

By this ryuer vpon both the sydes of C shore, there shall growe all maner of frute full trees, * whose leaues shall not fall of, pa.2. ther shall their frute perish: but euer be ryp at their monethes, for their water runneth out of the Sanctuary. His frute is good to eate, and hys leaf profitable for medycin. Thus sayeth the LORD God: Let this be the borders, wherin ye shall deuyde the londe vnto the xii. trybes of Israel, with the lyne. Parte it indifferently vnto one as vnto another of the which lõde I swore vnto youre fathers, that it shulde fall to youre enherytaunce.

This is the border of the londe vpon the north syde, from the mayne see, as men go to Zedada: namely, Hemath, Berotha, Sabarama betwen the borders of Damascus and Hemath vnto Hazar Tichon, that lieth vpon the coastes of Hauerã. Thus the borders frõ the see forth, shalbe Hazar Enan, the border of Damascus the north, and the borders of Hemath: that is the north parte.

The east syde shall ye measure frõ Hauran and Damascus, from Galead and the lande of Israell by Jordane and so forth, vnto the see coast, that lieth eastwarde: and this is the east parte.

The south syde is, from Thamar forth to the waters of strife vnto Cades, ỹ ryuer, to the mayne see: & that is the south parte.

The west parte: namely the great see frõ the borders therof, till a man come vnto Hemath: this is the west parte.

This londe shall ye parte amõge you, accordinge to the trybes of Israel, and deuyde it to be an heretage for you, and for the straungers that dwell amõge you, & begette children.

For ye shall take them amonge the chyldren of Israell, like as though they were of youre owne houshalde and countre, & they shall haue heretage with you amonge ỹ chyldren of Israel.

Loke in what trybe the straunger dwelleth, in the same trybe shall ye geue him hys heritage, saieth the LORDE God.

The.xlviij. Chapter.

These are the names of ỹ trybes that lye vpon the northsyde, by the waye of Hetlon, till thou cõmest vnto Hemath and Hazar Enan, the borders of Damascus eastwarde the north beside Hemath: Dan shall haue hys portiõ from the east quarter vnto the west. Upon the borders of Dan frõ the east syde vnto the west, shall Aser haue his portion. Upon the borders of Aser from the east parte vnto the west, shall Nephtali haue his portion.

Upon the borders of Nephtali from the east quarter vnto the west, shall Manasses haue his portion. Upon the borders of Manasses from the east syde vnto the west, shall Ephraim haue his portion. Upon the borders of Ephraim from the east parte vnto ỹ west, shall Ruben haue his portion. Upon ỹ borders of Ruben from the east quarter vnto the west, shall Juda haue his portion.

Upon the borders of Juda from the east parte vnto the west, ye shal set aside one portiõ of.xxv.M. meteroedes longe and brode (like as another portion from the east syde vnto the west,) wherin the Sanctuary shal stonde.

B

*As for the portion, that ye shall separate out for the LORD, it shalbe.xxv.M. longe, and.x.M. brode. Which separated holy portion shall belonge vnto these: namely to the priestes, towarde the north.xxv M. & towarde the west.x.M. brode, towarde the east.x. M. brode also, & towarde the south.xxv.M. longe, wherin the Sanctuary of the LORD shall stonde. Jee this same place shal be the priestes, ỹ are of the children of *Sadoch, & haue kepte my holy ordinaunce: which were not astraye in the errour of the children of Israel, like as the Leuites are gone astraye and this separated pece that they haue of ỹ lõde, shalbe the moost holy, harde vpon the borders of the Leuites. And nexte vnto the priestes, shall the Leuites haue.xxv.M. longe and.x.M. brode. This shalbe on euery syde.xxv.M. longe, and.x.M. brode. Of thys portiõ they shal sell nothinge, nor make ony permutacion therof, lest the chefe of the londe fall vnto other, for it is halowed vnto the LORDE.

Exe.41.b. and.44.a.

The other.v.M. after the bredth, ỹ lyeth by the.xxv.M. shalbe comon: it shall belõge to the citie and to the suburbes for habitacions, and ỹ cite shall stonde in the myddest therof. Let this be the measure: towarde the north parte, v.C. & iiii.M, towarde the south parte. v.C. & iiii.M, towarde the east parte v.C. and iiii.M: towarde the west parte, v. C. and iiii.M.

C

The suburbes harde vpon the citie, shall haue towarde the north.L. and ii.C. towarde the south.L. and two.C: towarde the east L. and two.C: towarde the west also.L. and two.C. As for the residue of the length, that lyeth harde vpon the separated holy grounde: namely.x.M. towarde the east and.x.M. towarde the west, nexte vnto the holy portiõ: it and the increase therof shall serue for their meate, that labboure in the citie. They that labboure for the welth of the citie, shall manteyne thys also, out of what tribe so euer they be in Israell.

All that is separated of the.xxv.M. longe and.xxv.M. brode on the foure partes, ỹ shall ye put a syde for the separated porcion of the Sanctuary, & for the possession of ỹ

D citie. The residue vpon both the sydes of ỹ
Eze.45.a. Sanctuary & possession of the citie, * shall belonge to the prynce, before the place of ỹ .xxv.M. vnto ỹ east ende, & before the place of ỹ .xxv.M. westwarde, vnto the borders of the citie: this shalbe the prynces porcion. This shalbe the holy place, and the house of the Sanctuary shal stonde in the myddest. Moreouer, from the Leuites and the cities possession, that lye in the myddest of ỹ prynces parte: loke what remayneth betwixte ỹ border of Juda & the border of Ben Jamin, it shalbe the prynces.

Now of the other trybes.

From the east parte vnto the west, shall Ben Jamin haue his porcion. Upon ỹ borders of Ben Jamin from the east syde vnto the west, shall Symeon haue his porcion. Upon the borders of Symeon from ỹ easte parte vnto the west, shall Jsachar haue his porcion. Upon the borders of Jsachar from the eastsyde vnto the west, shall Sabulon haue his porcion. Upon the borders of Sabulon frō the east parte vnto the west, shall Gad haue his porcion. Upon the borders of Gad southwarde, the coastes shall reach frō Thamar forth vnto the waters of strife to Cades, and to the broude, euen vnto ỹ mayne see.

E This is the londe with his * porcions,
Num.32. Jos.13.14 which ye shall distribute vnto the trybes of Jsrael, saieth the LORDE God. Thus wyde shall the citie reach: vpon ỹ north parte .v.C. and .iiii.M. measures. The portes of the citie, shall haue the name of the trybes of Jsrael. Thre portes of the northsyde One Ruben, another Juda, the thirde Leui.

Upon the eastsyde .v.C. & .iiii.M. measures, with the thre portes: The one Joseph, another Ben Jamin, the thirde Dan. Vpō the southsyde .v.C. and .iiii.M. measures, with the thre portes: the one Symeon, another Jsachar, ỹ thirde Sabulon. The.first.Chapter.

1 In the thirde yeare of ꝑ raygne of Joachim kynge of Juda, ca me Nabuchodonosor kynge of Babilon vnto Jerusalem, and beleged it: ✱ and the LORDE 2 delyuered Joachim the kyng of Juda in to his hande, with certayne ornamentes of the house of God, which he caried awaye vnto the londe of Senar, to the house of his god, and there brought them in to his gods trea sury. And the kynge spake vnto Aspenes the chefe chamberlayne, ꝑ he shulde bringe him certayne of the chyldren of Israell, that were come of the kynges sede, and of ꝑnces, ponge spryngaldes without ony blemyth but fayre and welfauored, instructe in all wisdome, connynge, and vnderstondinge: whiche were able to stonde in ꝑ kynges palace, to reade, ꝛ to learne for to spea ke Caldeith.

3 Vnto these the kyng appoynted a certayn ꝓporcion of his owne meate and of the wi ne, which he dranke him self, so to norisih thē 4 ꝓperly, that afterwarde they might ston de before the kynge. Amonge these now we re ꝑsones of the chyldren of Juda: namely Daniel, Ananias, Misael, and Azarias. Un to these the chefe chamberlayne gaue other names, and called Daniel, Balthasar: Ana nias, Sydrac: Misael, Misac: and Asarias, Abdenago. But Daniel was at a poynt vn 5 to him self, ✱ ꝑ he wolde not be defyled thorow the kinges meate, nor ꝑ wyne which he dra ke. And this he desyred of the chefe chāber layne, lest he shulde defyle him self. So God gaue Daniel fauoure ✱ grace before the che 6 fe chamberlayne, that he sayde vnto him: I am afrayed of my lorde the kynge, whiche hath appoynted you youre meate and dryn 7 ke, lest he sippe youre faces to be worse lyken ge vnto the other spryngaldes of youre age, and ye shall make me lose my heade vnto the kynge.

8 Then Daniel answered Melassar, whom the chefe chāberlayne had set ouer Daniel, Ananias, Misael and Asarias, and sayde: O ꝓue but ten dayes with thy seruauntes, ✱ let vs haue potage to eate, and water to drynke: then loke vpō oure faces, and theirs that eate of the kynges meate. And as thou seyst, so deale with thy seruauntes. So he cō 10 sented to them in this matter, ✱ ꝓued the ꝑ. dayes. And after the ten dayes, their fa ces were better lykinge ✱ fatter, then all the ponge spryngaldes, whiche vpō eate of the kinges meate.

11 Thus Melassar toke awaye their meate and wyne, and gaue them potage therfore God gaue now these foure spryngaldes cō nyng and learnyng in all scripture and wil dome: but vnto Daniel spetially, he gaue vn derstondinge of all visions and dreames.

12 Now when the tyme was expyred, that the kyng had appoynted to bringe in these yon ge spryngaldes vnto him: the chefe chamber layne brought them before Nabuchodono sor, and the kynge commoned with them. 13 But amonge the all were founde none such as Daniel, Ananias, Misael, and Asarias. Therfore stode they before the kyng, which 14 in all wisdome and matters of vnderstōdin ge, that he enquered of them, founde them ten tymes better, the all the sothsayers and charmers, that were in all his realme. And 21 Daniel abode stil, vnto the firste yeare of kynge Cyrus.

The.ii.Chapter.

1 In the seconde yeare of the raig ne of Nabuchodonosor, had Na buchodonosor a dreame, ✱ where 2 vpō his spryte was vexed, ✱ his slepe brake from him. Then the kynge commaunded to call together all the sothsayers, charmers, witches, ✱ Cal deers, for to shewe the kynge his dreame. So they came, and stode before the kynge. And the kynge sayde vnto them: I haue dreamed a dreame, ✱ my spryte was so troubled ther with, that I haue clene forgotten, what I dreamed. Upon thys, the Caldees answered the kynge in the Syrians speach: O kynge, God sane thy life for euer. Shewe thy ser uauntes the dreame, and we shall shewe the what it meaneth. The kynge gaue the Cal deers their answere, ✱ sayde: It is gone fro me: yf ye wil not make me vnderstonde the dreame with the interpretacion therof, ye shall dye, and youre houses shal be pylled. But yf ye tell me the dreame and the mea nynge therof, ye shall haue of me gyftes, rewardes and great honoure: onely, shewe me the dreame and the signification of it: They answered agayne, and sayde: the kyng must shewe his seruautes the dreame, and so shall we declare, what it meaneth.

Then the kynge answerde, sayinge: I perceaue of a treuth, that ye do but prolonge the tyme: for so much as ye se, that the thinge is gone fro me. Therfore, yf ye will not tel me the dreame, ye shall all haue one iudgment. But ye layne and dyssemble with vayn wordes, which ye speake before me, to put of the tyme. Therfore tell me the dreame, & so shal I knowe, yf ye can shewe me, what it meaneth. Upon this, the Caldees gaue answere before the kynge, and sayde: there is no man vpon earth, that can tell the thinge, which ỳ kynge speaketh of: yee there is nether king prynce nor LORD, that euer axed such thinges at a sorthsayer, charmer or Caldeer: for it is a very harde matter, that the kynge requyreth. Nether is there ony, that can certifie the kynge therof, excepte the goddes: whose dwellinge is not amonge the creatures.

¶ For ỳ which cause the kynge was wroth with great indignacion and cõmaunded to destroye all the wyse men at Babilon: and ỳ proclamacion wẽte forth, that the wyse men shulde be slayne. They sought also to slaye Daniel with his cõpanyons. Then Daniel enquered Arioch the kynges stewarde, of ỳ iudgment and sentẽce, that was gone forth alredy to kyll such as were wyse at Babiló. He answered, and sayde vnto Arioch beinge then the kinges debite: Why hath the kyng proclamed so cruell a sentence? So Arioch tolde Daniel the matter. Upon this, wente Daniel vp, and desyred ỳ kinge, ỳ he might haue leysoure, to shewe the kynge the interpretacion: and then came he home agayne & shewed the thinge vnto Ananias, Misael & Asarias his cõpanions: ỳ they shulde beseke the God of heauen for grace in thys secrete that Daniel and his felowes with other such as were wyse in Babilon, perished not. Thẽ was the mistery shewed vnto Daniel in a vision by nyght And Daniel praysed the God of heaue. Daniel also cryed lowde, and saide O that the name of God might be praysed for euer and euer, for wisdome and strength are his owne: * he chaungeth ỳ tymes and ages: ‡ he putteth downe kiges, he setteth vp kynges: * he geueth wisdome vnto the wyse & vnderstondinge to those that vnderstõde: he openeth the depe secretes: he knoweth ‡ the thynge that lyeth in darknesse, ‡ for the light dwelleth with him. I thanke the, and prayse the (O thou God of my fathers) that thou hast lent me wysdome and strength, & hast shewed me the thinge, that we desyred of the, for thou hast opened the kynges matter vnto me.

Upon this wente Daniel in vnto Arioch whome the kinge had ordened to destroye ỳ wyse at Babilon: he wente vnto him, & sayde: destroye not such as are wyse in Babiló, but bringe me in vnto the kyng, and I shal shewe the kynge the interpretacion. Then Arioch brought Daniel in to ỳ kynge in all the haist, and sayde vnto him: I haue founde a man amonge the presoners of Jude ỳ shall shewe the kyng the interpretacio. The answered the kyng, and sayde vnto Daniel whose name was Balthasar: Art thou he, ỳ cãst shewe me ỳ dreame, which I haue sene, & the interpretacio therof? Daniel answered the kynge to his face, and sayde: As for this secrete, for the which the king maketh inquisicion: it is nether the wyse, the sorcerer, the charmer nor the deuell conturer, that cã certifie the kyng of it: * Onely God in heauẽ ỳ open secretes, & he it is, that sheweth ỳ king Nabuchodonosor, what is for to come in ỳ latter dayes.

Thy dreame, and that which thou hast sene in thyne heade vpon thy bed, is this: O kynge, thou didest cast in thy mynde, what shulde come hereafter: So he that is the opener of mysteries, telleth the, what is for to come. As for me, this secrete is not shewed me, for ony wisdome that I haue, more then ony other lyuynge: but only that I might shewe the kynge the interpretacio, & that he might knowe the thoughtes of his owne harte. Thou kynge sawest, and beholde: there stode before the a greate ymage, whose sygure was maruelous great, & his bylage grym me. The ymage heade was of fyne golde, hys brest and armes of syluer, his body and loynes were of copper, hys legges were of yron, his fete were parte of yron, and parte of earth.

This thou sawest, til the tyme that (without ony hondes) there was hewe of a * stone which smote the ymage vpon the fete, that were both of yron and earth, and brake the to poulder: then was the yron, the earth, the copper, the syluer and golde broken altogether in peces: and became like the chaffe of corne, that the wynde bloweth away from the cõmen floures, ỳ they can nomore be founde. But the stone that smote the ymage, became a great mountayne, whiche fulfilleth

the whole earth: This is the dreame. And now will we shewe before the kynge, what it meaneth.

*O kynge, thou art a kynge of kynges: for the God of heauen hath geuen the a kyngdome, riches, strength and maiestey: & hath delyuered the all thiges, that are amõge the children of men: the beastes of the feld, and the foules vnder the heauen, and ge ue the dominion ouer them all. Thou art that golden heade. After the there shall aryse another kyngdome, which shall be lesse then thine. The thyrde kyngdome shall be like copper: and haue domination in al lon des. The fourth kingdome shal be as stron ge as yron. For lyke as yron bruseth & breaketh all thinges: yee euen as yron beateth euery thinge downe, so shall it beate downe and destroye.

Where as thou sawest the fete and toes, parte of earth and parte of yron: that is a de uyded kyngdome, which neuertheles shall haue some of the yron grounde mixte with it, for so much as thou hast sene the yrõ mix ed with the claye.

The toes of the fete that were parte of yron and parte of claye, signifieth: that it shalbe a kyngdome partely stronge and par tely weake. And where as thou sawest yron mixed with claye: they shall myngle them selues with the sede of symple people, and ye not continue one with another, lyke as yron will not be souldered with a pot sherde.

In the dayes of these kynges, shall the God of heauẽ set vp an * euerlastinge kingdome which shall not perish, and his kyngdome shall not be geuen ouer to another people: yee the same shall breake and destroye all these kyngdomes, but it shall endure for euer.

And where as thou sawest, that without any handes there was cut out of ỹ *mount ayne a stone, which brake the yron, the copper, the erth, the syluer and golde in peces: by that hath the greate God shewed the kynge what will come after this. This is a true dreame, and the interpretacion of it is sure.

Then the kynge Nabuchodonosor * fell downe vpon his face, and bowed him selfe vnto Daniel, and commaunded that they shulde offre meatoffringes and swete, odours vnto him.

The kynge answerde Daniel, and sayde: Of a treuth, youre God is a God aboue all goddes, & a LORDE aboue all kynges and an opener of secretes: seynge thou canst discouer this mystery. So the kynge made Daniel a greate man, and gaue him many and greate giftes.

*He made him ruler of all the countrees of Babilon, and doyde of all the nobles, that were at Babilon. Now Daniel intreated the kynge for Sydrac, Misac, and Abdenago, so that he made them rulers ouer all the offyces in the londe of Babilon: but Daniel himself remayned stil in the courte by the kynge. Gen. 41.f.

The.iii.Chapter.

NAbuchodonosor the kynge caused a golden ymage to be made, which was.lx. cubites hye, and sixe cubites thicke. This he made to beset vp in the valley of Duran in the londe of Babilon and sent out to gather together ỹ dukes, lordes, and nobles, the iudges, and officers, the debites and shreues, with all the rulers of the londe: that they might come to the dedicacion of the ymage, which Nabuchodonosor the kynge had set vp. So the dukes, lordes and nobles, the iudges and officers, debytes and shreues with all the rulers of the londe gathered them together, and came vnto the dedicatynge of ỹ ymage, that Nabuchodonosor the kynge had set vp.

Now when they stode before the ymage, which Nabuchodonosor set vp, the bedel cried out with all his might: O ye people, kynreddes and tliges, to you be it sayde: that when ye heare the noyse of the trompettes, which shalbe blowne, with ỹ harpes, shawmes, psalteries, symphonies and all maner of musick: ye fall down and worshippe the golden ymage, that Nabuchodonosor ỹ kynge hath set vp. Who so then falleth not downe and boweth himself, shal euen the same houre be cast in to an hote burninge ouen. Therfore, when all the folke herde the noyse of the trompettes that were blowne, with the harpes, shawmes, psalteries symphonies and all kynde of melody: then all the people, kynreddes and nacions fell downe, and bowed them selues vnto the golden ymage, that Nabuchodonosor the kynge had set vp.

Now were there certayne men of the Caldees, that went euen then and accused the Jewes, and sayde vnto kynge Nabuchodonosor: O kynge, God saue thy lyfe for euer. Thou beynge kynge hast geuen a commaũdement, that all men when they heare the noyse of the trompettes, harpes, shawmes, psalteries, symphonies, and all ỳ other melodies: shall fall downe and bowe them selues towarde the golde ymage: whoso then fell not downe and worshipped not, that he shulde be cast in to an hote burnynge ouen.

Dani.2.g. Nowarre there certayne Jewes, * whom thou hast set ouer the offices of the londe of Babilon: namely, Sydrac, Misac, and Abdenago. These men (o kynge) regarde not thy commaundement, yee they will not serue thy goddes, nor bowe them selues to the golden ymage, that thou hast set vp.

C Then Nabuchodonosor in a cruel wrath and displeasure, commaunded, that Sidrac Misac, and Abdenago shulde be brought vnto him. So these mẽ were brought before the kynge. Then Nabuchodonosor spake vnto them, and sayde: what? o Sydrac, Misac and Abdenago, wil not ye serue my goddes? nor bowe youre selues to the golden ymage, that I haue set vp? wel, be redy hereafter, when ye heare the noyse of the trompettes blowne with the harpes, shawmes, psalteries, symphonies and all the other melodies: that ye fall downe, and worshippe the ymage which I haue made. But yf ye worshippe it not, ye shall be cast immedtatly in to an hote burnynge ouen. And le, what god is there, that maye delyuer you out of my hondes.

Sydrac, Misac and Abdenago answered the kynge, and sayde. O Nabuchodonosor, we ought not to cõsente vnto the in this matter, for why: oure God whom we serue

Nu.16.g. * is able to kepe vs from the hote burnynge ouen (O kynge) and can right well delyuer vs out of thy hondes. And though he wil not, yet shalt thou knowe (o kynge) that we will not serue thy goddes, nor do reuerẽce to the ymage, which thou hast set vp. Thẽ was Nabuchodonosor ful of indignacion,

D so that the countenaunce of his face chaunged vpon Sidrac, Misac, and Abdenago. Therfore he charged and commaunded, ỳ the ouen shulde be made seuen tymes hoter then it was wonte to be: and spake vnto the strongest worthies that were in his hoost, for to bynde Sidrac, Misac, and Abdenago, and to cast them in to the hote burnynge ouen.

So these men were bounde in their cotes, hosen, shues, with their other garmẽtes, and cast in to the hote burnynge ouẽ: for the kynges commaundemẽt was so strayte, and the ouen was exceadynge hote. As for the men that put in Sydrac, Misac, and Abdenago the flame of the fyre destroyed them. And these three men Sydrac, Misac and Abdenago fell downe in the hote burnynge ouen, beynge fast bounde.

Then Nabuchodonosor the kynge maruayled, and stode vp in al haste: he spake vnto his councell and sayde: dyd not ye cast three men bounde in to the fyre? They answered, and sayde vnto the kynge: yee o kynge he answered & sayde: lo, for al that, yet do I se foure men goinge lowse in the myddest of the fyre, and nothinge corrupte: * and the Dan. fourth is lyke an angell to loke vpon. And this wẽte Nabuchodonosor vnto ỳ mouth of the hote burnynge ouen: he spake also, & sayde: O Sydrac, Misac, & Abdenago, ye seruauntes of the hye God: go forth, and come hither. And so Sydrac, Misac and Abdenago weynte out of the fyre. Then the dukes, lordes, and nobles, and the kynges councell came together to se these men, vpõ whõ * the fyre had no maner of power in their bodies: In so much that ỳ very heere of their heade was not burnt, and their clothes vnchaunged, yee there was no smell of fyre felt vpon them.

Then spake Nabuchodonosor, and sayde, Blessed be the God of Sidrac, Misac, & Abdenago: * which hath sent his angel, and Dan. defended his seruauntes, that put their trust in him, that haue altered the kynges commaundemẽt, and ioperded their bodies thereupon, rather then they wolde serue or worshippe ony other God, excepte their owne God onely. Therfore I wil, and commande, that all people, kynreddes and tunges, which speake ony blasphemy agayne the God of Sydrac, Misac and Abdenago, shal dye, and their houses shalbe pyled. Because, * there is no God that maye saue, as this. Dan. So the kynge promoted Sydrac, Misac & Abdenago, in the londe of Babylon.

Nabuchodonosor kynge, vnto all people, kynreddes and tunges that dwel vpon the whole earth, peace be multiplied amonge you. I thought it good to shewe the tokens and maruelous workes, that the hye God hath wrought vpon me. * O how gre- Dan. ate are his tokens, and how mighty are his wonders? * His kyngdome is an euerlastin- Dan. ge kyngdome, & his power lasteth for euer and euer.

The.iiij.Chapter.

I Nabuchodonosor beynge at rest in myne house, and florishinge in my palace, sawe a dreame, which made me afrayed, & the thoughtes that

I had vpon my bed, with the visions of my head, troubled me. * Then sent I out a commission, that all they which were of wisdome at Babilon shulde be brought before me, to tell me the interpretacion of the dreame. So there came the sopthsayers, charmers, Caldees ad conturers of duuels: to whom I tolde the dreame, but what it betokened, they coulde not shewe me: till at the last, there came one Daniel (otherwyse called Balthasar, acordinge to the name of my God) which hath the spirite of the holy goddes in him: to whom I tolde the dreame, saynge: O Balthasar, thou prynce of sopthsayers: for so much as I knowe, that thou hast the spirite of the holy goddes, and no secret is hyd from the: tel me therfore, what the vision of my dreame (the I haue sene) maye signifie. I sawe a vision in my heade vpon my bed: and beholde, there stode a tre vpon the grounde, which was very hye, greate, and mightie: the heyght reached vnto the heauen, and the bredth extended to all ỹ endes of the earth: his leaues were fayre, he had very much frute, so that euery mā had ynough to eate therin.

The beastes of the felde had shadowes vnder it, and the foules of the ayre dwelt in the bowes therof. Shortly, al creatures fed of it. I sawe in my heade a vision vpon my bed and beholde, a watcher (euen an holy angell) came downe from heauen, and cried mightely, sayenge: Hew downe the tree, breake of his braūches, shake of his leaues and scatre his frute abrode: that all the beastes maye get them awaye from vnder hym and the foules from his braunches. Neuertheles leaue the grounde of his rote still in the earth, and bynde him vpon the playne felde, with cheynes of yron and stele. With the dew of heauen shall he be wet, and he shal haue hys parte in the herbes of the grounde with other wilde beastes.

That mans harte of his shall be taken from him, and a beastes harte shal be geuē him, til seuē yeares be comes & gone vpō him.

This erande of the watcher, is a commaundement grounded and sought out in the councell of him, that is moost holy: to learne men for to vnderstonde, that the hiest hath power ouer the kyngdomes of men, & geueth them, to whom it liketh hym, & bringeth the very outcastes of men ouer them. This is the dreame, that I kynge Nabuchodonosor haue sene.

Therfore o Balthasar, tel thou me what it signifieth: for so much as all the wyse mē of my kyngdome are not able to shewe me, what it meaneth. But thou canst do it, for the spirite of the holy Goddes is in the.

Then Daniel (whose name was Baltha C sar) helde his peace by the space of an houre, and his thoughtes troubled him. So the kynge spake, and sayde: O Balthasar, let nother the dreame nor the interpretacion therof feare the. Balthasar answered, sayenge, O my LORDE, this dreame happen to thyn enemies, and the interpretacio to thyn aduersaries. As for the tree ỹ thou sawest which was so greate and mightie, whose heyght reached vnto ỹ heauen, & his bredth in to all the worlde, whose leaues were fayre, and the frute much, vnder the which the beastes of the felde had their habitacion, & vpon whose braunches the foules of the ayre dyd syt.

Euen thou (o kynge) art the tree, greate, & stronge. Thy greatnesse increaseth, and reacheth vnto the heauen, so doth thy power to the endes of the earth. But where as ỹ kynge sawe a watcher euen an holy angel, that came downe from heauen, and sayde, hew downe the tree, and destroye it, yet leaue the groūde of the rote in the earth, and bynde hym vpon the playne felde with cheynes of yron and stele, he shall be wet with the dew of heauen, and his parte shalbe with the beastes of the felde, till seuen yeares be come and gone vpon him. This (o kynge) is the interpretacion, yee it is the very deuyce of him, that is hyest of all, and it toucheth my LORDE the kynge.

Thou shalt be cast out fro men, and thy dwellinge shalbe with the beastes of the felde, with grasse shalt thou be fed like an oxe. Thou must be wet with the dew of the heauen, yee seuen yeares shal come and go vpō thee, till thou knowe, * that the hyest hath power vpon the kyngdomes of men, and geueth them, to whom he lyst. Moreouer, where as it was sayde, that the rote of the tree shulde be left still in the grounde: it betokeneth, that thy kingdom shal remayne whole vnto the, after thou hast learned to knowe that the power commeth from heauē. Wherfore (o kynge) be content with my councell, that thou mayest lowse thy synnes w̄ righteousnesse, * and thine offences with mercy to poore people: for such thinges shall prolōge thy peace. All these thynges touch ỹ kynge Nabuchodonosor.

Dan. 2.c. Iere. 27.a D

Luke.19.b

So after. xii. monethes, the kynge walked vp and downe in the palace of the kyngdome of Babilon, and sayde: This is the greate cite of Babilon, which I my self (wt my power and strength) haue made a kynges courte, for the honoure of my mayesty. Whyle these wordes were yet in the kynges mouth, there fell a voyce from heauen, sayenge: O kynge Nabuchodonosor, to the be it spoken: Thy kyngdome shall departe from the, thou shalt be cast out of mens company: thy dwellinge shalbe with the beastes of the felde, so that thou shalt eate grasse lyke as an ore, till seuen yeares be come, and gone ouer the: euen vntill thou knowest, ỳ the hyest hath power vpon the kyngdomes of men, and that he maye geue them, vnto whom it pleaseth him.

The very same houre was this matter fulfylled vpon Nabuchodonosor: so ỳ he was cast out of mens cõpany, & dyd eate grasse lyke an ore. His body was wett with the dew of heauen, till his heeres were as greate as egles fethers, and his nayles like vyrdes clawes.

When this tyme was past, I Nabuchodonosor lift vp myne eyes vnto heauen, and myne vnderstondinge was restored vnto me agayne. Then gaue I thankes vnto the hyest. I magnified and praysed him that lyueth for euermore, * whose power endureth alwaye, and his kyngdome from one generacion to another: in comparison of whom, all they that dwell vpon the earth, are to be reputed as nothinge.

Ps.115.a

* He handleth accordinge to his will, amõge the powers of heauen and amonge the inhabitours of the earth: and there is none that maye resiste his honde, or saye: what doest thou? * At ỳ same tyme was myne vnderstondinge geuen me agayne, and I was restored to the honoure of my kyngdome, to my dignite, and to myne owne shape agayne. My great estates and prynces sought vnto me, and I was set in my kyngdome agayne, so that I had yet greater worshippe.

Job.42.b.

Thẽ dyd I Nabuchodonosor, loue, magnifie and prayse the kynge of heauen: for all his workes are true, and his wayes right. As for those that go on proudly, he is able to bringe them downe.

The.v. Chapter.

BAlthasar ỳ kynge made a greate dancket to his thousande lordes: with all these thousande he made greate cheare, & when he was dronken with wyne, he commaunded to bringe him the golde and syluer vessel, * which his father Nabuchodonosor had taken out of the temple at Ierusalem: that the kynge and his lordes (wt his quene and concubynes) myght drynke therout.

Dan.5.a

So they brought the golden vessel, that was taken out of the temple of the LORDES house at Ierusalem. Then the kynge and his lordes with his quene and concubines dronke out of them. They dronke wyne and praysed their Idols of golde, syluer, copper, yron, woode, and stone.

In the very same houre there appeared fyngers, as it had bene of a mans honde wt tynge, right ouer agayns the, candelsticke vpon the playne wall in the kynges palace and the kynge sawe the palme of the honde that wrote. * Then chaunged the kynge his countenaunce, and his thoughtes troubled him: so that the ioyntes of his body shoke, and his knees smote one agaynst the other. * Wherfore the kynge cried mightely, that thy shulde bringe hym the charmers. Caldees and coniurers of deuels. The kynge ỳ spake also to the wyse men of Babilon, and sayde: Who so can rede this wrytinge, and shewe me the playne meanynge therof: shal be clothed with purple, haue a cheyne of golde about his necke, and rule the thirde parte of my kyngdome,

Dan.5.b

Upon this, came all the kynges wyse men: but they coulde nother rede the wrytinge, nor shewe the kynge what it signified. Then was the kynge sore afrayed, in so much, that his coloure chaunged, and his lordes were sore vexed. So by reason of this matter, that had happened to the kynge and his lordes, the quene went vp herself in to the banket house, and spake vnto the kynge, sayenge: O kynge, God sane thy lyfe for euer: Let not thy thoughtes trouble the, and let not thy countenaunce be chaunged. For why: there is a man in thy kyngdome, that hath the spyrete of the holy goddes within him, as it was sene in thy fathers dayes. He hath vnderstondinge and wysdome lyke the goddes. yee the kynge Nabuchodonosor thy father made this man chefe of the sopthsayers, charmers, Caldees and deuelconiurers: because that such an abundaunt spyrete, knowlege, and wysdome (to expounde dreames, to open secretes, and to declare harde dowtes) was founde in him: yee euen in Daniel, whom the kynge named Balthasar. Let this same Daniel be sente for, and he shall tell, what it meaneth.

Then was Daniel brought before the kynge. So the kynge spake vnto Daniel, and sayde: Art thou that Daniel, one of the prisoners of Juda, whom my father the kynge brought out of Jewry? I haue herde speake of the, that thou hast the spirite of ꝓ holy goddes, experience and vnderstondinge, and that there hath bene greate wisdome founde in the. Now haue there bene brought me, wyse and connynge charmers, to rede this writinge, and to shewe me the meaninge therof: But they coulde not tell me, what this matter signified. Then herde I saye, that thou canst expounde darcke thinges, and declare harde doutes. Well than, if thou canst rede this writinge, and shewe me the meaninge therof: thou shalt be clothed with purple, haue a cheyne of golde, about thy necke, and rule the thirde parte of my kyngdome.

Daniel answered, and sayde before the kynge: * As for thy rewardes, kepe them to thy self, or geue thy riche giftes to another, yet not the lesse, I will rede the writinge vnto the kynge, and shewe him the interpretacion therof. * O kynge God the hyest gaue vnto Nabuchodonosor thy father, the kingdome of a kynge, with worshippe and honoure: so that all people, kynreddes and tunges stode in awe and feare of him, by reason of the ꝓsperite, that he had lent him. For whom he wolde, he slewe, whom he pleased him. Agayne: whom he wolde, he set vp: and whom he list, he put downe. But because his harte was so proude, and his stomack set fast vnto wylfulnes, he was deposed from his kynglye trone, and his mayesty was taken from him. He was shot out from amonge men, his harte was like a beastes harte, and his dwellynge was with the wilde asses: he was fayne to eate grasse like an ore, and his body was wet with the dew of the heaue: til he knew that the hyest had power vpon the kyngdome of men, and setteth ouer them, who he wyll.

And thou his sonne (o Balthasar) for all this hast not submitted thine hart, though thou knewest all these thinges: but hast exalted thy self aboue the LORDE of heauen, so that the vessels of his house were brought before the: that thou, and thy lordes, with thy quene and concubynes, might drynke wyne therout. And hast prayse the gods of syluer and golde, copper and yron, of woode and stone, which can no thinge, nor heare, nor vnderstonde. As for the God * in whose honde consisteth thy breth and all thy wayes: thou hast not ꝓysed him. Act.17.b.

Therfore is the palme of this honde sent hither from him, to token vp this writinge. And this is the scripture, that is written vp: Mane, Thetel, Phares. Now the interpretacion of the thinge is this: Mane, God hath nombred thy kyngdome, and brought it to an ende: Thetel, Thou art weied in the balaunce, and art founde to light: Phares, Thy kyngdome is delt in partes, and geuen to the Medes and Perses.

Then commaunded Balthasar, to cloth Daniel with purle, to hãge a cheyne of golde about his necke, and to make a proclamacion concernynge hym: that he shulde be the ruler of the thirde parte of his kyngdome. * The very same night was Balthasar the kynge of the Caldees slayne, and ‡ Darius out of Media toke in the kyngdome beynge.lxii. yeare of age. Esa.47.b 21.a. ‡ Dan.9.a.

The.vi.Chapter.

It pleased Darius to set ouer his kingdome an.C. and xx. lordes, which shulde be in all his kyngdom about. Aboue these he set thre ꝓynces (of whõ Daniel was one) that the lordes might geue accomptes vnto them, and the kynge to be vndiseased.

But Daniel exceaded all these ꝓynces & lordes, for the spirite of God was plentyous in him: so that the kinge was myuded to set him ouer the whole realme. Wherfore the ꝓynces and lordes sought, to pyke out in Daniel some quarell agaynst the kyngdome, yet coulde they fynde none occasion nor fawte vpon him. For why, he was so faithfull, that there was no blame nor dishonesty founde in him.

Then sayde these men, we shal get no quarell agaynst this Daniel, excepte it be in the lawe of his God. Upon this, wente the ꝓynces and lordes together vnto the kynge, & sayde thus vnto him, kynge Darius, God saue thy ꝓsperite forever.

All the greate estates of the realme, as the ꝓynces, dukes, senatours and iudges, are determined to put out a commaundement of the kynge, and to make a sure statute, namely, that whoso desyreth ony peticiõ, aches of ony god or man (within this thyrtye dayes) excepte it be onely of the. O kynge, the same person maye be cast in to the Lyons denne. Wherfore, o kynge, confirme thou this statute, and make a wrytinge: that the thynge which the Medes and Perses haue ordened, be not altered nor broken.

So Darius made the wrytynge, and confirmed it. Now when Daniel vnderstode that the wrytinge was made, he wente into his house: and the wyndowes of his hall towarde Jerusalem stode open. There kneled he downe vpon his knees, thre tymes a daye: there made he his petition, and prayed his God, lyke as his maner was to do afore tyme.

Then these men made searche, and founde Daniel makynge his petition, and prayenge vnto his God. So they came to the kynge, and spake before him concernynge his commaundement, sayenge: O kynge, hast thou not subscribed the statute, that within xxx. dayes who so requyreth his petition of ony god or man, but only of thy selfe, o kynge: he shalbe cast in to the denne of the Lyons? The kynge answered, and sayde: yee, it is true. It must be as a lawe of the Medes and Perses, that maye not be broken.

Then answered they, and sayde vnto the kynge: Daniel one of the preseners of Juda (O kynge) regardeth neither the, nor thy statute, that thou hast made, but maketh his petition thre tymes a daye. When the kynge herde these wordes, he was sore greued, and wolde haue rescued Daniel, to delyuer him, and put of the matter, vnto the Sonne wente downe, to the intent that he might saue him.

These men perceauynge the kynges mynde, sayde vnto him: knowe this (o kynge) that the lawe of the Medes and Perses is, that the commaundement and statute which the kynge maketh, maye not be altered. * Then the kynge had them bynge Daniel, and they cast him in to the Lyons denne.

The kynge also spake vnto Daniel, and sayde: Thy God, whom thou alwaye serues, euen he shall defende the. And there was brought a stone, and layed vpon the hole of the denne: this the kynge sealed with his owne synge, and with the signet of his peyners: that the kynges commaundement concernynge Daniel, shulde not be broken.

So the kynge wente in to his palace, and kepte him sober all night, so that there was no table spred before him, nether could he take ony slepe. But betymes in the morninge at the breake of the daye, the kynge arose, and wente in all haist vnto the denne of the Lyons.

Now as he came nye vnto the denne, he cried with a piteous voyce vnto Daniel: for the kynge spake, and sayde vnto Daniel: O Daniel, thou seruaunt of the lyuynge God, Is not thy God (whom thou alwaye seruest) able to delyuer the from the lyons? Daniel sayde vnto the kynge: O kynge, God saue thy lyfe forever.

* My God hath sent his angel which hath shut the lyons mouthes, so that they might not hurte me. For why: myne vngodlynesse is founde out before him. And as by the (o kynge) I neuer offended the.

Then was the kynge exceadinge glad, and commaunded to take Daniel out of the denne. So Daniel was brought out of the denne, and no maner of hurte was founde vpon him. For he put his trust in his God. And as for those men which had accused Daniel, the kinge commaunded to bringe them, and to cast them in the lyons denne: them, their children, and their wyues. * So the lyons had the maistry of them, and brake all their bones asonder, or euer they came at the grounde.

* After this, wrote kynge Darius vnto all people, kynredes and tunges, that dwell in all londes: peace be multiplied vnto you. My commaundement is, in all my dominion, and kyngdome, that men feare and stonde in awe of Daniels God.

For he is the lyuynge God, which abydeth euer: * his kyngdome shall not perish, and his power is euerlastinge. * It is he that deliuereth, and saueth: he doth wonders and maruelous workes, in heauen and earth: he hath preserued Daniel from the power of the lyons. This Daniel prospered in the raigne of Darius and Cirus of Perlia.

The.vij. Chapter.

In the first yeare of Balthasar kynge of Babilon, sawe Daniel a dreame, and a vision was in his heade vpon his bedde. Which dreame he wrote, & the summe of the matter is this: Daniel spake, and sayde, I sawe in my vision by night and beholde: the foure windes of the heauen stroue vpon the see, and foure greate beastes came vp from the see, one vnlyke another.

The first was as a * lyon, and yet had he * eagles wynges. I sawe, that his wynges were pluckt from him, & he take away from the earth: * so that he stode vpon his fete as a man, and that there was geuen him a mans harte.

Beholde, the seconde beast was lyke a Beer, and stode vpon the one syde. Amonge his teth in his mouth he had, iii. greate lõ ges, and it was sayde vnto him: Aryse eat vp much flesh.

Then I loked, and beholde, there was another like vnto a Leoparde: this had wyn ges as foule, * euen foure vpon the backe. This beast had foure heades, & there was power geuen him. After this I sawe in a vi sion by night, and beholde: the fourth beast was grimme and horrible, and marueilous strong. It had greate yron teth, it deuou red and destroyed, and stamped the residue vnder fete. It was farre vnlyke the other beastes that were before it: for it had * ten hornes, wherof I toke good hede.

And beholde, there came vp amonge the other lyke horne, before whom there were three of the first hornes pluckte awaye. Be holde, this horne had eyes lyke a man, and a mouth speakinge presumptuous thinges.

I loked till the seates were prepared, and the olde aged sat him down. His clothing was as white as snowe, and the heeres of his heade lyke the pure woll.

His trone was lyke the firie flame, and wheles as the burninge fyre. There drew forth a firie streame, and wente out frõ him. A thousand tymes a thousande serued him, & x. tymes ten thousande stode before him. The iudgment was set, and the bokes opened. Thi toke I hede there vnto, becau se of the voyce of the proude wordes, which that horne spake.

I beheld, till the beast was slayne, and his body destroyed, * and geuen ouer to be brent in the fyre.

As for the power of the other beastes al so, it was taken awaye, but their lyues were prolonged for a tyme and season. I sawe in a vision by nyght, and beholde: * there ca me one in the cloudes of heauen lyke the son ne of a man, which wente vnto ỹ olde aged, before whom thy brought him: Then gaue he him * power and dignite regall, that al people, tydes and tunges shulde serue him. His power is an euerlastinge power, which shall neuer be put downe: & his kin gedome endureth incorrupte. My harte was troubled, and I Daniel had a troubled spiete within me, and the visions of my heade made me afrayed: till I gat me vnto * one of them that stode by, to knowe the treuth.

concernynge all these thinges. So he tolde me, and made me vnderstonde the interpre tacion of these thinges.

These foure greate beastes, are foure kin ges which shall aryse out of the earth. The se shall take in the kyngdome of the sayntes of the moost hyest, and possesse it still more, and more for a longe season. After this I re quyred diligently to knowe ỹ truth, concer nynge the fourth beast, which was so farre vnlyke ỹ other beastes, & so horrible: whose teth were of yron, and his nayles of brasse: which deuoured and destroyed, and stam ped the residue vnder his fete. I desyred also to knowe the treuth, as touchynge the, * ten hornes that he had vpon his heade, Apo. 17.a. and this other which came vp afterwar de, before whose face there fell downe thre: which horne had eyes and a mouth that spa ke presumptuous thinges, and loked with a grimmer visage then his felowes.

I beheld, and the same horne made bat tayl agaynst the sayntes, yee and gat the victory of them: vntill the tyme, that the olde aged came, that the iudgment was ge uen to the chefest sayntes: and till the tyme, that the sayntes had the kyngdome in pos session.

He gaue me this answere: That fourth beast shalbe the fourth kingdome vpõ earth D it shalbe more then all other kyngdomes, it shal deuoure, treade downe, and destroye al other londes.

The ten * hornes, are ten kynges that zacha. 1.d. shall aryse out of that kyngdome, after whõ there shall stonde vp another, which shal be greater then the first.

He shall subdue thre kynges, and shall speake wordes agaynst the hyest of all: he shall destroy the sayntes of the moost hyest, * and thynke, that he maye chaunge tymes Dan. 7.c. and lawes. They shall be geuen vnder his Apo. 13.b. power, * vntill a tyme, two tymes, and half a tyme.

But the iudgment shalbe kepte, so that his power shalde taken from him, for he shall be destroyed, and perish at the last. As for the kyngdome, power, and al might that is vnder the heauen, it shall be geuen to the Lu.1.c. holy people of the moost hyest, * whose kyn Dan. 4.f. gdome is euerlastynge, yee al powers shal serue and obeye him. Thus farre extende the wordes.

Neuertheles, I Daniel was so vexed in my thoughtes, that my countenaunce chaunged, * but the wordes I kepte stil in Luc. 2.a. my harte.

The.viii. Chapter

1 IN ỳ thirde yeare of the raigne of kynge Baltha sar, there apea rede a vision vnto me Daniel, after that I had sene the fyrst.
2 I sawe in a vision, (and when I sawe it, I was at Sulis in the chefe cyte, which lyeth in the londe of Elam) and in the vision, me thought I was by the ryuer of Ulay.

3 Then I loked vp, and sawe: and beholde there stode before the ryuer, a ramme, which had hornes: and these hornes were hye, but one was hyer then another, and the hyest came vp last. I sawe that this ramme pushed with his hornes, agaynst the west, agaynst the north, and agaynst the south: so that no beastes might stonde before him, nor defende them from his power: but he dyd as hym lysted, and wared greatly. I toke hede vnto this, and then came there an hegoate from the west, ouer the whole earth, and touched not the grounde,

5 This goate had a maruelous goodly horne betwixte his eyes, and came vnto the ramme, that had the two hornes (whom I had sene afore by the ryuer syde) and ranne fearcely vpon him with his might. I sawe him drawe nye vnto the ramme, beynge be 6 ry fearce vpon him: yee he gaue him such a stroke, that he brake his two hornes:

7 Nether had the ramme so much strength as to stonde before him: but he cast him downe: trodde him vnder his fete: and no man was able to delyuer the ramme out of his power.

8 B The goate wared exceadinge greate, and when he was at the strongest, his greate horne was broken also. Then grewe there
Dan.7.8. and 11.4. 1.Mac.1.8. * other foure such lyke in the steade, toward the foure wyndes of the heauen. yee out of the least of these hornes, there came vp yet another horne, which wared maruelous greate: towarde the south, towarde the east and towarde the faire pleasaunt londe. It grewe vp to the hoost of heauen, wherof it dyd cast some downe to the grounde, and of the starres also, and trode them vnder fete.

11 yee it grewe vp vnto the prynce of the hoost, from whom the daylie offeringe was taken, and the place of his Sanctuary casten downe. And a certayne reason was geuen vnto it, agaynst the daylie offeringe (because of wickednesse) yt it might cast downe the verite to the grounde, and so to prospere in all thinges, that it went abeute. Upon this I herde one of the sayntes speakynge, which sayncte sayde vnto one that axed this question.

13 How longe shall this vision of the daylie sacrifice and of the waystinge abhominacion endure: that the Sanctuary and the power shall so be troden vnder fote? And he answered him: Unto the euenynge, and the mornynge, euen two thousande & thre hundreth dayes: then shall the Sanctuary be clensed agayne.

15 Now when I Daniel had sene this vi C
sion, and sought for the vnderstondinge of it: beholde, there stode before me a thynge lyke vnto a man. And I herde a mans voyce in the ryuer of Ulay, which cried, and sayde, O Gabriel make this man vnderstonde the vision. So he came, and stode by me. But 17 I was afrayed at his commynge, and fell downe vpon my face.

Then sayde he vnto me: O thou sonne of man, marcke well, for in the last tyme shall this visiō be fulfilled. Now as he was speakynge vnto me, I ware sayncte, so that I sancke downe to the grounde. But he toke holde vpon me, and set me vp agayne, sayenge: Beholde, I will shewe the what shal happen in the last wrath: for in the tyme appoynted it shalbe fulfilled.

20 The ramme which thou sawest with the two hornes, is the kynge of the Medes and Perses: but the goate is the kynge of Grekelonde: the greate horne that stode betwixte his eyes, that is the principal kinge. But where as it brake, and foure other rose vp in the steade: it signifieth, that out of this
22 people shal stonde vp * foure kyngdomes 1.Ma. but not so mightie as it.

23 After these kyngdomes (whyle vngodlynesse is a growinge) there shal aryse a kinge of an vnshamefast face, which shal be wyse in darcke speakinges.

24 He shalbe mightie and stronge, but not in his own strength. He shal destroye aboue measure and all that he goeth about, shall prospere: he shall slaye the stronge and holy people. And thorow his craftynes, falsede shall prospere in his honde, his harte shal be proude, & many one shall he put to death in his welthynesse. He shal stode vp agaynst the prynce of prynces, * but he shalbe de- 1.Mac.
25 stroyed without honde. And this vision that is shewed vnto the, is as sure as the Ca.1.
euenynge and the mornynge. * Therfore wyte thou vp this sight, for it wylbe longe 26 or it come to passe.

Upon this was I Daniel very sayntte, that I laye sicke certayne dayes: but whā I rose vp, I went about the kynges busy nesse, and marueled at the vision, neuertheles no man knewe of it.

The ix. Chapter.

IN the first yeare of Darius ꝑ sonne of Ahaluerus * which was of ꝑ sede of the Medes, & was made kynge ouer ꝑ realme of the Caldees: yee euen in ꝑ first yeare of his reigne. I Daniel dyd rede knowe the yearly nombre out of the bokes, whereof the LORDE spake vnto Jeremy the prophet: that Jerusalem shuld lye waist lxx. yeares: and I turned me vnto God the LORDE, for to praye, and make myne intercession, with fastinge, sackcloth, and ashes. I prayed before the LORDE my God, and knowledged, sayenge.

* O LORDE, thou greate, and fearfull God, thou that kepest couenaunt, and mercy with the, which loue the, and do thy commaundementes: * We haue synned, we haue offended, we haue bene disobedient and gone backe: yee we haue departed frō all thy preceptes and iudgmentes.

We wolde neuer folowe thy seruauntes the prophetes, that spake in thy name to oure kynges and princes, to oure fore fathers, and to all the people of the londe. * O LORDE, righteousnesse belongeth vnto the, vnto vs pertayneth nothynge but open shame: as it is come to passe this daye vnto euery man of Juda, and to the that dwell in Jerusalem.

Yet vnto all Israel, whether they be farre or nye: thorow out all londes, wherin thou hast scatered them, because of the offences that they had done agaynst the yee LORDE, vnto vs, to oure kynges and princes, to oure fore fathers: euen vnto vs all, * that haue offended the, belongeth open shame. But vnto the LORDE oure God pertayneth mercy and forgeuenesse. As for vs, we are gone backe frō him, and haue not obeyed the voyce of the LORDE oure God, to walke in his lawes, which he layed before vs by his seruauntes the prophetes: yee all Israel haue transgressed, and gone backe from thy lawe, so ꝑ they haue not herkened vnto thy voyce.

Wherfore the curse and ooth, * that is written in lawe of Moses the seruaunte of God (agaynst whom we haue offended) is poured vpon vs. * And he hath performed his wordes, which he spake agaynst vs and agaynst oure iudges that iudged vs, to bringe vpon vs such a greate plage, as neuer was vnder heauen, lyke as it is now come to passe in Jerusalem. yee all this plage, as it is written in the lawe of Moses, is come vpō vs. yet made we not oure prayer before the LORDE oure God, that we might turne agayne from oure wickednes and to be lerned in thy verite. Therfore hath the LORDE made hayst, to bringe this plage vpon vs: for the LORDE oure God is righteous, in all his workes which he doth: for why, we wolde not harken vnto his voyce. Bar. 2.a.

* And now, O LORDE our God, thou ꝑ with a mighte honde hast brought thy people out of Egipte, to get thy selfe a name, which remaineth this daye: we haue synned (o LORDE) and done wickedly agaynst all thy righteousnes: yet let thy worthyfull displeasure be turned awaye (I beseche the) from thy cite Jerusalem thy holy hill. And why? for oure synnes sake, and for the wickednesse of oure fore fathers, is Jerusalem, and thy people abhorred, of all them that are about vs. Now therfore (O oure God) heare the prayer of thy seruaunt, and his intercession: O let thy face shyne ouer thy sanctuary, that lieth wayst. Bar. 2.b. ‡ Exo. 12. 13.14.

O my God, enclyne thine eare, and herken (at the leest for thyne owne sake) open thine eyes beholde how we be desolate, yee & the cite also, which is called after thy name: For we do not cast oure prayes before the in oure owne righteousnesse, no: but onely in the greate mercies: O LORDE, heare: O forgeue LORDE: O LORDE consider, tary not ouer longe: but for thine owne sake do it, O my God: for thy cite and thy people is called after thy name.

Is I was yet speakinge at my prayers knowlegynge myne owne synnes and ꝑ synnes of my people, makynge so myne intercession before the LORDE my God, for the holy hils sake of my God. whyle I was yet speakinge in my prayer, beholde, the mā Gabriel (* whō I had sene afore in the vision) came flyenge to me, & touched me about the offeringe tyme in the euenynge. He inſtructed me, and spake vnto me: O Daniel (sayde he) I am now come, to make the vnderstonde it: For as soone as thou beganest to make thy prayer, it was so decyded and therfore am I come to shewe the. And why? * for thou art a man greatly beloued. Dan.7.2.8. Dan.10.2.9

Wherefore, ponder the matter wel, that thou mayest learne, to vnderstonde the vision. lxx. wekes are determyned ouer thy people, and ouer thy holy cite: that the wickednesse maye be cõsumed, that the synne maye
haue an ende, that the offense maye be recon ciled, and to bringe in euerlastinge righteou-snesse, to fulfill the visions and the prophetes, and to anoynte the moost holy one.

The x. Chapter

IN the thyrde peare of kynge Ci
rus of Persia, there was shewed vnto Daniel (otherwyse called Balthasar) a matter, yet a true matter, but it is yet a loge
tyme vnto it.

He vnderstode the matter well, and perceaued what the vision was. At the same ty me, I Daniel mourned for the space of thre wekes, so that I had no lust to eate bread: as for flesh and wyne, there came none within my mouth: No, I dyd not ones
anoynte my self, til the whole thre wekes we re out.

Upon the. xxiiii. daye of the first moneth
I was by the greate floude, called Tigris.
Dan. 7. b
Apoc. 1. a
* I lift vp myne eyes, & loked and beholde
a man clothed in lynnyne, whose loynes we re gyrded vp with fyne golde of Araby: his body was lyke the Chrysolyte stone, his face (to loke vpon) was lyke lightenynge, his eyes as the flame of fyre, his armes and fete were lyke fayre glysterynge metall, but the voyce of his wordes was lyke the voyce

of a multitude.

* I Daniel alone sawe this vision, & the men that were with me, sawe it not: but a greate fearfulnesse fell vpon them, so that they fled awaye, and hyd them selues. I was left there my self alone, and sawe this greate vision, so longe till there remayned nome
re strength within me: yee I lost my colour
clene, I wayted awaye, and my strength
was gone yet herde I the voyce of his wor
des: and as soone as I herde it, I sayntnesse came vpon me, and I fell downe flat to the grounde vpon my face. And beholde, an han de touched me, which set me vp vpon my knees and vpon the palmes of my hondes sayenge vnto me: * O Daniel, thou wel be loued man: take good hede of the wordes, &
I shall saye vnto the, and stonde right vp,
for vnto the am I now sent.

And when he had sayde these wordes, I stode vp tremblinge. Then sayde he vnto me: feare not Daniel: for why sence the first
daye that thou settest thine harte to vnderstan-
de, and dedest chastē thy self before thy God, thy wordes haue bene herde. And I had come vnto the, whē thou begannest to speake,
had not the prynce ouer the kingdome of the Perses withstonde me. xxi. dayes. But lo,
* Michael one of the chefe prynces, came to helpe me, him haue I left by the kynge of Persia, and am come to shewe the, what shall happen vnto thy people in the latter dayes: for it wilbe longe yet or the vision be fulfilled.

Now when he had spoken these wordes
vnto me, I cast downe my heade to the gro unde and helde my tunge. Beholde, then touched my lippes one, very lyke vnto a man. Then opened I my mouth, and sayde vnto him, that stode before me, O my lorde my joynes are lowsed in the vision, and the re is no more strēgth within me, How may
my lordes seruaunt then talke with my lorde, seinge there is no strength in me, so that I can not take my breth. Upon this there touched me agayne, one much lyke a man,
* and comforted me, sayenge. O thou man
so wel beloued, feare not, be content, take a good harte vnto the, and stronge. So when he had spoken vnto me, I recouered, and sayde. Speake on my lorde, for thou hast refreshed me. Then sayde he, knowest thou wherefore I am come vnto the? now will I go agayne to fight with the prynce
of the Perses. As soone as I go forth,
lo, the prynce of Grecelonde shall come.
Neuertheles I will shewe the the thynge

that is fast noted in the scripture of treuth. And as for al vnder matters, there is none that helpeth me in them, but Michael youre prince.

The.xi. Chapter

And in the first yeare of Darius the Mede of Media, I stode by him, to comforte him, and to strengthe him, and now will I shewe the the treuth. Beholde, there shall stond vp yet three kinges in Persia, but the fourth shall be farre richer then they all. And when he is in the chefest power of his riches, he shall prouoke euery man agaynst the realme of Grekelonde. Then shall there rise yet a mightie kynge, that shall rule with greate dominion, and do what him lust. And as soone as his kyngdome commeth vp, it shalbe destroyed, and deuyded towarde the foure wynders of the heauen. They that come after him, shall not haue such power, and dominion as he: but his kyngdome shalbe scatred, yee euen amonge other then those. And the kynge of the south shalbe mightier, then his other prynces. Agaynst him there shall one make himself stronge, and shall rule his dominion with greate power.

But after certayne yeares they shalbe ioyned together, and the kynges doughter of the south shall come to the kynge of the north, for to make frendshippe, but she shall not optayne the power of that arme, nother shall she be able to endure thorow his might but she, and such as brought her (yee and he that begat her, and conforted her for his time) shal be delyuered vp. Out of the braunches of her rote, there shall one stonde vp in his steade: which with power of armes shall go thorow the kynges londe of the north, and handle him accordinge to his strength. As for their Idols and prynces, and their costly iewels of golde and syluer he shall cary them awaye captyues in to Egypte, and he shall preuayle agaynst the kynge of the north certayne yeares. And when he is come in to the kynges realme of the south, he shall be fayne to turne agayne into his owne londe. [illegible] fore his sonnes shalbe displeased, and [illegible] gather together a mightie greate hoost of people, and one of them shall come, and go thorow like a waterflode: then shal he returne, and go forth with despenge, and boastinge vnto his owne londe.

Then the kynge of the south shalbe angrie, and shall come forth to fyght agaynst the kynge of the north: yee he shall bringe a greate multitude of people together, and a greate heape shalbe geuen in to his honde: these shall he cary awaye with greate pryde for so much as he hath cast downe so many thousandes, neuertheles he shall not preuayle. For the kynge of the north shall gather (of the new) a greater heape of people then afore, and come forth (after a certayne tyme and yeares) with a mightie hoost and exceadinge greate good.

At the same tyme there shall many stonde vp agaynst the kinge of the south, so that the wicked children of thy people also shall exalte them selues (to fulfill the vision) and then fall. So the kynge of the north shal come to laye sege, and to take the stronge fensed cities: And the power of the of the south shall not be able to abyde him, and the best men of the people shall not be so stronge, as to resist him. Shortly, when he commeth, he shall handle him as he list, and no man shalbe so hardy as to stonde agaynst him. He shall stonde in the pleasaunt countre, which thorow him shalbe destroyed. He shal set his face with all his power to optayne his kyngdome, and to be lyke it. yee that shall he do, and geue him vnto the doughters amonge women, to destroye him. But he shall fayle, nother shall he optayne his purpose. After this, shall he set his face vnto the Iles, and take many of them. A prynce shall stoppe him, to do him a shame, beside the confusion that els shall come vnto him. Thus shall he turne agayne to his owne londe, stomble, and fall, and be nomore founde: so he that came vpon him, and dyd him violence, shall stonde in his place, and haue a pleasaunt kyngdome: and after few dayes he shalbe destroyed, and that nother in wrath nor in batell. In his steade there shall aryse a vyle person not holden worthy of a kynges dignite: this shall come in craftely, and optayne the kyngdome with fayre wordes: he shall fyght agaynst the armes of the mightie (and destroye them) yee and agaynst the prynce of the couenaunt.

So after that he hath taken truce with him, he shall handle deceatfully, & he maye get vp, & ouercome him with a small flocke: and so with craftenesse to get him to the fattest place of the londe, and to deale otherwise, then ether his fathers or graundfathers dyd. For he shall destroye the thinge, that they had robbed & spoyled, yee and all their substaūce: ymagenynge thoughtes agaynst the stronge holdes, and that for a tyme. His power and harte shalbe steared vp with a greate army agaynst the kynge of the south where thorow the kynge of the south shalbe moued then vnto battayl, with a great and mightie hoost also. Neuertheles, he shal not be able to stonde, for they shall conspyre agaynst him, yee they that eate of his meate, shall hurte him: so that his hoost shall fal and many be slayne downe.

These two kynges shalbe mynded to do myschefe, and talke of deceate at one table: but they shall not prosper for why, the ende shall not come yet, vnto the time apoynted.

2. Mac. 5. a * Then shal he go home agayne in to his owne londe with greate good, and set his harte against the holy couenaunt, he shalbe busy agaynst it, and then returne home. At the tyme appoynted he shall come agayne, and go towarde the south: bo shall it happen otherwyse then at the first, yet once agayne. And why * the shippes of Cythim shal come vpon him, that he maye be smytten & turne agayne, that he maye take indignacion agaynst the couenaunt of holynes, to medle against it. yee he shal turne him, and drawe such vnto him, as leaue the holy couenaunt.

Nu. 24. b

E He shall set mightie men to vnhalowe the sanctuary of strength, to put downe the dayly offeringe, and to set vp the abhominable desolacion. And such as breake the couenaunt, shall he flattre with fayre wordes. But the people that will knowe theyr God, shall haue the ouerhande and prospere. Those al ỏ haue vnderstandinge amõge ỏ people shal enstrume ỏ multitude: and for a longe season, they shalbe persecuted with swearde, with fyre, with captyuite, and with the takynge awaye of theyr goodes. Now when they fall, they shalbe set vp with a litle helpe: but many shall cleue vnto them faynedly.

yee some of those which haue vnderstondinge, shal be persecuted also: that they maye be tryed, purified, and clensed, till the tyme be out: for there is yet another tyme apoynted. The kynge shall do what him lust, * he

2. Thes. 2. a shall exalte and magnifie himself agaynst all, that is God. yee he shall speake maruelous thinges agaynst the God of all goddes, wherin he shall prosperе, so longe till

Apo. 15. a the * wrath be fulfilled, for the conclusion is decreed alredy. He shall not regarde the God of his fathers, but his lust shalbe vpon women: yee he shall not care for any God for he shall magnifie himself aboue all. In his place shall he worshippe the mightie Idols: and the God whom his fathers knewe not, shal he honoure with golde and syluer, with precious stones and pleasaunt Jewels.

This shall he do, sekynge helpe and succoure at the mightie Idols and straunge goddes. Such as will receaue him, and take him for God, he shall geue them greate worshippe and power: yee and make them lordes of the multitude, and geue them the londe with rewardes. In the latter tyme shall the kynge of the south stryue with him and the kynge of the north in lyke maner shall come agaynst him with charettes, horsmen and with a greate naup of shippes. he shall come in to the londes, destroye and go thorow: he shall entre also in to the fayre pleasaunt londe. Many cities, and countrees shall decaye * excepte. Edom, Moab Dan. 11. and the best of the children of Ammon, which shall escape from his honde. He shall stretch forth his hondes vpon the countrees, and the londe of Egipte shall not escape him. For thorow his goinge in, he shall haue dominion ouer the treasures of syluer and golde, and ouer all the precious Jewels of Egipte. Lybia, and Ethiopia. * Neuertheles Dan. 11. the tydinges out of the east and the north shall trouble him, for the which cause he shall go forth to destroye and curse a greate multitude. The tentes of his palace shall he pytch betwixte the two sees, vpon the hil of the noble sanctuary, for he shall come to Dan. 11. the ende of it, * and then shall no man helpe him. 24.

The. xij. Chapter.

THe tyme wil come also, that the * greate prince Michael, which Dan. 12. stondeth on thy peopels syde, shall aryse vp, for * there shall Ma. 24. come a tyme of trouble, such as neuer was, sens there begāne to be ony people, vnto that same tyme. Then shal thy people be delyuered, yee al those that be founde wrytten in the boke. * Many of them that Dan. 12. slepe in the dust of the earth shall awake: some to euerlastinge life, some to perpetual shame, and reproffe. * The wyse (such as Dan. 12. haue taught other) shall glister, as the shynynge of heauen: and those that haue instructe the multitude vnto godlynesse, shalbe as the starres, world without ende.

And thou o Daniel, shut vp these wordes

ye stode the boke, tyl the last tyme. Many shal go about here and there, & then shall knowledge increase. Then I Daniel loked, & beholde there stode other two: one vpon this shore of the water, the other vpon yonder syde. And one of the sayde vnto him, whiche was clothed in lynnyne, and stode aboue vpon the waters of the floude: How longe shall it be to the ende of these wonderous workes? Then herde I the man with the lynnyne clothes, which stode aboue vpon the waters of the floude: when he heide vp his righte & and left hande vnto heauen, & sware by him which liueth for euer: * ỹ it shall tary for a tyme, two tymes, & half a tyme: and whē the power of the holy people is clene scatred abrode, then shal all these thinges be fulfilled. I herde it well, but I vnderstode it not. Then sayde I: O my lorde, what shall happen after that? He answered: Go thy waye Daniel, for these wordes shall be cloſed vp & sealed, tyll the last tyme: & many shalbe purified, clensed, and tried. But the vngodly shall liue wickedly, * and those wicked (as many of them as they be) shall haue no vnderstondinge: as for suche as haue vnderstondynge, they shall regarde it. And from the tyme forth the daylie offerynge shall be put downe & the abhomtnable desolacō set vp, there shalbe a thousande two hundyth and xc. dayes. O wel is hym, that waiteth, and commeth to the thousande thre hundyth and fyue and thyrtye dayes. Go thou thy waye now, tyll it be ended: take thy reste, and byde in thy lot, tyll the dayes haue an ende.

of the LORDE, that came vnto Oseas the sonne of Beeri, * in ỹ dayes of Ozias, Joathan, Achas & Ezechias kinges of Juda: and in the tyme of Jeroboam the sonne of Joas kynge of Israel.):(

The.firſt.Chapter.

1 FIrst, when the LORDE spake vnto Oseas, he sayde vnto hym * Go thy waye, take an harlot to thy wife, and get chyldren by her: for the lode hath committed greate whordome agayn ſte the LORDE. 2 So he wente, and toke Gomer the doughter of Deblaim: which cõceaued, & brought forth a sonne. And the LORDE sayde vnto him: call his name Jesrael, for I wil shortly * auenge the bloude of & Jesraell vpon the house of Jehu, and will bringe the kingdome of the house of Israel to an ende. 5 Then will I breake the bowe of Israel, in the valley of Jesrael.

6 She conceaued yet agayne, and bare a doughter. And he sayde vnto him: Call hir name Loruhama (that is, not optaynynge mercy) for * I wil haue no pytie vpõ the house of Israel, but forget them, and put them clene out of remembraũce * Neuertheleſſe 7 I will haue mercy vpon the house of Juda & will saue thẽ, euen thorow ỹ LORDE their God. But I will not delyuer them thorowe any bowe, swearde, batel, horses or horsmẽ.

8 Now when she had weened Loruhama, she conceaued agayne, & bare a sonne. 9 Thẽ sayde he: call his name Lo Ami (that is to saye, not my people.) For why, ye are not my people, therfore will not I be yours. 10 And though the nombre of the chyldren of Israel be * as the sondeof the see, which can nether be measured nor tolde: yet in the place where it is sayde vntothẽ, * ye be not my people

euen there shall it be thus reported of them: * they be the chyldren of the lyuynge God. 11 & Then shall the chyldren of Juda and the chyldren of Israel be gathered togethers agayne, & chose them seluys one heade, & then departe out of the londe: for greate shal be ỹ daye of Jesrael.

The.ii.Chapter.

1 TEll your brethren, that they are I my people: and youre sisters, ỹ they haue optayned mercy. 2 As for youre mother, ye shall chyde with her, and reproue her: * for she is not my wife, nother am I hir husbõde vnleſſe she put awaye hir whordome out of my sight, and hir aduoutry from hir breſtes ỹf no, 3 I shal strype her naked, & set her, * euẽ as she came in to the worlde: yee I shal take hir waist, and make her lyke a wildernesse, & slaye her for thyrste. 4 I shal haue no pitie alſo vpon hir chyldren, * for they be the chyldren of fornication.

5 Their mother hath broken hir wedlocke and she that bare thẽ * is come to cõfusion. For she sayde: I wil go after my louers, that geue me my water and my bread, my woll & my flax, my oyle and my drynke. 6 But I wil hedge hir waye with thornes, and stoppe it, that she shall not fynde hir foresteppes: and though she runne after hir louers, yet shall she not get them: she shall seke them, but not fynde thẽ. Then shall she saye: well, * I will go turne agayne to my fyrst husbonde, for at ỹ tyme was I better at ease, then now. 8 But this wolde she not knowe, where as I yet gaue her corne, wyne, oyle, syluer and golde, & * which she hath hanged vpõ Baal.

9 Wherfore now will I go take my corne & wyne agayne in their season, & set agayne my woll and my flax, whiche I gaue her, to couer hir shame. * 10 And now will I discouer hir foolishnesse, euẽ in the sight of hir louers and no man shall delyuer her out of my hondes. 11 Moreouer, I will take awaye all hir * myrth, hir holy dates, hir newmoones, hir Sabbathes and all hir solempne feastes: 12 I will destroye hir vynyardes & fygge trees, though she saieth: lo, here are my rewardes, that my louers haue geuen me. I will make it a woode, & the wylde beastes shall eate it vp: 13 I wyll punysh her also for the dayes of Baal * wherin she censed him, decking him with hir eaynynges and cheynes: when she followed hir louers, and forgat me, sayeth the LORDE.

14 Wherfore beholde, I wil call her againe,

bringe her in to a wildernes, & speake frendly vnto her: there wil I geue her hir vynyardes agayne, yee and ꝓ * valley of Achor also, to shewe hir hope & comforte. Then shall she synge there * as in ꝓ tyme of hir youth, & like as in ꝓ daye when she came out of the lande of Egipte. Then (saieth the LORDE) she shal saye vnto me: O my housbande, & shal call me nomore Baal: for I will take away those names of Baal from hir mouth, yee she shall neuer remembre their names onymore. * Then will I make a couenaũt with them, with the wylde beastes, with the foules of the ayre, & with euery thynge that creepeth vpon the earth.

And for bowe, swearde, battayl, I will destroye such out of the lande, & will make the to dwell safely. * Thus will I marry ꝓ vnto myne owne selfe for euermore: yee euẽ to my selfe will I marry ꝓ, in righteousnes, in equite, in louynge kyndnesse & mercy. In faith also will I marry the vnto my selfe, and thou shalt knowe ꝓ LORDE. At the same tyme will I shewe my selfe frendly & gracious vnto ꝓ heauens, saieth ꝓ LORDE: & the heauens shall helpe the earth, & the earth shall helpe the corne, wyne and oyle, and they shal helpe Iesrael. * I will sowe the vpõ earth, for a sede vnto myne owne selfe, & will haue mercy vpõ her ꝓ was without mercy. And to the which were not my people, I wil saye: thou art my people. And he shall saye: thou art my God.

The.iii. Chapter.

Then sayde the LORDE to me: * Go yet thy waye & wowe an aduouterous womã, whom thy neighboure loueth, as ꝓ LORDE doeth the children of Israel: howbeit they haue respecte to straunge goddes, & loue the wynebannes. So I gat her for xv. syluerlinges, & for an Homer and an half of barlye, & sayde vnto her: Thou shalt abyde with me a lõge seasõ, but se that thou playe not the harlot, and loke thou medle with none other man, and then will I kepe my selfe for the.

Thus the children of Israell shall syt a great whyle without kinge & prince, without offrynge and aulter, without prieste and reuelation. But afterwarde shall the children of Israel conuerte, & seke the LORDE their God, and ✠ their kinge: & in ꝓ latter dayes they shall worshippe the LORDE, and hys louynge kyndnesse.

The.iiii. Chapter.

Heare the worde of the LORDE, ye children of Israel: for ꝓ LORDE must punysh them, ꝓ dwell in the londe. And why? There is no faithfulnelle, there is no mercy, there is no knowlege of God in the londe: but swearinge, lyenge, mãslaughter, theft and aduoutry haue gotten the ouerhande, & one bloudgiltynes folowe another. Therfore shall the londe be in a miserable case, & all they that dwell therin, shal mourne. The beastes in the felde, the foules in the ayre, & the fishes in the see shall dye. yet is there none, that will chasten nor reproue another. The prestes which shuld reforme other, are become like the people.

Therfore stomblest thou in ꝓ daye tyme & the prophet with the in the night. I wil bynge thy mother to spiece, & why: * my people perish, because they haue no knowlege. Seinge then that thou hast refused vnderstondinge, therfore wil I refuse ꝓ also: so that thou shalt nomore be my prest. And for so much as thou haste forgotten the lawe of thy God, I wil also forget thy children. The more they increased in multitude, the more they synned agaynst me, therfore wil I chaunge their honoure in to shame. * They eate vp ꝓ synnes of my people, & corage them in their wickednesse. * Thus ꝓ prest is become like the people. Wherfore I will punysh them for their wicked wayes, & rewarde them accordinge to their owne ymaginacions. * They shal eate & not haue ynough: They haue vsed whordome, therfore shall they not prospere: and why? they haue forsaken the LORDE, & not regarded hym.

Whordome, wyne, and dronckennesse take the harte away. * My people are counsell at their stockes, their staffe must tell them. For an whorish mynde hath deceaued them, so ꝓ they cõmitte fornicacion agaynst their God. * They make sacrifice vpon ꝓ hie mountaynes, & burne their incense vpõ the hilles, yee amonge ꝓ okes, groues, & bushes, for there are good shadowes. Therfore your doughters are become harlottes, and your spouses haue broke their wedlocke. I wil not punish your doughters for beynge defyled, & your brydes ꝓ became whores: * seinge ꝓ fathers them selues haue medled wit harlottes, and offered with vnthryftes: but the people that will not vnderstonde, must be punyshed.

Though thou Israel art disposed to play the harlot, yet shuldest not thou haue offended, o Iuda: thou shuldest not haue tũne to Galgala, * nor haue gone vp to Bethauen,

The. vi. Chapter.

IN their aduersite they shall seke me, and saye: come, let vs turne agayne to the LORDE: * for he hath smytten vs, and he shal heale vs: he hath wounded vs, and he shall bynde vs vp agayne: after two dayes shall he quycke vs, in the thirde daye he shal rayse vs vp, so that we shal lyue in his sight. Then shall we haue vnderstōdinge, & endeuoure oure selues to knowe the LORDE. He shal go forth as the sprynge of the daye, and come vnto vs * as the euenynge & mornynge rayne vpon the earth.

O Ephraim, what shall I do vnto the? O Juda, how shall I intreate the? seyng youre loue is like a mornynge cloude, & like a dewe ỳ goeth early awaye. Therfore haue I cast downe the prophetes, & letté them be slayne for my wordes sake: so that thy punyshment shal come to light. * For I haue pleasure in louynge kyndnesse, & not in offrynge: yea in the knowlege of God, more then in burnt sacrifice. But euen like as & Ada dyd, so haue they broken my couenaunt, and set me at naught. Galaad is a cite of wicked doers, of malicious people and bloud shedders. The multitude of the prestes is like an heape of theues, murtherers & bloud thurstie: for they haue wrought abhominacō. * Horrible thinges haue I sene in the house of Israel, there playeth Ephraim the harlot, & Israel is defyled: but Juda shall haue an harueste for him self, when I returne the captiuite of my people.

The. vii. Chapter.

WHen I vndertake to make Israel whole, thē the vngracionnesse of Ephraim and the wickednes of Samaria commeth to light: thē go they about with lyes. At home, they be theues: and without, they fall to robbynge. They consyder not in their hartes, that I remembre all their wickednes. They go about with their owne inuentions, but I se them wel ynough. They make the kyng and the princes to haue pleasure in their wikednes & lies. All these burne in aduoutry, as it were an ouen ỳ the baker heateth, when he hath lefte kneadinge, till the dowe be leuended. Euen so goeth it this daye with oure kinges and princes, for they begynne to be wonde dronken thorow wyne they ble familiarite with suche as deceaue them. They with the ymagination of their hart are like an oue, their slepe is all ỳ night like the slepe of a baker, in the mornynge is he as hote as the flame of fyre: they are altogether as hote as an ouen.

They haue deuoured their owne iudges, all their kinges are fallē: yet is there none of ỳ calleth vpon me. Therfore must Ephraim be mixte amonge ỳ Heithen. Ephraim is become like a cake, ỳ no man turneth: straūgers haue deuoured his strength, yet he regardeth it not: he wareth ful of gray heeres yet wil he not knowe it: & ỳ pride of Israel is cast downe before their face, yet will they not turne to the LORDE their God, nor seke hym, for all this.

Ephraim is like a doue, that is begyled, & hath no harte. * Now call they vpon the Egyptians, nowe go they to the Assirians: but whyle they be goinge here and there, I shal spreade my net ouer them, & drawe them downe as ỳ foules of the ayre: and accordinge as they haue bene warned, so will I punysh thē. * Wo be vnto them, for they haue forsake me. They must be destroyed, for they haue set me at naught. * I am he ỳ haue redemed them, ād yet they dyssemble with me * They call not vpon me with their hartes, but howlinge vpon their beddes. Where as they come together, it is but for meate & drynke, and me will they not obeye. I haue taught them, and defended their arme, yet do they ymagin mischefe agaynst me. They turne them selues, but not a right, & are become as a broken bowe. Their princes shalbe slayne with the swearde, for ỳ malice of their tunges, such blasphemies haue they learned in the londe of Egipte.

The.viii.Chapter.

SEt the horne to thy mouth, & blowe: get the swiftly (as an Aegle) vnto the house of the LORDE: for they haue broken my * coue naunt, and transgressed my law Israel can saye vnto me: thou art my God, we knowe the: but he hath refused the thing that is good, therfore shall ỳ enemye folowe vpon hym. * They haue ordened kynges, but not thorow me: they haue made princes and I wiste not knowe of it. * Of their syluer and golde haue they made them images, to bringe them selues to destruccion.

* Thy calfe (O Samaria) shalbe taken awaye, for my wrothfull indignacio is gone forth agaynste the. Howe longe will it be, or they can be clensed? For the calfe came from Israel, the workeman made it, therfore can it be no God, but euen the spyders webbe shall the calfe of Samaria be turned. They haue sowne wynde, therfore shall they reape a storme.

Their sede shall beare no corne, there shal no meel be made of their increase: though there be, yet shall straungers deuoure it vp. Israel shal perish, the Gētiles shall entreate him as a foule vessell. Sens they wente vp to the Assirians, they are become like a wilde asse in the deserte.

* Ephraim geueth rewardes to get louers therfore are they scatred amōge the Heithen. there wil I gather thē vp. They shall soone be weery of the burthen of kynges & princes Ephraim hath made many alters to do wickednes, therfore shall the alters turne to his synne. Though I shewe thē my lawe neuer so much, they counte it but straunge doctrine. Where as they do sacrifice, offer inge the flesh and eatinge it: the LORDE will haue no pleasure therin: but wil remēbre their wickednes, and punysh their synnes. * Israell turneth agayne in to Egipte, they haue forgotten hym ỳ made them, they buylde churches, and Iuda maketh many stronge cities * therfore wil I sende a fyre in to their cities and it shall cōsume their palaces.

DO not thou triūphe (O Israel) make no boastinge more thē the Heithen, for thou hast cōmitted aduoutry against thy God: straūge rewardes haste thou loued, more then all corne floores * Therfore shall they nomore enioye the cornefloores & wyne presses, and their swete wyne shall fayle the. They will not dwell in the LORDES lōde, * but Ephraim turneth againe in to Egipte & eateth vncleane thinges amonge the Assirians. They poure out no wyne for a drinkofferinge vnto the LORD, nether geue they him their slayne offringes: but they be vnto thē as mourners meates, wherin all they ỳ eate them, are defyled. For the dread ỳ they haue such lust vnto, shall not come into the house of the LORD. The.x.Chapter.

A Israell was a goodly * vyne, but he hath brought forth vnprofitable frute: yee þ more frute he had, þ mo aulters he made: the more good I dyd to their lõde, the more frendshipe shewed they to their ymages. Their harte is deuyded, therfore will they be destroyed. The LORDE shall breake downe their ymages, he shal destroye their aulters. Then shall they saye: we haue no kynge, for why? we haue not feared the LORDE. And what shall then the kynge do to vs? They comon together, and sweare vayne oothes: they be cõfederate together, therfore groweth their punyshment, as the wedes in the forowes of the londe.

They that dwell in Samaria haue worshipped the calfe of Bethaue: therfore shall the people mourne ouer them, yee and the prestes also, that in their welthynesse reioysed with them: and why? it shall passe awaye from them. It shalbe brought to the Assirs for a present vnto king Jareb. Ephraim shal receaue full punishment: Israel shal be confounded for his owne ymaginacions, Samaria with his kynge shall vanish awaye, as the scomme vpon the water. The hye places of Auen where Israel do synne, shall be cast downe: thistles and thornes shal growe vpon their aulters. * Then shal they saye to the mountaynes: couer vs, and to the hylles fall vpon vs.

O Israel, thou hast synned as * Gabaa dyd afore tyme, where they remayned: shalde not the battayl then come vpõ the wicked chyldren, as wel as vpon the Gabaonites? I will chasten the, euen after myne owne desyre, the people shall be gathered together ouer them, whe I punysh the for their great wickednesse. Ephraim was vnto me, as a cow that is vsed to go to plowe, therfore I loued him, and fel vpon his fayre neck. I sue Ephraim. Juda plowed, & Jacob playes the husbõde mã: that they might sowe vnto righteousnes, & reape þ frutes of welloouinge that they might plowe vp their fresh lande, and seke the LORD, til he came, and learned them righteousnes.

But now they haue plowed them wickednesse, therfore shal they reape synne, and eate the frute of lyes. Seinge thou puttest thy confidence in thine owne waye, and leanest to thy multitude of thy worthies: there shal growe a sedicion amonge thy people. All thy fortresses shalbe layed wayst, euen as * Salmana was destroied with his famyliers, therof him that was auenged of Baal, in the daye of battayll, where þ mother perished & her children. Euen so shall it go with you (o Bethel) because of youre malicious wickednes. Like as the morninge goeth awaye, so shal the kynge of Israel passe.

The.xi.Chapter.

When Israel was yonge, I loued hym: * and called my sonne out of the londe of Egipte. But the more they were called, the more they wente backe. * offeringe hem Idols, and ceruynge ymages. I learned Ephraim to go, and bare them in myne armes, but they regarded not me, that wolde haue holped them. I led them with coardes of manhoode, & with bōdes of loue. I was vnto them that layed the yocke vpon their necke, & I gaue thē their foode my self, ỳ they shulde not go agayn in to Egipte: And now is their kinge: For they wolde not turne vnto me. Therfore shall ỳ swearde begin in their cities, the stoare that they haue made vnto, shall be destroyed and eatē vp: yee because of their owne ymaginacions. My people hath no luste to turne vnto me, & their prophetes laye the yocke vpon them but they ease them not of their burthen.

What great thinges haue I geuen the, Ephraim? how faithfully haue I defended the? Israel, haue I dealt with the as with Adama? or haue I intreated the like Seboim? no, my hart is otherwise mynded. For my mercy is to feruent: therfore haue I me turned me to destroye Ephraim in my wrathfull displeasure. For I am God and no man, I am euen that holy one in the middest of thee, though I came not within the citie.

The LORDE roareth like a lyon ỳ they maye folowe him: yee as a * lyō roareth he, so they maye be afrayed, like the chyldren of the sea: that they maye be scarred awaye out of Egipte, as men scarre byrdes: & frayed maye (as doues vse to be) from the Assiriās and that because I wolde haue them dwell at home, sayeth the LORDE. But Ephraim goeth about me with lies, and the house of Israel dyssembleth. Onely Juda walketh yet with God, and with the true holy ones.

The.xij. Chapter.

Ephraim kepeth the ayre, and followeth after the eastwynde: he is euer increasing lies & destruction. They be confederate with the Assirians, * their ople is caried into Egipte. The LORD hath a courte also with Juda, and will punysh Jacob after his owne wayes and acordynge to his owne inuencions, shall he recompence him. But the marchaunt hath a false weight in his honde, he hath a pleasure to occupie extorcion. Ephraim thinketh thus: * Tush, I am rych, I haue good ynough: In all my workes shal not one fawte be founde, that I haue offended. yet am I the LORD thy God, euē as when I brought the out of the londe of Egipte, and set the in thy tentes, and as in the hye feast dayes. Therfore they shalbe as the morynge cloude, & as the dew that early passeth awaye: and lyke as dust that the wynde taketh awaye frō the flooze, and as smoke that goeth out of ỳ chymney. The.i.ijt.Chapter.

This is the worde of ꝓ LORDE, that came vnto Joell ꝓ sonne of Phatuel: Heare o ye elders: pon dre this well, all ye that dwell in the lõde: yf euer there happened suche a thinge in youre dayes, or in the dayes of youre fathers. Tell youre chyldren of it, & let them tell vnto their chyldren, & so from generacion to generacion. Loke what the caterpiller hath lefte, that hath the grashopper eaten vp: what the grashopper hath lefte, that hath the locuste eaten vp: & what the locuste hath lefte, that hath the blasting mildewe. Awake vp ye dronkardes, & wepe ye all ye wynesuppers, be cause of youre swete wyne, for it shall be taken awaye from youre mouth. For a mightie & an vnnumerable people shall come vp in to my lõde: ꝓ their teeth is like the teeth of lyons, & chawes like the lyonesses. They shall make my vineyarde waste, they shall pyll of the barckes of my figgetrees, strippe them bare, caste them away, & make the braunches whyte.

Make ye mone as a virgin doth, ꝓ gyrded her selfe with sacke, because of the husbande. For the meate offeringe is taken awaye from the house of the LORDE: & the preestes the LORDES mynisters mourne. The felde shalbe wasted & the lande shalbe in a miserable case: for the corne shalbe destroied, the swete wyne shall come to confusion, & the oyle vtterly desolate. The husbandmen & the wyne gardeners shall lamente pitteously & make lamentacion, for wheate, wyne, & barley, because ꝓ harueste of the felde is so clene destroyed. The grapevynes shall make great mone, when ꝓ figgetrees be so vtterly wasted with the pomegranates, palmetrees, apletrees, yee all other trees of ꝓ felde shal wyther away. Thus the mery cheare of the chyldren shall come to confusion.

Gyrde youre, & make youre mone, o ye preestes: ye mynisters of ꝓ alter: go youre waye in, & slepe in sacke cloth, o ye officers of my God: for the meate offeringe & drynkofferinge shall be taken awaye from the house of youre God * proclame a fastynge, call the cõgregacion, gather the elders & all the inhabiters of the londe together in to the house of ꝓ LORDE youre God, & crie vnto the LORDE: alas, alas for this daye. And why? the daye of ꝓ LORDE is at honde, and commeth as a destroier from the Almightie. Shal not ꝓ meates be taken awaye before our eyes, this myrth also & ioye from the house of oure God? The sede shall perish in the grounde, the garners shal lye waste, the floores shalbe broken downe, for the corne shalbe destroied. * O what a sighinge make the catell ꝓ bullockes are very euell likynge, because they haue no pasture: and the shepe are fameshed awaye. Joel.1.a. C 1.Reg.18.a

O LORDE, to ꝓ will I crie: for the fyre hath consumed the goodly pastures of the wyldernesse, and the flame hath brent vp all the trees of the felde. Yee the wylde beastes crie also vnto the: for the water ryuers are dryed vp, and the fyre hath cõsumed the pastures of the wyldernesse.

The.ij.Chapter.

Blowe out the trompet in Sion & crie vpon my holy hil, that all suche as dwell in ꝓ londe, maye tremble at it * for the daye of the LORDE cõmeth, & is harde at honde: a darcke daye, a gloomynge daye, a cloudy daye, yee & a stormy daye, like as ꝓ mornynge spredeth out vpõ ꝓ hilles: Namely, a great & mighty people: such as haue not bene sens ꝓ begynninge, nether shal be after them for euermore. Before him shal be a consumynge fyre, & behynde him a burninge flame. The londe shal be as a garden of pleasure before him, but behinde him shal it be a deep wast wildernesse, & there is no man, that shall escape hym. They are to loke vpon like barded horses, & runne like horsemẽ. They skippe vp vpon ꝓ hilles, as it were the sounde of charettes: as the flame of fyre that consumeth the strawe, and as a mighty people redy to the battayl. Joyel.1.a. C 1.Mac.5.d. D

The folke shalbe afrayed of hym, all faces shal be as blacke as a pot. These shal rũne like giauntes, & leape ouer the walles like men of warre. Euery mã in his gounge shall kepe his arate, & not go out of his path. There shal not one dryue another, but eche shal kepe his owne waye. They shall breake in at ꝓ wyndowes, & not be hurte: They shall come in to the cite, & runne vpon the walles: They shal clymme vp vpon the houses, & skippe in at ꝑ wyndowes like a theefe. The earth shall quake before hym, yee ꝑ heauens shalbe moued: the * sonne & moone shal be darkened, and the starres shal withdrawe their shyne. The LORD shal shewe his voyce before his hoost, for his hoost is great, stronge & mighty to fulfil his commaundement. This is ꝑ great & marueilous fearfull daye of ꝑ LORDE: * And who is able to abyde it?

Joel.3.c. Mat.24.c. Apo.6.c.

C * Nowe therfore saieth the LORD: * Turne you vnto me with all youre hartes, with fastinge, weppinge & mournynge: rente your hartes, & not your clothes. Turne you vnto the LORD your God, * for he is gracious & merciful, longe sufferynge & of greate compassion: & redy to pardone wickednes. (Who (no doute) he also shall turne, & forgeue: & after his chastenyng, he shal let your increace remayne, for meat & drynkofferinges vnto the LORDE your God. * Blowe out with the trõpet in Sion, proclame a fastynge, call the congregacion, & gather the people together: warne the congregacion, gather the elders, bringe the childre & suckelynges together. Let ꝑ bridegrome go forth of hys chãbre, & the bryde out of her closet. Let the prestes serue the LORD betwixte the porch & ꝑ auiter, wepinge & sayenge: be fauourable (o LORD) be fauourable vnto thy people: let not thine heretage be brought to suche confusion, lest ꝑ heithen be lordes therof. Wher fore shulde they saye amonge the heythen: * where is now their God?

D Then shall the LORD be gelous ouer his londe, & spare his people: yee ꝑ LORDE shall answere, & saye vnto his people: Behold, I wil sende you corne, wyne & oyle, so ꝑ ye shal haue plenty of them: & I will nomore geue you ouer to be a rebroke amonge the heithen. ꝑ Agayne, as for him of ꝑ north, I shal dryue him farre from you: & shute him out into a drye and waist londe, his face towarde the east see, and hys hynder partes towarde the vtteremost see. The stynke of him shall go vp, and his filthy corruption shall fal vpon himself, because he hath dealte so proudly. Feare not (o londe) but be glad and reioyse, for the LORDE wil do great thynges. Be not ye afrayed neither (o ye beastes of ꝑ felde) for the pastures shal be grene, and the trees shal beare their frute: ꝑ figgetrees & vinyardes shall geue their increase.

C * Be glad then (o ye childre of Sion) & reioyse in ꝑ LORDE your God, for he hath geuẽ you the tracher of righteousnes: * & he it is ꝑ shal sende you downe shuwers of rayne, early and late in the first moneth: so that the garners shal be full of corne, and the presses plenteous in wyne and oyle. And as for ꝑ yeares that the gresshopper, locuste, blastinge & caterpiller (my great hoost, which I sent amonge you) haue eaten vp, I shall restore thẽ to you agayne: so ꝑ ye shal haue ynough to eate, and be satisfied: and prayse the name of the LORDE your God, that so marueilously hath dealte with you.

And my people shall neuer be confounded ony more: ye shall well knowe, that I am in the myddest of Israel, and that I am youre God: yee and that there is none other, and my people shall nomore be brought to confusion.

* After this, wil I poure out my spyrte vpon al flesh: & your sonnes & your doughters shal prophecy: your olde me shal dreame dremes & your yongemen shal se visions: yee in those dayes I will poure out my spyrte vpõ seruauntes and maydens. And the tyme shal come: ꝑ * who so euer calleth on the name of the LORD, shalbe saued. For vpon the mount Sion & at Ierusalem, there shalbe a saluacion, like as the LORDE hath promised: yee & amonge the other remnaunt whome the LORDE shall call.

Chap. i. He prophesyeth agayne Damascus, Gaza, Tyre, Edom and Ammon.

Chap. ii. He complayneth vpon Moab, Juda and Israel.

Chap. iii. God warneth, he be not prouoked.

Chap. iiii. He reproueth their wickednesse, & sheweth the plagues for the same and reiecteth their ceremonies.

Chap. v. He complayneth for the captyuite of Israel.

Chap. vi. He reproueth the welthy, idolatrous and vngracious people, and threatneth their destruction.

Chap. vii. The visyons of the prophet Amos.

Chap. viii. A vision of ripe fruit. The wantonous people and false prophetes. The hunger of gods word.

Chap. ix. Visyons vpon Juda. The power of God. The restoring of the kyngdom of the Jewes.

The.i.tit. Chapter.

THese are the sermons, that were shewed vnto Amos (which was one of the shepherdes at Thecua) vpon Israel, in the tyme of * Ostas kynge of Juda, & in ỹ tyme of ỹ Jeroboam the sonne of Joas king of Israel, two yeare before the earthquake. 4. Re. 15. 9 34. 22. 14 c

Jere. 25. b. Joel. 3. c. And he sayde: * The LORDE shall roare out of Sion, and shewe his voyce from Jerusalem: so that the pastures of the shepherdes shal be in a miserable case, & the toppe of Carmel dyed vp.

Thus sayeth the LORDE: for thre & foure wickednesses of * Damascus, I will not spare her: because they haue threshed Galaad with yron flales: But I will sende a fyre in to the house of Hazael, the same shall consume the palaces of Benadad. Thus will I breake the barres of Damascus, and rote out the inhabiter from the felde of Auen and hym that holdeth the cepter, oute of the pleasaunt house: so that the people shalbe dryuen out of kayre Syria, sayeth the LORDE. Thus sayeth the LORDE: for thre & foure wickednesses of * Gaza, I will not spare her: because they make the prisoners yet more captyue, and haue dryuen them in to the londe of Edom. Therfore wil I sende a fyre in to the walles of Gaza, whiche shall deuoure hir houses. I will rote out the that dwell at Asdod, and hym that holdeth the cepter of Ascalon, and stretch out myne hond ouer Accaron, that the remnaunt off the Philistines shall perish sayeth the LORDE. Amos. 17. a. Jere. 49. b Zach. 9. a.

Thus sayeth the LORDE: for thre and foure wickednesses of the citie of * Tyre, I will not spare her: because they haue increased the captiuite of the Edomites, and haue not remembred the * brotherly couenaunt. Therfore will I sende a fyre in to the walles of Tyre, that shall consume hir palaces. Joel. 3. a. 3. Re. 1. a.

Thus sayeth the LORDE: for thre & foure wickednesses of * Edom I wil not spare hi, bd. 7. a. Jere. 49. b

because he * persecuted his brother with the swearde, destroyed his mothers wombe, bare hatred verye longe, and so kepte indignacio allwaye by him. Therfore will I sende a fyre in to Thema which shall deuoure the palaces of Bosra. Gen. 27.

Thus sayeth the LORDE: for thre & foure wickednesses of the childyren of * Ammon, I will not spare them: because they rype vp the women great wt chylde in Galaad to make the bordes of their londes the wyder. Therfore I wil kyndle a fyre in the walles of Rabbath, that shall consume her palaces: with a great crie, in ỹ daye of battayl, in tempest and in the daye of storme: so ỹ theyr kynge shall go in to captiuite, he & his pryncis together, sayeth the LORDE. Jere. 49. a. Ezech. 25. a. Amos. 1. b.

The.ii. Chapter.

THus sayeth the LORDE: for thre and foure wickednesses of * Moab, I will not spare hym: because he brent the bones of ỹ kynge of Edom to asshes. Therfore will I sende a fyre in to Moab, whiche shall consume the palaces of Carioth: so ỹ Moab shall perish with a noyse, and the sounde of a shawme. I will rote out the iudge frō amonge them, and slaye all his princes with him, sayeth the LORDE. Thus sayeth the LORDE: for thre and foure wickednesses of * Juda, I will not spare hym: because he hath cast alyde the lawe of the LORDE, & not kepte hys commaundementes: for why, * they walde nedes be deceaued with the lyes, that their forefathers folowed. Therfore will I sende a fyre in to Juda, whiche shall consume the palaces of Jerusalem. Amos. 1. b Jere. 48. b Jere. 9. a.

Thus sayeth the LORDE: for thre and foure wickednesses of Israel, I will not spare hym: because he hath solde the righteous for money, and the poore for shues. They treade vpon poore mens heades in the dust of the earth, and croke the wayes of ỹ meke. The sonne and the father go to the harlot, to dishonoure my holy name: they lye beside euery aulter vpon clothes taken to pledge, and in the house of their goddes they drinke the wyne of the oppressed. yet destroyed I ỹ Amorite before them * that was as hie as ỹ cedre trees, and as stronge as the okes: notwithstondinge I destroyed his frute frō aboue, and his rote from vnder. Amos. 2. b me amonge youre childzen, and abstayners amonge youre yonge men. Is it not so, o ye childzen of Israel, sayeth the LORDE? But ye gaue the abstayners wyne to drynke, & ye commaunded the prophetes, sayenge: Prophecy not. Beholde, I wil crasshe you vnder, lyke as a wayne crasshyth, that is full of sheaues, so that the swifte shall not escape, neither the stronge be able to do ony thynge, no, the giaunte shall not saue his owne lyfe. The archer shal not abyde, and he that is fote shall not escape. The horsman shal not saue his lyfe, and he that is as man hy stomach as a giaunte, shal in that daye be fayne to flynne his waye naked, saieth the LORDE.

The.iii.Chapter.

HEare what the LORDE speaketh vnto you (o ye childzen of Israel) namely, vnto all the trybes, whom I brought out of Egipte, and sayde you only haue I accepted from all the generations of the earth: therfore will I vysett you in youre wickednesse. Maye two wayne walke together excepte they be agreed amonge them selues? Doth a lyon roare in the wode, excepte he haue a praye? Or crieth a lyons whelpe out of his denne, excepte he haue gotten somthinge? Doth a byrde fall in a snare vpon the earth where no fowler is? Taketh a man his snare vp from the grounde, afore he catche somwhat? Crie they out therein with the trompet in the cite, and the people not afrayed? Cōmeth there ony plage in a cite, without it be the LORDES doynge? Nowe doth the LORDE God no maner of thynge, but he telleth his secrete counsell vnto his seruauntes the prophetes. When a lyon roareth, who will not be afrayed? Seynge then that the LORDE God hymself speaketh, who will not prophecye?

Preach in the palaces at Asshod, and in the palaces of the londe of Egipte, and saye gather you together vpon the mountaynes of Samaria, so shall ye se greate murthur, and violent oppression amonge them: for why, they regarde not the thynge that is right, saieth the LORDE, they gather together euel gotten goodes, and laye vp rob bery in theyr houses.

Therfore thus saieth the LORDE God: This londe shalbe troubled and besieged to wide about, thy strength shalbe pluckte from the, and thy palaces robbed. Thus saieth the LORDE: lyke as an hyrdeman taketh two legges or a pece of an eare out of the lyons mouth: Euen so the childzen of Israel (that dwell in Samaria, hauynge theyr couches in the corner, and theyr beddes at Damascus) shalbe pluckte awaye.

* Heare and beare recorde in the house of Iacob (sayeth the LORDE God of hoostes) that when I begynne to vysett the wickednesse of Israel, I will vysett the aulters at Bethel also: so that the hornes of the aulter shalbe broken of, and fall to the grounde. 4.re.16.17

As for the wynter house, & sommer house I will smyte them downe: and the houses of yuery, yee and many other houses shall perish, and be destroyed saieth the LORDE.

The.iiii.Chapter.

HEare this worde, o ye fat kyne, that be vpon the hill of Samaria: ye that do poore men wronge, and oppresse the needy, ye that saye to youre lordes: bynge by ther, let vs drynke. Therfore the LORDE hath sworne by his holynesse: The dayes shal come vpon you, that ye shalbe lift vpon speares, and youre posterite caried awaye in fysher pannes. Ye shall get you out at the gappes one after another, and in Hermon shall ye be cast awaye, saieth the LORDE.

Ye came to * Bethel for to worke vngracyousnes, and haue increased youre synnes at * Galgal: ye braught youre sacrifices in the morninge, and youre tythes vnto the thirde daye, ye made a thanckofferinge of leuen, ye promysed freewilloffrynges, and proclaimed them. Such lust had ye, o ye childzen of Israel, saieth the LORDE God. Therfore haue I geuen you pouertie in all youre cities, and scarcenesse of bread in all youre places: yet will ye not turne vnto me, saieth the LORDE. When there were but thre monethes vnto the haruest, * I withelde the rayne from you: yee I rayned vpon one cite, and not vpon another: one pece of grounde was mysturd with rayne, and the grounde that I rayned not vpon, was dyre. Wherefore two (yee thre) cites came vnto one to drynke water: but they were not satisfyed, yet will ye not turne vnto me saieth the LORDE.

I haue smytten you with drouth and blastinge: and loke how many orchardes, vineyardes, fygge trees ye had: the caterpiller hath eaten the vp. But yet will ye not turne vnto me, saieth the LORDE. Yee I haue sent amonge you, as I vsed to Therfore, thus will I handle the agayne (O Israel) yee euen thus will I handle the. Make the ready then to mete thy God, o Israel. For lo, he maketh the mountaynes, he ordeneth the wynde, he sheweth man what he is aboute to do: he maketh the morynge and the darckenesse, he treadeth vpon the hye places of the earth: the LORD God of hoostes is his name.

The.v. Chapter.

HEare this worde (o ye house of Israel) and why: I must make this mone for you: The virgin Israel shall fall, and neuer ryse vp agayne: she shalbe cast downe vpon hir owne grounde, & no man shall helpe his vp. For thus saieth the LORD God: Where as there dwelt an. M. in one cite, there shalbe left scarce an. C. the rest: and where there dwelt an. C. there shall scarce ten be left for the house of Israel. Neuertheles, thus saieth the LORD vnto the house of Israel: Seke after me, and ye shall lyue, but seke not after Bethel. Come not at Galgal, and go not to Barsabe: for Galgal shall be caried awaye captyue, and Bethel shall come to naught. Seke the LORD that ye maye lyue: lest the house of Joseph be brent with fyre and consumed, and lest there be none to quench Bethel.

ye turne the lawe to worme wood, and cast downe rightuousnes vnto the grounde * The LORD maketh the .vii. starres and the Orions, he turneth the night in to day, and of the daye he maketh darcknesse. * He calleth the waters of the sea, and poureth them out vpon the plane grounde: the LORD is his name. He rayseth destruction vpon the mightie people, and bringeth downe the stronge holde: but they owe him euell will, that reproueth them openly: and whoso telleth them the playne truth, they abhorre him. For for so muche then as ye oppresse the poore, and robbe him of his best sustenaunce: * therfore, where as ye haue buylded houses of square stone, ye shal not dwell in the. Maruelous pleasaunt vynedes shal ye plante, but the wine of them shal ye not drynke: and why? as for the multitude of youre wickednesses and youre sore synnes, I knowe them right well. Enemies are ye of the rightuous, * ye take rewardes, ye oppresse the poore in iudgment. Therfore the wise must now be layne to holde his tunge, so wicked a tyme is it.

Job.9.b. Am.5.b. Deu.28.c Zeph.1.d. Gen. 6. Psal. Dan.

Nay no (saieth the LORD God, the God of hoostes) there shalbe mournynge in all stretes, yee they shal saye in euery strete: alas, alas. They shal call the husbande man to lamentacion, & such as can mourne, to mournynge. In all vynyardes there shalbe heuynesse, for I will come amonge you, saieth the LORD. Wo be vnto them that desyre the daye of the LORD Wherfore wolde ye haue it? As for that daye of the LORD, it shalbe darcke, and not cleare. yee lyke as when a man runneth from a lyon, and a Beer meeteth with him: or, when he commeth in to the house, and leaneth his honde vpon the wall, a serpent byteth him. * Shall not the daye of the LORD be darcke, and not cleare? shall it not be cloudy, and no shyne in it?

Psal. Prou.

* I hate and abhorre youre holy dayes, and where as ye cense me when ye come together, I will not accepte it. And though ye offre me burnofferinges and meatofferinges, yet haue I no pleasure therin: As for youre fat thankofferynges, I will not loke vpon them. Awaye with that noyse of thy songes, I will not heare thy playes of musyck: but le that equite flowe as the water, and righteousnesse as a mightie streame. O ye house of Israel, * gaue ye me offeringes and sacrifices those .xl. yeares longe in the wyldernesse? yet haue ye set vp tabernacles to youre * Moloch, and ymages of youre Idols, yee and the starre of youre God Rempha, figures which ye made to worshippe them. Go vnto Calne, and se: and from thence get you to Hemath the greate cite, and so go downe to Gath of the Philistines: be they better at all then these kyngdomes, or the border of their londe vyder then yours? ye are taken out for the euel daye, euen ye that syt in the stole of wylfulnesse: ye that lye vpō beddes of yuory, and vse youre wantonnesse vpon youre couches: ye that eate the best lambes of the flocke, and the fattest calues of the droue: * ye that synge to the lute, & inuenge of instrumentes compare youselues vnto Dauid: ye that drynke wyne out of gobletes, and anoynte youre selues with the best oyle, but no man is sory for Iosephs hurte. Therfore now shall ye be the first of them, that shalbe led awaye captyue, and the lusty chere of the wylfull shall come to an ende.

¶ The LORDE God hath swore euē by himself (saieth the LORDE God of hoostes) I hate the pryde of Jacob, and I abhorre his palaces: and I will geue ouer the cite with all that is therin: so that though there remayne ten men in one house, they shall dye. So their nerre kynsfolkes, and the dead burners shall take them, and cary theyr bones, and saye vnto him that is in the vnnermer house: is there yet ony by the? And he shall answere: they are all gone, holde thy tunge (shall he saye) for they wolde not remembre the name of the LORDE.

Beholde, the LORDE is mynded to smyte the greate houses, so that they shal be all to rente: lytle houses, that they shall cleue in sonder. Who can runne wyth horses, or plowe with oxen vpon the harde rockes of hye? For why, ye haue turned true iudgement in to bytternesse, and the frute of righteousnesse into wormwood: yee euen ye, that reioyce in vayne thynges: ye that saye: Haue not we optayned hornes in oure owne strength? Well, take hede o ye house of Israel, saieth the LORDE God of hoostes: I shall stynge a people vpon you, which shall trouble you, from the waye that goeth vnto Hemath, vnto the broke in the wyldernes.

The.vii.Chapter.

THE LORDE God shewed me A such a vision: beholde, there stode one that made grasshoppers, euen when the corne was shutynge forth, after the kynge had clypte his shepe. Now when they vndertoke to eate vp all the grene thynges in the londe I sayde: O LORDE God, be mercifull, I beseke the: who shulde els helpe vp Jacob that is brought so lowe? So the LORDE was gracious therin, and the LORDE sayde: well, it shall not be. Agayne, the LORDE shewed me this vision: beholde, the LORDE God called the fyre to punysh withal, and it deuoured the greate depe: yee it consumed a parte alredy. Then sayde I: O LORDE God, holde thy honde: for who shulde els helpe vp Jacob, that is brought so lowe? So the LORDE was mercifull therin, and the LORDE God sayde well, it shall not be.

Moreouer, he shewed me this vision, Beholde, the LORDE stode vpon a plastered wall, and * a masons trowell in his honde And the LORDE sayde vnto me: Amos, what seyst thou? I answered: a masons trowell. Then sayde the LORDE: beholde, I will laye the trowell amonge my people of Israel, & will nomore spare the: but the hie hilchappels of Isaac must be layed wayst, & the churches of Israel made desolate: * and as for the house of Jeroboam, I wil stonde vp agaynst it with the swearde. Vpon this sent Amasias the preest to Bethel vnto Jeroboam the kynge of Israel, sayenge, * Amos maketh the house of Israel to rebel agaynst the, the londe can not awaye with his wordes. For Amos saieth Jeroboam shall dye with the swearde, and Israel shall be led awaye captyue out of theyr owne londe. And Amasias sayde vnto Amos, Gett the hence * thou that canst se so well and flye in to the lōde of Juda, get the there thy liuynge, & prophecy there: prophecy nomore at Bethel, for it is the kynges chappel, & the kynges courte.

Amos answered, and sayde to Amasias: * Is for me, I am nether prophet, nor prophetes sonne: but a keper of catell. Now as I was breakynge downe molberies, and goynge after the catell, the LORDE toke me, and sayde vnto me: Go thy waye, and prophecy vnto my people of Israel. And therfore, heare thou now the worde, of the LORDE. Thou sayest: prophecy not agaynst Israel, and speake nothynge agaynst the house of Isaac. Wherfore thus, saieth the sured out with the lyne: Thou thy self shalt 4.m.17.e. dye in an vnclene londe, * and Israel shal

be dryuen out of his owne countre.

The.viii. Chapter.

THe LORDE God shewed me
this vision: and beholde, there was a maunde with sommer frute. And he saide: Amos, what seyst thou? I answered: a maun
de with sommer frute. Then sayde ỹ LOR DE vnto me: the ende commeth vpon my people of Israel, I will nomore spare them.
In that daye shall the songes of the temple
be turned in to sorow, saieth the LORDE
God. Many dead bodyes shall lye in euery
Ose.5.d. place, and be cast forth secretly. * Heare
this, O ye that oppresse the poore, and destrope the nedy in the londe, sayenge: When will the new moneth be gone, that we maye
sell vytale, and the Sabbath, that we maye
haue scarnesse of corne: to make the bushell
lesse, and the Sycle greater: We shall set vp false waygh̄tes, that we maye get the poore vnder vs with theyr money, and the nedy also for shues: yee let vs sell the chaffe

Amo.6.b. * The LORDE hath swore agaynst
the pryde of Jacob: these workes of theyrs

tremble, and al they that dwel therin, mour
ne for this: Shall not theyr destruction come vpon them lyke a water streame, and
B flowe ouer them, as the floude of Egypte?
Amo.15.b. * At the same tyme (sayeth the LORDE

Jere.6.b. mournynge will I sende them, * as is made vpon an onely begotten sonne, and they shall haue a miserable ende.

Beholde, the tyme commeth (sayeth the LORDE God) that I shall sende an hunger in to the earth: not the hunger of bread
nor the thirst of water: but an hunger to hea
re the worde of the LORDE: so that they shall go from ỹ one sea to ỹ other, yea from ỹ
north vnto the east, runnynge aboute to se-

vp agayne.

The.ix. Chapter.

I Sawe the LORDE standin-
ge vpon the aulter, and he say-
de: smyte the dore cheke, that ỹ postes maye shake withall. For theyr couetousnesse shal fal vp
on all theyr heades, & theyr posterite shal-be slayne with the swearde. * They shall not flye away, there shal not one of them escape, nor be delyuered. * Though they were re buried in the hell, my honde shall fetch them from thence: though they clymme vp
to heauen, yet shall I cast them downe:
though they hyde them selues vpon the top
pe of Carmel, yet shall I seke them out, and bryng them from thence: Though they crepe downe fro my syght in to the depe, of the see, I shall commaunde the serpente,
euen there to byte them. * If they go awaye
before theyr enemies in to captiuyte, then shall I commaunde the swearde, there to slaye them.

Thus will I set myne eyes vpon them,
for theyr harme and not for theyr wealth.
For when the LORDE God of hoostes tou
cheth a londe, it consumeth awaye, and all
they that dwell therin, must nedes mourne:
And why? theyr destruction shall aryse as euery streame, and runne ouer them, as the floude in Egipte. * He that hath his dwel-linge in heauen, and groundeth his taberna
cle in the earth. * He that calleth the waters of the see, and poureth them out vpon the playne grounde, his name is the LORDE
O ye children of Israel, are ye not vnto me
euen as the Moryans, sayeth the LORDE?
haue not I brought Israel out of the londe and the Syrians from Cyr? Beholde the eyes of the LORDE are vpon the realme that synneth, to rote it clene out of ỹ earth: Neuertheles, * I will not vtterly destrop the house of Jacob, saieth the LOR-

What Abdy conteyneth.

1 He prophesyeth agaynst the pryde & crueltie of the Edomytes, that dyd set the Israelites in their aduersyte. He sheweth, what plages shall come vpon them.

Thou shalt nomore se the daye of thy brether, thou shalt nomore beholde the tyme of his captiuyte: thou shalt nomore retoyse ouer the childzen of Juda, in the daye of theyr destruccion, thou shalt tryumphe nomore in the tyme of theyr trouble. Thou shalt nomore come in at the gates of my people, in the tyme of theyr decaye: thou shalt not se theyr mysery in the daye of their fall.

Thou shalt sende out no man agaynst theyr hoost, in the daye of theyr aduersyte: nother shalt thou stonde waytinge onym ore at the corners of the stretes, to murthur such as are fled, or to take them prisoners, that remayne in the daye of theyr trouble. For the daye of the LORDE is harde by vpō all Heythen. * Lyke as thou hast done, so shalt thou be dealte withall, yee thou shalt be rewarded euen vpon thine heade. For lyke wyse as ye haue dronken vpon myne holy hil, so shal al Heythen dzynke continually: yee dzynke shall they, and swalowe vp, so that ye shall be, as though ye had neuer bene.

The Prophet Jonas.

What Jonas conteyneth.

Chap. i. God sendeth Jonas into Tharsis to preyth, and he rasi in to the se.

Chap. ii. A fysh swalowith vp Jonas, who crieth vnto God, and prayseth hym, and the fysh sheth him out agayne vpon the lande.

Chap. iii. God sendeth agayne to Ninive, to shew them the punyshment for to come, if they do not repent: they amende, and God is mercifull vnto them.

Chap. iiii. Jonas is angry, and complayneth of God, which reformeth him.

The.first.Chapter

The worde of the LORDE came vnto * Jonas the sonne of Amithay, sayenge: * Aryse, and get the to Niniue that * great cite: and preach vnto the, how that their wickednesse is come before me. But Jonas made hym redy to flye vnto Tharsis from the presence of the LORDE and went hym downe to Joppa: where he found a shippe redy for to go vnto Tharsis. And he payed his fare, and went aborde, that he might go with them vnto Tharsis from the presence of the LORDE. But the LORDE hurled a greate wynde in to the see, and there was a mightie tempest in the see, so that the shippe was in iopardy of breakynge to peces. Then the maryners were afrayed, and cried euery man vnto his God and the goodes that were in the shippe, they cast in to the see, to lighten it of them. But Jonas went hym vnder the hatches, where he layed hym downe and slombred.

So the master of the shippe came to him and sayde vnto hym: why slomberest thou? Arise, call vpon thy God: yf God (happly) will thynke vpon vs, that we perysshe not. And they sayde one to another: come, let vs cast lottes, that we maye knowe, for whose cause this euyll is thus troubled. * And so they cast lottes, and the lot fell vpon Jonas.

Then sayde they vnto hym: tell vs, for whose cause are we thus troubled? what is thy occupacion? whence commest thou? what countreman art thou, and of what people? He answered them: I am an Ebrue and feare the LORDE God, of heauen which made both the see and drye lode. Then were the men exceadyngly afrayed, & sayde vnto hym: why dyddest thou so? (for they knewe that he was fled from the presence of the LORDE, because he had tolde them) and layed vnto hym: What shall we do vnto the, that the see maye ceasse from rysynge vs? (for the see wrought and was troublous) he answered the: Take me, and cast me in to the see, so shall it let you be in rest: for I wote, it is for my sake, that this greate tempest is come vpon you.

Neuertheles, the men assayed with rowynge, to brynge the shippe to londe: but it wolde not be, because the see wrought so, & was so troublous agaynst them. Wherfore they cried vnto the LORDE, and sayde: * O LORDE, let vs not perysshe for this mans death, nother laye thou innocent blode vnto oure charge: for thou (O LORDE) hast done, euen as thy pleasure was. Deu. 21.b.

So they toke Jonas, and cast hym in to the see, and the see lefte ragynge. And the men feared the LORDE exceadyngly, doynge sacrifices, and makynge vowes vnto the LORDE.

The.ii.Chapter.

But the LORDE prepared a greate fysshe to swalow vp Jonas. * So was Jonas in the belly of the fysh, thre dayes, and thre nyghtes. And Jonas prayed vnto the LORDE his God, out of the fysshes belly, and sayed: * In my trouble I called vnto the LORDE, and he herde me: out of the belly of hell I cried, and thou herdest my voyce. Thou dyddest cast me downe depe in: the floudes of the see, and the floude compassed me aboute: yee * all thy wawes and rowles of water went ouer me, I thought that I had bene cast awaye out of thy syght: but I will yet agayne loke towarde thy holy temple. Mat. 12.b Psa. 119.a. Psa. 41.b

The waters compassed me, euen to the very soule: the depe laye aboute me, and the wedes were wrapte aboute myne heade. I went downe to the botome of the hilles, and was barred in with earth forener. But thou (O LORDE my God) hast brought vp my lyfe agayne out of corrupcio. When my soule fainted wythin me, I thought vpon the LORDE: and my prayer came in vnto the, euen in to thy holy temple. They that holde of vayne vanyties, will forsake his mercy. But I wyll do sacrifice vnto the voyce of thankesgeuynge, and will paye that I haue vowed: for why? saluacion commeth of the LORDE. And the LORDE spake vnto the fysh, and it cast out Jonas agayne vpon the drye londe.

The.iii. Chapter.

3 Then came the worde of ꝑ LORD vnto Jonas agayne, sayenge: * vp, and get the to Ninive that greate cite, & preach vnto the ꝑ preachinge, which I bad the. So Jonas arose, and wente to Ninive at the LORDES commaundement. Ninive was a greate cite vnto God, namely, of thre dayes iourney. Jone. 1.a.

And Jonas wente to, and entred in to the cite: euen a dayes iourney, and cried, sayenge: There are yet .xl. dayes, and then shall Ninive be ouerthrowen. * And the people of Ninive beleued God, and proclamed fastynge, and arayed them selues in sackcloth, as well the greate as the small of them. And the tydinges came vnto the kynge of Ninive, which arose out of his seate, and putt his apparell of, & put on sackcloth, and satt hym downe in ashes. Esa.37.a.

8 And it was cried, and commaunded in Ninive, by the auctorite of the kynge, and his lordes, sayenge: * se that nother man or beast, ore nor shepe, tayst ought at all: & that they nother fede nor drynke water: but put on sackcloth both man and beast, and crye myghtely vnto God: * yee se that euerymā turne from his euill waye, and from the wickednesse, that he hath in honde. Matth.12.d Luce.11.c. Jere.18.a.

Who can tell? God maye turne, and repente, and ceasse from his fearce wrath, that we perysh not. And when God sawe theyr workes, how they turned from theyr wicked wayes: * he repented on the euell, which he sayde he wolde do vnto them, and dyd it not. Esa.38.b

1 Wherfore Jonas was sore discontent, and angrie. And he prayed vnto the LORDE, and sayde: O LORDE, was not this my sayenge (I praye the) when I was yet in my countre? therfore I hasted rather to flye vnto Thacis, * for I knewe well ynough that thou art a mercifull God full of compassion, longe sufferinge, and of greate kyndnesse, and repentest when thou shuldest take punyshment. * And now O LORDE, take my lyfe fro me (I beseche the) for I had rather dye then lyue. Then sayde the LORDE: art thou so angrie? And Jonas gat hym out of the cite, and sat downe on the east syde therof: and there made hym a bouth, and sat vnder it in the shadow, till he myght se, what shulde chaunce vnto the cite.

And the LORDE God prepared a wylde vine, which sprange vp ouer Jonas, that he myght haue shadowe aboue his heade, to delyuer hym out of his payne, & Jonas was exceadinge glad of ꝑ wylde vyne. But vpon the nexte morow agaynst the sprynge of the daye, the LORDE ordened a worme, which smote the wylde vyne, so that it withered a waye. And when the Sonne was vp, God prepared a feruent east wynde, and the Sonne bete ouer the heade of Jonas, that he faynted agayne, and wyshed vnto his soule, that he might dye, and sayde: It is better for me to dye, then to lyue. And God sayde vnto Jonas: Art thou so angrie for the wylde vyne. And he saide: yee very angrie am I euen vnto death. And the LORDE sayde, thou hast compassion vpon a wilde vyne wherō thou bestowedest no labour, nor maydest it growe: which sprange vp in one nyght, and perysshed in another: And shulde not I then haue compassion vpon Ninive that greate cite, wherin there are aboue an.C.and.xx.thousande persones, that knowe not theyr right honde from theyr lefte, beysdes much cattell

The Prophet Micheas.

What Micheas contryneth.

i. The reproueth the people of Israel, and Iuda for their wickednesse and Idolatry: he telleth them their punyshment with moue ouer.

ii. He reherseth their abhominations

iii. He reproueth the rulers, and the prophetes, as cause of the peoples misery.

iiii. He prophecyeth of the saluacion of Gods people in Christ, of his kyngdome, and power of his gospel.

v. Another reproue. Outwarde offerings are excluded, and here is declared what God requyreth of man.

vi. The somme of the thynges before sayde. The like stocke of the faythfull.

The.i.rst. Chapter

THis is the worde of the LORDE that came vnto Micheas the Morasthite, in the dayes of * Iotham, * Achas and * Ezechias kynges of Iuda: which he sawe vpon Samaria and Ierusalem.

Heare all ye people * marcke this well o earth, and all that therin is: yea the LORD God hymselfe be witnesse amonge you the LORDE from his holy temple. For beholde, * the LORDE shal come of his place, and come downe, and tread vpon the hye thynges of the earth. The mountaynes shal consume vnder him and the valleys shall cleue asunder: lyke as the waxe melteth at the fyre, & as the waters runne downe. And all this shal be for the wickednesse of Iacob, and for the synnes of the house of Israel.

For what is the wickednesse of Iacobe

Is not * Samaria? Which are the hye places of Iuda: Is not * Ierusalem? Therefore shall I make Samaria an heape of stones in the felde, to laye aboute the vinyarde hir stones shall I cast in to the valley, and discouer hir foundacions. All hir ymages shalbe broken downe, and all hir wynnynges shalbe brent in the fyre: yea al hir Idols will I destroye: for why, * they are gathered out of the hyre of an whore, & in to an whores hyre shal they be turned agayne. Wher fore I will mourne, and make lamentacion, bare, and naked will I go: I must mourne lyke the dragons, and take sorow as the Estriches: for their wounde is past remedy And why? it is come in to Iuda, and hath touched the porte of my people at Ierusalem alredy. * Wepe not, lest they at Gath perceaue it.

Thou at Beraphra, welter thy selfe in the dust and ashes. Thou that dwellest at Sephyr, get the hence with shame. The proude shall boast nomore for very sorowe: and why? hir neighboure shall take from her what she hath. The rebellious cite hopeth, that it shall not be so euell: but for all that, the plage shall come from the LORDE, euen in to the porte of Ierusalem. The greate noyse of the charetes shall feare them, that dwell at * Lachis, which is an occasion of the synne of the doughter of Sion, for in the came vp the wickednesse of Israell. yee she sent hir coursers in to the londe of Gath.

The houses of lyes will deceaue the kynges of Israel. And as for the (o thou that dwellest at Morasta) I shall bringe a possessionar vpon the, and the plage of Israel shall reach vnto Odolla. Make the balde, and shaue the, because of thy tender children: Make the cleane balde as an aegle, for they shalbe caried awaye captyue from the.

The.ii.Chapter.

WO vnto them, that ymagyn to do harme, and deuyse vngraciousnesse vpon their beddes, to perfourme it in the cleare daye: for their power is against God. When they couet to haue lode, * they take it by violence, they robbe men of their houses.

Thus they oppresse a man for his house & euery mā for his heritage. Therfore thus saieth the LORD: Beholde, * against this housholde haue I deuyded a plage, wherout ye shal not plucke youre neckes: ye shal nomore go so proudly, for it will be a perlous tyme. In that daye shall this terme be vsed, and a mournynge shall be made ouer you on this maner: We be vtterly desolate the portion of my people is translated. Whan will he parte vnto vs the londe, that he hath taken from vs.

3 Neuertheles * there shalbe noman to Nu. 33.f. deuyde the thy portion in the congregacion of the LORDE, Tush, holde youre tunge (saye they) It shall not fall vpon this people, we shall not come so to confusion, sayeth the house of Jacob. Is the spyrite of the LORDE so clene awaye? or is he so mynded? Treuth it is, my wordes are frendly vnto them that lyue right: but my people doth the contrary, therfore must I take parte agaynst them: for they take awaye both cote, and cloke, from the symple.

4 Ye haue turned youre selues to fyght, the women of my people haue ye shot out from theyr good houses, and taken awaye my excellent giftes, from theyr chyldren 5 Vp, get you hence, for here shall ye haue no rest.

Because of theyr Idolatry they are corrupte, and shall myserably perysh. 6 Yf I were a fleshly felowe, and a preacher of lyes and tolde them, that they myght lyue bedbynge and bollynge, and be dronken: O that we se a prophet for this people.

7 But I will gather the in dede (o Jacob) and dryue the remnaunt of Israel all together. I shall cary them one with another, as a flocke in the folde, and as the catell in theyr stalles, that they maye be disquieted of other men.

8 Who so breaketh the gappe, he shall go before. They shall breake vp the porte, and go in and out at it. Theyr kynge shall go before them, and the LORDE shalbe vpon the heade of them.

The.iij. Chapter.

1 HEare o ye heades of the house of Jacob and ye leders, of the house of Israel: * Shulde not ye knowe, what were lawfull, and right? 2 But ye hate the good and loue the euell: ye plucke of mens skynnes, and the flesh from theyr bones: 3 ye eate the flesh of my people, and flay of theyr skynne: ye breake theyr bones, ye choppe them in peces as it were in to a cauldron, and as flesh in to a pot. 4 Now the tyme shall come, that * when they cal vnto the LORDE, he shall not heare them, but hyde his face from them: because that thorow theyr owne ymagynacions, they haue dealt so wickedly.

Deu.17.b. Jere.5.a & 20.f.21.a Esa.5.c.

5 And as concernynge the prophetes that deceaue my people, thus the LORDE sayeth agaynst them. * When they haue anythynge to byte vpon, then they preach that all shalbe well: but yf a man put not some thig in to their mouthes, they preach warre agaynst hym.

6 * Therfore youre vision shalbe turned to nyght, and youre prophesyenge to darknesse. The sonne shall go downe ouer those prophetes, and the daye shalbe darcke vnto them. 7 Then shall the visionseyers be ashamed, and the soothsayers confounded: yee they shalbe fayne (all the packe of them) to stoppe theyr mouthes, for they haue not Gods worde. 8 * As for me, I am full of strength, and of the spryte of the LORDE, full of iudgment, and boldnesse: to shewe the house of Jacob theyr wickednesse, and the house of Israel theyr synne.

9 O heare this ye rulers of the house of Jacob, and ye iudges of the house of Israel: ye that abhorre the thynge that is lawfull, and wrast alyde the thynge that is straight. 10 * Ye that buylde vp Syon, with bloude, and Jerusalem with doynge wronge. 11 * O ye iudges, ye geue sentence for gifts: O ye prestes, ye teach for lucre: * O ye prophetes, ye prophecy for money. Yet will they be taken as those that holde vpon God and saye: Is not the LORDE amonge vs? Tush, there can no misfortune happen vnto vs. 12 * Therfore shall Syon (in youre sakes) be plowed lyke a felde: * Jerusalem shall become an heape of stones, and the hill of the temple, shall be turned to an hye woode.

The.iiij. Chapter.

1 BUt * in the latter dayes it will come to passe, that the hyl of the LORDES house shalbe set vp hyer then ony mountaynes or hilles: yee the people shall prease vnto it, 2 and the multitude of the Gentiles shall hast them thyther, sayenge: Come, let vs go vp to the hill of the LORDE and to the house of the God of Jacob: that he maye teach vs his waye, and that we

ste in his pathes.
* For the lawe shall come out of Syon, and the worde of God from Jerusalem and shall geue sentence amonge the multitude of the heythen, and reforme the people off farr countrees: so that of theyr sweardes they shall make plowshares, and sythes off theyr speares.
One people shall not lift vp a swearde against another, yee they shall nomore learne to fight: but euery man shall sytt vnder his vynearde and vnder his figgetre, and no man to fraye hym awaye: for the mouth of the LORDE of hoostes hath spoken it. Therfore, where as all people walke euery man in the name of his owne God, we will walke in the name of oure God for euer and euer. * At the same tyme (sayeth the LORDE) will I gather the lame and the outcastes, and such as I have chastened: and will geue yssue vnto the lame, and make of the outcastes a great people: * and the LORDE hymselfe shall reigne vpon the mount Sion, from this tyme forth for euermore. And vnto (O thou tower of * Eder, thou stronge holde of the doughter Syon) vnto the shall come: euen the fyrst lordshippe, and kyngdome of the doughter Jerusalem.
Why then art thou now so heuy? is there a kynge in the? are thy councelers awaye that thou art so payned, as a woman in hyr trauayle?
And now (o thou doughter Syon) be trauayled, and labour inge, as a childe: for now must thou get the out of the cite, and dwell vpon the playne felde: for vnto Babylon shalt thou go, there shalt thou be deliuered, * and there the LORDE shall lowse the from the honde of thyne enemyes.
Now also are there many people gathered together against the, sayenge: what Syon is cursed, we shall se oure lust vpon her. But they knowe not the * thoughtes of the LORDE, they vnderstonde not his councell, that shall gather them together as the sheaues in the barne. Therfore aryse vp (o thou doughter Syon) and thresshe out the corne: for I will make thy horne yron, and thy clawes brasse, that thou mayest stynde many people: theyr goodes shalt thou appropriate vnto the LORDE and theyr substaunce vnto the ruler of the whole worlde.

The v Chapter.

After that shalt thou be robbed thy self, o thou robbers doughter: they shall laye sege agaynst vs, and smyte the iudge of Israel with a rodde vpon the cheke. * And thou Bethleem Ephrata art litle amonge the thousandes of Juda. Out of the shall come one vnto me, which shalbe the gouernoure in Israel: whose outgoinge hath bene from the begynnynge, and from euerlastynge. In the meane whyle he plageth them for a season, vntill the tyme that she (which shall beare) have borne. then shal the remnaunt of his brethren be conuerted vnto the chyldren of Israel. He shall stonde fast, and * geue fode in the strength of the LORDE, and in the victory of the name of the LORDE his God: and when they be conuerted, he shalbe magnified vnto the farthest partes of the worlde.
Then shall there be peace, so that the Assirian maye come in to oure londe, and treade in oure houses. We shall brynge vp seuen shepherdes and viii. princes vpon them: these shall subdue the londe of * Nymrod with theyr naked weapens. * Thus shall he delyuer vs from the Assirian, when he commeth within oure lande, and setteth his fote within oure borders. And the remnaunt of Jacob shall be amonge the multitudes of people, as the dew of the LORDE, and as the droppes vpon the grasse, that taryeth for no man, and wayteth of no body.
* yee the residue of Jacob shalbe amonge the Gentiles, and the multitude of people, as the lyon amoge the beastes of the woode, and as the lions whelpe amonge a flocke of shepe: which (when he goeth thorow) treadeth down, rendeth in peces, & there is none that can helpe. Thyne hode shalbe lift vp vpon thyne enemyes, and all thyne aduersaries shall perish.
The tyme shall come also (sayeth the LORDE) that I will take thyne horses from the, and destroye thy charettes. I will breake downe the gates of thy londe, and ouerthorowe all thy stronge holdes. * All witchecraftes will I rote out of thyne hande, there shall no mo sorthsayengers be wythyn the. * Thyne Idols, and thyne ymages will I destroye out of the, so that thou shalt nomore bowe thy self vnto the workes of thyne owne hodes. Thy groues will I plucke vp by the rotes, and breake downe thy cities. Thus will I be auenged also, vpon all Heythen that will not heare.

The.vi.Chapter.

Esa.42. HEare now what the LORDE saieth: * Vp, reproue the mountaynes, and let the hilles heare thy voyce. O heare the punyshment of the LORDE ye mountaynes, and ye myghty foundacions of the earth: for the LORDE will reproue his people, and reason with Israel: O my people, what haue I done to the? or wherin haue I hurte the? geue me answere. * Because I brought the from the londe of Egipte, and deliuered the out of the house of bondage? * Because I made Moses, Aaron, and Miriam to lede the? Remembre (o my people) * what Balach the kynge of Moab had ymagined agaynst the, and what answere that Balaam the sonne of Beor gaue hym, from Sethim vnto Galgal: that ye maye knowe the louynge kyndnesses of the LORDE.

Gen.19.8. Num.12.a. Num.22.23. 24.25.

WHat acceptable thynge shall I offre vnto the LORDE? shall I bowe my kne to the hye God? Shall I come before hym with burntofferinges, and with calues of a yeare olde? Hath the LORDE a pleasure in many thousand rammes, or innumerable streames of oyle? Or shall I geue my fyrstborne for myne offences, and the frute of my body for the synne of my soule? I will shewe the (O man) what is good, and what the LORDE requyreth of the: Namely, to do right, to haue pleasure in louynge kyndnesse, to be lowly, and to walke with thy God: * that thou mayest be called arte of the LORDE, and that thy name maye be rightuousnesse. Heare (o ye tribes) who wolde els geue you such warnynge? * Shulde I not be displeased, for the vnrighteous good in the houses of the wicked, and because the measure is minished? Or shulde I iustifie the false balaunces and the bagge of deceatfull weightes amonge those that be ful of vices vnrightuously gotten: where the cityzens deale with falsehede, speake lyes, and haue deceatfull tunges in their mouthes?

The.vii.Chapter

WO is me: I am become as one, I that goeth a gleenyge in the haruest. There are no mo grapes to eate, yet wolde I fayne (with all my harte) haue of the best frute. * There is not a godly man vpon earth, there is not one rightwous amonge men. They laboure all to shed bloude, & euery man hunteth his brother to death: yet they saye they do well, when they do euell. As the prynce will, so saieth the iudge: that he maye do hym a pleasure agayne. The greate man speaketh what his harte desyreth, and the iudges alowe hym. The best of them is but as a thistle, and the moost rightwous of them is but as a briere in the hedge. But when the daye of thy preachers commeth, that thou shalt be vysited, then shall they be wayfled awaye. * Let no man beleue his frende, nor put his confidence in a prynce. Kepe the porte of thy mouth, from her that lyeth in thy bosome: * for the sonne shall put his father to dishonoure, the doughter shall ryse agaynst her mother, the doughter in lawe agaynst hyr mother in lawe: and a mans foes shalbe euen they of his owne household.

THys is the heuy burthen of Nintue, whiche Naum of Elchos dyd wryte, as he sawe it.

* (*) *
* X *

THE LORDE is a gelous God, and a taker of vengeaunce: yee a taker of vengeaunce is the LORDE, & wrothfull. * The LORDE taketh vengeaunce of his enemies, and reserueth displeasure for hys aduersaries. * The LORDE suffreth longe, he is of greate power, & so innocent that he leaueth no mã vnpunished before him. The LORDE goeth forth in tempest & storme, the cloudes are the dust of hys fete. When he rebuketh the see, he dryeth it vp, and turneth all the floudes to drye londe. Basan is desolate, Carmel and the pleasure of Libanus wasteth awaye. The mountaynes tremble for him, the hilles consume. At þ sight of him, the earth quaketh: yee þ whole worlde, and all that dwell therin. * Who maye endure before his wrath? Or who is able to abyde hys grymme displeasure? His anger taketh on lyke fyre, and the harde rockes burst in sunder before him.

Deu.5.b. Ro.2.a. Exo.34.a Ioel.3.b. Ie.v.10.b. Esa.34.a Abac.3.c. Soph.3.b.

Ful gracious is the LORDE, & a stronge holde in tyme of trouble, he knoweth thẽ that put their trust in him: when the floude renneth ouer, and destroyeth the place, and when the darcknesse folowyth still vpon his enemies. What do ye ymagin then agaynst the LORD on this maner? (Tush, when he hath made an ende, there shall come no more trouble.) For lyke as the thornes that stycke together, & as the drye strawe, so shall the dronkardes be consumed together, euen when they be full. There come out of þ such as ymagin myscheefe, and geue vngracious counsell agaynst the LORDE.

Therfore thus saieth the LORDE: Let them be as well prepared, yee and as many as they can, yet shall they be hewen downe, and passe awaye. And as for the, I will vexe the. but not vtterly destroye the. And now will I breake his rodde from thy backe, and burst thy bondes in sonder. But þ LORDE hath geuen a commaundement concernyng the, that there shall come nomore sede of thy name. * The carued and caste ymages will I rote out of þ house of thy God. Thy grauе shall I prepare for the, and thou shalt be confounded.

The.ii. Chapter.

BEholde, * vpon the mountaynes I come the fete of him, that bryngeth good tidinges, & preacheth peace. O Iuda, kepe thy holy dayes, performe thy vowes: for Belial shall come nomore in the, he is vtterly rooted out. Esa.52.a

The stamerer shal come vp agaynst the, & laye sege to the castell. Loke thou well to the stretes, make thy loynes stronge, arme thy self with all thy myght: for the LORD shal restore agayne the glory of Iacob, like as þ glory of Israel. The destroyers haue broken them downe, & marred the vyne braunches. The shylde of hys giauntes glistereth, hys men of warre are clothed in purple. His charrettes are as fyre, when he maketh him forwarde, his archers are wel dekte & trymmed. The charettes rolle vpon the stretes, & meter in the hye wayes. They are to loke vpon like cressettes of fyre, and go swyftly, as the lightenynge.

When he doth but warne his giauntes, they fall in their araye, & hastely they clymme vp the walles: yet the engyns of þ warre are prepared all ready. The water gates shall be opened, and the kynges palace shall fall. The quene hir self shal be led awaye captyue, and hir gentilwomen shall mourne as the doues, & grone within their harts. * Yet Ninyue is like a poule full of water, but the shal they be fayne to flye. Stode, stode, (shal they crie) & there shal not one turne backe. Awaye with the syluer, awaye with þ golde: for here is no ende of treasure. There shalbe a multitude of all maner costly ornamentes. Thus must she be spoyled, emptied & clene stryped out: that their hartes maye be melted awaye, their knees trẽble, all their loynes be weake, and their faces blacke as a pot. Na.3.a

Where is now the dwellinge of the lyes, and the pasture of the lyons whelpes? where the lyon and the lyonesse went with the whelpes, and no man frayed them awaye. But the lyon spoyled ynough for his ponge ones, and deuoured for hys lyonesse: he filled his dẽnes with his pray, & his dwellinge place with that he had rauyshed. Behalde, I will vpõ the (saieth the LORDE of hoostes) and wil set fyre vpõ thy charettes, that they shall smoke withall, and þ sworde shal deuoure thy ponge lyons. I will make an ende of thy spoylinge from out of the earth, and the voyce of thy messaungers shall nomore be herde.

The.iii.Chapter.

WO * to that bloudthursty citie, whiche is all ful of lyes and robbery, & will not leaue of from ravyshinge. There a man maye heare scourginge, rushinge, the route of the wheles, the crienge of the hoyses and the rollinge of the charettes. There the horsemen get vp with naked swordes, and glysterynge speares: There lyeth a multitude slayne, and a great heape of dead bodyes: There is no ende of dead coarles, yee me fal vpon their bodies: And that for the greate & manifolde whoredome, of the fayre & beutiful harlot: whiche is a mastresse of which craft yet and selleth the people thorow hir whoredome, and the nacyons thorow hir witchcrafte.

5 Beholde, I will vpon the * (saieth the LORDE of hoostes) and will put thy clothes ouer thy heade: that I maye shewe thy naked shame amonge the Heithen, and thy shame amonge the kyngdomes. I will cast dyrte vpon the, to make the be abhorred, and a gasyngstocke: yee all they that loke vpon the shall starte backe, and saye: Ninive is destroyed.

7 Who will haue ppte vpon the, where shal I fynde one to conforte the? Art thou better then the great citie of Alexandria? that laye in the waters, and had the waters rounde about it: which was strongly fenced & walled with the see? Ethiopia and Egipte were hir strength, & that exceadinge great aboue measure. Aphrica and Lybia were hir helpers, yet was she dryuen awaye, & broughte in captyuite: hir ponge children were smitten downe at the heade of euery strete, the lottes were cast for the moost awncient men therof, and all hir mightie men were bounde in chaynes. Euen so shalt thou also be dronken and hyde thy self, and seke some helpe agaynst thine enemy. All thy stronge citees shall be like fygge trees with rype fygges: whiche when a man shaketh, they fall in to the mouth of the eater.

Beholde, thy people within the are but women: the portes of thy londe shall be opened vnto thine enemies, and the fyre shal deuoure thy barres. Draw the water now against thou be beseged, make vp thy stronge holdes, go in to the claye, tempre the morter, make stronge bricke: * yet the fyre shal consume the, the swearde shall destroye the, yee as the locuste doth, so shall it eate the vp. It shall fall heuely vppon the as the locustes, yee right heuely shall it fall vpon the, euen as the grel hoppers. Thy marchauntes haue bene mo then the starres of heaue: but now shall they spreade abrode as the locustes, and flye their waye: Thy lordes are as the grashoppers, & thy captaynes as the multitude of grashoppers: which when they be colde, remayne in the hedges: but when the sonne is vp, they flye awaye, and no man can tell where they are become. Thy shepherdes are aslepe (o kyng of Assur) thy worthies are layed down thy people is scatred abrode vpon the mountaynes, and no mā gathereth them together agayne. Thy woūde can not be hyd, thy plage is so sore. All they that heare this of the, shal clappe their handes ouer the. For what is he, to whome thou hast not alwaye bene doynge hurte?

THis is the heuy burthen, which the prophet Abacuc dyd se.
Psal.21.a. O LORDE,* how longe shal I crie, and thou wilt not heare:
Job.19.a. * How longe shall I complaine vnto the, suffrynge wronge, and thou wilt not helpe? Why letteſt thou me se weerynes se and labour? Tyranny and violence are before me, power ouergoeth right: for the lawe is torne in peces, and there can no right iudgement go forth. And why? the vngodly is more set by then the righteous: this is ꝑ cause, ꝑ wrange iudgemēt procedeth.* Beholde amongest the Heithen, and loke well: wonder at it, and be abasshed: for I will do a thynge in youre tyme, which though it be tolde you ye shall not beleue.
Jer.13.d. * For lo, I will rayse vp the Caldees, ꝑ bytter and swifte people: whiche shall go as wyde as the londe is, to take possession off dwellinge places, that be not their owne. A grymme & boysteous people is it, these shall syt in iudgement and punyshe. Their horses are swifter then the cattes of the mountayn, & byter forer then the* wolues in ꝑ euenynge Their horsmen come by greate heapes trō farre, they flye hastely to deuour as the aegle They come all to spoyle: out of them cōmeth an east wynde, which bloweth and gathereth their captyues, like as the sonde. They shall mocke the kinges, & laugh ꝑ prynces to scorne. They shall not set by ony stronge holde, for they shall laye ordinaunce agaynste it, & take it. Then shall they take a fresh corage vnto them, to go forth & to do more euell, &
Esa.46.a 2.par.28.b so alcrybe that power vnto* their God.
But thou O LORDE my God, my* holy Psal.93.c. Esa.1.a. one, thou art from the begynnynge, therfore shall we not dye. O LORDE, thou hast ordened them for a punyshment, and set them to repreue the mightie. Thine eyes are clene thou mayest not se euell, thou canst not beholde the thinge that is wicked.* Wherfore then dost thou loke vpon the vngodly, and holdest thy tunge, when the wicked deuoureth the man that is better then him selfe Thou makest men as the fysh in the see, and like as the creptnge beastes, ꝑ haue no gyde. They take vp all w̄ their angle, they catch it in their net, and gather it in their yarne: wherof they reioyce and are glad. Therfore offre they vnto their net, and do sacrifice vnto their yarne: because that thorow it their portion is become so fat, and their meate so plenteous. Wherfore they cast out their net agayne, and neuer ceasse to slaye the people.

The.ii. Chapter.

I Stode vpō my watch, & set me vpon my bulwarke, to loke & se what he wolde saye vnto me, & what answere I shulde gene vnto that reproueth me. But LORDE answered me, and sayde: Wryte the vision planely vpon thy tables, that who so cometh by, maye rede it:* for the vision is yet farre of for a time, but at the last it shal come to passe, & not fayle.* And though he tary, yet wait thou for him, for in very dede he will come, and not be slacke. Beholde, who so will not beleue, his soule shal not prospere: but ꝑ *iust shall lyue by his faith. Like as ꝑ wyne deceaueth the dronkarde, euen so the proude shall fayle and not endure. He openeth his desyre wyde vp as the hell, * & is as vnsatiable as death. All Heithen gathereth he to him, & heapeth vnto him all people.
But shal not all these take vp a prouerbe agaynst hym, and mocke him, with a byworde, and saye: Wo vnto him that heapeth to other mens goodes? How longe will he lade himself with thicke claye? O how sodenly will they stonde vp, that shall byte the, & awake, that shall teare the in peces? yee thou shalt be their praye.* Seinge thou hast spoyled many Heithen, therfore shall the remnaunte of the people spoyle ꝑ: because of mēs bloud, & for the wronge done in the londe: in the cite, and vnto all them that dwell therin.
* Wo vnto him, that couetously gathereth euel gotten goodes in to his house: that he maye set his* nest on hye, to escape from the power of mysfortune. Thou hast deuised the shame of thine owne house, for thou hast slayne to much people, and hast wilfully offended: so that the very * stones of the wall shall crie out of it, and the tymbre that lieth betwixte the ioyntes of the buylding shall answere.* Wo vnto him, that buyldeth the

with bloude, and mayntenneth the cite with vnrighteousnes. Beholde, shall not the LORDE of hoostes bringe this to passe, ỹ the labourers of the people shal be brẽt with a greate fyre, and that the thinge wherỹpõ the people haue weeried them selues, shal be lost? For the earth shalbe full of knowlege of the LORDES honoure, like as the waters that couer the see.

Wo vnto him that geueth hys neighbour drinke, to get hym wrothfull displeasure ỹ his ỹnkennelle: * that he maye se hys preuyes. Therfore with shame shalt thou be filled, in steade of honoure. Drynke thou also till thou stombre withall: for the cuppe of the LORDES right honde shall come vnto the aboute, and shamefull spewinge in stede of thy worshippe. * For the wronge ỹ is done in Libanus, shall ouerwhelme the, and the wilde beastes shall make the afrayed: because of mens bloude, and for the wronge done in the londe, in the citie, & vnto all such as dwell therin.

What helpe thã wil ỹ ymage do, which the workman hath fashioned? Or the vayne ymage, wherin because the craftesman putteth hys trust, therfore maketh he dombe gods? Wo vnto him, that saieth to a peece of wod: arise, and to a domme stone: ston vp. For what instruccion maye suche one geue? Beholde, it is layed ouer with golde & syluer, & there is no breth in it. * But ỹ LORDE is in his holy temple is he, whome all the worlde shulde feare.

The.iii. Chapter.

A prayer of the prophet Habacuc for the ignorauunces.

O LORDE, when I herde speake of the, I was afrayed. The worke that thou hast taken in honde, shalt thou perfourme in hys tyme, O LORDE: and whẽ thy wrath commeth, thou shalt declare it. In thy wrath thou thinkest vpon mercy. God commeth from Theman, and the holy one from the mount of Pharan. Sela.

His glory coureth the heauens, and the earth is full of his prayse. His shyne is as ỹ light, & beames of light go out of hys honde: there is his power hid. Destrucciõ goeth before him, and burnynge cressettes go from his feete. * He standeth, & measureth ỹ earth: he loketh, & the people consume awaye, the mountaynes of ỹ worlde fall downe to powder, and the hilles are sayned to bowe them selues, for his goinges are euerlastinge and sure.

I sawe, that the pauilions of the Morians, and the tentes of the londe of Madian were vexed for werynesse. Was thou not angrie (O LORD) in the waters? was not thy wrath in the floudes, and thy displeasure in the seeyes, when thou sattest vpõ thine horse, and when thy charettes had the victory? Thou shewdest thy bowe openly, like as thou haddest promysed with an ooth * vnto the trybes. Sela. Gen.49.a

Thou diddest deuyde the waters of the earth. When the mountaynes saw the, they were afrayed, the water streame went away, the depe made a noyse at the liftinge vp of thine honde. The * sonne and mone remayned still in their habitacion. Thine arowes went out glysteringe, and thy speares as the shyne of the lightenynge. * Thou trodest downe the londe in thine anger, and diddest threshe the Heithe in thy displeasure. Thou camest forth to helpe thy people, to helpe thine anoynted. Thou smotest down the heade in the house of the vngodly, & discouerdest his foundacions, euẽ vnto the necke of him. Sela. Iosue.10.f Iosue.11.d

Thou cursest his scepters, the captayne of his men of warre: whiche come as a stormy wynde to scatre me abrode, & are glad when they maye eat vp the poore secretly. Thou makest a waye for thine horses in the see, euẽ in the moudde of great waters. Whẽ I heare this, my body is vexed, my lippes tremble at the voyce therof, my bones corruppe, I am afrayed where I stonde. O that I might rest in the daye of trouble, that I might go vp vnto oure people, which are alredy prepared.

For the fygge trees shall not be grene, & the vynes shall beare no fruite. The laboure of the olyue shalbe but lost, & the londe shall bringe no corne: the shepe shalbe taken outs of the folde, and there shalbe no catell in the stalles. But as for me, I will be glad in the LORDE, and will reioyce in God my Sauiour. * The LORD God is my strength, he shall make my fete as the fete of herres: and he whiche geueth the victory, shall bringe me to my hye places, synginge vppon my psalmes. The.first.Chapter.

THis is the worde of the LORD which came vnto Sophony the sonne of Chusi, the sonne of Gedolias, the sonne of Amarias, the sonne of Ezechias: in the tyme of * Josias the sonne of Amon kynge of Juda. I will gather vp all thinges in the londe (sayeth the LORDE) I wil gather vp man and beast: I will gather vp the foules in the ayre, and the fysh in the see (to the greate decaye of the wicked) and will vtterly destroye the men out of the londe, sayeth the LORDE. I will stretch out myne hande vpon Juda, and vpon all such as dwell at Jerusalē. thus shall it happen in the daye of the LORDE* slaynge offeringe: I will vyset the princes, * the kinges childre, & all such as weare straunge clothinge. In the same daye also will I vyset all those, that treade ouer the threshold so proudly, whiche fyll their lordes house with robbery and falsede. At the same tyme (sayeth the LORDE) there shall be herde a great crye from the * fyshpoole, & an howlinge from the other poole, & a great murthur from the hilles. Howle ye that dwell in the myll, for all the marchaunt people are gone, and all they that were laden with syluer, are rooted out.

At the same tyme will I seke thorow Jerusalem with lanternes, and vyset them that contynue in their dregges, and sare in their hartes: * Tush, the LORDE will do neither good nor euell. Their goodes shalbe spoyled and their houses layed wayst. * They shall buylde houses, and not dwell in them: they shall plante vynyardes, but not drynke the wyne therof. For the great * daye of the LORDE is at honde, it is harde by, & commeth on a pace. Horrible is the tydinges of the LORDES daye, then shall the gaistes crye out: for that daye is a daye of wrath, a daye of trouble & heuinesse, a daye of vtter destruction & misery, a darke and glompyge daye, a cloudy & stormy daye, a daye of the noyse of trompettes & shawmes, agaynst the strong cities and hye towres. I will bringe the people in such veracion, that they shal go about like blinde men, because they haue synned agaynst the LORD. Their bloude shalbe shed as the dust, & their bodies as the myre. * Nether their syluer nor their golde shalbe able to deliuer them in that wofull daye of the LORD, but the * whole londe shalbe consumed thorow the fyre of hys gelousy: for he shall soone make ciene ryddaunce of all them that dwell in the londe.

The.ii.Chapter.

COme together and gather you, O ye frowarde people: or ere the thinge go forth that is concluded, & or the tyme be passed awaye as the dust: or the fearfull wrath of the LORDE come vpon you, yee or the daye of the LORDES sore displeasure come vpon you. Seke the LORDE all ye meke harted vpon earth, ye that worke after hys iudgment: seke righteousnesse, seke * lowlynesse: that ye maye be defended in the wofull daye of the LORD. * For Gasa shalbe destroyed, and Ascalon shalbe layed wayst: they shall cast out Asdod at the noone daye, and Accaron shalbe pluckt vp by the rotes.

Wo vnto you that dwell vpon the see coast, ye murthurous people: the worde of the LORDE shall come vpon you. O Canaan thou londe of the Philistynes, I will destroy the, so that there shall no man dwell in the euymore: and as for the see coast, it shalbe hyrdmens cotages, and sheepefoldes: yet it shalbe a portion for such as remayne, of the house of Juda, to fede therupon. In the houses of Ascalon shall they rest towarde nyght: for the LORDE their God shall vyset them, and turne awaye their captyuite. * I haue herde the despyte of Moab and the blasphemies of the chyldren of Ammon: how they haue shamefully intreated my people, and magnified them selues within the borders of their londe. Therfore as truely as I lyue (sayeth the LORDE of hoostes the God of Israell) Moab, shalbe as Sodome, and Ammon as Gomorre: euen dye thorne hedges, salt pyttes, and a perpetuall wyldernesse. The residue of my folke shall spoyle them: the remnaunt of my people shal haue them in possession. * This shall happen vnto them for their pryde, because they haue dealte so shamefully with the LORDE of hoostes people, and magnified them selues aboue them. The LORDE shalbe grymme vpon them, and * destroye all the goddes in the londe. And all the Iles off the heythen shall worshippe hym, euery man in his place.

Yet Moyans also shall perysh with my sworde: yee he shall stretch out his honde ouer the north, and destroye Assur. As for Ninive, he shall make it desolate, drye and wyld. The storkes and all the beastes of the people shall lye in the myddest of it, pellicanes, and storckes shall abyde in the vpper postes of it, foules shall synge in the windowes, and rauens shall syt vpon the thresholdes, for the bordes of Cedre shalbe ryuen downe. This is the proude and careles citie, that sayde in hir harte: * I am, and there is els none. O how is she made so wayst, that the beastes lye therin? Who so goeth by, mocketh her, and poynteth at her with his finger.

The.iii.Chapter

WO to the abhominable, fylthy, and cruel cite: which will not heare, nor be reformed. Hir trust is not in the LORDE nother wil she holde her to hyr God. Hir rulers within her are as roaringe * lyons hir iudges are * wolues in the euenynge, which leaue nothinge behynde them till the morow. Hir prophetes are lyght personnes and vnfaythfull men: hir prestes vnhalowe the Sanctuary, and do wronge vnder the pretence of the lawe. But the iust LORDE that doth no vnright, was amonge them, euery mornynge shewinge them his lawe clearly, and ceassed not. But the vngodly will not learne to be ashamed. Therfore wil I rote out this people, and destroye their towres: yee and make their stretes so voyde that no man shall go therin. But neuertheles they stonde vp early, to folow the fylthinesse of their owne ymaginacions. Therfore ye shall wayte vpon me (sayeth the LORDE) vntill the tyme that I stonde vp: for I am determyned, to gather the people and to bringe the kyngdomes together, that I maye pour out myn anger, yee al my wroth full * displeasure vpon them. * For al the worlde shalbe consumed with the fyre of my gelousy. And then wil I clense the lippes of the people, that they maye euerychone call vpon the name of the LORDE, and serue him with one shulder. Chap. i He exorteth the people to buylde vp the temple, and reproueth their longe tarienge.

Chap. ii He geueth the rulers a cōfort. Of the ornamentes and glory of the seconde temple, wherby is vnderstonde the churche of the faithfull.

The. first. Chapter.

IN the seconde yeare of kynge * Darius, in the. vi. moneth the first daye of the moneth, came the worde of the LORDE (by the prophet * Aggeus) vnto * Zorobabel the sonne of Salathiel the prince of Juda, and to Jesua the sonne of Josedec the hye preest, sayenge: Thus speaketh ỹ LORDE of hoostes, and sayeth: Thys people doth saye: The tyme is not yet come to buylde vp the LORDES house. Then spake the LORDE by the prophet Aggeus and sayed: * ye your selues can fynde tyme to dwell in syled houses, and shal this house lye waist? Consider now youre owne wayes in youre hartes (sayeth the LORDE of hoostes) * ye sowe muche, but ye bringe litle in: ye eate, but ye haue not ynough: ye drinke, but ye are not fylled: ye decke youre selues but ye are not warme: and he that earneth ony wagis, putteth it in a broken purse.

Thus sayeth the LORDE of hoostes: Consydre youre owne wayes in youre hartes, get you vp to the mountayne, fetch wood, and buylde vp the house: * that it maye be acceptable vnto me, and that I maye shewe myne honoure, sayeth the LORDE. ye loked for muche, and lo it is come to lytle: and though ye bringe

& howe, yet do I blowe it awaye. And why (saieth the LORDE of hooſtes:) Euen becauſe that * my houſe lyeth ſo waſte, and ye runne euery mā vnto his owne houſe. Wherfore the heauen is forbidden to geue you ony dew, & the earth is forbydden to geue you encrece. & I haue called for a drouth, both vpō
the lande, & vpon the mountaynes, vpon cor-ne, vpon wyne, & vpon oyle, vpon euery thin
that the grounde bryngeth forth, vpon
men and vpon catell, yee and vpon all handy labour.

6 Then when Zorobabel the ſonne of Sala
thiel, & Jeſua the ſonne of Joſedec the hye
preſt with the remnaunt of the people, her-ken vnto the voyce of the LORDE their God, & vnto the wordes of the prophet Aggeus (like as the LORDE their God had ſent him) & people feared before the LORDE. Then Aggeus the LORDES angell ſayed in the LORDES
meſſage vnto the people: * I am with you,
ſaieth the LORDE. & So the LORDE
ſtirred vp the ſpyrete of Zorobabel the prince of Juda, and the ſpyrete of Jeſua the ſonne of Joſedec the hye preſt, and the ſpyrete of al rem
naunt of all the people: that they came & laboured in the houſe of the LORDE of hooſ tes their God.

kynge Darius, the .xxi. daye of
the ſeuenth moneth, came the wor-
de of the LORDE by the prophet Aggeus, ſayenge: ſpeake to Zorobabel
the ſonne of Salathiel prince of Juda, and to Jeſua the ſonne of Joſedec the hye preſt, and vnto the reſidue of the people, & ſaye: * Who

ſaye: yf one beare * holy fleſh in his cote lap
pe, & with his lapped do touch the bread, po
tage, wyne, oyle, or ony other meate: ſhall it be holy alſo? The prieſtes anſwered, & ſayde:
No. Then ſayd Aggeus: Now yf one beyng defyled wt a dead carcaſe, touch ony of theſe ſhall it alſo be vnclene? The prieſtes gaue an-ſwere & ſayde: * yee, it ſhal be vnclene. The Aggeus anſwered, and ſayde: Euē ſo is this people & this nacion before me, ſaieth the LOR DE: and ſo are all the workes of their hon-
des, yee & all that they offre, is vnclene.

And now (I praye you) conſidre from this daye forth, and how it hath gone with you afore: or euer there was layed one ſtone vpō
another in the temple of the LORDE: * that when ye came to a corne heape of .xx. buſhels
there were ſcarce ten: and that when ye came to the wynepreſſe for to poure out .L. potes

The.i. Chapter.

IN the eight moneth of the seconde yeare of kinge Darius, came the woꝛde of the LORDE vnto * Zachary the sonne of Barachias, the sonne of Addo, the prophet, sayenge: The LORDE hath bene soꝛe displeased at youre foꝛefathers. And saye thou vnto them: thus saieth the LORDE of hooستes. * Turne you vnto me (saieth ỹ LORDE of hooستes) and I will turne me vnto you, saieth the LORDE of hooستes. * Be not ye like youre foꝛefathers, vnto whome ỹ prophetes cried afoꝛe tyme, sayenge: Thus saieth the LORDE God of hooستes: * Turne you from youre euell wayes, and from youre wicked ymaginations. * But they wolde not heare, noꝛ regarde me, saieth the LORDE. What is now become of youre foꝛefathers and the prophetes, are they yet alyue? But dyd not my woꝛdes, and statutes (which I commaunded by my seruauntes the prophetes) touch youre foꝛefathers? Ỹ thys, they gaue answere and sayde: like as the LORDE of hooستes deuysed to do vnto vs, acoꝛdinge to our owne wayes and ymaginations, euen so hath he dealte with vs.

Upon the.xxiiii. daye of the.xi. moneth (whiche is the moneth Sebat) in the seconde yeare of Darius, came the woꝛde of ỹ LORDE vnto Zachary the sonne of Barachias, the sonne of Addo the prophete, sayenge: I sawe by nyght, and lo, there sat one vpon a * reade hoꝛse, and stode stil amonge the myrte trees, that were beneth vpon the grounde and behynde hym were there reade, spotted and whyte hoꝛses.

Then sayde I: O my LORDE, what are these? And the angell that talked with me, sayed vnto me: I will shewe the what they be. And the man that stode amonge the myrte trees, answered & sayde: These are they whome the LORDE hath sent to go through the woꝛlde. And they answered the angell of the LORD, that stode amonge the Myrte trees, and sayde: We haue gone thorow the worlde: and beholde, all the worlde dwell at ease, and are carelesse.

Then the LORDES angel gaue answere and sayde: O LORD of hoostes, how longe wilt thou be vnmercifull to Jerusalem and to the cities of Juda? * with whome thou hast bene displeased now these .lxx. yeares. And the LORD gaue a louynge and a comfortable answere, vnto the angel that talked with me. And the angel that cõmoned with me, sayde vnto me: Crie thou, & speake, thus saith the LORDE of hoostes: I am exceadyngelous ouer Jerusalem and Sion, & am displeased at the carelesse Heithen: for I was but a litle angrie, they dyd me more hurt then I might destroye them. Therfore thus saieth the LORD: * I will turne me vnto it in mercy to warde Jerusalem, so that my house shalbe buylded in it, saieth the LORDE of hoostes: yee & the plommet shall be layed vpode in Jerusalem, saieth the LORD of hoostes.

Cry also, & speake thus saieth the LORD of hoostes: My cities shall be in good prosperite agayne, the LORD shall yet comfort Sion, and chose Jerusalem. Then lift I vp myne eyes and sawe, & beholde, foure horne. And I sayde vnto the angel, that talked with me: what be these? he answered me: These are the * hornes, which haue scatred Juda, Israel and Jerusalem abrode. And the LORDE shewed me foure carpenters and I sayde: what will these do? he answered me, and sayde: These are the hornes, whiche haue skattered Juda abrode, that no man shuld lift vp hys heade: But these are come to feare them & stape, and to caste oute the hornes of the Gentiles, whiche lifte vp their horne ouer the londe of Juda, to scatre it abrode.

The.ij. Chapter.

Then lift I vp myne eyes agayne, & lo a man: and beholde, * a man with a mesure lyne in hys houde.

Then sayde I: whether goest thou? And he sayd vnto me: To measure Jerusalem, that I maye se how longe and how brode it is. And beholde, the angel that talked with me, wente hys waye forth, and there came another angel to mete him, and sayde vnto him: Runne, speake to yonge man, & saye: Jerusalem shal be inhabited without ony wall, for the very multitude of people & catell, that shall be therin. * yee I my selfe (sayeth the LORDE) will be vnto her a wall of fyre rounde about, and wilbe honoured in her. Deu.4.b. Jach.9.a.

O get you forth, O flye from the lode of the north (saieth the LORDE) ye, * whome I haue scatred in to the foure wyndes vnder heauen, saieth the LORDE. Saue thy self, O Sion: thou that dwellest with the doughter of Babilon, for thus saieth the LORDE of hoostes: With a glorious power hath he sent me out to the Heithen, whiche spoyled you: * for who so toucheth you, shall touche the aple of his owne eye. Beholde, I wil lift vp myne honde ouer them: & so that they shal be spoyled of those, which afore serued them & ye shall knowe, that the LORD of hoostes hath sent me. Jere.2.a. 20.b.30.f. Psal.16.b Act.9.a. & Esa.14.a

Be glad, & reioyce, o doughter Sion: for lo, * I am come to dwell in the myddest of the, sayeth the LORD. At the same tyme there shall many Heithen rieue to the LORDE, & shall be my people. Thus wil I dwell in the myddest of the, & thou shalt knowe, that the LORDE of hoostes hath sent me vnto the. The LORDE shall haue Juda in possession for his parte in the holy grounde, & shall chose Jerusalem yet agayne. * Let all flesh be still before the LORDE, for he is rysen out of hys holy place. The.iij. Chapter.

And he shewed me Jesus the hye preest, standinge before the angel of the LORDE, & Satan stode at his right honde to resist him. And the LORDE sayde vnto Satan: The LORDE rebuke the (thou Satan) yee the LORDE that hath cholen Jerusalem, rebuke the. Is not he a brande taken out of the fyre? Now Jesus was clothed in vnclene rayment, and stode before the angel: which answered and sayde vnto those, that stode before him: take a waye the foule clothes from him. And vnto him he sayde: Beholde, I haue taken awaye thy synne from the, & will decke the with chaunge of rayment. Yee saide moreouer: Let a fayre myter vpon his heade. So they set a fayre myter vpon his heade, & put on clothes vpon him, and the angell of the LORDE stode there. Then the angell of the LORDE testified vnto Jesus, & spake, thus saieth the LORDE of hoostes: * yf thou wilt walke in my waynes, & kepe my watch: thou shalt rule my house, & kepe my courtes, & I will geue the Psa.102.b Matt.4.a Jude.1.b.

The.iiii. Chapter.

AND the angel that talked with me, came agayne, & waked me vp (as a man that is rayled out of his slepe) and sayde vnto me: What seist thou? The angel that talked with me, answered & sayde vnto me: knowest thou not what these be? And I sayde: No, my lorde. He answered, & sayde vnto me: This is the worde of the LORDE vnto Zorobabel, sayenge:
Esa.11.a. * Nether thorow an hoost of men, nor thorow strength, but thorow my spyrete, sayeth þ LORDE of hoostes. What art thou (thou great mountayne) before Zorobabel? thou must be made euen. And he shal bringe vp Esa.28.c.

Then answered I, & sayde vnto him: What are these two olyue trees vpon the right and left syde of the candilstick? And I spake moreouer, & saide vnto him: what be these. ii. olyue braunches which (thorow þ two golden pipes) emptie them selues in to the golde? The.v. Chapter.

SO I turned me lifting vp myne eyes, and loked, & beholde, a flienge boke. And he saide vnto me: what seist thou? I answered I se a flyenge boke of.xx. cubites longe & .x. cubites brode. it shall come to the house of the theef, & to the house of him, that falsely sweareth by my name: & shall remayne in his house, & consume it, with the tymbre & stones therof. Then the angel that talked with me, went forth, and sayde vnto me: lifte vp thine eyes & se, what this is that goeth forth. And I sayde: what is it? He answered: this is a measure goinge out. He sayde moreouer: Euen thus are they (that dwel vpon the whole earth) to loke vpon. And beholde, there was lift vp a talent of leade: and lo, a woman sat in the myddest of the measure. And he saide: This is wyked lyuelle. So he cast her in to the myddest of the measure, & threwe the lompe of leade vpon in to an hole.

Then lift I vp myne eyes, & loked, & beholde, there came out. ii. women, & the wynde was in their wynges (for they had wynges like the wynges of a Storke) & they lift vp the measure betwixt the earth & the heuen. Then spake I to the angel, that talked with me: whyther will these beare the measure? And he sayde vnto me: in to the lōde of Sinear, to buylde them an house, whiche when it is prepared, the measure shall be set there in his place.

The.vi. Chapter.

MOreouer I turned me, lifting vp myne eyes, & loked, & beholde, there came. iiii. charrettes out from betwixte two hilles, which hilles were of bralle. In the first charret were * reade horse. In þ second charret were blacke horse. In the thirde charret were whyte horse. In þ fourth charret were horses of dyuerse colours, & strong. Then spake I, and sayde vnto the angell that talked with me. O lorde, what are these? The angel answered, & saide vnto me, These are

iii. windes of the heauen, whiche be come forth to stonde before the ruler of all ỹ earth That with the blacke horse went in to the lo de of the north, & the white folowed the, & the spotted horses wente forth towarde ỹ south. These horses were very stronge, & went out: and sought to go & take their iourney ouer ỹ whole earth. And he sayde: get you hence, & go thorow the worlde. So they were thorow out the worlde. Then cried he vpon me, & spake vnto me, sayenge: Beholde, these that go towarde the north, shall still my wrath in the north countre.

6 And the worde of the LORDE came vnto me, sayenge: Take of the prisoners that are come from Babilon: namely, Heldai, Tobias, and Idaia: & come thou the same daye, & go in to ỹ house of Iosias the sonne of Sophony. Then take golde and syluer, & make crownes therof, & set them vpon the heade of Iehu the sonne of Iosedec, the hye priest, & speake vnto him: Thus sayeth the LORDE of hoostes: Beholde, the man whose name is the * braunch: & he that shall springe vp after him * shall buylde vp the temple of the LORDE, yee euen he shall buylde vp the temple of the LORDE * He shal beare ỹ praise, he shall sit vpon the LORDES trone, & haue the dominacion.

* Ioshe. 6.

13 * Iustice shal he be also vpon his trone, & peaceable counsayll shalbe betwixte them both. And the crownes shal be in the temple of the LORDE, for a remembraunce vnto Helem, Tobias, Idaia, and Hen the sonne of Sophony. And suche as be farre of, shall come and buylde the temple of the LORDE: that ye maye knowe, how that the LORDE of hoostes hath sent me vnto you. And thys shall come to passe, yf ye will hearken diligently vnto the voyce of the LORDE your God.

The .vii. Chapter.

IT happened also in the fourth yeare of kyng Darius, that the worde of the LORDE came vnto Zachary in the fourth day of the .ix. moneth, whiche is called Casleu: what tyme as Sarasar and Rogmelech and the men that were with them sent vnto Bethel for to praye before ỹ LORDE: and that they shulde saye vnto the priests, which were in the house of the LORDE of hoostes, and to the prophetes: Shulde I wepe in the * fyfte moneth, and abstayne, as I haue done now certayne yeares? Then came the worde of the LORDE of hoostes vnto me, sayenge: Speake vnto all the people of the londe, and to the priestes, and saye: when ye fasted and mourned in the .v. & vii monethe (now thys .lxx. yeares) dyd ye faste vnto me? Whe ye dyd eate also & drinke, dyd ye not eate and drynke for your owne selues. Are not these the wordes, which the LORDE spake by his prophetes afore tyme, when Ierusalem was yet inhabited and welthy, & the cities rounde about her: when there dwelt men, both towarde the south and in ỹ playne countree?

* Ierem. 41. & 4. Reg. 25. D

And the worde of the LORDE came vnto Zachary, sayenge: Thus sayeth the LORDE of hoostes: * Execute true iudgement: shewe mercy and louynge kyndnesse, euery man to his brother: Do the wyddowe, the fatherlesse, the straunger, and poore no wrong and let no man ymagen euell agaynste hys brother in his hart * Neuertheles they wolde not take hede, but turned their backes, & stopped their eares, that they shulde not heare. yee they made their hartes as an Idamant stone, lest they shulde heare the lawe & wordes * which the LORDE of hoostes sente vnto them in hys holy spirite by the prophetes afore tyme.

Wherfore the LORDE of hoostes was very wroth at them. SO the worde of the LORDE came vnto me, sayenge: Thus sayeth the LORDE of hoostes: I was in a greate gelousy ouer Sion, yee I haue bene very gelous ouer her in a greate displeasure & thus sayeth the LORDE of hoostes: I will turne me agayne vnto Sion, and will dwell in the myddest of Ierusalem * so that Ierusalem shalbe called a faythfull and true citie, the hill of the LORDE of hoostes, yee an holy hill.

* Esa. 1. d.

Thus sayeth ỹ LORDE of hoostes: There shall yet olde men and women dwell agayn in the stretes of Ierusalem: yee and suche as go with staues in their hondes for very age. The stretes of the cyte also shalbe full of ponge boyes and damselles, playnge vpon the stretes.

Thus sayeth the LORDE of hoostes: yf the residue of this people thynke it to be vnpossible in these dayes, * shulde it therfore be vnpossible in my sight, sayeth the LORDE of hoostes. Thus sayeth the LORDE of hoostes: Behalde, I will delyuer my people from the londe of the east and west, and will bringe them agayne: that they maye dwell at Jerusalem. * And they shalbe my people, & I will be their God, in treuth and righteousnesse. Thus sayeth the LORDE of hoostes: let youre hondes be stronge, ye that now heare these wordes by the mouth of the prophetes, whiche be in these dayes that the foundacion is layed vpon the LORDE of hoostes house, that the temple maye be buylded. For whyle * before these dayes nether men nor catel coulde wynne ony thinge, nether might ony man come in and out in rest, for trouble: but I let euery man go agaynst his neighboure.

Neuertheles I will now intreate the residue of this people nomore, as afore tyme (sayeth the LORDE of hoostes,) * but they shalbe a sede of peace. The vynyarde shall geue hir frute, the grounde shall geue hir increase, and the heauens shall geue their dew and I shall cause the remnaunt of this people, to haue all these in possessio. And it shall come to passe, that like as ye were a curse amonge the Heithen (O ye house of Juda & ye house of Israell) Euen so will I delyuer you, that ye shalbe a blessynge: feare not, but let youre hondes be stronge.

For thus sayeth the LORDE of hoostes like as I deuysed to punysh you, what tyme as youre fathers prouoked me vnto wrath (sayeth the LORDE of hoostes) and spared not: Euen so am I determyned now in these dayes, for to do well vnto the house of Juda and Jerusalem, therfore feare you not. Now the thinges y ye shal do, are these: * Speake euery man the treuth vnto hys neighboure, execute iudgement truly & peaceably within youre portes, none of you ymagyn euell in his hart agaynst his neighboure, and loue no false oothes: for all these are the thinges that I hate, sayeth the LORDE. And the worde of the LORDE of hoostes came vnto me, sayenge: thus sayeth the LORDE of hoostes: The fast of the fourth moneth, the faste of the fifth, the fast of the seuyth, and the fast of the tenth, shall be ioye and gladnesse, and prosperous hye feastes vnto the house of Juda: Onely, loue the treuth and peace.

Thus sayeth the LORDE of hoostes: There shall yet come people, and the inhabiters of many cities: and they that dwell in one citie, shall go to another, sayenge: * Vp, let vs go, and praye before the LORDE, let vs seke the LORDE of hoostes, I will go with you. Yee muche people and mighty Heithen shall come and seke the LORDE of hoostes at Jerusalem, and to praye before the LORDE. Thus sayeth the LORDE of hoostes: In that tyme shall ten men (oute of all maner of languages of the Gentiles) take one Jewe by the hemme of hys garment, and saye: we will go with you, for we haue herde, that God is amonge you.

The.ir. Chapter.

The worde of the LORDE shalbe rehearsed at Hadrach, & Damascus shall be his offeryng: for the eyes of all men and of the tribes of Israel shall loke vp vnto the LORDE. The borders of Hemath shall be harde therby, Tyrus also & Sidon, for they are very wise. * Tyrus shall make hir selfe stronge, heape vp syluer as the sonde, & golde as the claye of the stretes. Behalde, the LORDE shall take her in, and haue her in possession: * he shall smyte downe hir power into the see, and she shalbe consumed with fyre. This shall Ascalon se, and be afrayed. * Gaza shalbe very sory, so shal Accaron also because hir hope is come to confusion. For the kynge of Gaza shall perish, and at Ascalon shall no man dwell.

Straungers shall dwell at Asdod, & as for the pryde of the Philistines, I shall rote it out * Their bloude will I take awaye fro their mouth, and their abhominacions fro amonge their teth. Thus they shall be left for oure God, yee they shalbe as a prynce in Juda, and Accaron like as Jebusi. And so will I compasse my house rounde about with my men of warre, goynge to and fro: that no oppressoure come vpon them ony more. For now haue I sene now with myne eyes.

* Reioyce thou greatly, o doughter Sion: be glad, o doughter Jerusalem. For lo, thy kynge commeth vnto the, euen the righteous and Sauioure: Lowly and symple is he, he rydeth vppon an asse, and vppon the foale off an asse. I will rote out the charettes from Ephraim, and the horse from Jerusalem, the batt all bo-shall be destroyed. He shall geue the heithen * peace vnto the heythen, * and his dominion shalbe from the one see to the other, and from the floudes to the endes of the worlde.

Thou also thorow the bloude of thy couenaunt shalt let * thy presoners out of the pytt, wherin is no water. Turne you now to the stronge holde, ye that be in prison,
and longe yet to be delyuered: And this same I synge the worde, that I will rewar de the double agayne. For Juda haue I bent out as a bowe for me, and Ephraym
haue I filled.

Thy sonnes (o Syon) will I raise vp a-gaynst the Gretes, and make the as a giantes swearde the LORDE God shalbe
ouer them, * his dartes shall go forth
as the lightenynge. The LORDE God shall blowe the trompet, and shal come forth
as tempme out of the south.

* The LORDE of hooستes shall defen der them, they shall consume and deuoure, and subdue the with * slynge stones. They shall drynke and rage, as it were thorow wyn
ne. They shalbe filled lyke the basens, and as the hornes of the aulter. The LORDE their God shall delyuer them in the daye,
as the flock of his people: for the stones of his sanctuary shalbe set vp in his lande.
O how prosperous and goodly a thynge shall that be? The corne shall make the yongmen chearefull, and the new wyne the maydens.

The.x. Chapter.

Praye the LORDE then desynes to geue you the latter rayne, * so shall the LORDE make cloudes, and geue you rayne ynough for al the increace of the felde. For vayne is the answere of Idols
The soothsayers se lyes, and tell but vayne
dremes: the comfort that they geue, is no worth. Therfore go they astraye lyke
a flocke of shepe, and are troubled, becau se they haue no * shepherde. My wrothfull displeasure is moued at the shepherdes, and I will vysyth the goates. For the LORDE of hooستes will graciously vysyt his flocke
the house of Juda), and holde them as a goodly fayre horse in the battayl. Out of * Ju da shall come the helmet, * the nayle, the battayle bowe, and all the princes together.
They shalbe as the gaunntes, which in the battayl treade down the myre vpon the stre-
tes. They shall fyght, for the LORDE shalbe with them, so that the horsmen shal-
be confounded.

I will comforte the house of Juda, and preserue the house of Joseph. I will turne them also, for I pitye them: and they shal be like as they were, when I had not cast them
of. For I the LORDE am their God, and will heare them. Ephraym shalbe as a giaunt, and their harte shalbe cherefull as tho-row wyne: yee their harte shall reioyce in the LORDE. I will blowe for them, and gather them together, for I will redeme the.
They shall increace, as they increased afore-se. I will sowe them amonge the people, that they maye thynke vpon me in farre coun-trees: they shall lyue with their children, and turne agayne. I will bringe them agayne also from the londe of Egypte, and gather them out of Assiria. I will carye them in to the londe of Galaad and to Libanus, and they shall wante nothynge. He shal go vpon
the see of trouble, and smyte the see wawes:
so that all the depe floudes shalbe dryed vp.
The proude boastinge of * Assur shalbe cast
downe, and the scepter of * Egypte shalbe taken awaye. I will comforte them in the LORDE, that they maye walke in his name, saieth the LORDE. Esa. 10.&
34.36. 29.&

The.xi. Chapter.

Open thy dores (o Libanus) that the fyre maye consume thy Cedre trees. Howle ye fyrretrees, for the Cedre is fallen, yee al the proude are wasted awaye how le (o ye oketrees of Basan) for the myghtie stronge wood is cut downe. Wen maye hea re the shepherdes mourne, for their glory is destroyed. Wen maye heare the lyons whel pes roare, for the pryde of Jordane is wast
ted awaye.

Thus saieth the LORDE my God:
Fede the shepe of the slaughter, which shal-
be slayne of those that possesse them: yet
they take yt for no synne, but they that sell them, saye: The LORDE be thanked, I am rich: yee their owne shepherdes spare them not. Therfore will I nomore spa re those that dwell in the londe (sayeth the LORDE) but lo, I will delyuer the peo ple, euery man into his neghbours honde, a nd into the honde of his kynge: that they maye
smyte the londe, and out of their hondes wil
not I delyuer them.

I my self fedde the slaughter shepe (a poore flocke verely) and toke vnto me two staues: the one I called louynge mekenesse, the other. I called wo, and so I kepte the shepe. Thre shepherdes destroyed I in one moneth, for I myght not awaye with them, nether had they any delyte in me. The sayd

Deu. 22. c. I: I wil fede you nomore * the thynge that dyeth, let it dye, and that will perysshe, let it perysh: and let the remnaunt rate, euery one the * flesh of his neighboure. I toke also my louynge mekestaff, and brake it, that I Oseer. 2. c. myght disanull the * couenaunt which I made with all people. And so it was broken in that daye.

Then the poore symple shepe that had a respecte vnto me, knewe therby, that it was the worde of the LORDE. And I sayde vnto them: yff ye thynke it good, bringe
C hyther my price: yf no, then leaue. * So they
Mat. 27. a. waied downe. xxx. syluer pens, the value that I was prysed at. And the LORDE sayde vnto me: cast it vnto the potter (a goodly price for me to be valued att of the) and I toke the. xxx. syluer pens, and cast them to the potter in the house of the LORDE.

Then brake I my other staff also (namely wo) that I myght louse the brotherheade betwixte Juda and Israel. And the LORDE sayde vnto me: Take to the also the staff of a foolysh shepherde: for lo, I will rayse vp a shepherde in to the londe, which shall not seke after the thynges that be lost, nor care for such as go astraye: he shall not heale the wounded, he shall not norysh the thynge that is whole: but he shall eate the flesh of such as be fat, and teare their clawes in peces.

O Idoll shepherde, that leaueth the flocke. The swearde shall come vpon his arme, and vpon his right eye. His arme shalbe clene dryed vp, and his right eye shal be sore blynded.

The.xii. Chapter.

The heuy burthen which the LORDE hath deuysed for Israel.

Thus saieth the LORDE, which
Esa. 40. c. 44. c. 45. d. & Gen. 2. b. spred the heauens abrode, layde the foundacion of the earth, & geueth man the breath of lyfe: Beholde, I will make Jerusalem a cuppe of surfet, vnto all the people, that Zach. 14. c. are rounde aboute her: * yee Juda himself also shalbe in the syege agaynst Jerusalem. At the same tyme will I make Jerusalem an heuy stone for all people, so that all such as lift it vp, shalbe torne and rente, and all the people of the earth shalbe gathered together agaynst it.

In that daye (sayeth the LORDE) I will make all horses abasshed, and them that ryde vpon them, to be out of their wittes. I will open myne eyes vpon the house of Juda, and smyte all the horses of the people with blyndnesse. And the princes of Juda shal save in their hartes: The inhabiters of Jerusalem shall geue me consolacion in the
B LORDE of hoostes their God. * In
Zach. 14. c. that tyme will I make the princes of Juda lyke an hote burnynge wood, and lyke a cresshet of fyre amonge the strawe so they shall consume all the people rounde aboute them, both vpon the right honde, and the left. Jerusalem also shalbe inhabited agayne: namely, in the same place where Jerusalem stondeth.

The LORDE shal preserue the tentes of Juda lyke as afore tyme: so that the glory of the house of David and the glory of the citesyns of Jerusalem, shalbe but litle regarded, in comparison of the glory of Juda. In that daye shall the LORDE defende the citesyns of Jerusalem: so that the weakest then amonge them shalbe as * David: and the house of David shalbe like as Gods house, and as the angell of the LORDE before them.

At the same tyme will I go aboute to de-C stroye all such people as come agaynst Jerusalem. Moreouer, vpon the house of David and vpon the citesyns of Jerusalem.
* will I poure out the spirite of grace and prayer: so that * they shall loke vpon me, whom they haue prased: and they shall bewepe hym, as men mourne for their only begotten sonne: yee and be sory for hym, as men are sory for their first childe.

* Then shall there be a greate mourninge at Jerusalem, * lyke as the lamentacion at Adremmon in the felde of Maggadon. And the londe shal be wayle, euery kynred by them selues: The kynred of the house of David them selues alone, and their wyues by them selues: The kynred of the house of * Nathan them selues alone, and their wyues by them selues: The kynred of the house of Leuy them selues alone, and their wyues by them selues: The kynred of the house of Semey them selues alone, and their wyues by them selues: In lyke maner all the other generacions, euerychone

hyr sinne alone, and theyr wyues by themselues.

The xiij. Chapter.

IN that tyme shall the house of Dauid, and the citesyns of Jerusalem haue an open * well, to wash of synne, and vncleannesse
And then (sayeth the LORDE of hoostes) * I will destroye the names of Idols out of the londe: so that they shall nomore be put in remembraunce.

* And thy false prophetes also, and the vncleane spyrte. I shall take them out off the londe: so that yf any of them prophecy ony more, his owne father and mother that begate him, shall saye vnto hym: * Thou shalt not, for thou speakest lyes vnder the name of the LORDE: yee his owne father and mother that begat hym, shall wounde hym, when he prophecyeth. And then shall those prophetes be confounded, every one of his vision when he prophecyeth: nother shal they vse false clothes anymore, to deceaue men withall. But he shal be sayne to say: * I am no prophet: I am an husbonde man, for so taught * by Adam fro my youth
vp. And yf it be sayde vnto hym: How come thou wounded then in thyne hon-des? he shall answere: Thus am I wounded in the house of myne owne frendes.

Awake (o thou sweardе) vpon my shepher-
de, vpon the prynce of my people, saieth
the LORDE of hoostes: * Smyte the shepherde, and the shepe shalbe scatred abroade, and I will turne myne hõde to the litlemen. And it shall come to passe (sayeth the LORDE) that in all the londe
two partes shalbe voted out, * but the thyrde shall remayne therin. * And the same thirde parte will I bringe thorow the fyre, and will clense them, as the syluer is clensed, and trye them, lyke as golde is tryed.

Then shall they call vpon my name, and I will heare them. I will saye, it is my peo ple. And they shall saye, LORDE, my God.

The xiiij. Chapter.

BEholde, the daye of the LOR-DE commeth, that thou shalt be spoyled and robbed, for I will gather together all the heythen
to fyght agaynst Jerusalem, so that it shalbe wonne, the houses spoy-led, and the women defyled. The half of the cite shall go awaye in to captiuyte, and the residue of the people shall not be caried out of the cite.

After that shall the LORDE go forth
to fyght agaynst those heythen, as men vse to fyght in the daye of battayll. Then shall his fete stode vpon the mount Oliuete, that lyeth vpon the east syde of Jerusalem. And the mount Oliuete shall cleue in two, east-warde, and westwarde so that there shalbe
a greate valley, and the halfe mount shall remoue towarde the north, and the other half towarde the south.

And ye shall flye vnto the valley of my hilles, for the valley of the hylles shal reach vnto Azall. yee flye shall ye, * lyke ye fled Amos.1.d
for the earthquake in the dayes of Osyas kynge of Juda. And the LORDE my God shall come, and all sayntes with hym.
In that daye shall it not be lyght, but colde
and frost. This shalbe that specialll daye,
* which is knowne vnto the LORDE, Mat. 24.d
nother daye nor nyght, but about the euenynge tyme it shalbe lyght. * In that ty- Zacha.13.d

from Jerusalem, the half parte of them to-warde the east see, and the other half to-warde the vttemost see, and shall continnue both sommer and wynter. * And the Abac. 3.d.
LORDE hymselfe shalbe kynge ouer all
the earth.

At the tyme shall there be one LORDE
onely, and his name shalbe but one. Men shall go about the whole earth, as vpon a felde, from Gibea to Remmon, and from the south to Jerusalem. She shalbe set vp, and inhabited in hyr place. From Ben Ja-mins porte, vnto the place of the first porte
and vnto the corner porte, and from the tower of * Hananeel, vnto the kynges wyne 2.Esd.3.d
presses. There shall men dwell, and there Jere. 31.d.
shalbe nomore curssynge, but Jerusalē shal-
be safely inhabited.

This shalbe the plage, wherwith the LORDE will smyte all people, that haue fought agaynst Jerusalem, Namely, theyr flesh shall consume awaye, though they stan
de vpon theyr fete, theyr eyes shal corrupte
in theyr holes, and theyr tunge shall consume in theyr mouth.

At that daye shall the LORDE make a
greate sedition amonge the, so that one ma
shal take another by the honde, and laye his hondes vpon the hondes of his neighboure
* Juda shal fight also agaynst Jerusalē, and Iudi.12.d
the goodes of all the heythen shalbe gathe red togethir vounde aboute: golde and syluer, and a very greate multitude off clothes. And so shall this plage go ouer horses, mules, camels, asses, and all the beastes

that shal be in the hoosse, lyke as ponder pla ge was.

Euery one that remaynyth then of al the people, which came agaynst Jerusalem,
shall go vp yearly, to worshippe the kynge
Nu. 29.b. (euen the LORDE of hoostes) * and to Leui. 23.f. kepe ꝑ feast of tabernacles. And loke what

D LORDE of hoostes) vpon the same shal come no rayne. Yf the kynred of Egypte go not vp and come not, it shal not rayne vpon
them nother.

This shalbe the plage wherwith ꝑ LOR
DE will smyte all heythen, that come not vp to kepe the feast of tabernacles: yee this shalbe the synneplage of Egypte, and the synneplage of all people, that go not vp to kepe the feast of tabernacles.

At that tyme shal the rydinge gear of the horses be holy vnto the LORDE, and the kettels in the LORDES house shalbe ly
ke the basens before the auiter: yee al the ket
tels in Jerusalem and Juda, shalbe holy vn to the LORDE of hoostes, so all they that saye offerynges, shall come and take of the,
and digbe them therin. And at that tyme the re shalbe no mo Cananites in the house off
the LORDE of hoostes.

The. iyrst. Chapter.

The heuy burthen which the LOR
DE sheweth agaynst Israel
by Malachy.

I haue loued you, saieth the LOR
DE: ꝑ ye saye: wherin hast thou loued vs? Was not Esau
Jacobs brother, saieth the LOR
DE? yet haue I loued Jacob, and hated Esau: * yee I haue made his hilles wayst, and his heritage a habitacion for dragons. And though Edom saye well, we are destroyed, we will go buylde vp agayne the places that be wast: saieth (ye yeth the LORDE of hoostes) * they they buylded, that brake I downe: & so it was called a cursed lande, and a peo ple, whom the LORDE hath cursed angrie wt̄hall.

Youre eyes haue sene it, and ye your sel
ues must confesse, that the LORDE hath brought the lordes of Israel to grete honou
re. * A childe vseth to honoure his fa
there: a seruaūt hys master, & yf I be your father, where is myn honour? yf I be your DE, where am I feared? saieth the LOR
DE of hoostes.

Now to you preistes, that despyse my na
me. And yf ye saye: wherin haue we despy sed thy name? Ans this, that ye offre vncleā bread vpon myne auiter. And yf ye will saye:
Wherin haue we offered any vncleā thynge vnto the? Ans this, that ye saye
the auiter of the LORDE is not to be regarded, * yf ye offre the lyeme beest
cuell: and yf ye offre the lame & syke beest
that cuell yee offre it vnto thy prynce, shall he be content with the? or accepte thy persone? saieth the LORDE
And now make youre prayer
that he maye haue mercy vpon vs: for

¶ The translatoure vnto the reader.

THese bokes (good reader) which be called Apocrypha, are not iudged amonge doctours to be of like reputacion with the other scripture, as thou mayest perceaue by S. Jerome in epistola ad Paulinū. And the cheefe cause therof is that there be many places in them, that seme to be repugnaūt vnto the open and manyfest treuth in the other bokes of the Byble. Neuertheles I haue not gathered them together to the intent that I wolde haue them despised, or litle set by, or that I thinke them false, for I am not able to proue it: yee I doute not but if they were exactly conferred with the other open scripture (tyme, place, and circumstaunce in all thinges considered) they shulde nether seme contrary, nor be vntruly & peruersly alledged. Treuth as mans face can not be sene so wel in a water, as in a cleare glasse: nether cā it be shewed so clearly in a water that is stered or moued, as in a styll water. These & many other dark places of scripture haue bene sore stered and myrte with blynde and couetous oppynyōs of men, which haue cast such a myst afore the eyes of the symple, that as longe as they be not cōferred with the other places of scripture, they shall not seme otherwyse to be vnderstonde, then as the soulsnes erpoundeth them. But who so euer thou be that readest scripture, let the holy ghost be thy teacher, and let one text erpounde another vnto the: As for such dreames, which are darke sentences as be hyd from thy vnderstondinge, commytte them vnto God, and make no articles of them: But let the playne text be thy gyde, and the spyrete of God (which is the auctor therof) shall lede the in all treuth.

As for the prayer of Salomon (which thou findest not herin) the prayer of Jeremias, and swete songe that he and his two felowes songe in the fyre: the first (namely the prayer of Salomon) readest thou in the eight chapter of the thirde boke of the kinges, so that it appeareth not to be Apocryphum: The other prayer and songe (namely of the thre childre) haue I not founde amonge ony of the interpreters, but onely in the olde latyn texte, which repugneth to be of Theodotiōs translacion. Neuertheles, both because of them that be weake and scrupulous, and for therr sakes also that loue such swete songes of thankesgeuinge: I haue not left them out: to the intēt that the one shulde haue no cause to complayne, and that the other might haue the more occasion to geue thankes vnto God in aduersite, as the thre children in the fyre. Grace be with the. Amen.

¶ The thirde boke of Esdras.

What this boke conteyneth.

Chap. i. The vertuous kyng Osias reuiueth y seruice of God, fetcheth the preistes in their ordre, and holdeth the feast of Easter. Of his death. Of Jechonias his soune. Of kyng Joachim and Sedechias.

Chap. ii. God moueth kynge Cyrus to delyuer the prisoners, like as he prompted by the prophet Jeremy. Of kynge Artaxerses, by whose auctorite the Jewes are forbedden to baylde vp Jerusalem.

Chap. iii. Of the feast that kyng Darius made, and of the thre pompe men that wrote euery one hys sentence, to proue who might saye the best. The first sheweth his myrde.

Chap. iiii. The seconde goeth about to proue hys sentence the wisest, but zorobabel geueth the victory, for the treuth beareth euer the best. Darius commaundeth to baylde vp Jerusalem agayne.

Chap. v. What they be and how many that came agayne to Jerusalem out of the captiuite of Babilon. The temple and the aulter are begon to be made. The Heithen withstonde them.

Chap. vi. The officers of Syria write vnto kynge Darius, to forbyd the buyldinge of the temple at Jerusalem: but he commaundeth to bayld it, according vnto the ordinaunce that kyng Cyrus made before.

Chap. vii. The aduersaries appeare before the kynge, the buyldinge is fynished, and the feast holden.

Chap. viii. How Esdras and the other were discharged by the letters and commaundement of kynge Artaxerses) go vp to Jerusalem. Their complaynte concerninge those, that were not yet cleane.

Chap. ix. Of the counsell that was taken touchinge the vncleane maryell.

The.first. Chapter.

AND Josias * helde the feast of Easter in Jerusalem vnto the LORDE, & slewe þ Passeouer the fourtéth daye of the first moneth. He set þ preestes also in ordre (according to their daylie courses) being clothed in longe garmétes in the tẽple of the LORDE. And he spake vnto the Leuites þ holy ministers of Israel, that they shuld halowe them selues vnto the LORD, to set þ Arke of the LORDE, in þ house þ king Salomon the sonne of Dauid had buylded & sayde: ye shal nomore beare the Arke vp on your shulders. Now serue your LORD & the charge of his people of Israel, after your lynages and youre trybes: according to king Dauid the kyng of Israel hath ordeyned, & according as Salomon hys sonne hath commaunded. * And prepare youre selues orderly prepared: see loke þ ye all stande in the temple, according to the order & distribution of the principal mẽ which are appoynted out of the tribes, to do seruice vnto þ children of Israel. * Kyll þ Passeouer, & prepare offeringes for your brethrẽ & do according to the commaundemẽt of Moses, which he gaue vnto Moses. And vnto þ people þ was foũde, Josias gaue thre thousande of shepe, lãbes, kyddes & goates, & thre thousande oxẽ. These the kyng (of his kingly liberalite) gaue vnto the people, according as he had promysed: & to the preestes for the Passeouer, he gaue two thousande & fyue hundreth oxẽ. Moreouer Jechonias, & Semeias, and Nathanael brethrẽ, & Asabias, Jehiel, and Josabad, gaue them of the Passeouer, fyue thousãde shepe & fyue hundreth oxẽ.

And when these thinges were brought to passe, the preestes and the Leuites stode good with their offices, and had þ vnleuended bread after the tribes. And after the ordring of the principall men in the trybes, they offred vp the LORDE in the sight of þ people, according as it is wrytten in the boke of Moses, * & so they rosted the Easterlambe as acordinge was. As for þ thankofferinges & the other, they dight thẽ in kettels & pottes & set them before the people with good will & afterwarde before thẽ selues & the preestes. For the preestes offred the fatt, vntyll the tyme was expyred, but the Leuites prepared for them selues & for their brethren the children of Aaron. The syngers also þ children of Asaph, stode in their ordre, according as Dauid had deuyded. And vpo Asaph, Zacharye & Jedithũ, which were appoynted by the king Moreouer the porters & dorekepers stode by the dores & þ diligently, so that none went out of his stondinge & seruice: for their brethren (the Leuites) prepared for them. Thus were all thinges performed, that belonged to the offringe of þ LORDE. In that daye they helde the Passeouer, & offred thankofferinges beside þ sacrifice of þ LORD, according to þ cõmaundement of kynge Josias

Exo.12.b.

And the children of Israel which were thẽ present, helde an honorable Passeouer, & the feast of swetebread seuẽ dates lõge. See such a Passeouer was not kepte in Israel, from the tyme of the prophet Samuel. And all þ kynges of Israel helde not suche an Easter, as this which kyng Josias helde, & þ preestes the leuites, þ Iewes, & all Israell of all thẽ þ were at Jerusalẽ. In þ eighteenth yeare of þ raigne of Josias was this Passeouer kepte. And with a parfecte hart dyd kynge Josias ordre all his workes (before þ LORD) & the thinges that were wrytten of him in tymes past, cõcernynge those that synned & were vngodly against the LORD before all people, & þ sought not the worde of the LORD dyd Israel. * After all these actes of king Josias Pharao the kynge of Egipte went vp, & came towarde Carcamis by Euphrates, and Josias wente to mete him. Then sente the kynge of Egipte vnto Josias, sayeng: what haue I to do with the o kynge of Iuda? I am not sent of the LORD to fight agaynst the, for my warre is vppon Euphrates, go

And Josias wolde not turne agayne vpon his charret, but vndertoke to fight agaynst him: & herkened not vnto þ worde of the prophet, which he tolde him out of the mouth of God, but pitched a batail agaynst him in þ felde of Mageddo. And the prynces preasled to kynge Josias. Then sayde the kyng vnto
3.Re.22.f. hys seruauntes: * Cary me awaye out of the battayll, for I am sore wounded. And immediatly his seruauntes toke hym awaye out of the front of the battayll. Then satt he vp vpon the seconde charret, came to Jerusalē, dyed, & was buried in hys fathers sepulcre. And in all Jewry they mourned for Josias, yee the rulers also with their wyues made lamentacion for hym vnto this daye: And this was done euer still in Israel.

These thinges are written in the boke of the stories of the kynges of Juda: namely, all the actes & workes of kyng Josias, hys kyngly power & maiesty, his vnderstandinge in the lawe of God, & what he dyd, yee & thinges which are not written in the boke of 4.Re.23.f. the kynges of Israel & Juda. * And the peo-
2.par.36.a ple toke Jechonias the sonne of Josias, and made him kinge in þ steade of Josias his father whan he was thre & thirtie yeare olde. And he raigned ouer Israel thre monethes. And the kynge of Egipte put him downe, þ he shulde not raigne in Jerusalē, & rayled vp a tarynge of the people: namely an hundreth talentes of syluer & one talent of golde. The king of Egipte also made Joachim his brother kynge of Juda & Jerusalem. As for thē of the kinges counsayl with the kynge himself and Zaraceles his brother, he toke thē, & caried thē awaye prisoners in to Egipte. Fyue & twenty yeare olde was Joachim, whan he was made kyng in the londe of Juda and Jerusalem, and he dyd euel before the LORDE. * After this, Nabuchodonosor þ kynge

1.Esd.4.f buchodonosor also toke all the * vessell that were halowed in the tēple of the LORD, & all the iewels, & caried thē vnto Babilon, & brought thē in to his owne tēple at Babilō. Of his vnclennes & vngodlines, it is writtē in the boke of the actes of the kynges. And Joachim his sonne raigned in his steade: he was made kyng beinge eyghtene yeare olde, & raigned but thre monethes and ten dayes in Jerusalem, & dyd euell before the LORD So after a yeare, Nabuchodonosor sent and caused him be brought vnto Babilon with the holy vessels of the LORD, & made Sedechias his brother kyng of Juda and Jerusalem, whā he was one & twētye yeare olde: and he raigned eleuen yeare.

And he dyd euell also in þ sight of þ LORDE, & cared not for the wordes * þ were spo- Jer.
ken vnto him by the prophet Jeremy at the mouth of the LORD. And where as he had made an ooth vnto kyng Nabuchodonosor, he forswore himself, & fell frō him, hauinge a stif neck and hart, & trāsgressed all þ statutes & ordinaūces of þ LORD god of Israel. The rulers also and heades of þ people of þ LORDE dyd much euell, & became vngodly, more thē the Heithen, beynge defyled in all maner of abhominaciōs: yee & defyled the holy f tēple of þ LORD at Jerusalē. And the God of their fathers sente his messaungers vnto them, to turne them backe, & to cal thē again from their synnes: for he wolde fayne haue spared thē for his holy tabernacles sake. Neuertheles, they had his messaungers in derision: & loke what God spake vnto thē by his prophetes, they made but a sporte of it. This drew on so longe, tyl the LORD was wroth with his people for their vngodlynes, & tyll he caused the kinges of the Caldees to come vp, which slew their yōge men wt the sweard yee euen in the compasse of their holy temple
Dan.1 * and spared no body, nether yonge nor olde nether mayden nor yōge man: but they were all delyuered in to the power of the kynges of the Caldees, and all the holy vessels of þ LORD and the kynges treasures toke they and caried thē vnto Babilō. As for þ house Jer.52 of the LORD, they brent it, and brake down the walles of Jerusalē, set fyre vpon hir towres, destroyed all hir noble buyldinges, and brought them to naught, and the people that were not slayne with the sweard, they caried vnto Babilon.

Thus became they þ prisoners & bōde mē of þ kyng of Babilon, tyll they were delyuered & raygned for them selues, when the wordes of the LORD were fulfilled, * which he Jer.25
promysed them by the mouth of the prophet Jeremy, and tyll the lōde had hir rest: namely, all the tyme that it laye wayst, had it reste and quyetnes seuen and seuentye yeares.

NOw whā kyng Cyrus raigned A
ouer the Perslās, & whā þ LORD 2.par.
DE wolde performe the wor- 36.d
de that he had promysed by the mouth of the prophet Jeremy: the LORD rayled vp the spyrte of Cyrus, þ kynge of the Perslās, so þ he caused this writinge to be proclamed thorow out his whole

wine, sayenge: Thus sayeth the kyng of ꝑ
sians: The LORDE of Israel that hye
LORD hath made me kinge of the londe, &
commaunded me to buylde him an house at Jerusalem in Jewry. ꝑfore be ony now of youre people, the LORD be with him, & go up with him to Jerusalem. And al they that dwell rounde about ꝑ place, shall helpe the,
whether it be with golde, with syluer, with gifte, with horses & necessary catell, and all other thynges ꝑ are brought with a fre will
to the house of the LORDE at Jerusalem.

Then the principall me out of the trybes
and villages of Juda and Be Jamin stode vp and the prestes also & the leuites (whō
the LORDE had moued) to go vp, & to buil de the house of ꝑ LORDE at Jerusalē. And they that were aboute them, helped them wt
all maner of golde, and syluer, and catel also
and with many liberall giftes: and this dyd

kynge of Babilon had caried awaye frō Je rusalem, and consecrated them to his Idoll
and ymage) and delyuered them to Mithridates his treasurer, & by him they were de-liuered to Balmanasar ꝑ debyte in Jewry.
And this was the nōbre of them: Two thou vessels of golde, & siluer were. v. M. viii. C.

and lx. These were nombred vnto Balma-nasar, them that were come agayne with him to Jerusalē out of the captiuite of Ba-bilon. Now in the tyme of kyng Artarerses
the kynge of Persia, these men: Balemus & Mithridatus, Habellius, Rathimus, Bal-timus, Semelius ꝑ scrybe, and other that dwelt in Samaria & in other places vnder ꝑ
dominion therof, wrote a letter vnto kynge Artarerses, wherin they complayned vnto
the kyng of them in Jewry and Jerusalem.
The letter was made after this maner:

Oure, thy seruauntes Rathimus the storye
wryter, Habellius the scrybe, & other iuges of thy courte in Celosyria and Phenices
Be it knowne & manifest to our lorde ꝑ kyng,
that the Jewes which are come vp frō you
re to us in to the rebellious and wicked cite begone to buylde it agayne, and the walles therof set, and to set vp the tēple of the new.
Now if this cite and the walles therof be set vp agayne, they shal not only refuse to ge ue tributes and tarynges, but also rebell vtterly agaynst the kyng. And for so muche as they take this in hande now aboute the tem ple, we thought it reason, to thinke no scorn
of it, but to shewe it vnto our lorde ꝑ kynge, &
to certifie him therof: to the intēt ꝑ yf it please the kyng, he maye cause it be sought in the bokes of olde: and thou shalt finde such war
nynge written, and shalt vnderstonde, that this cite hath alwaye ben rebellious and disobedient, that it hath subdued kynges &
cities, and that the Jewes which dwel ther-
in, haue euer bene rebellious, obstinate, vn-faithful, and fightinge people, for the which cause this cite is wasted. Wherfore now we certifie oure lorde the kyng, that yf this citie
be buylded and occupied agayne, & the wal-les therof set vp a new, thou canste haue no passage in to Celosyria and Phenices.

Then wrote the kynge to Rathimus the storywryter, to Balthemus, to Habellius ꝑ scribe, and to the other officers and dwellers in Syria and Phenices, after this maner: I
haue red the epistle which thou sentest vnto
me, and haue cōmaunded to make diligēt
search, and haue founde, ꝑ the cite hath euer
resisted kynges, that the same people are dis obedient, and haue caused much warre, & ꝑ
mightie kynges haue raigned in Jerusalē,
which also haue rayled vp tarynges of Syria & Phenices. Wherfore, I haue commaū ded those people, that they shal not buylde ꝑ citie, that they make no more in it, and that they procede no further with the buyldinge:
for somuch as it might be the cause of warre
and displeasure vnto kynges.

Now whan Rathymus and Habellius
the scribe and the rulers in the lōde had red
the writtinge of kynge Artarerses, they gatt
them together, and came in al the hast to Je rusalem with an hoost of horsemen, and with muche people of fotemē, and forbad them to buylde. And so they left of from buylding of the tēple, vnto the seconde peare of kynge Darius.

The.iii.Chapter.

Kyng Darius made a great feast
vnto his seruaūtes, vnto al his courte, and to all the officers of Media, and Persia, yee and to all the debytes & rulers that we re vnder him, from India vnto Ethiopia, an hundreth & .xxvii. countrees. So whan they had eaten, and dronken beinge satisfied, and were gone home agayne, Darius the kyng wente in to his chambre, layed him down to slepe, and so awaked.

Then the thre yonge men, that kepte the kynges persionne, and watched his body, cõmoned amonge the selues, and spake one to another: Let euery one of vs saye some thinge, and loke whose sentence is wyser & more excellent than the other, vnto him shal kyng Darius geue greate gyftes, and clothe him with purple. He shal geue him vessels of golde to drynke in, clothes of golde and couerinages: he shall make him a costly charet and a bridle of golde, he shall gette him a bouet of white silke and a chayne of golde about his neck: yee he shall be the seconde & principall nerte vnto kynge Darius, and that because of his wysdome, and shalbe called the kinges kynsman.

So euery one wrote his meaninge, sealed it and layed it vnder the kinges pelowe, and sayde: whan the kynge aryseth, we will geue him oure writinges: and loke whose worde the kynge and his chefe lordes iudge to be the moost wysely spoke, the same shall haue the victory. One wrote: wyne is a stronge thinge. The seconde wrote: The kyng is stronger. The thirde wrote: women haue yet more strength, but aboue all thinges ỹ trueth beareth awaye the victory. Now whan the kinge was ryssen vp, they toke their writinges and delyuered them vnto him, and so he red them. Then sent he forth to call all his chefe lordes, all the debytes & rulers of the countrees of Media and Persia. And whan they were set downe in the councell, ỹ writinges were red before them. And he commaunded to cal for the yõge men, ỹ they might declare their meaninges them selues by mouth. So when they were sent for, and came in, ỹ king sayde vnto them: shewe vs and make vs to vnderstonde, what the thynges are that ye haue written.

Then begaune the first (which had spoke of the strength of wyne) & sayde: O ye men, * wyne is maruelous stronge, & ouercometh them ỹ drynke it: it deceaueth the mynde, & bryngeth both the poore man & the kynge to dotage and vanite. Thus doth it allo to the bondman and with the fre, with the poore & rych: it taketh awaye their vnderstondinge, and maketh them careles and merp, so that none of them remembreth ony heuynes, det, or dewtie: It causeth a man to thinke allo ỹ the thinge which he doth, is honest & good: & remembreth not that he is a kynge nor that he is in auctorite, & that he ought not to do such thinges. Moreouer, whan men are drynkinge, they forget al frendshipe, al brotherly faithfulnes & loue: but as soone as they are drõken, they drawe out the swearde and will fight: & whan they are lated downe from the wyne, & so ryssen vp agayne, they can not tell what they dyd. Judge ye now, Is not wyne the strõgest? For who wolde els take in hãde to do suche thinges? And whan he had spoke this, he held his tonge.

The.iiii.Chapter.

Then the seconde (which had sayde, that the kyng was stronger) beganne to speake, sayenge: O ye men, are not they the strõgest & moost excellent, that rõquere the lõde & the see, & all that is in ỹ see & in the earth? Now is the kyng lord of all these thinges, & hath dominion of thẽ all: & loke what he cõmaundeth, it is done. ỹ he sende his men forth a warfare, they go & breake down hilles, walles & towres. They are slayne, & slaye (other men) thẽ selues, & ouerpasse not the kynges worde. ỹ they get the victory, they bringe ỹ kyng all the spoyle. Likewise, the other that medle not with warres & fightinge, but tyll the grounde: whan they reape they bringe tribute vnto the kynge. And ỹ the kynge alone do but commaunde to kyll, they kyll: ỹ he cõmaunde to forgeue, they forgeue: ỹ he cõmaunde to smyte, they smyte: ỹ he byd dryue awaye, they dryue awaye: ỹ he commaunde to buylde, they buylde: ỹ he cõmaũde to breake down, they breake down: ỹ he cõmaunde to plaute, they plãte. The common people & the rulers are obedient vnto him. And the kynge in the meane season syteth him downe, eateth and drynketh, & taketh his rest: thẽ kepe they watch rouñde aboute ỹ kinge, & not one of thẽ dare get him out of ỹ waye, to do his owne busynes, but muste be obedient vnto the kyng at a worde. Judge ye now o ye men, how shulde not he go farre aboue, vnto whome men are thus obedient? And whan he had spoken this, he held his tonge. The thirde (whose name was Zorobabel, which had spoken of wemen of the trueth) begãne to saye after this maner: O ye men, it is not the great kyng, it is not the multitude of mẽ, nether is it wine ỹ excelleth. Who is it thẽ, ỹ hath ỹ lordshipe ouer them? Haue not wemẽ borne the kyng, & all ỹ people ỹ rule these thinges? Haue not wemẽ borne thẽ, & brought thẽ vp, ỹ plante the vynes, wherout ỹ wyne cõmeth? They make garmẽtes for all mẽ, they geue honour vnto all mẽ, & without wemẽ can not men lyue. ỹ they gather golde & syluer & all precious thinges, & se a fayre & welfauoured womã, they leue togyther, and turne theyr eyes onely vnto the woman, and gape vpon her, and haue nede vnto her, then vnto the syluer, and golde, or ony maner of precious thinge. A man leaueth his father þ brought hym vp, he leaueth his owne naturall countre, & cleaueth vnto the wom̃: yee he loseth his life with the woman, and remembreth nother father, nor mother, nor countre. By this ye must nedes knowe, that women haue the dominion ouer you.

Doth it greue you? A m̃ taketh his swearde and goeth his waye to steale, to kyll, to murther, to sayle vpon the see, and seyth a lyon, and goeth in the darkenes: and when he hath stolē, deceaued & robbed, he bringeth it vnto his loue. Agayne, a man loueth his wife better then father and mother: yee ma ny one there be, that reme out of theyr wyt me, and become bondmen for theyr wyues sake: many one also haue perysshed, and ha ue synned, and haue synned because of women.

And now beleue me, I knowe a kynge which is greate in his power, and al londes stande in awe of him, and no man dare laie hande vpon him: yet dyd I se, that Apame (the daughter of the greate kige Bartacus) the kynges concubine, satt beside the kynge vpon the right hande, & toke of his crowne from his heade, and set it vpon hir own hea de, and smote the kynge with hir left hande moreouer, the kynge loked vpon her with open mouth: yf she laughed vpon him, he laughed also: but yf she toke ony displeasure with him, the kyng was fayne to flatter her and to geue her good wordes, til he had got in his fauoure agayne.

Ye men, are not wemen then stronger? Greate is the earth, and hie is the heauen and swyfte is the course of the sonne, he compaseth the heauen rounde about, & fetcheth his course agayne to his owne place in one daye. Is he not excel lent that doth this? yee greate is the treuth, and stronger then all thinges. All the earth calleth vpon the treuth, the heauen prayseth it, all workes shake and tremble at it, and with it is not vnrighteous thinge. Wine is vnrighteous, the kynge is vnrighteous, we men are vnrighteous, el the children of men are vnrighteous, yee all theyr workes are vnrighteous, and there is no treuth in them, in their vnrighteousnes also shal they be destroyed and perysh. * As for the treuth, it endureth, and is alwaye stronge: it lyueth and conquereth for euermore worlde wythout ende. Esa.40.c. 59.a.116.b

The treuth acceypteth no persones, it putteth no difference betwirte rych or poore betwirte the myghtie or symple, but doth right vnto euerymā, whether they be euel or good, and all men are sowyngly deale withal in the workes of it. In the iudgment of it there is no vnrighteous thynge, but strength, kingdome, and power and mateste for euermore. Blessed be the God of treuth.

And with that he helde his tonge, and all the people cried and sayde: Greate is the treuth, and aboue all. Then sayde the kinge vnto hym: Are what thou wilt, more then is appoynted in the wrytinge, and I shall geue it the, for thou art founde wyser then thy companyons: thou shalt syt nere me, and be my kynsman. Then sayde he vnto the kynge: Remembre thy promyse and vowe, which thou hast vowed and promysed vnto the daye whan thou camest to the kyn dome, to buylde vp Jerusalem, and to sende agayne all the vessels and Jewels, that were taken away out of Jerusalem: which Cy rus seperated, whan he offred in Babylon, and wolde sende them agayne. And thy mīn de was to buylde vp the temple, which the Edomytes brent, whan Jerusalem was de stroyed by the Caldees. This onely (O kynge) is the thynge that I requyre, this is the mayestey, which I desyre and are of the: that thou performe the vowe, which thou with thyne owne mouth hast made vnto the kynge of heauen.

Then Darius the kynge stode vp, and kyssed hym, * and wrote a letter vnto all the debytes and shreues, to all the lordes and nobles, that they shulde conueye him forth, and all them that wolde go vp with hym. He wrote a letter also vnto all the shreues that were in Celosyria and Phenyces, and vnto Lybanus, that they shulde haue re dyrrtres from Lybanus vnto Jerusalem, to buylde the cite withall. Moreouer he wro te vnto all the Jewes that were gone out of his realme in to Jewry because of the fredome, that no officer, nor ruler, nor shreue shulde come to theyr dores: and that all theyr londe, which they had con quered, shulde be fre, and not tributary: And that the Edomytes shulde geue ouer the citees, and villagies of the Jewes, which they had taken in: yee and that 2.esd.ii. 2.esd.6.b

they shulde yearly geue. xx. talentes to the buyldinge of the temple, until the tyme that it were fynyshed: and to ꝑ daylie halowinge of the brentofferinges (as it is commaunded) ten talentes yearly also: And that all they which come from Babilon to buylde the cite, shulde haue fre libertie, they & theyr children, and all the prestes.

F He wrote the greatnesse also, and commaunded that the holy garment shulde be geuen them, wherin they mynistred: and wrote that commaundementes shulde be geuen to the Leuites, vntill the daye, that the house were fynished and Jerusalem buylded vp: and commaunded that all they that watched the cite, shulde haue their porcions and wages.

He gaue ouer also all the vessell that Cyrus had separeted frō Babilon: and all that Cyrus had geuen in commaundement, the same charged he also, that it shulde be done and sent vnto Jerusalem. Now whan this yonge man was gone forth, he turned his face towarde Jerusalem, and prayed the kynge of heauen, and sayde: Of the com-
Ecclī.1.a meth victory * of the commeth wysdome, and clearnesse, and I am thy seruaunt. Blessed art thou, which hast geuen me wysdome the will I praise, O L O R D E, thou God of oure fathers.

And so he toke the letters, and wente vn to Babilon: And whan he came there, he tolde this vnto all his brethren that were at Babilon, and they prayed the God of their fathers, that he had geuen them refreshing and liberte to go vp, and to buylde Jerusalem and the temple (which is there called after the name of the L O R D E) and they reioyced with instrumentes, and gladnesse, seuen dayes longe.

The. b. Chapter.

1.Esd. 2.a After this, where the pryncipall men of all the byllagies chosen in the trybes and kynreddes, ꝑ they shulde go vp with their wyues and chyldren, with their seruauntes and maydens, with all theyr catel and substaunce. And Darius the kynge sent with them a thousande horsmen, to conueye them safely vnto Jerusalem: and their brethren were glad, playenge vpon instrumentes, and syngynge.

And these are the names of the men, which wente vp out of the byllagies accordinge to the trybes. Of the prestes, the sonne of Phineas, the sonne of Aaron: Jesus the sonne of Josedec, Joachim the sonne of * Zorobabel the sonne of Salathiel (of the 1.Esd.
kynred of Dauid, out of the kynred of Phares, of the trybe of Juda) * which spake wonderfull thinges vnder Darius the kynge of Persia, in the seconde yeare of his rayng in the first moneth of Nisan. 1.Esd.

These also are they of Jewry, which came vp and turned agayne vnto Jerusalem, out of the captiuyte that Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babilon had brought vnto Babilon. And eueryman sought his porcion agayne in Jewry, his cite, they that came with Zorobabel, and with Jesus, Nehemias, Saraias, Raelaias, Elmeus, Emmanius, Mardocheus, Beelserus, Mechpha, Rochor, Oliorus, Emonias, one of theyr prynces.

And the nombre of them, accordinge to ꝑ theyr kynreddes and rulers, was: The chyldren of Phares, two thousande, an hundreth, and, lxxii. The chyldren of Sees. iii. M. an. C. and. lvii. The prestes: The sonnes of Jedus, of (

dures of Suther: The sonnes of El Jasib, .ii.C.and.lxii. The sonnes of Emerus.ii. C.and.lii. The sonnes of Fasurius.iii.C.x. lvii. The sonnes of Carea. ii. C.and.xxvii. The Leuites: The sonnes of Jesus in Cadmiel and Banus, and Serebias, & Edeas foure and foure.

The whole nombre of these frō. xii. yeares was.iii.M.viii.C.and.lxii. Of the sonnes doughters, and wyues, the whole summe was.iii.M.ii.C.and.xlii. The sonnes of the prestes that prayed God in the temple: The sonnes of Asaph, of whom there were.iii.C.and.xxviii. But the doze keperes were: The chyldren of Esmenus: The chyldren of Aer: The chyldren of Amon: The chyldren of Icuba, Topa: The chyldren of Cetan.C.and xxxix. in all.

The prestes that serued in the temple: The sonnes of Sel, the sonnes of Gaspha, the sonnes of Tobloch, the sonnes of Caria the sonnes of Sub, the sonnes of Helin, the sonnes of Labana, the sonnes of Ermacha, the sonnes of Acub, the sonnes of Utha, the sonnes of Cetha, the sonnes of Aggab, the sonnes of Obay, the sonnes of Anani, the sonnes of Canna, the sonnes of Geddu, the sonnes of Iu, the sonnes of Radin, the sonnes of Delanon, the sonnes of Nechoda, the sonnes of Caseba, the sonnes of Goza, the sonnes of Ozil, the sonnes of Sinona, the sonnes of Atra, the sonnes of Hastem, the sonnes of Asana, the sonnes of Maney, the sonnes of Nassin, the sonnes of Accuba the sonnes of Agilla, the sonnes of Azui, the sonnes of Fauon, the sonnes of Phasalon, the sonnes of Meeda, the sonnes of Susa, the sonnes of Cared, the sonnes of Barcus, the sonnes of Sarea, the sonnes of Coesy, the sonnes of Nasit, the sonnes of Agilla, the sonnes of Pedon: Salomon his sonnes the sonnes of Asophot, the sonnes of Phasida, the sonnes of Celi, the sonnes of Pedon, the sonnes of Gaddahel, the sonnes of Zaphera, the sonnes of Aggia, the sonnes of Phocharet, the sonnes of Sabathen, the sonnes of Saroneth, the sonnes of Nasit, the sonnes of Inia, the sonnes of Sasus, the sonnes of Addus, the sonnes of Suba, the sonnes of Cura, the sonnes of Rahotis, the sonnes of Phasphat, the sonnes of Nalo. All these mynistred in the Sanctuary and were seruauntes of Salomon: euen .cc.lxxii.

These folawenge are they, that wente vp from Thelmellat Thelarsa (whose pynces were Carmelis, and Careth) and myght not shewe forth their cities and kynredes, how they were of Israel: The sonnes of Dalarus, the sonnes of Tuben, the sonnes of Nechodiacus. Of the prestes that executed the office of the prestlhode, and were not founde: The sonnes of Obia, the sonnes of Achilos the sonnes of Addin, which maried one of the doughters of Phargeleu, and were named after hym. The wrytinge of the same kynred was sought in the regiſter of theyr generacion, but it was not founde: and therfore were they forbydden to execute the office of the prestlhode. Unto these sayde Nehemias, and Attharas, that they shulde haue no porcion in the Sanctuary, tyl there rose vp an hie prest, that were well instructe in the playne clearnes and treuth. Of all Israel (beside seruauntes and maydens) there were.xlii.M.iii.C.and.xl. Now were there of seruauntes and maydens.vii.M.iii.C.and xxxvi. Of synginge men and synginge women there were.ii.C.and.lxv. Foure hundreth.and.xxxv. camels. Seuē thousande & xxxvi. horses. Two hūdreth thousande, and xlv, mules. Fyue thousande & xxxv. asses.

Theyr heades also, and the rulers in the trybes, whan they came to Jerusalem, and wolde buylde and set vp the temple of God, agayne in his place, they gaue (after theyr abylite) vnto the temple, to the treasure and to the seruyce of the Sanctuary. xii. M. pounds of golde. b. thousande of syluer, and an hundreth prestes garmentes. And so dwelt the prestes, and the Leuytes, and the people that wente out of Jerusalem, & in the countre there aboute, the synger[illegible], and the porters, euery one of Israel in [illegible] owne lande.

*So whan the seuenth moneth came, and whan the chyldren of Israel were euerymā at his busynes, they came all with one consent in to the courte, which was before the east doze. And there stode Jesua the sonne of Josedec, and his brethren the prestes, and Zorobabel the sonne of Salathiel, and his brethren, settynge vp an aulter, to offre brentsacrifices vpon it, as it is wrytten in the lawe of Moses the man of God. Leui.23.

There came people also of other countrees, and the heythen out of all londes, set vp the aulter in his place, and offred sacrifices and brentofferinges vnto the LORDE in the morowynge. And so they helde the feast of tabernacles, * as it is cōmaunded in the lawe. And daylie offred they as acordinge was, and made the sacrifices appoynted, the offrynges also of the Sabbathes, and of the 1.Esd.5.b. new Moones, and all holy feastes. * And all they that vowed offeringes vnto the LORDE, beganne at the new Moone of the seuenth moneth to offre vnto God, for the temple of the LORDE was not yet buylded. And they gaue vnto the masons, and carpentes, money, meate, and drynke with chearfulnesse. Vnto them of Sydon also, and Tyre they gaue cartes, that they shulde cary cedretrees from Libanus to be seastes and beames, and that they shulde make shippes in the hauen of Joppa, accordinge as it was apoynted and ordeyned, by Cyrus kynge of the Persians.

Esd.49.b and.c. And in the seconde yeare they came in to the temple of God at Jerusalem. * In the seconde moneth beganne Zorobabel the sonne of Salathiel, and Jesua the sonne of Josedec, and theyr brethren the prestes and Leuites, and all they that were come vnto Jerusalem out of the captiuyte of Babilō, and layed the foundacion of the temple of God, in the new Moone of the seconde moneth in the seconde yeare that they were come in to Jewry and Jerusalem. And they appoynted the Leuites (that were aboue. xx. yeare olde) vnto the seruyce of the LORDE: so Jesua and his sonnes and his brethren all the Leuytes stode together, and performed the lawe, and ordinaunce in the house of the LORDE.

And the prestes stode and had theyr garmentes and trompettes, and the Leuites, the sonnes of Asaph had cymbals, geuynge thankes, and prayses vnto the LORDE 2.Esd.17.b * accordinge as Dauid the kynge of Israel had ordeyned. And the songe that they dyd synge vnto LORDE, was after this ma- Ps.135.a ner: * O synge vnto the LORDE, for he is gracious, and his goodnes vpon Israel endureth for euer. And all the people blew out with trompettes, and sunge with loude voyce, praysynge the LORDE together in the rearinge vp of the house of the LORDE. There came also from amonge the prestes and Leuites the rulers and elders, accordinge to the trybes and kynreds (such as had sene the house afore) to the buyldinge of this temple with greate crie and greate mournynge, many also with trompettes and greate pote, in so much that ỹ trōpettes myght not wel be herde for the weppynge, & mournynge. For the comon people blew goodly vpon the trompettes.

* Then came the enemies of the trybes of Juda and Ben Jamin, to knowe what that trompettynge and noyse of shawmes myght be. And they perceaued that it was they which were come agayne out of captyuyte, and wolde buylde the temple a new vnto the LORDE God of Israel. So they wente to Zorobabel, and Jesua, and to the rulers of the vyllages, and sayde vnto them Shall we buylde with you also? for we lyke wyse haue herde youre LORDE, and we walke after the same maner, from the dayes of Asbazareth the kynge of Assiria, which brought vs hither. Then Zorobabel, and Jesua, and the rulers of the vyllages of Israel sayde vnto them: It is not meta, that ye shulde buylde the temple of oure God with vs: we oure selues alone will buylde vnto 1.Esd the LORDE * lyke as Cyrus the kynge of the Persians hath commaunded vs.

But the Heythen in the londe layed them selues agaynst those that were in Jewry, held vp the buyldinge from them, layed wayte vpō them preuely, stopped such as brought ony thynge to them, forbad them to buylde and hyndereth those that made them passage, that ỹ buyldinge shulde not be fynyshed: and this continued so longe as kynge Cyrus lyued: and so they put of the buyldinge for the space of two yeare, vntill the raygne of kynge Darius.

The.vi.Chapter.

NOt withstondinge, in the seconde yeare of the raygne of Darius, * Aggeus and Zacharye 1.Esd. chary the sonne of Addo prophecied vpō them in Jewry and Jerusalem, in the name of the God of Israel. Then Zorobabel the sonne of Salathiel 2.Esd. and Jesua the sonne of Josedec stode vp * & beganne to buylde the house of the LORDE at Jerusalem, when the prophetes of the LORDE helpeth them.

At the same tyme came Sysennes the vnder shreue in Syria and Phenices, with the landlordes and his companyons, and sayde vnto them: Who hath bydden and commaunded you to buylde the house, & to make the rofe and all other thinges agayne? And who are the workemen, that buylde them? Neuertheles the elders of the Jewes had such grace of the LORDE, that they wolde not be lett (though they were prouoked ther to) but buylded on still, vntill the tyme that kynge Darius were certified therof, and an answere receaued from him. The letter that these men sent vnto kynge Darius, was after this maner.

Sysennes the vndershreue in Syria, &

princes, and the landlordes with theyr co
panions, which are head rulers in Syria and Phenices sende theyr salutacion vnto them the kynge. We certifie oure lorde
the kynge, that we came in to the londe of Jury, and wente to Jerusalem: where we found them buyldinge the greate house of god the temple, with greate costly stre
ture, and with goodly tymbre for the wal
lynge: they make greate hayst with the wor
ke, and helpe one another, and it goeth forth
prosperously in theyr handes, & with greate
diligence, and worshippe is it made.
Then sayd we the elders, who had com
maunded them to make vp the house, and to buylding: and this we dyd, to the in tent that we myght certifye the perfectly,
and wryte vnto the, the names of those that were the rulers of the worke. So they gaue vs this answere: we are the seruauntes of IOHOVE, which made heauen and earth: as for this house it hath bene buyl
ded and set vp afore tyme * by the greate, and myghtie kynge in Israel. But whan
our fathers prouoked God vnto wrath, synned agaynst the God of Israel, * he gaue them ouer in to the power of Nabu chodonosor kynge of Babilon the kynge of the Caldees, which brake downe the house and burnt it, and caried awaye the people
prysoners vnto Babilon.
Neuertheles, in the fyrst yeare that kynge Cyrus regned at Babilon, Cyrus
the kynge wrote and commaunded to buyl
dyng this house agayne: and all the orna
mentes that Nabuchodonosor caried awaye
out of Jerusalem vnto Babylon, appropria te vnto his owne temple: those brought Cyrus hym agayne, and delyuered them to Zorobabel, and to Salmanasar the vnder
lorde, commaundynge them, that they shul
de bringe those same ornamentes agayne
to Jerusalem in to the temple, and to begyn
ne buyldyng that tyme forth, to buylde the tem ple agayne in his owne place. Then Sal
manasar layed the foundacion of the IOH VE house at Jerusalem, and euer sence
hath they buylded, and yet is it not ended.
Therefore (O kynge) yf thou thynkest it good, let it be sought in the lybraries, and when of kynge Cyrus: yf it be founde then,
that it is done with the councell, and con sent of kynge Cyrus, and yf oure lorde the kynge be so mynded, let hym wryte vnto vs therof.
Then commaunded kynge Darius,
to seke in the lybraries: and so at Ecbatha
nis in a litle cite in Media there was found such a wyttuge: * In the fyrst yeare of the 1.esd.4.2
raygne of Cyrus, the same kynge Cyrus commaunded, that the house of the IOH
VE at Jerusalē shulde be buylded agayne
(and oboures to be made there contynually vnto the IOHVE) whose heyght shalbe
ten cubites, & breedth .xx. cubites. and. foure square with thre hewen stones, with a lofte
of tymbre of the same countre, yee with a new loft, and the expences therof to be ge uen of the house of kynge Cyrus. And the ornamentes of golde and syluer, that Na buchodonosor toke out of the house of the IOHVE at Jerusalem, shalbe set agayne
in the temple at Jerusalem, where they we re afore. Sylennes also the vndershryue in Syria, and Phenices, the prynces, and theyr companyons, and the other that be head rulers in Syria, and Phenices, shall not medle nor haue ony thynge to do with that place.
I Cyrus haue commaunded also, that &
they shall buylde the house of the IOHVE
whole vp: and haue ordeyned them to helpe
those that be come out of captiuyte, tyll the house of the IOHVE be fynished: and out of the trybute and tarynge that is yeat
ly raysed vp in Syria, and Phenices, dili gently to geue them a certayne summe, to the offerynge of the IOHVE: and the same to be delyuered vnto Zorobabel the officer: that he therwithall maye ordeyne oxen, rammes, lambes, and corne, salt, wyne
and oyle, and that continually euery yeare:
after the expences which the prestes that be at Jerusalem, shew to be made daylie: * this 1.esd.6.8
shalbe geuen vnto them without delaye,
that they maye offer sacrifyces daylie to the hyghest God, for the kynge and for his seruā tures, and to praye for theyr lyues. Let it be proclamed also on euery syde, that who so euer breaketh or despyseth this commaūn dement of the kynge, shalbe hanged vpon a galow (made of his owne good) and all his goodes shalbe seasoned vnto the kynge.
The IOHVE therfore (whose name is there called vpon) rote out and destroye all the kynges and people, that vndertake
by violence to hynder the same, or to deale vncurteously with the house of the IOHVE at Je rusalē. I Darius the kyn ge haue ordeyned, that these thinges shal
be done with al
diligence.

The.vii.Chapter.

3 Then Sysennes the vndershreue in Celosyria and Phenices, and the other landlordes with their companyons, obeyed the thinges that kynge Darius had ordened, were diligent in the holy workes, and where felow helpers with the olde rulers of the Jewes. And so the worke of the Sanctuary wente forth & prospered, whan Aggeus and Zachary prophecied. And they perfourmed all thinges thorow the commaundement of the LORDE God of Israel, and after the deuyce of Cyrus, Darius, and Artaxerses kynges of Persia.

B And thus was oure house fynished, vnto the.xxiii. daye of the moneth Addar in the.vi. yeare of kynge Darius. And the childre of Israel the prestes and the Leuites, and the other that were come out of captiuyte, and such as were ioyned vnto them, dyd acordinge as it is wrytten in the boke of Moses. And in the dedicacion of the temple they offred an hundreth oxen, an C. rammes. iiii. C lambes, and. xii. goates for þ synnes of al þ people of Israel, after the nombre of the trybes of Israel. The prestes also & the Leuites stode araied in their prestly garmētes after the trybes, ouer al the workes of the LORD C God of Israel, acordinge to the boke of Moses, and the porters by al the dores.

And the chyldren of Israel (with those that were come out of captiuyte) helde the Passouer the. xiiii. daye of the fyrst moneth whan the prestes and the Leuites were sanctified. They that came out of captiuyte, were not all sanctified together: but the Leuites were all sanctified together. And so all they that came out of captiuyte, kylled the easter lambe, for their brethren, for the prestes, and for them selues. And the chyldren of Israel that came out of captiuite, and escaped from all the abhominacions of the heythen, sought the LORDE, and kepte the feast of vnleuended bread. vii. dayes longe, eatinge and drynkynge, and were mery before the LORDE: that the LORDE had turned the deuyce of the kynge of Assiria, & cōforted their hādes to the workes of þ LORDE God of Israel.

The.viii.Chapter.

And after him, whan Artaxerses the kynge of the Persians raygned, there wente vnto hym Eldras the sonne of Saraias, the sonne of Ezarias, the sonne of Helchya the sonne of Sallum the sonne of Sadoc, the sonne of Achitob, the sonne of Amarias, the sonne of Ezarias, the sonne of Boccus, þ sonne of Abisu, the sonne of Phineas, sonne þ of Eleazar, þ sonne of Aaron the first prest. This Eldras wente vp from Babilon (for he had good vnderstondinge in the lawe of Moses, that was geuen of the LORDE God of Israel, to be taught, and done in dede.) And the kynge fauoured him and dyd him greate worshippe and honour after all his desyres. There wente vp with him also certayne of the childre of Israel, of the prestes, of the Leuites, of the synging porters, and mynistres of the temple at Jerusalem.

In the. vii. yeare of the raygne, of kynge Artaxerses, in the. v. moneth, þ is in the. vii. yeare of the raygne, they wente from Babilon in the newmoone of the. v. moneth, and came the hye waye to Jerusalem after his commaundement, lyke as the LORDE had prospered their iourney. For in this Eldras gat greate instruccion, that he shuld leaue none of the thinges behynde, which were in the lawe, and commaundements of God. And he taught whole Israel al righteousnes, and iudgment.

Then came the Secretaries of kynge Artaxerses and del uered the wrytinges (that were come from Artaxerses the kynge) to Eldras the prest and reader of þ lawe of the LORDE: And this is the copye of the letter: Kynge Artaxerses sendeth his greting vnto Eldras the prest and reder of the lawe of the LORDE: Of frendshippe, & good will I haue ordeyned and charged, þ there be ony of the Jewes, of the prestes, and Leuites in my realme, which desyreth, and is content to go with the vnto Jerusalem, that he maye do it. Therfore yf ony be appointed to beare the company, let them come together, and go with the (lyke as I am content and my. iii. frendes my counceilers:) to se what they do at Jerusalem and in Jewry

and kepe the thinges accordinge as thou hast in the lawe of the LORDE: and to bringe the giftes vnto God the LORDE of Israel, that I and my frendes haue promised to Jerusalem, and all the syluer, and golde that is in the countre of Babilon, vnto the LORDE to Jerusalem, with the thinge that is geuen for the people in the LORDES temple at Jerusalem: yee
and the same syluer, and golde maye be gathered, and oxen, rammes, shepe, and gostes, and other that belonge to these thinges
and that they maye offer sacrifices vnto the LORDE, vpon the aulter of theyr LOR-
DE, which is at Jerusalem.

And what so euer thou and thy brethren
will do with the syluer, and golde, that do
after thy mynde, and after the commaunde
ment of the LORDE thy God: and lyke
wyse with all the holy vessels, that are geue
for the seruyce of the house of the LOR-DE thy God: and other thinges what soe-uer is necessary for the to the worke of the house of thy God, that shalbe geuen the of the kynges treasure: and loke what thou yd
and thy brethren wilt do with the golde, and syluer, that do after the will of the LORDE
God. Kynge Artaxerses haue commaunded kepers of the treasures in Syria, & Phenices, that what soeuer Esdras the prest
and scriber of the lawe of the LORDE doth require, it shalbe geuen him: till an. C. talētes of syluer, and of golde in like maner: Of cor
as vnto an. C. measures, and tyll an hūdreth vessels of wyne, and other plenteous thyn-ges without nōbre. Let all thinges be done after the lawe of the hyghest God, that the wrath of God aryse not in the realme of the kynge and of his sonnes. I commaund you also, that ye requyre no taxinge nor trybute
of the prestes, Leuytes, syngers, and mynis-ters of the temple, nor of the wryters, and that no man haue auctorite to medle ony
thinge against them. As for the (O Esdras) set iudges, and arbitrers in the whole realme of Syria, and Phenices, after the wysedome of God: and learne all such as are ignorant in the lawe of God thy LOR-DE. And let all them that offende agaynst
it, be punyshed: wether it be vpō death,
other peyne, to be condemned in money, or else be punyshed.

Then sayde Esdras the wryter: Blessed
be the God of oure fathers, that hath geuen
such a mynde, and will in to the hart of the kynge, to magnifie his house that is at Jerusalem, and hath made me to be accepted in the syght of the kynge, of his councel, of his frendes, and of his nobles. And so I was stedfast in my mynde, according as the LORDE my God helped me, and I chose out of Israel, to go vp with me. * And 1.Esd.8.a.
these are the heades (after theyr kynreds,
and houses of theyr fathers) that wente vp
with me from Babilon, out of the kyngdome of Artaxerses: Of the sonnes of Phares Gersonius. Of the sonnes of Themarith, Amenus. Of the sonnes of Dauid, Accus
the sonne of Cecilia.

Of the sonnes of Phares, Zacharye: and
with him there turned agayne an hūdreth
and fiftie men. Of the sonnes of the captay-ne of Moabilon, Zarael, and with him. ii. C and. l. men. Of the sonnes of Zachnes, Je-chonias Zecholi, and with him. ii. C. and. l.
men. Of the sonnes of Dalamaalias, Go-tholie, and. lxx. with him. Of the sonnes of Zaphatia, Zarias Wtheli, & with him. lxx
Of the sonnes of Joab, Abdias Jeheli, and with him. ii. C. and. xii. men. Of the sonnes of Bania, Salimoth the sonne of Josaphia and with him an. C. and. lx. men. Of the son-nes of Beer, Zacharye, Bebey, and with him
ii. C. and. viii. men. Of the sonnes of Elead, Johānes, Ezechan, and with hym. C. and
x. men. Of the sonnes of Adonicam those that were the last, and these are theyr names: Eliphalam the sonne of Gebel, and Semeias, and with hym. lxx. men. All these called I together by the water Thia, where we pitched oure tentes thre dayes, and there I mustered them.

* As for the sonnes of the prestes, and Le- 1.Esd.8.b
uytes, I founde none there. Then sent I vn to Eleazar, and Ecelom, and Malimā, and Malobam, and Enaathan, and Samea, & Jozibimathan, Eunagan, Zacharye Mosol
lamum (these were the leders and men of experience) and I sent them worde, that they shulde come vnto Loddeus, which was by the place of the treasury, and commaunded
them that they shulde speake vnto Loddeus and to his brethren and to those that were in the treasury, to sende vs such men, as might execute the prestes office in the house of the LORDE oure God. And with the myghtie hande of oure LORDE God, they brought vnto vs men of good experience,
from amonge the sonnes of Mooslus, the sonne of Leui, the sonne of Israel, Sobebeiam and the sonnes, and his brethren Ar-bin, and Anim, of whom there were xviii.
From amonge the children of the sonnes of Chananeus, and theyr sonnes were. xx. men,

And of them that serued in the temple, whō Dauid had ordeyned, & the principall men that mynistred for the worke vnto the Leuites in the temple. ii. C. and. xx. men: whose names are all tokened vp in wryting.

D *Then commaunded I a fastynge vnto
1. Esd 8.c the ponge men before the LORDE, that I myght desyre of him a prosperous tourney, and a good waye for vs, ye for vs, for oure children, and for the catell, because of the lapenges wayte: and I durst not requyre of the kynge horsmen and fotemen, to conueye vs safely against oure enemies, for we had sayde vnto the kynge, that the power of the LORDE oure God shulde be with them, that seke him with theyr whole hart. And therfore we besought God oure LORDE earnestly because of these thinges, and he was mercifull vnto vs, and herde oure prayer. And I separated from amonge the rulers of the people, and from the prestes of the temple. xii. men, and Sebeia, and Asania, and ten men of theyr brethren wt them And I weied them the golde, and the syluer and all the prestly ornamentes of the house of our God, which the kynge and his councell, and his princes, and whole Israel had geuen. And whan I had weyed it, I gaue them an. C. and. l. talentes in syluer, an. C. talentes of syluer vessell, an. C. talentes of golde, and of golden vessell seuen tymes twentie, and vessels of other metall (yee of good metall). xii. glisteringe as the golde, & sayde vnto them: ye also are holy vnto the LORDE, and the vessels are holy, and the golde and the syluer is promysed vnto the LORDE the God of our fathers. Be diligent now, and kepe it, vntil the tyme that ye delyuer it to the rulers of the people, to the priestes, to the Leuytes, and to the principall men of the cities of Israel in Ierusalem, and in the chambre of the house of oure God.

E *So the priestes and the Leuites which re
1. Esd. 8.d ceaued of me the golde, the syluer, and þ vessell. brought in to Ierusalem in to the temple of the LORDE. And from the ryuer Thia we brake vp the. xii. daye of the first moneth tyll we came to Ierusalem. And whan the thyrde daye was past, the weyed golde, and syluer was delyuered in the house of þ LORDE the fourth daye, vnto Marimoth þ sonne of Ior the prest, and wt him was Eleazar the sonne of Phineas, & with them were Iosabdus the sonne of Iesnet. Medias & the sonne of Banus, & certayne of the Leuites to þ nombre & to the waygħte: & the waygħt of them was wrytten vp the same tyme. As for those that were come, out of captiuyte, they offred sacrifice vnto the LORDE the God of Israel: euen. xii. oxen for all Israel, lxxxvi. rammes, lxxii. shepe. xii. goates for synne. xii. kyne for a thankofferynge, all to þ sacrifice of the LORDE. And the kynges commission delyuered they vnto the stewardes, and debytes of the kynge, and to the vnderlyeues in Celosyria, and Phenices.

*Now whan these thinges were done, 1.e
the rulers came vnto me, and sayde: The generacion of Israel, the princes, the prestes and Leuytes, the straunge people, and inwellers of the londe, haue not put away theyr vnclennesse, from the Cananites, Hethites, Pherestites, from the Moabites, Egyptians, and Edomites. For both they and theyr sonnes haue mengled them selues with the doughters of them, and the holy sede is mixte with the outlandysh heythen, and sens the begynnynge of theyr rayne haue the rulers and heades bene partakers of theyr wickednesse.

As soone as I had herde these thynges, immediatly I rent my holy garmentes, and pulled out the herre of my heade & my beard and sat me downe sorowfull and heuy. So all they that were moued thorow the worde of the God of Israel, came vnto me: and I sat still full of heuynes vntill the euenynge sacrifice. Then stode I vp from fastynge, hauinge rente clothes and the holy garmentes, kneled downe vpon my knees, helde out my handes vnto the LORDE, and sayde: O LORDE, I am confounded and ashamed f before thy face, for oure synnes are be come many vpon oure heades, and our wickednesses are exalted vnto the heauen: for sens the tyme of our fathers we are in greate synne vnto this daye. And for the synnes of vs and our fathers, we with oure brethren and with oure prestes haue bene deliuered vnto the kynges of the earth, in to the swerde, & in to the captiuite, and became a spoyle & confusion and shame vnto this daye. And now O LORDE God, how greate is the mercy that we haue gotten of the, in þ thou hast left vs a rote and a name in the place of thy Sanctuary, to discouer our light in the house of the LORD our God, & geuen vs meate at all tymes of our mynistracion. And whā we were in captiuite, we were not forsakē of the LORDE oure God: but he made the kynges of Persia gracious and honourable vnto vs, so that they gaue vs vytayles & meate, yee & leue to buylde vp þ ti-

ple of oure LORDE God agayne, to repayre the wayfted places of Syon, and to shewe to Jewry and Jerusalem. And now O LORDE, what shall we saye, haupnge all these thynges in possession? For we haue broken thy commaundementes, which thou gauest vnto vs by the handes of thy seruantes the prophetes, sayenge: The londe that ye go vnto, and that is geuen you for an heritage to haue in possession, is defyled with the vnclennes & filthynes of the Heythen, and with theyr abhominacion haue they polluted it altogether. * Therfore shall ye not ioyne youre doughters vnto theyr sonnes, nor mary your sonnes vnto theyr doughters: Moreouer ye shall neuer seke to make peace with them, that ye may increase and eate the best in the lande, and that ye maye bequethe the inheritaunce of the londe vnto your children for euermore. As for the thinge that now happeneth vnto vs, it commeth all for our wicked workes, and greate synnes, yet hast thou geuen vs such a rote, that we are come agayne in to our owne lawes: we are so wicked, that we haue broken thy statutes & cõmaundementes agayn & mingled our selues w the vnclennes of the Heythen. O LORD, art thou angry with vs? wilt thou rote vs cleane oute that no rote ne name remain nomore? O LORDE God of Israel, thou art true, for oure rote remayneth yet vnto this present daye. And lo, now are we before thy face in our synnes, for we can not stonde before the in them.

* And whan Eldras with thys prayer had made confession, wepinge, and lyenge flat vpon the grounde before the temple, there gathered vnto hym from Jerusalem a greate multitude of men, and wemen and yonge men and maydens, for there was a greate wepinge, and mournynge in the congregation. So whan Jechonias the sonne of Jehiel one of the chyldren of Israel answerde vnto Eldras: we haue synned against the LORDE, because we haue maried outlandish wemē of the Heythen. Now is there euer all Israel. We will sweare an othe therfore vnto the LORDE, that we shall put away al our wyues which we haue taken of the Heythen with theyr childre, euē as it is appoynted by our forefelders. Stonde vp then, open thou it and declare it plainly vnto vs accordinge to the lawe of the LORDE: for the matter belongeth vnto the, and we will helpe the, quyte thy self manly. So Eldras arose, and toke an ooth of the rulers of the prestes, and of the Leuytes and of all Israel, to do after these thynges, and they sware.

The.ix.Chapter.

Then Eldras stode vp from the * Eld.x.b
courte of the temple without, & wente in to the chamber of Jonathas the sonne of Nasabus, and remayned there, and ate no meate nor dranke drynke, for the multitude of the wickednes of the people. And there was made a proclamacion in al Jewry and at Jerusalem, for all such as were gathered at Jerusalem out of captiuyte, that who so euer came not to Jerusalem within two or thre dayes (accordinge to the iudgment of the olde lordes of the councell) his goodes shulde be taken from hym, and he excluded from the congregacion of the captiuyte. And in thre dayes were all they of the tribe of Juda, & Ben Jamin gathered together at Jerusalē, the.xx.daye of the.ix.moneth. And the whole multitude sat tremblinge in the courte of the temple, for it was wynter. So Eldras arose vp, and sayde vnto them: ye haue done vnrightwesly, in that ye haue taken outlandish wyues to marriage, and so to increase the synnes of Israel. And now knowlege the same, and geue prayse vnto the LORDE God of oure fathers, and perfourme his wil, departinge from the Heythen of the londe, and from the outlandish wyues. Then cried the whole multitude with loude voyce, and sayde: lyke as thou hast spoken, so will we do: But for so much as the people are many, and the winter here, we maye not stonde without the house: agayne, this worke is not a thinge, that can be fulfilled in a daye or two, for we be many that haue synned in these thinges: Ordeine therfore, that the rulers of the multitude and al they that dwell with vs, and as many as haue outlandish wyues, the prestes also, and iudges of euery place, maye stonde in the same appointed, tyll they lowse vp the wrath of the LORDE in this busynes. B

Then Jonathas the sonne of Ezeli, and Ozias, and Thecan receaued the charge of this matter, and Bozozamus, and Leius, and Sabatheus helped them therto. After this, all they stode vp that were come out of captiuyte. And Eldras the preest chose vnto him the principall men from amonge the fathers accordinge to theyr names, and in the new moone of the tenth moneth they sat together, to examen this matter. And so the matter was a determynge (concernynge the men that had outlandysh wyues) vntill the new moone of the fyrst moneth. And of the prestes that had mixte them selues with 1.Es.10.d. outlandysh wyues, there were founde: * Of the sonnes of Jesu the sonne of Josedec and his brethren, Mazeas, Eleazer, Jozibus, & Joadeus, which offred them selues to put awaye theyr wyues, and to offre a ramme for theyr ignoraunce. And of the sonnes of Semmieri, Walleas, and Elles, & Jeelech, Azarias. Of the sonnes of Fosera, Lymosyas, Hilmaen, Nathanea, Jussio, Jeddus, and Talsas. And of the Leuytes, Jolabdus, Semeis, and Colnis, Caletas, Facteas, Colnas, and Elionas. Of the syngers of the Sanctuary, Eliarib, Zacharus. Of the porters, Sallumus, and Tolbanes.

And of Israel, of the chyldren of Foro, Osy, and Remias, and Geddias, and Melchias Michelus, Eleazarus, Jemmebias, and Bannas. And of the chyldren of Jolaman, Chanias, Zachary, Jetzrelus, Joddius, Erimoth, and Elias. And of the sonnes of Jathoim. Eliadas, Liasamus, and Zochias Larimoth, Sabdis, and Tebedias. And of the sonnes of Zebes, Johannes, Amanias, Zabdias, and Emeus. And of the sonnes of Bannus, Olammus, Maluchus, Jeddus, Jasub, Asabus, and Jerimoth. And of the sonnes of Addin, Naatus and Moosias, and Caleus, and Raanas, Waasuas, Wachathias, Besel, Bannus, and Manasses.

And of the sonnes of Naue, Nomes, Ieas, Melchias, Sameas, Simon, Ben Jamin, Malchus, and Marras. And of the sonnes of Asom, Cartaneus, Mathathias, Bannus, Eliphalach, Manasses, Semei. Of the sonnes of Bannus, Jeremy, Moodias, Abramas, Jahel, Baneas, Peliaas, Jona, Marimoth, Eliasib, Mathaneus, Eliasis, Ozias, Dielus, Semedias, Zambris, and Joseph. Of the sonnes of Nobeus, Idelus, Mathathias, Sabadus, Zecheda, Sedmi Jelleus, and Baneas. All these had taken outlandysh women to mariage, and they put them awaye with theyr chyldren.

The prestes and Leuytes, and all they that were of Israel, dwelt at Jerusalem and horow out all the londe, in the new moone of the seuenth moneth, and the chyldren of Israel, were in theyr dwellynges. * And the whole multitude came together vpon the poore at the east syde of the holy porte of the temple. And they spake vnto Eldras the hie prest and reder, that he wolde bryng the lawe of Moses, which was geuen of the LORDE God of Israel. So Eldras the hie prest brought the lawe vnto the whole multitude, to man and woman, and to all prestes, that they myght heare the lawe in the new moone of the seuenth moneth. And he red in the floore, that is before the holy porte of the temple, from the morynge early vntill the euenynge, before men and women. And they applied theyr mynde all vnto the lawe.

And Eldras the prest and reder of the lawe stode vp vpon a scaffolde of wood, which was made therfore: and vpon his right hande there stode by hym Mathathias, Samus, Inanias, Azarias, Urias, Ezechias, and Ballamus: Upon his lefte hande stode Faldeus, Misael, Malachias, Iulchas, Sabus, Nadadias, and Zachary. Then toke Eldras the boke before the whole multitude, for he was the principall, and had in moost honour of them all. And when he had red out ỳ lawe, they stode al straight vp vpon theyr fete. So Eldras prayed the LORDE the moost hye God, the Almighty God of hoostes. And all the people answered, Amen: and helde vp theyr handes, fell downe flat vpon the earth, and prayed the LORDE: Jesus, Beneas, Sarrias, Jaddinus, Accubus, Sabbatheus, Calithes, Azarias, Jozadus, Inanias, and Phelias the Leuites which taught the lawe of the LORDE, and red the lawe of the LORDE in the congregacion, and euery man lett those before that vnderstode the lawe. Then spake Atharathes vnto Eldras the hye prest and reder, and to the Leuytes that taught the multitude, sayenge: This daye is holy vnto the LORDE: and all they that had herde the lawe, wepte. So Eldras sayde: * Departe your waye then, and eate the best, and dryncke the sweetest, and sende gyftes vnto them that haue nothinge: for this daye is holy vnto the LORDE, and be not ye sory. Then wente they theyr wayes euerychone, and dyd eate, and dryncke, and were mery, and send rewardes vnto them that had nothinge, that they also myght be with gladnesse: for they were exceadingly reioyced, for ye wordes that were red vnto them in the lawe: And so they were all gathered togethers at Jerusalem to holde the feast, accordinge to the couenaunt of the LORDE God of Israel.

The.i.Chapter.

THe seconde boke of ye prophet Esdras, (the sonne of Saraias, the sonne of Azarias the sonne of Helchia, the sonne of Sallum the sonne of Sadoc, the sonne of Achitob, the sonne of Amerias the sonne of Azarias, ye sonne of Maraioth the sonne of Sarahias, the sonne of Uzi, the sonne of Boccus, the sonne of Abisu, the sonne of Phineas, the sonne of Eleazar, the sonne of Aaron, of the tryde of Leui) which was prisoner in the londe of the Medes, in the tyme of Artarerles kynge of Persia.

2 And the worde of the LORDE cam vnto me sayenge: Go thy waye, and shew my people theyr synfull dedes, and theyr children theyr wickednesses, which they haue done agaynst me, ye they maye tell theyr childers childrē the same: for the synnes of theyr fathers are increased in them. And why? they haue forgotten me, and haue offred vnto straunge goddes. Am not I euen he * ye brought thē out of the lande of Egipte, from the house of bondage? But they haue prouoked me vnto wrath, and despysed my councels. Pull thou out thē ye heer of thy heade, and cast all euell ouer them, for they haue not bene obedient vnto my lawe. B Exo. 14.a.

It is a people without learnynge, and nourtoure. How longe shall I forbeare thē, vnto whom I haue done so much goode Many kynges haue I destroyed for theyr sakes: * Pharao with his seruauntes, and all his power haue I smytten downe, and slayne. * All the nations haue I destroyed and roted out before them, and in the east haue I brought two landes and people to naught, euen Tyre and Sydon, and haue slayne all theyr enemies. Speake thou ther fore vnto them, sayenge: Thus sayeth the LORDE: * I led you thorow the see, and haue geuen you sure stretes sence the begynnynge. * I gaue you Moses to be youre captayne, and § Aaron to be the prest: I gaue you * light in a pyler of fyre, and greate wonders haue I done amonge you: yet haue ye forgotten me, sayeth the LORDE. I shal cast you out fro my face. * When ye offre vnto me, I shall turne my face from you: for youre solempne feast dayes, youre new moones and youre circumcisions haue I forsaken. I sent vnto you my seruaun tes the prophetes, whom ye haue taken and slayne, and tozne their bodies in peces, whose bloude I will requyre of youre handes, sayeth the LORDE.

¶ Thus sayeth the Almyghtie LORDE youre house must be desolate. I will cast you out as the wynde doth the strawe: your childzen shall not be frutefull, for they haue despysed my commaundemẽt, and done the thinge that is euell before me. youre hous es will I geue vnto a people that shall co-

I repose me vnto the grace, that I will do for the peo ple which is to come, whose childzen reioyce in gladnes: and though they haue not sene me with bodely eyes, yet in spyrte they belee ue the thinge that I saye. The.ii. Chapter.

THus sayeth the LORDE: I brought this people out of bondage, I gaue them my com maundementes by my seruaun tes the prophetes, whom they wolde not heare, but despyed my councels. The mother that bare them, sayeth vnto them: Go youre waye ye childzen, for I am a wydow and forsaken: I brought you vp with gladnesse, but with sorow and heyn nes haue I lost you: for ye haue synned bee re the LORDE your God, and done þ thin ge that is euell before hym. But what shall I now do vnto you? I am a wydow and forsaken: go youre waye (o my childzen) and aske mercy of the LORDE. As for me o mo ther, I call vpon the for a wytnesse ouer the mother of these childzen, which wolde not kepe my couenaunt: that thou bringe them to confusion, and their mother to a spoyle, þ she beare nomore. Let their names be scat tred abrode amonge the Heythen, let them be put out of þ earth, for they haue thought scorne of my couenaunt.

Wo be vnto the Assur, thou that hydest
the vnrighteous by the. Thou wicked peo ple, * remembre what I dyd vnto Sodom
Gen. and Gomorre, whose land is turned to pitch and asshes. Euen so also will I do vnto all them, that heare me not, sayeth the almigh tie LORDE. Thus sayeth the LORDE vnto Eldras: Tell my people, that I wil gi ue them the kyngdome of Jerusalem, which I wolde haue geuen vnto Israel. Their glory also will I take vnto me, and giue them the euerlastinge tabernacles, which I had prepared for thole.

The tree of lyfe shalbe vnto them a swete smellynge oyntment: they shall nother la bourc nor be wery. Go ye youre waye, and ye shall receaue it. Praye for your selues a few dayes, þ they maye dwell therin. Now is the kyngdome prepared for you, therfore watch. Take heauen and earth to wytnesse, for I haue broken the euell in peces, and cre ated the good, for I lyue saieth the LORDE. Mother embrace thy childzen, and bring them vp with gladnes: make their fete as fast as a pyller, for I haue chosen the, say eth the LORDE.

And those that be dead will I rayse vp C againe from their places, & bringe them out of the graues, for I haue knowne my name

in Israel. Feare not thou mother of the chil dren, for I haue chosen the, sayeth the LORDE. And for thy helpe I shall sende the my seruauntes Esay and Jeremy, after whose counsell I haue sanctified & prepared for thy sonnes with dyuerse frutes, and as many welles flowinge with mylke and hony, & seuen mountaynes, wher vpon there growe roses and lilies, wherin I will fyll my children with ioye. Execute iustice for the wydowe, be iudge for the fatherlesse: geue to the poore:
defende the comfortlesse: clothe the naked: heale
the wounded and sick: laugh not a lame man
to scorne: defende the crepel, and let the blinde come in to the sight of my clearnes. Kepe thy selfe and ponge within thy walles: * where soeuer thou fyndest the dead, token them, &
burye them, and I shal geue the the first place in my resurrection. Holde still (O my people)
and take thy rest, for thy quyetnes is come.
Fede thy children O thou good norse,
with their fere: As for the seruauntes who I haue geuen the, there shall not one of the perishe, for I will seke them from thy nombre, yee and thy self.

For whan the daye of trouble and heuy-
nesse commeth, other shall wepe and be sorou-
full, but thou shalt be mery and plenteous.
The heathen shalbe gelous, but they shalbe able to do nothinge agaynste the, sayeth the Lorde. My handes shall couer the, so that thy children shal not se the fyre euerlasting.
Be myrfull O thou mother with thy children,
for I will delyuer the, sayeth the LORDE.
Remembre thy dead children, for I shal bryn them out of the earth, & shew mercy vnto them, for I am mercifull, sayeth the LORDE
almyghtie.

Embrace thy children, vntyll I come and shew mercy vnto them, for my welles runne
ouer, and my grace shall not fayle. I Esdras receaued a charge of the LORDE vpon the mount Oreb, that I shulde go vnto Israel.
But whan I came vnto the, they set me att
nought, and despysed the commaundement
of the LORDE. And therfore I saye vnto you
O ye heithen, that heare and vnderstonde:
Loke for youre shepherde, he shall geue you euerlastinge rest: for he is nye at hande, that shall come in the ende of the worlde. Be ready to the rewarde of the kyngdome, for the euerlastinge light shall shyne vpon you for euermore. Flie the shadowe of this worlde, receaue the ioyfulnes of youre glory. I testifie openly: receaue the gift that is geuen you, and be glad, geuinge thankes
vnto hym, that hath called you to the hea-uenly kyngdome. Aryse vp, and stonde fast:
beholde the nombre of those that be sealed in the feast of the LORDE, whiche are departed
from the shadowe of the worlde, and haue re
ceaued glorious garmentes of the LORDE.
Take thy nombre O Sion, and shut vp thy purified, which haue fulfilled the lawe of the LORDE. The nombre of thy children whom thou longedest for, is fulfilled: beseke the po wer of the LORDE that thy people which haue bene called from the beggynnynge, may be halowed.

* Esdras sawe vpon the mount Sion a great people, whom I coulde not nombre, &
they all praysed the LORDE with songes of thankesgeuynge. And in the myddest of them there was a ponge man of an hye statu te, more excellent then all they, & vpon euery
one of their heades he set a crowne, and was euer hygher and hygher, which I marueled
at greatly. So I ared the angel & sayde: Syr
what are these? He answered and sayde vnto me: These be they, that haue put of the mortall clothinge and put on the immortall, and haue testified and knowleged the name of God. Now are they crowned, and receaue
the rewarde.

Then sayde I vnto the angell: what yon
ge personne is it, that crowneth them, & geueth them the palmes in their handes? He he answered and sayde vnto me: It is y sonne of God, whome they haue knowleged in the worlde. Then beganne I greatly to com mende them, that stode so stedfastly for the name of the LORDE. And so the angell sayde vnto me: Go thy waye, and tel my peo ple, what maner of thynges and how greate wonders of the LORDE thy God, thou hast sene.

The.iii.Chapter.

IN the thirtie yeare of the fall of the cytie, I was at Babylon & lay troubled vpō my bed, & my thou ghtes came vp ouer my hart: for
I sawe the desolacion of Sion,
and the plenteous wealth of them that dwelt
at Babylon: & my spyrete was sore moued, so that I beganne to speake fearful wordes to the moost hyest, & sayed: O LORDE LORDE
thou spakest at the beggynnynge, whan thou plantedest the earth (and that thy self alone)
and gauest commaundement vnto the people, and a body vnto Adam, whiche was a creature of thy handes * and hast brethed in hym the breth of lyfe: and so he lyued before the, and thou leddest hym in to para-

dyse, which garde of pleasure thy righthande had planted, or euer the earth was made. And vnto him thou gauest commaundemet to loue thy waye, which he transgressed, & immediatly thou appoyntedest death in hym, and in his generacions. Of hym came nacions, trybes, people & kynreddes out of nombre. * And euery people walked after their owne will, and haue done wonderful thynges before the and as for thy commaundementes, they despysed them.

Gen.7.b

*But in processe of tyme thou broughtest the water floude, vpon those that dwelt in the worlde, and destroydest them. And like as the death was in Adam, so was the water floude also in these. Neuertheles one of the thou lefte: namely. Noe with his housholde of whome come all righteous men. And it happened that, whan they that dwelt vpon the earth, begane to multiplie, and had gotten many children, and were a greate people, they beganne to be more vngodly then ye fyrst.

Now whan they all lyued so wickedly before the * thou dydest chose the a man from amonge them, whose name was Abram. Him thou louedest, and vnto him only thou shewdest thy wyll, and maydest an euerlastinge couenaunt with him, promisinge him, that thou woldest neuer forsake his sede.

Exo.19.a. Deut.4.b.

And it happened that whan thou leddest his sede out of Egipte, * thou broughtest the vp to the mount Syna, bowinge downe the heauens, settinge fast the earth, mouynge ye grounde, makynge the deptes to shake, & troublynge the worlde: And thy glory wente thorow foure portes of fyre, and earth quakes, and wyndes and colde: that thou mightest geue the lawe vnto the sede of Jacob, & diligence vnto the generacion of Israel.

And yet tokest thou not awaye from the that wicked hart, that thy lawe might bringe forth frute in them. For the fyrst Adam bare a wicked hart, trangressed, and was ouercome, and so be all they that are borne of him * Thus remayned weaknes with the law in the hart of the people, with the wickednesse of the rote: so that the good departed awaye, and the euell abode styll. So the tymes passed awaye, and the yeares were brought to an ende. * The didest thou rayse the vp a seruaunt called Dauid, whom thou commaun dest to buylde a citie vnto thy name, and to offre vp incense and sacrifice vnto the therin. This was done now many yeares.

Then the inhabiters of the citie forsoke the, and in all thinges dyd euen as Adam & all his generacions had done: for they also had a wicked hart. And so thou gauest thy citie ouer in to the handes of thine enemies. Are they of Babilon then better and more righteous the thy people, that they shal therfore haue the domynion of Sion? For whan I came there, and sawe their vngodlynes, & so great wickednesse, that it coulde not be no bred: yee whan my soule sawe so many euell doers (in the .xxx. yeare) my hart fayled me, for I saw, how thou suffrest them in such vngodlynes, and sparest the wicked doers: but thine owne people hast thou rooted out, and preserued thine enemies, & this hast thou not shewed me.

I can not perceaue how thys happeneth. C Do they of Babilon then better, then they of Sion? Or is there ony other people, that knoweth the, sauynge the people of Israel? Or what generacion hath so beleued thy couenauntes, as Jacob? And yet their reward appeareth not, and their labour hath no frute. For I haue gone here and there thorow the Heithen, & I se, that they be rych & wealthy, and thynke not vpon thy commaundementes. Weye thou therfore oure wickednesse nowe in the balaunce, and theirs also that dwell in the worlde, and so shall thy name be no where founde but in Israel. Or where is there a people vpon earth, ye hath not synned before the? Or what people hath so kepte thy commaundementes? Thou shalt fynde, that Israel by name hath kepte thy precepte, but not the other people and Heithen.

The.iiii. Chapter.

AND the angel that was sent vn to me (whose name was Uriel) gaue me answer, an sayde: Thy hart hath taken to muche vpon it in this worlde, and thou thinkest to comprehende the waye of the hyghest. Then sayde I: yee my lorde. And he answered me, and sayde: I am sent to shew the thre wayes, and to set forth thre similitudes before the: whereof yf thou canst declare me one I will shewe the also the waye, that thou desyrest to se, and I shall shewe the from where the wicked hart commeth. And I sayde: tell on my LORD. Then sayde he vnto me: Go thy waye, weye me the weight of the fyre, or measure me the blast of the wynde, or call me

ageynst the daye that is past. Then answered I and sayde: What man borne is able to do that? Why requyrest thou such of me?
Then he sayde vnto me: yf I shulde aske the,
howe depe dwellinges are in ꝑ see? Or how great water springes are vpon ꝑ firmament?
Or how great water springes are in the beginnynge of the depe? Or which are the out goinges of Paradise? Peraduenture thou wouldest saye vnto me: I neuer wente downe
yet in to the depe nor hell, nether dyd I euer clymme vp in to heauen. Neuertheles now haue I axed the but onely of fyre and wynde
and of the daye, where thorow thou hast trauayled, and cõ the which thou canst not be seperated: and yet canst thou geue me no an-swere of them.

He sayde moreouer vnto me: Thine owne
thinges, and such as are growne vp with ꝑ, canst thou not knowe: how shulde thy vessel
then be able to cõprehende the waye of the hyghest, and now outwardly in the corrupte worlde, to vnderstonde the corrupcyon that is present in my syght? Then sayde I vnto him: It were better that we were not at all,
then that we shulde lyue in wickednesse, and in lust, and not to knowe wherfore. He answered me, and sayde: I wente in a wood,
and the trees toke such a deuyce and sayde:
Come let vs go, and fight agaynst the see,
that it maye departe awaye before vs, and ꝑ
we maye make vs yet more woodes.

The floudes of the see also in lyke maner
toke this deuice, and sayde: Come, let vs go vp, and fight agaynst the trees of the wood,
that we maye make oure londe the wyder.
The thought and deuyce of the wood was but vayne and nothinge worth, for the fyre
came, and consumed the wood: The thought of the floudes of the see came lykewyse to naught also, for the sonde stode vp ⁊ stopped them.

If thou were iudge now betwyxte these two, whome wouldest thou iustifie, or whome wouldest thou condemne? I answered ⁊ saide Truely it is a foolish thought that they both haue deuysed. For the grounde is geuen vnto the wood, and the see also hath hys place to bere his floudes. Then answered he me ⁊ sayde: Thou hast geuen a right iudgment
but iudgest thou not thy selfe also? For like as the grounde is geuen vnto the wood, and the see his floudes: ⁊ euē so they that dwel vpon earth, maye vnderstonde nothing, but that which is vpon earth: and he that dwelleth aboue the heaues, maye onely vnderstō
de the thinges, that are aboue the heauens.

Then answered I and sayde: I beseche the (O LORD) let me haue vnderstondinge: for it was not my mynde to be curious of thy hye thinges, but of such as we dayly medle with all: namely, wherfore that Israel is blaspheme med of the Heythen, and for what cause the people (whom thou euer hast loued) is geue
ouer, to be punyshed of vngodly nacions: ⁊
why the lawe of oure fathers is brought to naught, and the wrytten couenauntes come to none effecte, and we passe awaye out of ꝑ worlde as the grashopers, and oure life is a very feare, and we are not worthy to optayn mercy. What will he do then vnto his name which is called vpon, ouer vs? Of these thin
ges haue I axed question.

Then answered he me and sayde: The mo re thou searchest, ꝑ more thou shalt marueyll
for the worlde hasteth fast to passe awaye, ⁊ can not comprehende the thynges, that are promysed for the righteous in tyme to come, 2. Joh. 2. b
* for thys worlde is full of vnrighteousnes
and weaknes.

But as concernynge the thinges wherof thou axest me, I wil tel the. The euel is sow ne, but the destruccion therof is not yet come yf the euel now that is sowne, be not turned vpsyde downe, and yf the place where ꝑ euel is sowne, passe not awaye, then can not the thinge come that is sowne with ꝑ good. For the corne of euell sede hath bene sowne in the hart of man from the begynninge, and how much vngodlynes hath he brought vp vnto
this tyme? and how much shal he yet bringe
forth, vntyll he come in to the barne?

Ponder now by thy selfe, whan the corne
of euel sede is cut downe, how great a barne shall it fylle? I answered and sayde: How and whan shall these thinges come to passe?
Wherfore are oure yeares few ⁊ euel? And he answered me, saynge: Haste not thou to much vpon the hyest, for thy haistynes to be above
hym is but in vayne, thou makest to muche
a doo. Dyd not ꝑ soules also of ꝑ righteous axe question of these thinges in their holynes
sayenge: How longe shall I hope of this fas shion? What commeth the fruite of my barne, and my rewarde? And vpō this Jeremiel
the archangel gaue the answere, and sayde: Apoc. 6. b
* Euen whan the nombre of the seres is fyl led in you: for he hath weyed the worlde in the balaunce: in measure and nombre hath
he measured the tyme, and mouth te not, vn tyll the same measure be fulfylled. Then answered I and sayde: O LORDE LOR-DE, now are we all full of synne, and for oure sake peraduenture it is not, that the

barne of the righteous shall not be tylled, because of the synnes of them that dwell vpon earth.

F Sodo he answered me, & sayde: Go thy waye to a woman with chylde, and axe her, when she hath fulfilled hir.ix. monethes, yf hir chil desired maye kepe the byrth ony longer wtin her. Then sayde I: No LORDE, that can she not. And he sayde vnto me; In hell the secrete places of soules are like the preuy chãber of a woman. For like as a woman that trauayleth, maketh hast, whan the tyme & necessite of the byrth is at hande: Euen so doth she hast to deliuer it that is committed vnto her. Loke what thou desyrest to se, it shal be shewed the from the begynninge. Then answered I and sayd: yf I haue found fauoure in thy sight, and yf it be possible, & yf I be mete therfore, shewe me then, whether there be more to come thẽ is past, or more past then is for to come. What is past, I knowe: but what is for to come, I knowe not.

G And he salde vnto me: Stonde vp vpõ ỹ rightsyde, and I shal expounde the similitude vnto ỹ. So I stode, & beholde, an whote burnynge ouen wente ouer before me: and it happened that whan the flame was gone by, the smoke had the vpper hande. After thys there wente ouer before me a watery cloude, & sent downe much rayne with a storme: & whan the stormy rayne was paste, the droppes remayned still. Then sayde he vnto me: like as the rayne is more then the droppes, and as the fyre exceadeth the smoke, euẽ so the measure of the thynges that are paste, hath the vpper hande. Then wente the droppes and the smoke aboue: and I prayed and sayde: Maye I lyue (thynkest thou) vntyll that tyme? Or what shall happen in those dayes? he answered me, and sayde: As for ỹ tokens wherof thou arest me, I maye tel the of them in a parte: but as touchinge thy life, I maye not shewe the, for I am not sent ther fore.

The.v. Chapter.

I NEuertheles, as concernyng the tokens, mark this: Beholde, the dayes shal come, that they which dwell vpon earth, shalbe take in a great nombre, & the waye of the treuth shalbe hyd, and the londe shalbe bare from faith: * but iniquyte shall haue the vpperhande, like as thou hast sene now, and as thou hast herde longe agoo. And the londe that thou seist now to haue rule, shalt thou thorily se waist. But yf God graunte the to lyue, thou shalt se after the thirde trompet, ỹ the sonne shall sodenly shyne agayne in the night, and the moone thre tymes in the daye & bloude shall droppe out of wood, and the stone shall geue his voyce, and the people shalbe vnquyete: & euen he shal rule, whome they hope not that dwell vpon earth, and ỹ foules shall flyt, & the Sodomityth see shall cast out his fish, & make a noyse in the night, which many shall not knowe, but they shall all heare the voyce therof.

There shalbe a confusion also in many B places, and the fyre shal be oft sent agayn, ỹ the wilde beastes shall go their waye, & mens struous wemẽ shal beare monsters, and salt waters shalbe founde in the swete: one frend shall fight agaynste another: then shall all wyt and vnderstondinge be hyd & put abyde in to their secrete places, and shalbe sought of many, and yet not be founde: then shal vnrighteousnes and voluptreousnes haue the vpperhande vpon earth. One lande also shall axe another, and saye: Is righteousnes gone thorow the? And it shall saye: No. At ỹ same tyme shall men hope, but nothinge optayne: they shall labour, but their waye shall not prosper.

To shewe the such tokens I haue lerned, ỹ yf thou wilt praye agayne, & wepe as now, & fast seuen dayes, thou shalt heare yet greater thinges. Then I awaked, and a fearfulnes wente thorow al my body, & my mynde was feble and careful, so that I almost swouned withall. Bo the angell that was come to talke with me, helde me, comforted me, and set me vp vpon my fete.

And in the seconde night it happened, ỹ C Salathiel the captayne of the people came vnto me, sayenge: Where hast thou bene? & why is thy countenaunce so heuy? Knowest thou not, that Israel is committed vnto the, in the londe of their captyuyte? Up then, and eate, and forsake vs not, as the shepherde leaueth his flocke in the handes of wicked wolues. Then sayde I vnto him: Go thy waye fro me, and come not nye me: & he herde it: and as I sayde, so went he his way fro me. And so I fasted seuen dayes, mourninge and weppynge, like as Uriel the angell commaunded me. And after seuen dayes it happened, that the thoughtes of my hart were very greuous vnto me agayne, & my soule receaued the spyrite of vnderstandynge, & I begãne to talke vnto the moost heyghest agayn and sayde: O LORDE LORDE, of euery wood of the earth and of all the trees therof, thou hast chosen the one onely vnyparde: & of all londes of the whole worlde thou hast chosen the one pytt: and of all floures of the grounde thou hast chosen the one lylie: and of all the depthes of the see thou haste fylled the one ryuer: and of all buylded cities thou hast halowed Sion vnto thy selfe: and of all the foules that are created, thou hast named the one doue: and of all the catell that are made, thou hast prouided the one shepe: and amonge all the multitudes of folkes thou hast gotte the one people, and vnto this people whom thou louedest, thou gauest a lawe, that is proued of all.

2 And now O LORD, why hast thou geue this one people ouer vnto many: & vpon the one vyne thou hast prepared other, and why hast thou scatred thy one only people amõg many: which treade thē downe, yee whiche haue euer withstonde thy promyses, & neuer kepte thy couenauntes? And though thou hast enemye vnto thy people, yet shuldest thou punyth them with thine owne handes. 3 And whan I had spoken these wordes, the angell that came to me the night afore, was sent vnto me, & saide vnto me: Heare me, & her vnto the thinge that I saye, & I shall tell the more. And I sayed: Speake on my LORD. Then sayde he vnto me: Thou art sore vexed & troubled for Israels sake. Louest thou that people better, then hym that made them? And I sayde: No LORDE, but of very greke & compassion haue I spoken. For my reynes paynes me euery houre, because I wolde haue experience of the waye of the moost hyghest, & serche out parte of his iudgment. And he sayd vnto me: That thou maiest not. And I sayd vnto the LORD: Where vnto was I borne then? Or why was not my mothers childesbed then my graue? 4 So had I not sene the misery & trouble of Jacob, and the trauayle of my people of Israel.

5 And he sayde vnto me: Gather me the pynnes that are not yet come: gather me together the droppes, that are scatred abrode: make me the floures grene agayne, that are wyddred: open me the thinge that is closed: & bringe me forth the wyndes, that are shut vp within me: shewe me the ymage of a voyce, and then shall I declare the that thinge, that thou labourest to knowe. And I sayd: O LORD LORD, who maye knowe these thynges, but he that hath not his dwelling with men? As for me, I am vnwyse: how maye I then speake of these thinges, wherof thou arest me? Then sayde he vnto me: like as thou canst do none of these thinges that I haue spoken of, Euē so canst thou not fynde out my iudgment, or in the ende, the loue that I haue promysed vnto my people. 6 And I sayde: Beholde O LORD, yet art thou nye vnto them that haue no ende: & what shall they do that haue bene before me, or we that be now, or they that shall come after vs? And he sayde vnto me: I wil lyken my iudgment vnto a ringe. Like as there is no slacknesse of the laste, euen so is there no swiftnesse of the first. So I answered and sayd: Couldest thou not make those (that haue bene made, and that be now, & that are for to come) in one, that thou mightest shewe thy iudgment the sooner?

7 Then answered he me and sayde: The creature maye not hatte aboute the maker, nether maye the worlde holde them at once, that shalbe created.

8 And I sayde: How hast thou sayde then vnto thy seruaunt, that thou lyuinge maker hast made the creature lyuynge at once, & the creature bare it? euen so mighte it now also beare them that be present, at once. 9 And he sayde vnto me: Are the childesbed of a womā & saye vnto her: yf thou bringest forth chyldre, why doest thou it not together, but one after another? Praye her therfore, to bringe forth ten childzen at once. 10 And I sayde: she can not, but must do it one after another.

11 Then sayde he vnto me: Euen so haue I geuen a childesbed vnto the earth, for those that be sowne vpon it by processe of tyme. For like as a ponge childe maye not bringe forth the thinges that belonge to the aged, euen so haue I ordened the worlde which I made.

12 And I ared and sayde: Seyng thou hast now geue me a waye, I wil speake before: for our mother of whom thou hast tolde me, is yet yõge, & now she draweth nye vnto age. 13 He answered me & sayde: Are a woman that beareth childzen, & she shal tell the. Saye vnto her: wherfore are not they (whome thou hast now brought forth) like those that were before the, but lesse of stature? 14 And she shall answere the: They that be borne in the youth of strēgth, are of one fashion: and they that are borne in the tyme of age (whan the childesbed fayleth) are otherwyse. 15 Considre now thy selfe, how that ye are lesse of stature, then those that were before you, & so are they that come after you, lesse then ye, as the creatures which now begynne to be olde, & haue passed ouer the strength of youth. 16 Then sayde I: LORDE I beseke the, yf I haue founde fauoure in thy sight, shewe thy seruaunt, by whome doest thou vyset thy creature?

The.vi.Chapter.

AND he sayde vnto me: In the begynnynge whan the grounde was made, before the worlde stode, or euer the wyndes blew, before it thondred and lightened, or euer the foundacions of Paradyse were layed, before the fayre floures were sene, or euer the moueable powers were stablished, before the innumerable multitudes of angels were gathered together, or euer ỹ hyghnesses of the ayre were lifted vp, afore ỹ measures of the firmament were named, or euer the chymneys in Sion were hote, and or the present yeares were sought out, and or euer the inuencions of them that now synne, were put aside, before they were sealed that now gather faith for a treasure: then dyd I consider and ponder all these thinges, and they al were made thorow me, and thorow none other: by me also they be ended, and by none other.

Then answered I and sayde: which shal be the partynge asunder of the tymes? Or whan shalbe the ende of the first, and the begynnynge of it that followeth? And he sayde vnto me: From Abraham vnto Isaac, whã Jacob & Esau were borne of him, Jacobs hande helde first the hele of Esau: for Esau is the ende of this worlde, and Jacob is the begynnynge of it that followeth. The hande of man betwirte the hele & the hande. Other question (Esdras) are thou not.

B I answered then and sayde: O LORDE LORDE, yf I haue founde fauoure in thy sight, I beseke the, shewe thy seruaunte the ende of thy tokens, wherof thou shewdest me parte the last night. So he answered & saide vnto me: Stonde vp vpõ thy fete, and heare the perfecte voyce and sounde. There shall come a greate motion, but the place where thou stondest shall not be moued. And therfore whan thou hearest the wordes, be nott afrayed: for of the ende shall the worde and foundacion of the earth be vnderstõde. And whye the worde therof trembleth & quaketh, for it knoweth, that it muste be chaunged at the ende. And it happened, that whan I had herde it, I stode vp vpon my fete and herkened: and beholde, there was a voyce ỹ spake and the sounde of it was like the sounde of many waters, and it sayde. Beholde ỹ dayes come, that I wil begynne to drawe nye, and to vyset them that dwell vpon earth, and wil begynne to make inquistion of them, what they be that haue hurte equyte with vnrighteousnes, and whan the lowe estate of Sion shalbe fulfilled: and whan the worlde, that shall vanish awaye, shalbe ouersealed, then wyll I do these tokens.

The bokes shalbe opened before the firmament, and they shall se altogether, & the children of a yeare olde shall speake with their voyces: the women with chylde shall bryng forth vntymely children of thre or foure monethes olde, and they shall lyue, and be raysed vp: & sodenly shall the sowen places appeare as the vnsowen, the full storehouses shal sodenly be founde emptie, and the trompet shall geue a sounde, whiche whan euery man heareth, they shalbe hastely afrayed.

* At ỹ tyme shall frendes fight one agayne another like enemies, & the earth shall fere in feare with them.

The sprynges of the welles shall stonde styll, and in thre houres they shall not renne. Who so euer remayneth from all these thinges that I haue tolde the, shall escape, and se my saluacion, and the ende of youre worlde. And the men that are receaued, shall se it, they that haue not tasted death from their byrth: and the hart of the indwellers shalbe chaunged, and turned in to another meanynge: for euell shalbe put out, and decrate shall be quenched. As for faith, it shall florish, corrupcion shalbe ouercome: and the truth, which hath bene so longe without frute, shall be declared.

And it happened whan he talked with me, that I loked demurely vpon hym, before whome I stode, and these wordes sayde he vnto me: I am come to shewe the tyme of the night for to come.

Yf thou wilt prayse yet more, and faste seuen dayes agayne, I shall tell the more thinges, and greater then before: for thy voyce is herde before the Hyest: for why? the mighty hath sene thy righteous dealynge, he hath sene also thy chastite, whiche thou haste had euer sence thy youth: and therfore hath he sent me to shewe the all these thinges, and to saye vnto the: Be of good cõforte, and feare not, and haist not with ỹ tymes that are past to thynke vayne thinges, and make no haste of the latter tymes.

And it happened after this, that I wepte agayne, and fasted seuen dayes in like maner, that I might fulfyll the thre weekes, which he tolde me. In the eight nighte was my hart vexed within me agayne, and I beganne to speake before the Hyest: for my spirite was greatly set one fyre, and my soul was in distresse, and I sayde: O LORDE, thou

[illegible] vnto thy creature from the begyn-
[illegible] (euen the fyrst daye) And saydest, *
[illegible] and earth he made, & thy worde
[illegible] a perfecte worke. And then was there [illegible], and the darcknesse were yet on [illegible] side, and syleuce: there was no mans
[illegible] as yet from the. The commaundedest [illegible] a laye light to come forth out of thy [illegible], that thy worke might appeare [illegible] sone.

Upon the seconde daye thou maydest the [illegible] of the firmament, and commaundedest [illegible] a sunder & to make a deuysion be [illegible] the waters, that the one parte might [illegible] alone, and the other beneth. Upō
[illegible] daye thou broughtest to passe, þ
[illegible] waters were gathered in the seuenth par
[illegible] of the earth: Fyue partes hast thou dryed
[illegible], and kepte them, to the intent that men
[illegible] serue and occupie husbādrie therin.
[illegible] as thy worde wente forth, þ worke
[illegible] made. For immediatly there was gre-
[illegible] innumerable frute, and many dyuerse
[illegible] and delyces of tēptacion, floures
[illegible] couerable colloure and smell, and this [illegible] the thyrde daye.

Upon the fourth daye thou cōmaundedest [illegible] sonne shulde geue his shyne, & the [illegible] by nyght: the starres diddest thou set [illegible], and gauest the a charge * to do ser-
[illegible] vnto man, that was for to be ma-
[illegible] Upō the fifth daye thou saydest vnto þ [illegible] parte (where þ waters were gathe[illegible] they shulde bringe forth diuerse be[illegible], foules and fishes. And so it came to [illegible], the drye water and without soule,
[illegible] forth liuynge beastes at the com[illegible]ment of God, that all people might [illegible] thy wōderous workes. Then diddest
[illegible] preserue two soules, þ one thou calle-
[illegible] Behemoth & the other Leuiathan, & diddest [illegible] the one fro the other: for the se[illegible] parte (namely, where the water was [illegible] together) might not holde them
[illegible]. Vnto Enoch thou gauest one parte, [illegible] was kepte vp the thirde daye, that [illegible] shulde dwell in þ same parte, wherin are [illegible] hilles. But vnto Leuiathan [illegible] gauest the seuenth parte, namely the [illegible], and hast kepte him to deuoure what [illegible] lyst, and when.

Upon the fifte daye thou gauest cōmaun-
[illegible] fro the earth, that before the it shul-
[illegible] bringe forth beastes, catell & all þ crepe, [illegible] thing) Adam also, whō thou mayd-[illegible] lorde of all thy creatures: Of him come [illegible], and the people also, whom thou hast chosen specially vnto thy self. All this haue
I sayde now and spoken before the, that I might shewe, how that the worlde is made for oure sakes. As for þ other people whiche also come of Adā, thou hast sayde that they are nothinge, but be like a spytle, & hast lykened þ abundaūce of them vnto a droppe (that falleth) from the rote of the houle.

And now (O L O R D) þ Heithen whiche
haue euer bene reputed as nothinge, haue
begonne to be lordes ouer vs, & to deuoure vs: but we thy people * (whom thou hast cal led þ fyrst borne, thy only begotten, and thy feruent louer) are geuen in to their handes & power. yf the worlde now be made for oure sakes, why haue we not the inheritaunce in possession with the worlde? How longe shall this endure? Eno.4.

The.vii. Chapter.

AND it happened after þ I had spoken out these wordes, there was sent vnto me an angell (which had bene by me also the nyghtes afore) & he sayde vnto me: Up Esdras, and heare the wordes that I am come to tell þ. And I sayde: speake on L O R D E my God. Then sayde he vnto me:
The see is sett in a wyde place, þ it myght
be depe and greate: but the intraunce is na-rowe and small like a ryuer. For who wolde go in to the see, to loke vpon it, and to rule it, yf he wente not thorow the narowe, how might he come in to the brodde

Item, another. A cite is buylded and sett vpon a brode felde, and is full of all goodes
the intraunce is narowe & sodayne, like as yf
there were a fyre at the ryght hāde, and a depe water att þ left, and as it were onely one straught path betwixte them both, so small,
that there coulde but one man go there.

yf this cite now were geuen to an eyre, &
he neuer wente thorow this parlous waye,
how wolde he receaue his inheritaunce? And I sayde: It is so, L O R D. Then sayde he:
Euē so is Israel also a percio. And why? for their sakes haue I made the worlde: & whē
Adam trāsgressed my statutes, then was þ thinge iudged that was done. Then were þ intraunces of the worlde made narowe, full of sorow and trauayle: They are but few & euell, full of perels and laboure. For the in traunces of the forworlde were wyde and sure, and broughte immortall frute.

yf they now whiche are entred in to this worlde, maye not cōprehende their frayde &
dayne thinges, much lesse maye they obprchende and vnderstonde the secrete thynges: Why disquiretest thou thy selfe thē, seynge thou art but a corruptible mā? And what wouldest thou knowe, where as thou art but mortall? And why hast thou not receaued into thine hart the thinge that is for to come, but that is present?

Deu.29.a Thē sayde I: O LORDE LORDE, thou hast ordened in thy lawe, * þ the righteous shulde inheret these thinges, but þ the vnfaithfull & vngodly shulde perysshe. Neuertheles the righteous shall suffre strayte thynges, and hope for wyde: for they þ haue lyued vngodly & suffred strayte thynges, shall not se the wyde.

And he saide vnto me: There is no iudge aboue God, and none that hath vnderstondinge aboue þ Hyghest. For there be many þ perisshe, because they despyse þ lawe of God that is sett before them. For God hath geuen strayte commaundement to such as come, that they knowe what they do, and how they shulde lyue: and yf they kepte this, they shulde not be punysshed.

Neuertheles they were not obedient vnto him, but spake agaynst him: ymagined vayne thinges, & purposed to synne, and sayde moreouer, that there was no God, & that God regarded it not. His wayes haue they not knowne, his lawe haue they despysed, & denyed his promyses: in his statutes & ordinaūces haue they not bene faithfull & stedfast, and haue not performed his workes.

And therfore Esdras, vnto the full, plenty: and to the emptye, emptynesse. Beholde, the tyme shal come, that these tokens which I haue tolde the, shall come to passe, and the bryde shall appeare: and þ earth that now passeth awaye, shalbe shewed: and who so euer is delyuered from the forsayde euels, shall se my wonders. For my sonne Iesus shall be openly declared, with those that be with him: and they that remayne, shal be merry in suche hundreth yeares.

After those same yeares shall my sonne Christ dye, and all men that haue lyfe: and þ worlde shalbe turned in to the olde sylence seuen dayes, like as in the fore iudgemēts, so that no man shall remayne. And after seuen dayes, the worlde that yet awaketh not, shalbe raysed vp, & shall dye corrupte. And the earth shal restore those that haue slepte therin, and so shall the dust those that dwell in sylēce, and the secrete places shal delyuer those that be committed vnto them. And the tabell of yghelt shal be openly declared vpō seats of iudgement, & all misery shal vanysshe awaye, and longe suffringe shalbe gathered together. But the iudgment shall continue þ treuth shall remayne, and faith shal waxe stroge, the worke shal folowe, and therefore de shall be shewed, the righteousnes shall watch, and the vnrighteousnesses shall be re no rule.

Then sayde I: * Abrahā prayed for the Sodomites & Moses for the fathers þ synned in the wyldernes, & he þ came after him for Israel, in þ tyme of Achas and Samuel * and Dauid for þ destruccion & Salomon for them that came in to the Sanctuary, * Helias for those that receaued rayne, and for the dead, that he myght lyue: and Ezechias for þ people in þ tyme of Sennacherib: & dyuerse other vnlike maner which haue prayed for many.

Euē so now, seynge þ corrupte is growne vp, and wickednes increased, and the righteous haue prayed for the vngodly, wherfore shall it not be so now also?

He answered me, and sayde: This present worlde is not the ende, there remayneth much honoure in it, therfore haue they prayed for the weake. But the daye of dome shalbe the ende of this tyme, and the beginnynge of the immortalite for to come, where in all corrupcio vanysheth, all voluptuousnes is lowsed, all mysdeserue taken away, ryghteousnes growne, and the verite sprunge vp. Then shall no man be able to save hym that is destroyed, nor to oppresse hym that hath gotten the victory. I answered then, and sayde: Thys is my fyrst and last sayenge, that it had bene better, not to haue geuen the earth vnto Adam: or els whē it was geuen hym, to kepe hym þ he shulde not synne. For what profit is it for men nowe in this present tyme to lyue in heuynes, and after death to loke for punyshment? O thou Adam, what hast thou done? For though it was thou that synned, thou art not fallē alone, but we all that come of þ. For what profite is it vnto vs, yf there be prepared vs an immortall tyme, where as we medle with deadly workes? and that there is prepared vs an euerlastynge hope, where as we our selues are cruell and vayne: and that there are layed vp for vs dwellynges of healthe, and fredome, where as we haue lyued cruell: and that the worshippe of the yghelt is kepte to defende them, which haue led a pacient lyfe, where as we haue walked in the moost wicked wayes of all: and that there shalbe shewed a paradyse, whose fruite endureth for euer, wherin the fruc

...walked in unpleasaunt places:
...the faces of them which haue ab-
...stayned shall shyne about the starres, where ...their faces shalbe black and darcke. For
...while we lyued and dyd unrighteously, we
...considered not, that we shulde suffre therfore
...nowe.

Then answered he me, and sayde: Thys
...is the consideracio & thought of the battayl
...which man hath upon earth: that yf he be
...ouercome, he shall suffre as thou hast sayde.
...But yf he get the victory, he shal receaue the
...thinge that I saye. For this is the life, whet
...he speke unto the people, whyle he ly
...ueynge: & those the life, ý thou mayest
...Neuertheles they beleued hym not, ne-
...ther prophetes after hi: no, nor me which
...haue spoken unto them, that heuynes shuld
...not come unto them to their destrucció, like
...as it is for to come ouer those, that haue
...geuen them selues to be enfourmed in sal-
...uacion.

Answered then & sayde: I knowe LORD
...that the hyghest is mercifull, in that he
...is mercy upon them, which are not yet in
...the worlde, and upon those also that walke
...in their wayes: and that he is pacient & longe
...suffringe towardes those that haue synned
...like vnto me: and that he is liberall to ge
...ue as it requyreth: and that he is of
...great mercy, for he multiplieth his louynge
...kyndnesse towardes those that are present,
...and that are past, and to them which are for
...to come: for yf he multiplie not his mercies,
...the worlde shall not be made lyuynge, with
...all that dwell therin. He geueth also, for ...the more part of hys goodnesse, that they
...which haue done euell, might be eased, the
...whole greate sorte of men shulde nott be
...lyuynge. And yf the iudge forgaue
...those that he healeth with his worde, and
...put away before the multitude that ferp
...ysshe shulde be very fewe left in an innu
...merable multitude.

The.viii.Chapter.

Then he answered me, sayenge:
...The most hyghest made thys
...worlde for many, but the worlde
...to come for fewe. I wyll tell the a
...similitude, Esdras: As what thou
...art the earth, it shall saye unto the, that it
...hath much mouldre, wherof erthen vessels
...are made, but little of it that golde cometh of
...it: & so it with the worke of this worl
...All they are now created, but fewe shal be
...preserued. Then answered I & sayde: Then
...speake vp the wil (o thou soule) and deuou
...re the vnderstondinge, for thou art agreed
...to herken and to geue eare, and wyllinge to
...prophecie for thou hast no longe space geue
...the, but onely to lyue. LORD, wilt
...thou not geue thy seruaunt leue, ý we maye
...praye before the, and that thou mayest geue
...sede vnto oure hart, and buylde oure vnder-
...stondinge, that there maye come frute of it:
...and that euery one which is corrupte, and
...beareth the state and place of a man, maye
...lyue?

For thou alone, and we all are one
...workmanshype of thy handes, like as thou
...hast sayde, and like as the body is fashioned
...now in the childebed, and thou geuest the
...membres, and thy creature is preserued in fy
...re and water: so. ix. monethes doth thy wor-
...ke suffre thy creature, which is fashioned in
...her: but the thinge that preserueth and it ý
...is preserued, shall both be kepte together: &
...whan tyme is, the childebed deliuereth the
...thinge, that is kepte and growne in her.

For thou hast commaunded the bealles
...to geue mylck vnto the frute, that the thinge
...which is created and fashioned, maye be no
...rished for a tyme: and then thou despossest &
...ordrest it with thy mercy, bryngest it vp with
...thy righteousnes, nortourest it in thy lawe,
...and reformest it with thy vnderstondynge
...mortifiest it as thy creature, and makest it li
...uynge as thy worke. Seinge then that thou
...destroyest hym, which with so great labours
...is created and fashioned thorow thy com-
...maundement, thou couldest lyghtely ordene
...also, that the thinge which is made, might &
...be preserued.

And this I speake now of all men in ge-
...nerall, as thou knowest: but of thy people,
...for whose sake I am sory: and of thy inherit-
...taunce, for whose cause I mourne, and of Is ...rael, for whome I am wofull: and for Jacob
...for whose sake I am greued: therfore beginne
...I to praye before the, for my self and for
...them, that I se the fall of vs, euen of vs, that
...dwell vpon earth. But I haue herde the swift-
...nesse of the iudge, which is to come: therfore
...heare my voyce, & vnderstonde my wordes,
...and I shall speake before the.

This is the begynnynge of the wordes
...of Esdras, before he was receaued: LOR-
...DE, thou that dwellest in euerlastynge,
...whose eyes are lift vp in ý ayre, whose flam-
...le is exceadinge hye, whose glory and maie-
...sty maye not be comprehended, before whom
...the hoostes of heauen stande

ge, whose kepynge is turned in to wynde and fyre, whose worde is trew, whose talkynge is stedfast, whose commaundement is stronge, whose ordynaunce is fearefull, whose loke dyreth vp the depthes, whose wrath maketh the mountaynes to melt awaye, & whose treuth beareth wytnes: O heare þ prayer of thy seruaunt, and marck with thine eares the petition of thy creature.

For whyle I lyue, I will speake: and so longe as I haue vnderstōdinge, I wil answere. O loke not vpō þ synnes of thy people, whiche serue the in the treuth. Haue no respecte vnto the wicked studies of the Heithen, but to the desyre of those that kepe thy testimonies with sorowes. Thinke not vpō those that haue walked faynedly before the, but vpon them, which w will haue knowne thy feare.

Let it not be thy wyll to destrope them, which haue had beastly maners, but to loke vpon them that haue clearly taught thy lawe. Take thou no indignacion at them, which are worse thē beastes: but loue them, that alwaye put their trust in thy righteousnes and glory: for we and oure fathers haue all the same sickenes and disease, but because of oure synnes thou shalt be called mercifull.

For yf thou hast mercy vpon vs, thou shalt be called mercifull, where as we haue no workes of righteousnes: for þ righteous which haue layed vp many good workes to gether, shall out of their dedes receaue reward. For what is man, that thou shuldest take displeasure at him? Or what is the corruptible mortall generacion, that thou shuldest be so rough towarde him?

*For of a trueth there is no man amonge them that be borne, but he hath deale wickedly: and amōge the faithfull there is none, which hath not done ample. For in this (O L O R D E) thy righteousnes and thy goodnes shalbe prayed & declared, yf thou be mercifull vnto them, which are not rych in good workes.

Then answered he me, and sayde: Some thinges hast thou spoken right, and accordinge vnto thy wordes it shal be. For I wil not verely cōsidre the worke of them, which haue synned before death, before the iudgment, before destrucciō * but I will remembre alle a-e pylgremage, þ holynesse and the reward. Like as I haue spoken now, so shall it come to passe. For as the husbande mā soweth many sedes vpon the grounde, and planteth many trees, and yet alwaye the thinge that is sowne nor planted is not all kepte safe, neither doth it all take rote: Euen so is it of them that are sowne in the worlde, they shal not all be preserued.

I answered then & sayde: yf I haue founde grace, thē let me speake. Like as the husbāde mans sede perisheth, yf it receaue not rayne in due seasō, or yf there come to much rayne vpon it: Euen so perisheth man also, which is created wyth thy handes, and is like vnto thine owne image and to thy self, for whose sake thou hast made all thynges, and lykened hym vnto the husbande mans sede. Be not wroth at vs (O L O R D E) but spare thy people, & haue mercy vpon thine owne inheritaunce: O be mercifull vnto thy creature.

Then answered he me and sayde: Thinges present are for the present, and thynges to come for such as be to come. For thou shalt yet much, seynge thou mayest loue my creature aboue me I haue oftimes brawt nye vnto the, but neuer to the onrighteous. In this also thou art marueilous before the. Hyghest, in þ thou hast humbled thy self, as it becommeth the, and hast not regarded thine owne self, þ thou art had in such honour amonge the righteous. & therfore shal grete wrechednesse & myserye come vpon them, that in the latter tyme shal dwell in þ worlde, for they haue walked in great pryde.

But vnderstonde thou in thy self, and seke out glory for such as be like the: for vnto you is paradyse opened, þ tree of lyfe is planted, the tyme to come is prepared, plenteousnes made ready: a cite is buylded for you, & a rest is prepared, yee perfecte goodnes and wysdome. The rote of euell is wacked from you, þ weaknes and more is hyd from you, & into hell flyeth corrupcion in forgetfulnes. Sorowes are vanyshed awaye, and in the ende is shewed the treasure of immortalite. And therfore axe thou no more questions, cōcernynge the multitude of them that perysshe. For they haue taken libertie, despysed the Hyghest, thought lyghtly of his lawe, & forsaken hys wayes.

Moreouer, they haue troden downe his righteous, * & sayde in their hart, that there is no God, yet and that wittingly, for they dye. For like as the thinge that I haue spoke of, is made ready for you: Euē so is hell and payne prepared for them. For it was not his will that mā shuld come to naught: but they which be created, haue defyled the name of him that made them, and are vnthāvnto him, which prepared life for them. The iudgment is my iudgment now at hande Those thinges haue I not shewed vnto all men, but vnto few: namely, vnto the, and to such as be like the.

Then answered I and sayde: Beholde O Lorde, how hast thou shewed me ꝑ multitude of the tokens, which thou wilt begynne to do at the last: but at what tyme and whan thou hast not shewed me.

The.ix. Chapter.

And answered me then and sayde: Measure thou ꝑ tyme diligētly in thy self, whā thou seyst that one parte of the tokens come to passe, which I haue tolde the before thē shalt thou vnderstonde, that it is the very same tyme, wherin the hyghest will begynne to visite the worlde, which he made. And whā there shalbe sene earthquake and vproure of the people in the worlde, then shalt thou well vnderstonde, that the moost hyest spake of those thinges, from the dayes that were euer euen from the begynnynge.

For like as all that is made in the worlde, hath a begynnynge and ende, and the ende is manyfest: Euen so the tymes also of the worlde haue plaine beginninges in wōders and tokens, and the ende in worckynge and requytynge. And euery one that shalbe saued, and shall be able to escape by hys workes & by the fayth, wherin ye haue beleued, shal be preserued from the saide perils, and shall se my saluacion in my londe and within my borders that I haue halowed me from the worlde. For then shall they be in carefulnesse, wich now haue despised my wayes: and they that haue cast them out despytefully, shall dwell in paynes.

For like as in their lyfe haue receaued them, and haue not knowne me, & they haue abhorred my lawe, whyle they yet had libertie, and whan they had yet open time of amendement and conuersiō, they vnderstode not, but despysed it: the same shall know it after death in payne. And therfore thou nomore carefull, how thou vnrighteous shalt be punyshed, and how the righteous shalbe saued, and whose the worlde is, and for whome the worlde, and whan it is. Then answered I and sayde: * I haue talked before and now I speake, and will speake hereafter, that there be many more of them which perish, then shall be saued, like as the floude is greater then the drought.

And he answered me, sayenge: like as the felde is, so is also the sede: as the floures be, so are the colours also: suche as the workmā is, suche is also the worke: & as the husband man is him self, so is his husbandrye also, for it was the tyme of the worlde. And whan I prepared for them that are now, or euer the worlde was made, wherin they shall dwell, then was there no man that withstode me. Now whan euery one was, and the maker also in the worlde whiche is now prepared, and the moneth that cealeth not, & the lawe which is vnseatcheable, their maners were corrupte. So I considered the worlde, and beholde, there was parell, because of ꝑ thoughtes that were come in to it. And I sawe, & spared them greatly, and haue kepte me a wynebery of the grapes, and a plante from amonge many generations. Let the multitude perish then, whiche are growne vp in vayne, and let my grape & wynebery be kept euen my plante: for with great laboure haue I made it vp.

Neuertheles yet thou wilt take vpon the yet seuen dayes mo (but thou shalt not faste in them) go thy waye then in to the felde of floures, where no house is buylded, & eate onely of the floures of the felde, taist not fleshe drinke no wyne, but eate floures onely. Prayse vnto the hyghest cōtynually, so wil I come, and talke with the.

So I went my waye, and came in to the felde which is called Idath (like as he commaunded me) and there I sat amonge the floures, and ate of the herbes of the felde, & the meate of the same satisfied me. After seuen dayes I sat vpon the grasse, & my hart was vexed within me like as afore: and I opened my mouth, and begāne to talke before the hyghest, and saide: O LORD, thou that shewest thy self vnto vs, thou hast declared and opened thy self vnto oure fathers in ꝑ * wyldernes, in a place where no mā dwelleth, in a baren place, whan they came out of Egipte, and thou spakest sayenge: Heare me O Israel, & marke my wordes thou sede of Jacob. Beholde, I sowe my lawe in you, and it shall bringe frute in you, & ye shalbe honoured in it for euer. For oure fathers which receaued the lawe, kepte it not, & observed not thy ordinaunces and statutes, & the frute of thy lawe was not declared: for it might not, for why? it was thine. * For they that receaued it, perished, because they kept not the thinge that was sowen in them.

It is a custome whan the grounde recea-

ueth sede, or the see a ship, or a vessell meate and drynke, that, whan it perisheth or is broken wherin a thinge is sowne, or wherin ony thinge is put: the thynges also perishe & are broken, which are sowne or put therin. But vnto vs it hath not happened so: for we that haue receaued the lawe, perish in synne, and oure hart also which receaued the lawe: notwithstondinge * the lawe perisheth not, but remayneth in his laboure. Es.8.10.2 2.Tim.2.a

And whan I considered these thinges in my hart after this maner, I loked about me with myne eyes, and vpon the righte syde I sawe * a womā, which mourned sore, made great lamentacion, & wept with loude voyce hir clothes were rent in peces, & she had asshes vpon hir heade. 4.Es.10.d

¶ Then let I my thoughtes go, that I was in, & turned me vnto her, & sayde: wherfore wepest thou? why art thou so sory & discomforted? And she sayd vnto me: Syr, let me bewayle my self & take yet more sorowe: for I am sore vexed in my mynde, & brought very lowe. And I sayde vnto her: what ayleth the? or who hath done ony thinge to þ? tell me. She sayde: I haue bene vnfrutefull and baren, and haue had an husband thirtie yeares And these.xxx. yeares I do nothinge els day and night & all houres, but make my prayer to the hyghest. After thirtie yeares God herd me thy handmayden, loked vpon my misery considred my trouble, and gaue me a sonne, and I was glad of him, so was my husband also & all my neghbours, & we gaue greate honoure vnto the mightie. And I norished him with great trauayle. So whā he grewe vp, and came to þ tyme, that he shulde haue a wife, I made a feast.

The.x. Chapter.

AND it happened that whan my sonne went in to hys chamber, he fel downe, and died: thē ouerthrew we all the lightes, and all my neghbours rose vp to comforte me. Thē toke I my rest vnto the secōde daye at night: & whan they had all rested, þ they might comforte me, I rested also, and rose vp by night, & fled, & am come hither in to thys felde, as thou seyst: and am purposed not to come in the citie, but to remayne here, & neither to eate nor drynke, but continually to mourne and to fast, vntill I dye.

Then let I my meditacions and thoughtes fall, that I was in, and spake to her in displeasure: Thou foolish woman, seist thou not oure heuynes and mournyng, and what happeneth vnto vs? how Sion our mother is all wofull and sory, and how she is clene brought downe & in misery? seinge we be all now in heuynes, & make oure mone (for we be all sorouful) As for the heuynes that thou takest, it is but for one sonne. Demaunde þ earth, and she shall tell þ, that it is she which ought (by reason) to mourne, for the fall of so many that growe vpon her. For from the begynninge all men are borne of her, & other shall come: and beholde, they walke almoost all in to destruccion, and many of them shalbe roted out.

Who shulde then (by reason) make more mournynge, then she, that hath lost so greate a multitude? and not thou, which art sory but for one. But yf thou woldest saye vnto me: My mournynge is not like the mournynge of the earth, for I haue loste the frute of my body, which I bare with heuynes: as for the earth, according to the ordynaūce of þ earth onely, so that many are gone awaye in her, as it is come to passe: Then sayd I vnto the, like as thou hast borne with trauayle & sorowe euen so the earth also from the begynnynge geueth hir frute vnto mā, for him that made her. * And therfore withholde thy sorowe and heuynes by thy self, and loke what happeneth vnto the, beare it stōgly. For yf thou iudgest the mark & ende of God to be righteous and good, and receauest hys counsell in tyme, thou shalt be commended therin. Go thy waye then in to the citie to thy husbande. 4.Es.10.d

And she sayde vnto me: that wyll I not do, I will not go in the citie, but here wil I dye. So I commoned more with her, and sayde: Do not so, but be counceled, & folowe me: for how many falles hath Sion? Be of good comforte because of the sorow of Jerusalem. For thou seist that oure Sanctuary is layed waist, our aulter broken, oure temple destroyed, oure playenge of instrumentes and singynge layed downe, the thanckesgeuynge put to silence, our myth is vanished awaye, the light of oure candelstick is quenched, the Arke of the couenaunt is take from vs, all oure holy thinges are defyled, & the name that is called vpon ouer vs, is dishonoured, oure chyldren are putt to shame, oure prestes are brent, oure Leuites are caried awaye in to captyuyte, oure vyrgins are defyled, and oure wyues rauyshed, our righteous men spoyled, and oure chyldren destroyed, oure ponge men are brought in bondage, and oure stronge worthyes are become weake: and Sion (which seale is the

of all) is lowsed vp from hir wo-ful life she is delyuered in to the handes
of them that hate vs.

Therfore shake of the greate heuines
and put away the multitude of sorowes:
that the mightye maye be mercifull vnto
vs, and that the hygheste maye geue the rest
from thy laboure and trauayle. And it happened, that whan I was talkynge with her there dyd shyne and glister, so that I was afrayed of her, and mused what it might be.
And immediatly she cast out a greate voyce, very fearfull, so that the earth shoke at the voyce of the woman: and I loked, and beholde, the woman appeared vnto me no more: but there was a cyte buylded, and a place was shewed from the grounde, and foundacion.

Then was I afrayed, and cried with a lowde voyce, and sayde: where is Uriel the angell, * which came to me at the fyrst?
for he hath caused me to come in many con
fusions and hye thoughtes, and myne
ioye is turned to corrupcio, and my prayer to shame. And as I was speakynge these wordes, he came vnto me, & loked vpon me and I laye as one that had bene dead, and myne vnderstondynge was altered, and he toke me by the ryght hande, and comforted
me, and set me vp vpon my fete, and sayde
vnto me: what aileth the? and why is thyne
vnderstondinge vered? and the vnderston-dinge of thy hart, and wherfore art thou so? And I sayde: Because thou hast forsaken me: and I haue done * acordynge vn to thy wordes, I wente in to the felde, and there haue I sene a thynge, that I am not able to expresse. He sayde vnto me: Ston-de vp and be manly, and I shall geue the vnderstondinge.

Then sayde I: Speake vnto me my Lorde
and forsake me not, lest I dye in vayne: for I haue sene that I knewe not, & herde that I do not knowe. Or shall my vnderstondin ge be deceaued, and my mynde? But now I desire the, that thou wilt shewe thy seruaunt
of this wonder. He answered me then,
and sayde: Hearke me, and I shall enfourme
the, and tell the wherfore thou art afrayed,
for the hygheste hath opened many secrete thynges vnto the.

He hath sene that thy waye is right, and that thou takest sorowe continually for thy people, and makest greate lamentacion for them: and therfore vnderstonde the vision which thou sawest a lytle whyle a goo after this maner: Thou sawest a woman mour-nynge, and thou hast comforted her: Neuer
theles now seyst thou the lykenes of the wo-mā nomore, but thou thoughtest there was a cyte buylded: and lyke as she tolde the of the fall of her sonne, so is this the answere:
The woman whom thou sawest, is Syon:
and where as she tolde the, that she hath bene thyrtie yeares vnfrutefull and barē, those are the.xxx. yeares, wherin there was no
offerynge made in her.

But after. xxx. yeares Salomon buyl-
ded her, and offred, and then bare the baren
a sonne. And where as she tolde the, that she norysshed hym with labour, that was the dwellynge of Jerusalem. But where as the sonne dyed in hyr chamber, that is the fall of Jerusalem. And thou sawest hir lykenes se, how she mourned for hir sonne: and what els happened vnto her, I haue shewed the.
And now God seyth, that thou art sory in thy minde, and suffrest from thy hart for her and so hath he shewed the hir clearnesse, and
the fayrnes of hyr bewtye.

And therfore I bad the remayne in the felde, where no house is buylded. For I knew that the hygheste wolde shew this vnto the, therfore I commaunded the to go in to the felde, where no foundacion nor buyldinge is. For in the place where the hygheste wyll shewe his cyte, there shalbe no mans buyldinge. And therfore feare not, and let not thyne hart be afrayed, but go thy waye in and se the glorious and fayre buyldinge, &
how greate it is, and how greate thou thyn-kest it after the measure of thyne eyes, and then shalt thou heare as much as thyne ea-res maye comprehende. For thou art blessed aboue many other, and art called with the hygheste, as the few. But to morow at nyght thou shalt remayne here, and so shall
the hygheste shewe the visiōs of hye thynges
which he will do vnto them that dwell vpō earth in the last dayes. So I slepte the ſame nyght, lyke as he commaunded me.

The.xi. Chapter.

In the sawe I a dreame: and be-holde, there came vp from the
see an aegle, which had.xii. wyn
ges & thre heades: And I sawe,
and beholde, he spred his wyn-
ges ouer all the earth, and all the wyndes of the ayre blew in them, and so they were put together agayne. And I behel-de, and out of his fethers there grew other lytle contrary fethers: the heades rested,
The head in the myddest was greater then

the other, yet rested it with the residue.

Moreouer I sawe, that the egle flew vp his wynges, and raygned vpon earth, and ouer all them that dwel vpon the earth: and I sawe that all thinges vnder heauen were subiecte vnto him, and no man spake agaist him, no not one creature vpon the earth. I sawe also that the egle stode vp vpon his clawes, and gaue a sounde with his fethers and a voyce sayēge after this maner: watch not altogether, slepe euery man in his owne place, and watch for a tyme, but let the heades be preserued at the last. Neuertheles I sawe, that the voyce wente not out of his heades, but from the myddest of his body.

B And I nombred his contrary fethers, and beholde, there were eyght of them. And I loked, and beholde, vpon the rightsyde there arose one fether, and raygned ouer all the earth. And it happened, that whan it raygned, the ende of it came, and the place therof appeared nomore. So the nexte folowinge stode vp, and raygned, and had a greate tyme: and it happened, that whan it raygned, the ende of it came also lyke as the first so that it appared nomore.

Then came there a voyce vnto it, & sayde Heare thou that hast kepte in the earth so lōge, this I saye vnto the, before thou begynnest to appeare nomore: There shall none after the attreyne vnto thy tyme, no not halfe the tyme. The arose the thyrde, and raygned as the other afore, and appeared nomore also. So wente it with all the residue one after another, so that euerypne raigned and then appeared nomore. Then I loked and beholde, in processe of tyme the fethers ꝑ folowed were set vp vpō ꝑ right syde, that they myght rule also: and some of them ruled, but within a whyle they appeared no-

C more: for some of them were set vp, but ruled not. After this I loked, and beholde, the.xii. fethers appeared nomore, and the two wynges: and there was nomore vpō the egles body, but two heades that rested, and fire fethers. The I sawe I also, that the fire fethers were parted in two, ād remayned vnder the heade, that was vpon the ryght syde, for ꝑ foure continued in theyr place. So I loked and beholde, they that were vnder the wynges, thought to set vp them selues, & to haue the rule. Then was there one set vp, but shortly it appeared nomore, and the seconde were sooner awaye then the fyrst. And I beheldē, and lo, the two thought also by them selues to raygne: and whan they so thought beholde, there waked one of the heades that were at rest, namely, it that was in the myddest, for that was the greater of the two heades. And then I sawe, that the two heades were kylled with him, and the heade was turned with them that were by hym, and ate vp the two vnder wynges, that wolde haue raygned.

But this heade put the whole earth in fea D re, & bare rule in it, ouer all those that dwelt vpon earth with much laboure, and he had the gouernaunce of the worlde, ouer all the foules that haue bene. After this I loked, and beholde, the heade that was in the myddest, sodenly appeared nomore, lyke as the wynges: then came the two heades, which ruled vpon earth, and ouer those that dwelt therin. And I beheldē, & lo, the heade vpon the ryght syde, deuoured it that was vpon the left syde. And I herde a voyce, which sayde vnto me: loke before the, and consydre the thinge that thou seyst. Then I sawe, and beholde, as it were a lyon that roareth, runninge hastely out of the wood, and he sent out a mans voyce vnto the egle, and sayde: Heare thou, I wil talke with the, and the hyghest shal saye vnto ꝑ: Is it not thou that hast the victory of the foure beastes, whom I made to raygne vpon earth, and in my worlde, and that the ende of theyr tymes myght come thorow them?

And the fourth came, and ouerwanne al E the beastes that were past, and had power ouer the worlde with greate fearfulnes, and ouer the whole compasse of the earth, with the mooste wicked laboure, and so lōge tyme dwelt he vpon the earth with deceate, and the earth hast thou iudged not with treuth. For thou hast troubled the meke, thou hast hurte the peaceable and quiete, thou hast loued lyers, and destroyed the dwellynges of them that brought forth frute, and hast cast downe the walles of such as dyd the no harme. Therfore is thy wrongeous dealynge, and blasphemy come vp vnto the hyghest, & thy pryde vnto ꝑ mightie. The hyghest also hath loked vpon the proude tymes, and beholde they are ended, and theyr abhominations are fulfilled. And therfore apeare nomore thou egle, and thy horrible wynges, and thy wicked fethers, & thy vngracious heades, and thy synfull clawes, and all thy vayne body: that the earth maye be refreshed, and come agayne to herselfe, whan she is delyuered from thy violence, and that she maye hope for the iudgment and mercy of hym that made her.

AND it happened whan the Lyō spake these wordes vnto the aegle, I sawe & beholde, the head that afore had the vpperhande appeared nomore: nother dyd ꝑ twoo wynges appeare ony more, that came after hym, and were sett vp to raygne, and their kyngdome was small, and full of vproure.

And I sawe, and beholde, they appeared nomore, and the whole body of the aegle was brent, and the earth was in greate fear. Then awaked I out of the traunce of my mynde, and from greate feare, and sayde vnto my spirite: Lo, this hast thou geuen me, in that thou searchest out the wayes of the hyghest, yet am I weery in my mynde, & be dasshed in my spirite, and lytle strength is there in me, for the greate feare that I receaued this nyght. Therfore wil I now beseke the hyghest, that he will comforte me vnto the ende. And I sayde: LORDE LORD, yf I haue founde grace before the syght, and yf I am iustified with ꝑ before many other, and my prayer be come vp before thy face comforte me then, and shewe thy seruaunt the interpretacion and playne difference of this horrible syght, that thou mayest perfectly comforte my soule: for thou hast iudged me worthy, to shew me the last of tymes. And he sayde vnto me: this is the interpretacion of this syght. The aegle whō thou sawest come vp from the see, is the kyngdome which was sene * in the vision of thy brother Daniel, but it was not expounded vnto hym, for now I declare it vnto the.

Beholde, the dayes come, that there shal ryse vp a kyngdome vpon earth, and it shal be feared above all the kyngdomes that were before it. In the same kyngdome shall .xii. kynges raygne, one after another. For the twelfe shal begynne to raygne, and shal haue more tyme then the other, and this do the .xii. wynges signifie, which thou sawest. As for the voyce that spake, & that thou sawest proceede from the heades (but not from the body) it betokeneth, that after ꝑ tyme of that kyngdome there shall aryse greate stryuynges, and it shall stonde in parell of fallynge nevertheles it shall not yet fall, but shalbe fayre in his begynnynge. And the eyght vnderwynges which thou sawest hange vnto the wynges of hym, betoken, that in hym shall aryse eyght kynges, whose tyme shalbe but small, and their yeares swyft, and two of them shall beare. But whan the twelfe tyme commeth, there shalbe foure kepte in the tyme, whan his tyme begynneth to come that it maye be ended, but two shalbe kepte vnto the ende.

And where as thou sawest the heades restynge, this is the interpretacion. In his last shall the hyghest rayse vp their kyngdomes, and call many agayne in to them, and they shall haue the dominion of the earth, and of those ꝑ dwel therin, & much labour aboue al those that were before them. Therfore are they called the heades of the aegle: for it is they that shall bringe forth his wickednes agayne, and that shall performe, and fynish his last. And where as thou sawest, that the greate heade appeared nomore, it signifieth, that one of them shall dye vpon his bed, and yet with payne, for ꝑ two that remayne, shalbe slayne with the swearde. For the swearde of the one shall deuoure the other, but at the last shall he fall thorow the swearde hymself.

And where as thou sawest two vnderwynges vpon the heade, that is on the eyght syde, it signifyeth, that it is they, whō the Hyghest hath kepte vnto their ende: this is a small kyngdome, and full of trouble. The Lyon whom thou sawest ryse vp out of the wood, and roarynge, and speakynge vnto the aegle, and rebukynge hym for his vnrighteousnesse, is the wynde, which the Hyghest hath kepte for them, and for their wickednesse vnto the ende: he shall reproue them, and rente them asunder before them. For he shall sett them lyuynge before the iudgment, and shall rebuke them: for the residue of my people shall he deliuer with trouble, those that be preserued ouer myne endes: and he shall make them ioyfull vntyll the commynge, of the daye of iudgement, wherof I haue spoken vnto the from the begynnynge. This is the dreame that thou sawest, and this is the interpretacion. Thou onely hast bene mete to knowe the secrete, of the Hyghest.

Therfore wryte all these thynges that thou hast sene in a boke, and hyde them, and teach them the wyse in the people, whose hartes thou knowest maye comprehende and kepe the secretes. But wayte thou here thy self yet seuen dayes moo, that it maye be shewed the, what so euer it pleaseth the Hyghest to declare vnto the, and with that he wente his waye.

And whan all the people perceaued, that the seuen dayes were past, and I not came agayne in to the cyte, they gathered them altogether from the least vnto the moost, and came vnto me, and sayd: what haue we offended the, and what euell haue we done agaynst the, that thou forsakest vs, and sittest here in this place? For of all people thou onely art left vs, as a grape of the vine, and as a candell in a darke place, and as an haué and a shippe perserued from the tempest. Haue we not els aduersyte ynough, but thou must forsake vs? Were it not better for vs, that we had bene brent with Syon? For we are no better, then they that dyed there and they wepte with loude voyce. Then answered I them and sayde: Be of good cõforte O Israel, and be not heuy thou house of Jacob: for the hyghest hath you in remembraunce, and the myghtie hath not forgotten you in tentacion. As for me, I haue not forsaken you, nother am I departed frõ you: but am come i to this place to praye, because of the mysery of Israel, that I myght seke mercy for the lowe estate of your Sanctuary. And now go your waye home euery man, and after these dayes will I come vnto you. So the people wente theyr waye into the cyte lyke as I commaunded them: but I remayned still in the felde seuen dayes, as the angell bad me, and I ate onely of the floures of the felde, and had my meate of the herbes in those dayes.

The.xiii.Chapter.

And it happened after the seuen dayes, that I dreamed a dream by nyght. And beholde, there arose a wynde from the see, that moued all the floudes therof And I loked, & beholde, the man was stronge, and increased with the cloudes of heaué: and whan he turned his countenaunce to consyder, all the thynges trembled that were sene vnder hym: and whan the voyce went out of his mauth, all they brent that herde hym, lyke as the earth whan it feleth the fyre.

After these I sawe, and beholde, there gathered together a multitude of men out of nombre from the foure wyndes of the heauen, to fyght agaynst the man, that came out from the see. And I loked, and beholde, he graued hym self a greate moũtayne, and flew vp vpon it. But I wolde haue sene the border or place, wherout the hyll was grauen, and I coulde not.

I sawe after these, that al they which came to fyght agaynst him, were sore afrayed, and yet durst they fyght. Neuertheles whan he sawe the fearcenesse & violence of the people, he nother lyft vp his hande nor held swearde, nor ony weapen: but onely (as I sawe) he sent out of his mouth as it had bene a blast of fyre, and out of his lippes the wynde of the flamme: and out of his tonge he cast out sparkes and stormes, and they were all myxte together: the blast of fyre, the wynde of the flammes, and the greate storme, and fell with a rushe vpon the people, which was prepared to fyght, and brent them vp euerychone: so that of the innumerable multitude there was nothinge sene, but onely dust and smoke. Whan I sawe this, I was afrayed.

Afterwarde sawe I the same man come downe from the mountayne, and callynge vnto hym another peaceable people: and there came much people vnto hym: some were glad some were sory, some of them were bounde, so that they were caried and brought forth.

Then was I sick thorow greate feare, and I waked, and sayde: thou hast shewed thy seruaunt all thy wonders from the begynnynge, and hast coũted me worthy, that thou myghtest receaue my prayer: shewe me now yet the interpretacion of this dreame. For thus I consyder in my vnderstondinge: Wo vnto them that shalbe left in these dayes, and much more wo vnto them that are not left behynde: for they that were not left, were in heuynes.

Now vnderstonde I the thynges that are layed vp in the latter dayes, which shall happen vnto them, and to those that are not left behynde. Therfore are they come in to greate perels, and many necessities, lyke as these dreames declare. Yet is it easyer, that he which suffreth hurte, come in these, then to passe awaye as a cloude out of the worlde and now to se the thynges that shall happen in the last.

Then answered he me, and sayde: The interpretacion of the syght shall I shewe the, and I will open vnto thy the thynge that thou hast requyred. Forthon hast spoken of them that are left behynde, and this is the interpretacion. He that taketh awaye the perell in that tyme, hath kepte hymself. They that be fallē wyth harme, are such as haue workes and fayth vnto the moost myghtie. Knowe this therfore, that they which be left behynde are more blessed then they that be dead. This is the meninge of the vision. Whereas thou sawest a man commynge vp from the depe of the se

the same is he whom God the Hyghest hath kept a greate season, which by his owne self shall delyuer his creature, and he shall ordre them that are left behynde And where as thou sawest, that out of his mouth there came a blast of wynde, fyre and stormе, and how that he lyft vp nother sweard nor weapon, but that the russhinge in of hym destroyed the whole multitude, that came to fight agaynst hym: it signifyeth, that the dayes come, whan God wyll delyuer them that vpō earth, & in a traunce of mynde shal come vpon them, that dwell in the earth. For one shall vndertake to fyght agaynst another, one citie agaist another, one place against another, one people against another, and one realme agaynst another. Whē this shall come to passe, then shall the tokens come, that I shewed the before: and then shall my sonne be declared, whō thou sawest clymme vp as a man. And whan all the people heare his voyce, everyman shall in theyr owne londe leaue the battayll, that they haue one against another, an innumerable multitude shal be gathered together, as they that wolde come and to ouercome hym by force. But he shall stonde vpon the top of the mount Sion. Neuertheles Sion shall come, and shalbe shewed, beynge prepared and prouyded for all me, lyke as thou sawest the hyll graue forth without ony handes. And my sonne shall rebuke the people that are come for theyr wickednes, with the temptations for theyr euell ymaginations: and the paynes wherwith they shalbe punysshed are lykened vnto the flamme: and with out labour shall he destroye them, euen by the lawe, which is cōpared vnto the fyre. And where as thou sawest, that he gathered another peacеable people vnto hym: those are the ten trybes, which were caried away prisoners out of theyr owne londe, in the tyme of Oseas the kynge, * whom Salmanasar the kynge of Assiria toke prisoners, and caried them ouer the water, and so came they in to another londe.

Now they gaue them this councell, that they shulde leaue the multitude of the Heythen, and to go forth in to a farther countre where neuer mankynde dwelt: that they myght there kepe theyr statutes, which they neuer kepte in theyr own londe. And so they entred in at the narow passages of the water of Euphrates, and * God shewed tokēs for them, and helde styll the floude tyll they were passed ouer: for thorow that countre there was a greate waye, namely of a yeare and an halfe iourney, for the same region is called Asareth. Then dwelt they there vnto the latter tyme: and when they come forth agayne, the Hyghest shall holde styll the springes of the streame agayne, that they maye go thorow, therfore sawest thou the multitude with peace. And they that be left behinde of thy people, are those yͤ be founde wythyn my border. Now whan he destroyeth the multitude that is gathered together, he shall defende his people that remayne, and then shall he shew them greate wonders.

Then sayde I: O LORDE LORDE, shew me this: wherfore haue I sene the man commynge vp from the depe of the see?

And he sayde vnto me: Lyke as thou cānst nother seke out nor knowe the thynges that are in the depe of the see, euē so mayest thou not se my sonne, or those that be with hym, but in the tyme of the daye. This is the interpretacion of the dreame, which thou sawest, therfore thou onely art here lyghtened: for thou hast forsaken thyne owne lawe, and applied thy diligence vnto myne, and sought it. * Thy lyfe hast thou ordred in wysdome, and hast called vnderstondinge thy mother, and therfore haue I shewed the the treasure of the Hyghest. After thre dayes I wyll shew the more, and talke with the more at large, yer heuy and wōderous thynges wyll I declare vnto the. 3. Reg. 3. Pro. 7. d

Then went I forth in to the felde, geuynge prayse and thākes greatly vnto God because of his wonders which he dyd in tyme, and because he gouerneth the same, and such as is in tyme, and there I satt thre dayes.

The.xiiii. Chapter.

Vpon the thyrde daye I satt vnder an oke tree, then came there a voyce vnto me out the bush, and sayde: Esdras, Esdras. And I sayde: here I am LORDE, and stode vp vpon my fete. Then spake he vnto me: * In the bush dyd I appeare vnto Moses, and talked with hym, whan my people serued in Egypte, and I sent hym, and led my people out of Egypte, and brought hym vpon the mount Syna, where I helde him by my a longe season, & tolde hym my wonderous workes, and shewed hym the secretes of the tymes, and the ende, and commaunded hym, sayenge: These wordes shalt thou declare, and not hyde them. And now I saye vnto the: that thou laye vp Exod. 3. a.

in thyne hart the dreames that thou hast sene, and the interpretacions which I haue shewed the: for thou shalt be receaued of all thou shalt be turned, and remayne with my councell, and with such as be lyke the, vntill the tymes be ended. For the worlde hath lost his youth, and the tymes begynne to ware olde. For the tyme is deuyded in to twolue partes, and ten partes of it are gone alreadp, and half of the tenth parte: yet remayneth there that, which is after the half of the tenth parte.

¶ Therfore prepare and ordre thy house, and refourme thy people: comforte such of them as be in trouble: and tell now of the destruccion: let go from the mortal thoughtes: cast awaye the burthens of man: put of the weake nature: laye vp in some place the thoughtes that are most heuy vnto the, and hayst the to flyt from these tymes: for such euell, and wickednesse as thou hast now sene happen, shall they do yet much worse. * For the
Mat. 24.a
1. Joh. 2.c.
weaker that the worlde and the tyme is, the more shall synne, and wickednesse increase, in them that dwell vpon earth. For the treuth is fled farre awaye, and leynge is hard at hande. For now hasteth the vision to come, that thou hast sene.

Then answered I and sayde: Beholde LORDE, I will go as thou hast commaunded me, & refourme the people which are present. But they that shalbe borne after warde, who wyll exhorte or rebuke them?

¶ Thus the worlde is set in darknes, and they that dwel therin, are without light for thy lawe is kindled, because no man knoweth the thynges that are done of the, or that shalbe done. yf I haue founde grace before the, sende the holy goost in to me, & I shall wrpte all that hath bene done in the worlde sence the begynnynge, which was wrytten in thy lawe, that men maye fynde the path, and that they which will lyue in the latter dayes, maye lyue.

And he answered me, sayenge: Go thy waye, gather thy people together, and saye vnto them, that they seke the not for .xl. dayes: but loke thou gather the many bore trees and take with the Sarea, Dabria, Selemia, Echanus, and Asyel, these fyue, which are ready to wrpte swiftly, and come hyther and I shall lyght a candle of vnderstondinge in thyne hart, which shall not be put out tyl the thynges be performed which thou shalt begynne to wrpte. And then shalt thou declare some thynges openly vnto the perfecte, and some thynges shalt thou shewe secretly vnto the wyse. Tomorow at this houre shalt thou begynne to wrpte.

Then went I forth (as he commaunded me) and gathered all the people together, & sayde: Heare these wordes o Israel: Our fathers from the begynnynge were straungers in Egypte, from whence they were delyuered, and * receaued the lawe of lyfe, the
which they kepte not, which ye also haue transgressed after them. Then was this londe, and the londe of Syon parted amonge you by the lot to possesse. But your fathers & your selues also haue done vnrighteousnes and haue not kepte the wayes which the hyghest commaunded you. And for so much as he is a righteous iudge, he toke it from you in tyme the thynge that he had geuen you. And now are ye here and your brethren amonge you. Therfore yf so be that ye subdue your owne vnderstondinge, and refourme youre hart, ye shalbe kepte alyue, and after death shall, ye optayne mercy. For after death shall the iudgment come, when we shall lyue agayne: and then shall the names of the ryghteous be manifest: and the workes of the vngodly with their workes shalbe declared. Let no man therfore come nere vnto me, nor aske ony question at me thes. xl. dayes.

So I toke the fyue men (as he commaunded me) and we wente in to the felde, and remayned there. The next daye a voyce called me sayenge: Esdras, Open thy mouth, * and drynke that I geue the. Then opened I my mouth, and beholde, and reached me a full cuppe, which was full of water, but the colour of it was lyke fyre. And I toke it and dranke. And whan I had dronken it, my hart had vnderstondinge, and wysdome grew in my breste: for my spirite was kepte in remembraunce, and my mouth was opened and shut nomore. The hyghest gaue vnderstondinge vnto the fyue men, that they wrote the hye thynges of the nyght, which they vnderstode not. But in the nyght they dyd eate bread: as for me, I spake in the daye, and helde not my tonge by nyght. In. xl. dayes, they wrote two hundreth, and fourr bokes.

And it happened whan the .xl. dayes were fulfilled, that the hyghest spake, sayenge: The first that thou hast wrytten, speake openly, that the worthy and vnworthy maye rede it. But kepe the .lxx. last, that thou mayest shewe it onely to such as be wise amonge thy people. For in them is the spryng of vnderstondinge, the fountayne of wysdome, and the strame of knowlege, And I dyd so.

The.xv.Chapter.

Beholde, speake thou in the eares of my people the wordes of prophecie, which I will put in thy mouth, sayeth the LORDE and cause them to be wrytten for it is the treuth. Feare not the imaginacions against ỹ, let not the vnfaithy lakes of them trouble the, that speake against the. For all the vnfaythfull shall dye in theyr vnfaythfulnes. Beholde sayeth the LORDE, I will bringe plages vpon the worlde: the swearde, honger, death and destruccion, for wickednes hath the vpperhande in all the earth, and theyr shame all bodyes are fulfilled.

Therfore sayeth the LORDE, I will take my tonge nomore vnto theyr wickednes, which they do so vngodly: nother will I suffre them in the thinges, that they deale withall so wickedly. Beholde, * the innocent blonde of the troubled crieth vnto me, and the soules of the righteous complayne continually: and therfore (sayeth the LORDE) I will surely auenge, & receaue vnto me ỹ innocēt blonde from amonge them vnto my people, is led as a flocke vnto be slayne, I will not suffre them to dwell in Egypte, but wyl bringe the out with a myghtie hande, and a stretched out arme, and smyte it with plages as afore and will destroye all the londe of it. Egypte with his armie, and the foundacions of it shal perysshe with the plage and punyshment that God shall bringe vpon it.

The husbandeman that tyll the grounde, shall mourne for his fruytes shalbe destroyed thorow the drought and hale, and an horrible starre. For both the worlde and them that dwell therin, for the swearde and their destruccion shall come: and one people shall stonde vp against another, & sweardes in their hondes. Some shalbe vnstedfast, and some fall to violence vnto other: they shall not remember theyr kynge ād pynces, the wayes of their kynges and handelinges in theyr londe. Many shall desyre to go in to the cyties, and shall not be able. For because of their wickednes the cyties shalbe brought in feare, the people shall shake, and men shalbe afrayed. No man shall haue no pytie vpon his neighbour, but one shall prouoke another vnto anger, to spoyle theyr goodes because of the scarsenes of bread, and because of the great trouble.

Beholde, I gather and call together all the kynges of the earth which are from the vprysinge, from the south, from the east and Libanus to turne vnto them, and restore the thynges that they haue geuē them. Lyke as they do yet this daye vnto my chosen, so wil I do also, and recompence them in theyr bosome. Thus sayeth the LORDE God. My ryght hande shal not spare the synners, and my swearde shall not ceasse ouer them, that shed the innocēt blonde vpon the earth. The fyre is gone out from his wrath, and hath consumed the foūdacions of the earth, and the synners, like the strawe that is kindled. Wo worth them that synne, and kepe not my commaundemētes, sayeth the LORDE. I wil not spare them. Go youre waye ye chyldren from violence, defyle not my Sanctuary: for the LORDE knoweth al them that synne agaynst hym, and therfore delyuereth he them vnto death and destruccion. For now are the plages come vpon the worlde, and ye shall remaynē in them. For God shall not delyuer you, because ye haue synned agaynst hym.

Beholde, an horrible billon commeth frō the east, where generaciōs of Dragōs shal come out, and the people of the Arabes with many charettes, and the multitude of them shalbe as the winde vpon earth, that al they which heare them ragynge in theyr wrath, maye feare and be afrayed: and as the wylde bores out of the wood, so shal they go out and with greate power shall they come, and stonde fightinge with them, and shal wast the porcion of the londe of the Illirians.

And then shal the Dragōns haue the vpperhāde, not remembringe theyr byrth, and shall turne aboute swearinge together in greate power, to persecute them. But these shalbe afrayed, and kepe sylence at theyr power, and shall flye: and one out of the londe of the Illirians shall besege them, and cōsume one of them, and in theyr hoost shalbe feare & drede, & stryfe amonge their kynges.

Beholde cloudes from the east, and from the north vnto the south, and they are very horrible to loke vpon, full of wrath and storme. They shall smyte one vpō another, and they shall smyte at the a greate starre vpon earth, and theyr starre, and the blonde shalbe from the swearde vnto the bely, and the smoke of man vnto the camels lytter: And there shalbe greate fearfulnes and tremblinge vpon earth, and they that se the wrath, shalbe afrayed, and a tremblinge shal come vpon them.

And then shall there come greate raynes from the south and from the nozth, and par te from the west, and from the stozmy wynde from the east, and shall shut them vp agayne, and the cloude which he rayled vp in wzath: and the starre to cause feare towarde the east and westwynde, shalbe destroyed: and the greate cloudes shalbe lift vp, and the mygbtie cloudes full of wzath, and the starre, that they maye make all the earth afraied and them that dwel therin, and that they maye poure out ouer all places an hoz: rible starre, fyre, and hayle, & flyenge swea des, and many waters: that all feldes maye be full, and all ryuers, and they shall breake down the cyties, and walleys, mountaynes and hylles, all trees, wood and the grasse of the medowes, and all theyr frute. And they shall go stedfast vnto Babylon, and make her afrayed, they shall come to her, and bese ge her, the starre and all wzath shall they poure out vpon her.

G Then shall the dust and smoke go vp vn to the heauen, and all they that be aboute her, shall bewayle her, & they that remayne vnder her, shall do seruyce vnto them that haue put her in feare. And thou Asia that comfozted thyself also vpon the hope of Ba- bylon, and art a wozshippe of hyr persoune Woe be vnto the thou wzetch, because thou hast made thyself lyke vnto her, and hast decte thy doughters in whozdom, that they mygbt triumphe & please thy louers, which haue alwaye desyzed to committe whozdom with the: thou hast folowed the abhomina- ble cyte in all hyr wozkes and inuencions.

Therfoze sayeth God: I will sende pla- ges vpon the, wydowhode, pouerte, honger warres and pestylence, to wayst thy houses with destruccion and death, and the glozy of thy power shalbe dyed vp as a floure, whan the heate aryseth thatas sent ouer the Thou shalt be syck as a poore wyfe that is plaged, and beaten of women: so that the mygbtie and louers shall not be able to re- ceaue the. Wolde I so hate the sayeth the LORDE or ye thou haddest not alwaye slayne my chosen, craftinge the stroke of thy handes, and sayde ouer theyr death, whan thou wast dzonken: set fozth the bewtye of thy countenaunce.

The rewarde of thy whozdome shalbe re compenced the in thy bosome, therfoze shalt thou receaue rewarde.

H Lyke as thou hast done vnto my chosen (sayeth the LORDE) euen so shall God do vnto the, and shall delyuer the in to the plage. Thy chyldzen shall dye of honger, & thou shalt fall thozow the swearde. Thy cy- ties shalbe bzoken downe, and al thyne shal perysh with the swearde in the felde. They that be in the mountaynes, shall dye of hon- ger. and eate theyr owne flesh, and dzynke theyr owne bloude foz very honger of bread & thyzst of water. Thou vnhappie shalt co- me thozow the see, & receaue plages agayne

In the passage they shall cast downe the slayne cyte, and shall rote out one parte of thy londe, and consume the pozcion of thy glozy. They shall treade the downe lyke stu- ble, and they shalbe thy fyre, and shall consu me the: thy cyties, and thy londe, thy wood, and thy frutefull trees shall they burne vp with the fyre. Thy chyldzen shall they cary awaye captyue: and loke what thou hast, they shall spoyle it, and marre the bewtie of thy face.

The.xvi. Chapter.

WO vnto the Babylon, and Asia wo vnto the Egypte, and Sy- ria: gyzde your selues with clo- thes of sack and heere, & mourn foz youre chyldzen, be sozyfor youre destruccion is at honde. A swearde is sent vpon you, and who will turne it back? A fyre is kyndled amõge you, and who will quench it? Plages are sent vnto you, and what is he that will dryue them awaye? Maye ony man dryue awaye an hongrie lyon in the wood? Or maye ony man quith the fyre in the stubble, whan it hath begon- ne to burne? Maye one turne agayne the a- rowe, that is shot of a stronge archer? The mygbtie LORDE sendeth the plages, and what is he that will dryue them awaye? The fyre is kyndled and gone fozth in his wrath, and what is he that will quench it? He shall cast lyghtenynges, and who shall not feare? He shal thonder, and who shal not be afrayed? The LORDE shall threaten, and who shall not vtterly be beaten to pou der at his presence? The earth quaketh, and the foundacions therof: the see aryseth vp, with waues from the depe, and the flouds of it are vnquyete, and the fyshes therof also before the LORDE, and before the glory of his power. For strõge is hys right hande that holdeth the bowe, his arowes that he shooteth, are sharpe, and shall not mysse, whē they begynne to be shot in to the endes of the worlde.

Beholde, the plages are sent, and shal not I turne agayne, vntyll they come vpon earth.

fyre is kyndled, and shall not be put out, vntyll it consume the foundacions of the earth. Lyke as an arowe which is shot of a myghtie archer returneth not backward, euē so these plages that shall be sent vpon earth, shal not turne agayne. Wo is me, wo is me who will delyuer me in those dayes? The begynnynge of sorowes & great mournunge the beginninge of derth, and greate death the begynnynge of warres, and the powers shall moue in feare: the begynnynge of euils, and they shall tremble euery one.

What shall I do in these thynges, whan the plages come? Beholde, honger, and plage, trouble, and anguyssh are sent, as scourges to amendement. But for all these plages they shall not turne from theyr wickednesses, nor be alwaye myndefull of my scourges.

Beholde, vitayles shalbe so good cheape vpon earth, that they shall thynke them selues to be in good case: and euen then shall wickednesse growe vpon earth, warres, derth and greate disquietnes. For many of them that dwell vpon earth shall perysh of honger, and the other that escape the honger, shall the swearde destroye: and the dead shal lye out as donge, and there shalbe no man to comforte them. For the earth shalbe waste, and the cyties shalbe cast downe: there shalbe no man left to tyll the earth, & sowe it. The trees shall geue frute, and no man shall plucke them, of and gather theme Grapes shalbe ripe, and who shall tread them? For all places shalbe desolate of men, in so that one man shall desyre to se another, to heare his voyce. For of one whole thousande there shalbe ten left, and two in the felde, that shall hyde them selues in the thicke bushes, and in the clyftes of stones: lyke as when there remayne thre or foure olyues vpon the olyue tre, or as when a vynyarde is gathered, there are left some grapes, of them that diligently sowght, thorow the vynyarde.

Euen so in those dayes there shalbe thre or foure left, for them that search theyr houses with the swearde. And the earth shalbe waste, and the feldes therof shall ware desolate hye wayes, & all hyr pathes shall be full of thornes, because no man shall walke there thorow. The doughters shal make haunynge no brydegromes: the wo men shall make lamentacion, haunynge no husbandes, theyr doughters shall mourne hauynge no helpe of theyr brydegrome. Yea the warres shall they be destroyed, and theyr husbandes shall perysh of honger. O ye seruauntes of the LORDE, heare these thynges, & marke them. Beholde, the worde of the LORDE, O receaue it: beholde, the plages drawe nye, and are not slacke in tarienge. Lyke as a trauaillinge woman, which in the .ix. moneth bryngeth forth a sonne, whan the houre of the byrth is come, an houre two or thre afore that the paynes come vpon hyr body, and whan the chylde cōmeth to the byrth, they tary not the twynckelynge of an eye: Euen so shal not the plages be slacke to come vpon earth, and the worlde shall mourne, and sorowes shall come vpon it on euery syde.

O my people, heare my worde, make you redy to the battayll: and in all euell be euen as pylgroms vpon earth. He that selleth, let hym be as he that flyeth his waye: and he that bieth, as one that wil lese. * Who so occupieth marchaundise, as he that wynneth not: and he that buyldeth, as he that shall not dwell therin: he that soweth, as one that shall not reape: he that dyggeth the vynyarde, as he that shall not gather the grapes: they that mary, as they that shal get no chyldren: and they that mary not, as the wydowes: * and therfore they that laboure, labour in vayne. For straungers shal reape their frutes, and spoile their goodes, ouerthrowe, their houses, and take their children captiue: for in captiuite, & bondage shall they get children. And they that occupie their marchaundises with robbery, how longe decke they their cities, their houses, their possessions, and personnes? the more will I punysh them for their synnes sayeth the LORDE. Lyke as an whore enuyeth an honest woman, so shall righteousnes hate iniquite, whan she decketh hir self, and shall accuse her to hir face, whan he cōmeth that defendeth, which shall make inquysicion for all synne vpon earth. And therfore be not ye like there vnto, nor to the workes therof: for ouer it be longe, iniquite shalbe taken awaye out of the earth, and righteousnes shall raunge amonge you.

Let not the synner saye, that he hath not synned: for coles of fire shall burne vpon his heade, which saieth before the LORDE God & his glory: I haue not synned. Beholde the LORDE knoweth all the workes of men, their imaginacions, their thoughtes, and their hartes. * For he spake but the worde: Let the earth be made, and it was made: let the heauen be made, and it was made. In his worde were the starres made, and he knoweth the noumbre of them. He searcheth the grounde of the depe, and the treasures therof: he hath measured the see, and what it conteineth. He hath shut the see in the middest of the waters, and with his worde hath he hanged the earth vpon the waters. He spredeth out the heauen lyke a vouite: vpon the waters hath he founded it. In the deserte and dreye wyldernes hath he made springes of water, and pooles vpon the toppe of the mountaynes, that the floudes myght powre downe from the stony rockes to water the earth. He made man, and put his hart in the myddest of the body, and gaue him breth, lyfe, and vnderstoudinge, yee and the spirite of the almightie God, which made all thinges, and hath searched the grounde of all the secretes of the earth.

G He knoweth youre ymaginacions, and inuencions, and what ye thinke whan ye synne and wolde hyde youre synnes. Therfore hath the LORDE searched and sought out all your workes, and he shal bewraye you al And whan your synnes are brought forth, ye shalbe ashamed before men, and youre owne synnes shalde youre accusers in that daye. What wil ye do? O how will ye hyde youre synnes before God, and his angels? Beholde, God himself is ỹ iudge, feare him leaue of from youre synnes, and forget your vnrighteousnesses, and medle nomore with them: so shall God lede you forth, and deliuer you from all trouble. For beholde, the heate of a greate multitude is kindled ouer you, and they shall take awaye certayne of you, and fede the pole with Idols: and they that consent vnto them, shalbe had in derisi on laughed to scorne, and troden vnderfote.

H For vnto the places there shalbe a place and in the next cities a greate insurrection vpon those that feare the LORDE. They shalbe lyke mad men, they shal spare no mã: they shal spoyle and wayst such as feare the LORDE, their goodes shall they take from them, and shutt them out of theyr houses. Then shall it be knowne who are my chosen, and they shalbe tryed as the golde in the fyre. Heare O ye my beloued, saieth the LORDE, beholde, the dayes of trouble are at honde, but I will delyuer you from the same. Be not ye afrayed, dispayre not, for God is youre captayne.

Who so kepeth my commaundementes and preceptes (sayeth the LORDE God) let not youre synnes weye you downe, and let not youre vnrighteousnesses be lift vp. Woe be vnto them that are subdued vnto theysynnes, and tangled in theyr wickednesse: lyke as a felde is hedged in with bushes, and the path therof couered with thornes, that no man maye trauayle thorow: and so is he taken, and cast in the fyre, and brent.

TObias was of the trybe, and

Though he was taken prysoner in the

rians, nevertheles beynge in captiuyte, he lost not the waye of treuth: In so much that what so euer he myght gett, he parted
it with his folow prysoners and brethren that were of his kynred. And though he were yonger thē all they in the trybe, of Nephtali, yet dyd not he behaue hymself lyghtly in his workes. And whan all the other went to the golden calues, * which Jeroboam the kynge of Israel had made
hymself alone fled all theyr companyes,
and got hym to Jerusalem vnto the temple
of the LORDE, and there worshipped
the LORDE God of Israel, faythfully
offeringe all his fyrst frutes and tythes,
and in the thyrde yeare he myntstred all
his goodes vnto the straungers and conuer-
tes. Thise and such lyke thynges dyd he a-lwayes vnto the lawe of God, whan he was

But whan he was a man, he toke, * out of his owne trybe a wyfe called Anna, and
of her begat a sonne, whom he called after his owne name, and taught hym from his youth vp, to feare God, and to refrayne
from all synne.

But whan he with his wyfe, his sonne,
and with all his kynred was come in capti-uyte vnto * Ninive what tyme as they all eate of ỹ meates of the Heythē, he kepte
his soule, & was neuer defyled in their meates. And so, so much as he was myndfull of the LORDE in al his hart, God gaue him fauour in the presence of Salmanasar the kynge, which gaue him power to go wher he wolde, & had he lyberte to do what hi lyst.

He visited Tobias vnto all them that we re prysoners, * and comforted them, and ga-ue them wholsome exortacions. And whan
he was xxv. yeares a cyte of the Medes, hauynge .x. talentes of syluer (of the thynges which the kynge had honoured hym)
he lente amonge a greate company of peo ple of his kynred, one Gabelus (which was
of his owne trybe) beynge in necessite, he ga
ue hym the sayde weyght of syluer vnder an hondewryte.

After a longe season whan Salmanasar

the kynge was dead and Sennacherib his sonne reigned in his steade, which hated the chyldren of Israel: Tobias went dayly
thorow out all his kynred, and comforted
them, and gaue of his goodes to euery one of them, as much as he myght: he fed the hō
grie, clothed the naked, and buried the dead
and slayne, and that diligently.

* And whan Sennacherib the kynge D came agayne and fled out of Jewry (what 4. re. 19. ij.
tyme as God punyshed hym for his blasphe
my) and in his wrath slew many of the children of Israel, Tobias * buried theyr bo- 4. Esd. 2. 8 dies. But whan it was tolde the kynge, he commaunded to slaye hym, and take awaye
all his goodes. Nevertheles Tobias with hys wyfe fled his waye, and was hyd naked, for there were many that loued hym.
But after .xl. dayes the kynge was slayne
of his owne sonnes. Then came Tobias agayne to his house, and all his goodes we re restored vnto hym.

The.ii. Chapter.

AFter these thynges vpon a so- 3
lempne daye of the LORDE Tobias made a good feast in his house, & sayde vnto his sone Go thy waye, & bringe hyther
some of oure trybe, such as feare God, ỹ
they make mery w̄ vs. And whā he was gone, he came agayne, & tolde his father, that one of the chyldren of Israel laye slayne vpō
the strete. And immedtatly he leapt from his table, left the feast, came fallynge to the dead coarse, toke hym and bare hym pryuely in to his house, ỹ whan the Sonne was downe, he myght safely burye hym. And whan he had hyd the coarse, he dyd eate
his meate with mourninge and feare, re-membringe the wordes, that the LO-RDE sayed by the prophet Amos: * youre Amos. 8. D

heuynes.

But whan the Sonne was downe, he D went his waye and buried hym. Then all his neghbours reproued hym, sayenge: It

slaye the because of this matter, & hast scarce escaped the daūger of death, and buriest thou the dead agayne? Nevertheles, Tobias fearinge God more then the kynge, toke
the bodies of the slayne, hyd them in his house, and buried them at mydnyght.

It happened vpon a daye, that he had buried the dead, and was wery, came home, C

and layed hym down by the wal and slepte And whyle he was a slepe, there fell downe vpon his eyes warme donge out of the swalowes nest, so that he was blinde. * This tentacio dyd God suffre to happē vnto hym that they which came after, myght haue an example of his pacience, lyke as of holy Job. For so much as he euer feared God frō his youth vp, and kepte his commaundementes, he was not hewy agaynst God, that the plage of blyndnes chaunsed vnto hym, but remayned stedfast in the feare of God, and thanked God all the dayes of his lyfe, Deu. 8. a. and. 13. a. Joh. 9. a. and 11. a.

D For like as blessed Job was had in derision of kynges, euen so was he laughed to scorne of his elders & kynsfolkes, which say vnto hym: * where is thy hope, for the which thou hast done almes and buried the dead? But Tobias rebuked them, and spake: * Saye not so, for we are the chyldren of holy men, & loke for the lyfe, which God shall geue vnto them, that neuer turne their beleue from him. Anna his wyfe * went daylie to the weuynge worke, and loke what lyuynge she coulde gett with the labour of hyr handes, she brought it. And it happened that she toke a kyd and brought it home.

And whan hyr husband herd it crie, he sayde, * loke that it be not stollen, restore it agayne to the owners: for it is not lawful for vs, to eate or to touch ony thyng of theft Then was his wyfe angrie, & sayde: * Now is thy hope become vayne openly, and thy almes dedes are manyfest. With these, and such lyke wordes dyd she cast him in ỹ teth.

The. iii. Chapter.

A When Tobias toke it heuely, and with teares beganne to make his prayer, sayenge: O LORDE, thou art righteous, and al thy iudgmētes are true, * yee all thy wayes are mercy, faythfulnes, and iudgment. And now O LORDE be myn defull of me, and take no vengeaunce of my synnes, nother remembre my mysdedes nor the mysdedes of my elders. For we haue not bene obedient vnto thy commaundementes, therfore are we spoyled, brought in to captiuyte, in to death, in to derision, and shame vnto all nacions, amonge whō thou hast scatred vs. And now O LORDE, thy iudgmentes are greate, for we haue not done accordinge to thy prōmaundemētes, nother haue we walked innocently before the. And now O LORD, deale with me accordinge to thy wyll, and commaunde my spyrite to be receaued in peace, for more expedient were it for me to dye, then to lyue.

Psa. 24. b

At the same tyme it happened, that Sara the doughter of Raguel at Rages a cyte of the Medes was slaundred of one of hyr fathers handmaydens, namely, that she shulde haue had seuen husbandes, which as soone as they were gone in vnto her, were slayne of the deuell called Asmodeus. Ther fore whan she reproued the mayden for hyr faulte she answered her, sayenge: God let vs neuer se sonne nor doughter of the more vpon earth, thou kyller of thy husbandes. Wilt thou slay me also, as thou hast slayne seuen men? At this voyce went Sara in to an hye chamber of hir house, and three dayes and three nyghtes she nother dyd eate nor drynke, but continued in prayer, and besought God with teares, that he wolde delyuer her from this rebuke.

Upon the thyrde daye it chaunched, that whan she had made an ende of hyr prayer, she praysed the LORDE, sayenge: Blessed be thy name O God of oure fathers, which whan thou art wroth, shewest mercy and in the tyme of trouble thou forgeuest the synnes of them, that call vpon the. Unto the O LORDE turne I my face, vnto the lyft I vp myne eyes. I beseche ỹ LORDE, lowse me out of the bondes of this rebuke, or els take me vtterly awaye from of the earth. Thou knowest LORDE, that I neuer had desyre vnto man, and that I haue kepte my soule cleane from all vnclenly lust. I haue not kepte company with those that passe theyr tyme in sporte, nother haue I made my selfe partaker with them ỹ walke in lighte behauoure. Neuertheles an husbande haue I consented to take, not for my pleasure, but in thy feare.

Now peraduenture eyther I haue bene vnworthy of them, or els were they vnmete for me, for thou happly hast kepte me to another husband. * For why? thy counsel is not in the power of mā. But who so euer loueth the and serueth the arpght, is sure, that yf his lyfe be tempted and proued, it standeth in the tryenge: and yf he endure in pacience he shall haue a rewarde & be hyghlye crowned: and yf he be in trouble, that God (no doute) shall delyuer hym: and yf his lyfe be in chastenynge, that he shall haue lerne to come vnto thy mercy.

For thou hast no pleasure in oure dampnacion: and why? after a storme thou makest the wether fayre and stil: after wepinge and prayses thou geuest greate loue. Thy name O God of Israel, be praysed for euer & the same tyme were both their prayers made in the sight of the maiesty of the Hyghest God. And Raphael the holy angell of IESUS was sent to helpe the both, whose prayers came together before God.

The.iiii. Chapter.

TObias thought hys prayer to be herde, þ he might dye, he called vnto him his sonne Tobias, & sayde vnto hym: My sonne, heare the wordes of my mouth, and laye them in thine hert as a foundacion. When God taketh away my soule, burie thou my body, * & holde thy mother in honoure all the dayes of hir life. For thou oughtest to remembre, what and how great perels she suffred for þ in hir wõbe. And when she also hath fulfilled the tyme of hir life, bury her beside me. Haue God in thy thought all the dayes of thy life, and beware, & lest at any tyme thou consent vnto synne, and lest thou let slippe the cõmaũdements of the LORDE oure God.

Geue almes of thy goodes, & turne neuer thy face from the poore: and so shal it come to passe, þ the face of the LORDE shal not be turned away frõ þ. * Be mercifull after thy power, yf thou hast much, geue plẽtifully: yf thou hast litle, do thy diligence gladly to geue of that litle. For so gatherest thou thy self a good rewarde in the daye of necessite. For almes delyuereth * frõ death, & suffreth not the soule to come in darknes. And greate comforte is almes before the hygh God, vnto all them that do it.

My sonne, kepe þ well from all whoredome, and (beside thy wife) se that no faulte be knowne of the. Let neuer pryde haue rule in thy minde nor in thy wordes * for in pryde begynneth all destruccion.

* Who so euer worketh ony thinge for þ, immediatly geue him his hyre, & loke that thy hyred seruaũtes wages remayne not by the euer night. * Loke þ thou neuer do vnto another man, the thynge that thou wolest not another man shulde do vnto the. * Breke thy bread with the hõgrie and poore, and couer the naked with thy clothes. Set thy bread and wyne vpõ the buriall of the righteous, and do not thou eate and drinke with the synners. Aske euer councell of the wyse.

Be alwaye thankfull vnto God, and beseche him, þ he will ordre thy wayes, & that what so euer thou deuysest or takest in hande, it maye remayne in hym. I certifie þ also my sonne, that (whan thou wast yet but a babe. * I delyuered xl talentes of syluer vnto Gabelus, at Rages a cite of the Medes, & his handwrityng haue I by me. And therfore seke some meanes, how thou mayest come by hym, and receaue of hym the sayde weyght of syluer, and gene hym his handwrityng agayne. Tobi. 1.c

My sonne, be not afrayed: trewly it is, we lede here a poore life * but greate good shall we haue, yf we feare God, and departe from all synne, and do well. Rom.3.b

The. v. Chapter.

THe answered Tobias vnto his father, and sayde: father, all þ thou hast commaunded me, will I do, and that diligently. But how I shall requyre thys money, I can not tell. Nether doth he knowe me, nor I him. What token shall I gene him: And as for the waye thither, I neuer knew it. Then his father answered him, & sayde: I haue hys handwrityng by me. which whan thou shewest him, immediatly he shall paye the. But go thy waye now, & get the some faithfull man to go with þ for an hyre, that thou mayest receaue the money, whyle I am yet lyuynge. A

Then wente Tobias out, & vpon the strete he founde a fayre ponge man stondinge, gyrded vp, and as it were one ready to take his iourney. And he knew not that it was an angell of God, but saluted him, and sayde: From whence art thou, thou good ponge man. He answered: Of the children of Israel. B

And Tobias sayde vnto hym: knowest thou the waye, that ledeth vnto the countre of þ Medes. He answered: I knowe it well, and all those stretes haue I gone oft tymes and haue lodged with oure brother Gabelus, that dwelleth in Rages a cite of þ Medes, which lyeth vpon the mount Ecbatanis. Tobias sayde vnto him: I praye the, tarry for me, tyll I haue told my father these thinges. Then wente Tobias in, & tolde hys father all. At þ which his father maruayled, & prayed, that he wolde come in vnto him.

Now whan the angell came in, he saluted him, and sayde: ioye be with the for euer more. And olde Tobias sayde: what ioye can I haue, that syt here in darckenes, & se not þ light of heauen. The ponge man sayde vnto hym: Be of good cheare, God shall helpe C

the shortly. And Tobias sayde vnto hym: Canst thou bringe my sone to Gabelus, vn to the cite of Rages in Media? And whan thou commest agayne, I shall paye the thy hyre. And the angell sayde vnto hym: I shal lede thy sonne, and bringe him to the agayne. The Tobias answered hym: Tell me I praye the, of what house, or of what tribe art thou?

The angell Raphael sayde vnto hym: Arest thou after the kynred of an hyrelinge, or seekest thou a gyde for thy sonne to go w̄ him: But that I make the not carefull, I am Azarias the sonne of greate Hanantias. And Tobias answered: Thou art come of a greate kynred, but I praye þ, be not displeased, that I desyred to knowe thy kynred. The angell sayde vnto hym: Thy sonne shall I lede forth safely, & bringe him whole to the agayne.

D Then answered Tobias, and sayde, well go on youre waye, & God be in youre iourney, and his angell beare you cõpany. So whan they had prepared all thinges, þ they wolde take with them in their iourney, Tobias bad his father & his mother fare well, and they wente on their waye both together. Now whan they were gone, his mother beganne to wepe, and sayde: * The staf of oure age hast thou taken awaye, and sent him from vs.

Tob. 10. a

Wolde God that money had neuer bene, for the which thou hast sent hym awaye. For we had bene content with our pouerte, this had bene greate riches vnto vs, þ we sawe oure sonne here. Then sayde Tobias vnto her: wepe not, oure sonne shall come to vs agayne safe and solide, and thyne eyes shal se hym. For I trust, that the good angell of God shall beare hym company, and ordre well all the thinges that he doth: so that he shall come to vs agayne with ioye. At these wordes his mother left of from weppynge, & helde hir tonge.

The.vi. Chapter.

SO Tobias wente on his waye and a dogge folowed hym, and the fyrst night they abode by þ water of Tigris. Then wente he out to wash his fete, and beholde, there came forth an horrible fisly to deuoure him. Of whō Tobias was afrayed, & cried with a loude voyce, sayeng, LORD he commeth vpon me. And the angell sayde vnto hym: Take him by the toule, & drawe hym to the. And he dyd so, and drewe hym vpon the londe, and the fisly beganne to lepe at his fete.

Then sayde the angell vnto hym: Take out þ bowels of this fisly, and as for þ harte, the gall, and the leuer, kepe them by the. For these thinges are necessary and good for medicyne. Tobias dyd so, and roosted the fisly, and they toke hym with them in their iourney: the residue they salted, as much as was sufficient for them, till they came to Rages. The Tobias ared the angell, and sayde vnto him: I praye þ brother Azarias, tell me, wher to are these thynges good of the fisly, that hast bydden my kepe?

The angell answered hym and sayde: yf thou layest a pece of the hart vpon the coales, the smoke therof dryueth awaye all maner of euell spretes, whether it be from man or from woman, so that from thence forth þ same shal come nomore vnto thē. The gall is good to anoynte or to strake þ eyes withall, where as there is ony blemish in them, so shall they be whole.

And Tobias sayde vnto him: where wilt C thou that we remayne? The angell answered & sayde: * Here is a nye kinsman of thyne, one Raguel by name, whyche hath a doughter called Sara, & hath nether sonne nor daughter but her. All his good belongeth vnto þ, & thou must mary his doughter: and therfore desyre her of her father, and he shall geue her the to wife. The answered Tobias and sayde: As I vnderstonde, she hath bene maried vnto seuen husbandes, and they all are dead: & I haue herde saye, that the deuell slew thē. I am afrayed therfore lest such thinges happen vnto me also: which yf it came to passe (seynge I am the onely sonne of my father and my mother) I shulde bringe them in their age with sorow to their graues.

Gen. 24. a

Then sayde þ angell Raphael vnto him: D Heare me, and I will tell the, what they be of whom the deuell hath power. Namely, they that receaue mariage of such a fashiō, that they shut God out from the and from their hart, * & geue them selues to their owne lust, & euen as it were an horse & moyle, which haue no vnderstondinge: vpon such hath the deuell power. * But whan thou takest her, & art come in to the chamber, withhold thy self from her thre dayes, & geue thy diligence vnto nothynge but vnto prayer wyth her.

Gen. 24. a

And in þ fyrste night roste the leuer of the fisly, and the deuell shalbe dryue awaye. The seconde nyght shalt thou be receaued into the company of the holy patriarkes. The same night shalt thou opteyne the blessinge of God, so that whole and sounde childrē shalbe borne of you. After the thirde night take the mayden in the feare of God, & more for loue of children, then for any fleshly lust: that in the sede of Abraham thou mayest opteyne the blessinge in children.

The.vii. Chapter.

THen wente they in to Raguel, which receaued them ioyfully. And whan Raguel loked vpon Tobias, he sayde vnto Anna his wife: How like is this ponge man vnto my systers sonne. And whā he had spoke this, he saide: whence be ye good brethē? They saide: Of the tribe of Nephthali, out of the captiuyte of Ninive. Then sayde Raguel vnto them: knowe ye my brother Tobias? They sayde: yee, we knowe him well. And whā he had spoke much good of him, the angell sayde vnto Raguel: Tobias of whom thou aresk, is this ponge mās father. Then Raguel bowed him self downe and wepte, toke him aboute ỹ neck, and kissed him, & sayde: * Gods blessynge haue thou my sonne, for thou art the sonne of a good vertuous man. And Anna his wife & also his doughter wepte also.

And whā they had talked together, Raguel had kylla wether, and to make a feast. And whan he prayed them to sytt downe to meate, Tobias saide: I will nether eate nor drinke here this daye, excepte thou first graūt me my petition, & promise me to geue me thy doughter Sara. Whan Raguel herde this, he was astonnyed, for he knew, what happened vnto the other seuen men, ỹ came in vnto her: and he beganne to feare that same shulde chaunge vnto him also in like maner.

And whyle he stode so in doute, and gaue the ponge man no answere, the angell saide vnto him: Feare not to geue him thy dough ter vnto this man that feareth God, because thy doughter to wife, therfore might no other haue her.

Then sayde Raguel: I doute not, but God hath accepted my prayers and teares in his sight. And I trust he caused you to come vnto vs for the same entēt, that this doughter of myne might be maried in hir owne kynred according to the lawe of Moses. And beleue thou not, but I wil geue her vnto the: And he toke the righthande of hys doughter, and gaue her in to the right hāde of Tobias, and sayde: The God of Abraha, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob be with you, ioyne you together, and fulfill his blessynge in you. And they toke a letter and made a wrytinge of the mariage. And then made they merry, and praysed God. And Raguel called Anna his wyfe vnto him, & bad her prepare another chamber, and thither he brought Sara his doughter, & she wepte. Then sayde he vnto her: Be of good chere my doughter, the LORDE of heauen geue the ioye, for the heynesse that thou hast suffred.

The.viii.Chapter.

NOw after that they had supped, they brought the ponge man in to her. Then thought Tobias vpon the wordes of the angell, and toke out of his bagge a pece of the leuer of the fish, and layed it vpon the hote coales, So the angell Raphael toke holde of the deuell, and sent him awaye, and bounde hym in the wyldernes of the hyer Egipte. Thē spake Tobias vnto ỹ virgin, & sayde: Up Sara, * let vs make oure prayer vnto God to daye, tomorow, and nexte morow: for these thre nightes wil we reconcyle oure selues wyth God: and whan the thirde holy night is past, we shall ioyne together in the deuyne of mariage. For we are the childrē of holymen, & we maye not come together as the Heithen, ỹ knowe not God. 1.Cor.7.a

* Then stode they vp both together, & besought God earnestly, ỹ he wolde preserue them. And Tobias sayde: OLORDE God of our fathers, praysed be thou of heauē and earth of the see, welles, & floudes, & of all the creatures ỹ be therin. * Thou maydest Adā of ỹ moulde of the earth, & gauest him Eua for an helper. And now LORDE thou knowest ỹ it is not because of voluptuousnes, ỹ I take this sister of myne to wife, but onely for the loue of children, in whom thy name be blessed for euer. And Sara sayde: haue mercy vpō vs (OLORDE) haue mercy vpon vs, & let vs both come whole and sounde to a good age. Tobi.6.b Gene.2.b.

And aboute the cocke crowe, it happened, that Raguel called his seruauntes, & they wente with him, to make a graue. For he sayde: it is chaunced vnto him peraduenture, as it dyd vnto the other seuē mē, ỹ wēte in vnto her. Now whā they had made the graue, Raguel came agayne to hys wyfe, & sayde vnto her: sende one of thy maydens, to loke yf he be dead, ỹ I maye burye hym afore it be lyght daye.

So she sent a mayden to se, which whan she came in to the chamber, she founde them whole and sounde, slepinge together. And so she came agayne, and brought good ty-
D dinges. Then Raguel and Anna his wife praysed the LORDE, and sayde: Praysed be thou LORDE God of Israel. For it is not happened vnto vs, as we thought, for thou hast dealte mercifully with vs, & put awaye from vs the enemye that persecuted vs, and hast shewed mercy vnto yonder two beloued. LORDE, cause them to magnifie the more perfectly, and to offre the the sacrifice of thy prayse, and of their healthe: that all people maye knowe, that thou onely art God in all the earth.

E And immediatly Raguel commaunded his seruauntes, to fyll the graue, that they had made, w earth, afore it was light: & bad he his wife prepare a feast, & to make ready all thinges that were necessary for meate, to such as wēte by the waye. He caused two fatt kyne also and foure wethers to be slayne, and meates to be prepared for all hys nayghbours and frendes.

And Raguel charged Tobias, to remayne with him two wekes. As for all the good þ he had, he gaue Tobias the one half of it, and made this wrytige, that the half which remayned, shulde fall vnto Tobias after their death.

The.ix.Chapter.

I Then Tobias called vnto hym the angell, whom he tought to haue bene a man, and sayde vnto hym: Brother Azarias, I praye þ herkē vnto my wordes: yf I shulde geue my self to be thy seruaunt, I shall not deserue thy prouydence. Neuer theles I beseke the, that thou wilt take the beastes and the seruauntes, & go vnto Gabelus in Rages the cite of the Medes, and delyuer him his handwrytinge, and receaue the money of hym, and praye him to come to my mariage. For thou knowest thy self, that my father telleth the dayes: and yf I tarye one daye to longe, he wyl be sory in hys mynde. Now seist thou how earnestly Raguel hath requyred me, so that I can not laye hym naye.

Then toke Raphael foure of Raguels seruauntes, and two Cameis, and wente vnto Rages the cite of the Medes: and whan he han founde Gabelus, he gaue hym his hād wrytinge, and receaued all the money. He tolde him also of Tobias þ sonne of Tobyt, how all thinges had happened, and caused him to come with him to þ mariage. Anon whan he came in to the house of Raguel, he founde Tobias syttinge at the table: and he leapte vp, and they kyssed one another, and Gabelus wepte, and prayed God, and sayde: * the blessinge of the God of Israel haue thou, for thou art the sonne of a right bertous and iust man, and of one that feareth God, and geueth greate almes. And blessynge haue thy wyfe, and your parētes, that ye maye se your childre, and youre childres childre, vnto the thirde and fourth generacion, and that youre sede maye be blessed of the God of Israel, whiche reigneth worlde without ende. And whan they all had sayde Amen, they wente to the feast, but with the feare of the LORDE helde they the feast of the mariage.

The.x.Chapter.

NOw whyle yonge Tobias made longe tarienge by reason of þ mariage, his father was full of care, & heupnes, & thought what shulde be the cause, that my sonne tarieth so longe? Or why shulde he be kepte so longe there? Peraduenture Gabelus is dead, and no mā will geue him the money. Thus begamne he to be very sorowful, he and Anna his wyfe with him, & beganne to wepe both together, because their sōne was not come agayne vnto them the daye appoynted. As for his mother, she wepte with discomfortable teares, and sayde: Woo is me, my sonne: Oh what aylet vs to sende the awaye in to a straunge countre thou light of oure eyes, * thou staff of oure age, thou comforte of oure life, thou hope of oure generacion? Beinge the thinges that we haue are onely in the, we shulde not haue sent the awaye from vs.

Then Tobias comforted her, and sayde: holde thy tunge, and be not discomforted, oure sonne is whole and sounde: the man that we sent him withall, is faithfull ynough. Neuertheles she might in no wyse be comforted but daylie wente out, loked aboute, and wente aboute all the stretes, wayting if she thought he shuld come agayne: that (yf it were possible) she might se him retorned afarre off.

But Raguel sayde vnto his sonne in lawe: O tary here and I shal sende a messenger vnto thy father Tobias, to tell him þ thou art in good healthe. Tobias sayde vn-

hym: I am sure, that my father & my mother counte euery daye, and that their eyes are sore.

So whan Raguel prayed Tobias & made many wordes, & he wolde in no wise heare him of, he delyuered Sara vnto hym, & the half part of all his goods: in seruauntes and handmaydes, in shepe, in camels, and in kyne & much money, and so sent him awaye from him with peace and ioye, and sayde: The holy angell of IESV be with you in youre iourney, and bringe you forth safe & sounde, that ye maye fynde all thinges in good case with youre elders, and that myne eyes maye se youre children, afore I dye.

And the elders enbraced their doughter, kyssed her, and let her go, exhortinge her to honoure hir father and mother in lawe, to loue hir husbande, to rule well hir husholde, & kepe hir house in good ordre, and to shew herself blameles.

The.xi. Chapter.

NOw as they were goinge home warde againe, vpō the.xi. daye they came to Charra, whiche lyeth in the half waye towarde Ninive. And the angell sayde: Brother Tobias, thou knowest how thou hast left thy father: therfore yf it please the, let me go before, and let the husholde with wife and the catell come soft & fayre after me. And whan Tobias was content that he shulde go before, Raphael sayde vnto him: Take of the gall of the fish with the, for it shalbe necessary. So Tobias toke the gall, and they wente their waye. But Anna the mother of Tobias sat daylie by the wayes syde vpon the toppe of an hill, frō whens she might se farre aboute her.

And whyle she was waytinge there for her sonne, she loked afarre of, and anone she perceyued his sonne commynge, and ran and tolde hir husbande, sayenge: beholde thy sonne commeth. And Raphael sayde vnto Tobias: As soone as thou commest in to thyne, immediatly worshippe the LORD thy God, and gene thankes vnto him, then go to thy father and kysse him, & strake his eyes with the gall of the fish, that thou hast brought with the. For be sure, that his eyes shall straight waye be opened, and thy father shall se the light of heaue, & shal reioyce in the sight of the. Then the dogg that had gone with the in their iourney, rāne before, and came as a messanger, and wagged with his tayle for gladnesse.

So the blinde father arose, and begāne to C
runne, and stombled with his fete, & gaue a seruaunt his hande, ranne to mete his sōne, receaued him, and kyssed him, he & his wyfe, and beganne to wepe for ioye.

Now whan they had worshipped & thanked God, they sat downe, Then toke Tobias of the fishes gall, & anoynted his fathers eyes: and taried half an houre, and then begāne the blemysh to go out of his eyes, like as it had bene the whyte skynne of an egge: which Tobias toke and drew from his eyes and immediatly he receaued his sight.

Then they praysed God, he and his wife, D and all they that knew hym. And Tobias sayde: O LORD God of Israel, I geue the prayse & thākes, for thou hast chastened me, and made me whole And lo, now do I se my sonne Tobias. After seuen dayes came Sara his sonnes wife also whole & sounde with all the housholde and catell, with camels and much money of his wyues, and with the money that he had receaued of Gabelus: and he tolde his father and his mother all the benefites, which God had done for him, by the man that led him. Achior also and Nabath Tobias syster sonnes came and were glad, and reioyced with him, by reason of all the good that God had shewed vnto him.

And so for the space of seuen dayes they made mery, and were eyght ioyfull euerichone.

The.xii. Chapter.

THen Tobias called hys sonne I vnto him & saide: What maye we geue this holy man, the wēte with the? Tobias answered his father and saide: Father what reward shall we geue him? Or what thinge can deserue his benefites? He hath bene my gyde, and brought me safe agayne: he receaued the money from Gabelus, he caused me to get my wyfe, he droue the euell spirite from her, he hath bene occasion of gladnesse to hir father and mother: he delyuered me, that I was not deuoured of the fish, he hath made the to se the light of heauen, yes we all haue receaued greate good of hym. How shulde we worthely deserue these thinges vnto him? But I praye the my father, that thou wilt desyre hym, yf happyle he will vouchsafe, to take with him the half of all that we haue brought.

So the father & the sonne called hym, take hym aside, and begāne to praye him, that B he wolde be content to take in good worth the half parte of all that they had brought.

Then sayde he secretly vnto them: Prayse ꝑ God of heauen, and geue thankes vnto him before all men lyuynge, for he hath shewed

The prophet Baruch.

What Baruch conteyneth.

Chap. i Baruch readeth the boke before the kynge, and all the people, which sende money to Jerusalem.

Chap. ii They knowlege, that they haue deserued punyshment: God promyseth them longe quietnesse.

Chap. iii They praye hartely beynge in prison and he exorteth them to amende.

Chap. iiii A sermon to the people, with an exhortacion to patience.

Chap. v He comforteth them, and sheweth the vocacion of the Gentyles.

Chap. vi A copie of the epistle, that Jeremye sent to the Jewes, which were led awaye prysoners vnto Babylon.

THese are the wordes of the boke that Baruch the sonne of Neryas the sonne of Maasia, the sonne of Sedechias, the sonne of Sedey, the sonne of Helchia, wrote at Babylon in the fifth yeare the seuenth daye of the moneth: * what tyme as the Caldees wanne Jerusalem, and brent it. 4.Re.25.b

The.i. Chapter.

AND Baruch dyd rede the wordes of this boke, that Jechonias the sonne of Joachim kynge of Juda might hear and in the presence of all the people, that were come to heare ỳ boke: yee and before all the noble kynges sonnes, before the lordes of the councell and elders: and before the whole people, from ỳ lowest vnto the hyghest: before al them that dwelt at Babylon, by the water of Sodi. Which whē they herde it, wepte, fasted, and prayed before the LORDE.

They made a collectiō also of money acor- B dinge to euery mans power, and sent it to Jerusalem vnto Joachym, the sonne of Hel chya the sonne of Salum preest, with the o- ther preestes: and to all the people which we re with hym at Jerusalem, what tyme as as they had gotten the ornamentes of the temple of the LORDE (that were taken awaye out of the temple) that they myght bynge them againe in to the londe of Juda the.x. daye of the moneth Sban: namely, syluer vessel, (which Sedechias the sonne of Josias kynge of Juda had made.) Go youre waye (O my chyldren) go youre waye: I am desolate and forsaken. I haue put of the clothynge of peace, and put vpon me the sackecloth of prayer. And for my cry I will call vpon the moost hyghest.

Be good cheare, o my chyldren * crie vn
to the LORDE, and he shall delyuer you,
from the power of ye tyrantes, youre enemies.

For verely, I haue euer a good hope of youre prosperous healthe: yee a very glad-nesse cometh vpon me from the holy one, be cause of the mercy that ye shall haue of oure
euerlastinge saueoure.

With mournynge and wepynge dyd I let you go to me but with ioye and perpetuall
gladnesse, shall the LORDE bringe you againe vnto me. Lyke as the neighbours of Sion saw youre captiuite from God, Euē
so shall they also se shortly youre saluacion
in God, which shall come on you with grea
honoure and euerlastynge worshippe.

O my chyldren, * suffre pacientlye the wrath that shal come vpon you. For thoughe me hath persecuted the, but shortly shalt thou se his destruction, & shalt treade vpon his neckes. My delinges haue gone rough wayes, for they are led awaye as a flocke that is scatered abrode with the wey
ues. But be of good comforte (o my chyldren) and crie vnto the LORDE: For he
that led you awaye, hath you yet in remembraunce: and lyke as ye haue bene mynded
to departe from youre God, * so shall ye now
conuerte youre selues x. tymes more, to ser ue him and to seke him. For he that hath brought these plages vpon you, shall bryn-
gen euerlastinge ioye agayne with youre saluacion. Take a good harte vnto the, o Jeru salem: for he which gaue the that name, co-mforteth to do.

Thy sonnes and doughters that were put to trouble, shall preyse: and such as haue recey ued of thy fall, shalbe pumished. The cyties whom thy children serue, and that haue caried awaye the sonnes, shalbe corrupte. For lyke as they be now glad of thy decaye, so shall they mourne in theyr owne destruccio
on. The ioye of theyr multitude shalbe taken awaye, and theyr cheare shalbe turned to sorowe. For a fyre shall fall vpon them from the euerlastinge God, longe to endure
and it shalbe inhabited of deuels for a grea season.

The .v. Chapter.

Jerusalem, lo now what sorowe is come vpon the, and behelde the ioye that cometh vnto the fro God. Lo, thy sonnes (whom thou hast forsaken and that wee re scattered abrode) come gathered together, from the east vnto the weste, at the worde of the holy one, reioysynge in the honoure of God.

Put of thy mournynge clothes (o Jerusa
lem) and the trouble, and put on the ma-nyfolde and bewtyfull honoure that cometh
to the from God for euerlastinge glorye.
God shall put the cloake of rygh teousnesse
vpon the, and set a crowne of euerlastynge worshippe vpon thyne heade: for vpon the will God declare his brightnes, that is vp-der the heauen. For the name that shalbe geuen the of God, is peace of ryght
teousnesse, and the honoure of Gods feare.

Stande vp Jerusalem, lokke vp on yer hye thynges, and behelde toward the east, and beholde the children gathered from the east vnto the weste, which reioyce in the holy worde, besynge God in remembraunce. They departed from the ouerlorde, and were led awaye of theyr enemies: but now shall the LORDE
bringe them ageine with honoure, as children of the kynge home. For God is purposed to bringe downe all youre mountaynes
yee and all hye rockes, to fill the valleys,
and so to make them euen with the grounde,
that Israel maye be diligent to lerne vnto
the honoure of God. The woodes, and all pleasaunt trees shall ouershadowe Israell at the commaundement of God. For whether shall God bringe Israell with ioyfull mirth, and in the light of his maiesty: with the mercy, and righteousnesse that commeth of hymself.

A copie of the epistle that Jeremy the prophet dyd sende vnto the Jewes, which were led awaye prisoners by the kynge of Babilon. Wherein he certifieth them of the thyng that was commaunded hym of God.

The.vi.Chapter.

¶ BEcause of the synnes that ye haue done agaynst God, ye shalbe
Jer.27.a.b. * led awaye captyue vnto Babilon, euen of Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon. ¶ So when ye be come in to Babylon, ye shall remayne there many yeares, and for a longe season: namely .vii. generations: and after that will I bryng you awaye peaceably from thence. Now shall ye se in Babilon, goddes of golde, of syluer, of wood, and of stone: borne vpon mens shulders, to cast out a fearfulnesse before the heythen. But take that ye do not as the other: be not ye afrayed, and let not the feare of them ouercome you.

¶ Therfore, when ye se a multitude of people worshippinge them behinde and before
Deut.6.c. saye ye in youre hartes: O LORDE * it is thou, that oughtest onely to be worshipped. Myne angel also shalbe with you, and I myself will care for youre soules. As for the tymbre of those goddes, the carpenter hath polyshed them: yee gylted be they, and laied ouer with syluer, yet are they but vayn thynges, and can not speake. Lyke as a wench that loueth paramours is trymly decked, euen so are these made and hanged with golde. Crownes of golde vpon their goddes vpō their heades: so ꝑ priestes them selues take the golde, and syluer from them, and put it to their owne vses: yee they geue of the same vnto harlottes, and trymme their whores withall: Agayne, they take it from the whores, and decke their Jere.10.b. goddes therwith. * yet can not these goddes delyuer them selues from rustes, and mothes. When they haue couered them with clothynge of purple, they wype their faces for the dust of the temple, wherof there is much amonge them. One hath a sceptre in his honde, as though he were iudge of the countre: yet can he not slaye such as offende hym. Another hath a swearde or axe in his honde, for all that is he nother able to defende hymselfe from battayll, nor from theues.

¶ By this ye maye vnderstonde, that they be no goddes: therfore se that ye nother feare them, nor feare them. For lyke as a Deut.6.c. vessell that a man bieth, is nothynge worth when it is broken, euen so is it with these goddes. When they be set vp in the temple, their eyes be full of dust, through the fete of those that come in. And lyke as the doores are shut in rounde about vpon hym, that hath offended the kynge: or as it were a dead body kepte beside the graue: Euen so the priestes kepe the doores with barres, and lockes, lest their goddes be spoiled of the robbers. They set vp candels before them (yee verely and that many) wherof they can not se one, but euen as blockes, so stode they in the temple. It is sayde, that the serpentes & wormes, which come of the earth, gnawe out their hartes, eatinge them and their clothes also, and yet they fele it not. Their faces are blacke, through the smoke that is in the temple. The owles, swalowes, and byrdes sytte vpon them, yee and the cattes runne ouer their heades.

¶ By this ye maye be sure, that they are not goddes, therfore feare them not. The golde that they haue, is to make them beautyfull: for all that, except some body digge of their rust, they wyl geue no shyne: and when they were cast in to a fourme, they felt it not. They are bought for money, and haue no brethe of lyfe wythin them. * They must be
Esay.46.a. borne vpon mens shulders, as those that haue no fete: whereby they declare vnto men, that they be nothynge worth. * Confounded Esay.44.a. be they then, that worshippe them. For yf they fall to the grounde, they can not ryse vp agayne of them selues: yee though one helpe them vp, and set them vpright, yet are they not able to stonde alone: but must haue proppes set vnder them, lyke dead men. As for the thynge that is offred vnto them their priestes sell it, and abuse it: yee the priestes wyues take therof, but vnto the syeke, and and poore they geue nothynge of it, the women with childe, and the menstruous lay hōdes of their offerynges. By this ye maye be sure, that they are not goddes, therfore be not ye afrayde of them. From whence commeth it then, that they be called goddes? The women sytte before the goddes of syluer, golde and woode, and the priestes syt in their temples, hauynge open clothes, whose heades and beardes are shauen, and haue nothynge vpon their heades: roaringe and yet their goddes, as men do at the feast,

when one is dead.

They also take awaye ye garmētes
wherwith they decke their wyues & chil dren, whether it be good or euell ye commōdeth vnto them, they are not able to recompence it: they can neither set vp a kyn ge, nor put him downe. In like maner they can neither geue riches, nor rewarde euell.
Though a mā make a vowe vnto them &
keepe it not, they will not require it. They ca not deliuer a man from death, neither are able to defende ye weake from ye mightye.
They can not restore a blynde man to hys sight, nor helpe any man at his nede. They can shewe no mercy to the widowe, nor do good to the fatherlesse. These goddes of wodde, golde and syluer, are but euen
as stones, that be hewen of the mountayne. They that worshippe thē, shal be cō-founded. How shulde they then be taken for goddes? yea how darre me call thē goddes?
Although the Caldees worshipped them
for certayne that they were but domme & coulde not speake: yet they them selues often times, yf they wold fayne haue hi to speake
as they saye, they coulde fele ye may not mo
ue their when these men come to vnderfōge, they shall forsake them, for their godshall take no vengeāce. A greate sorte of women girded with coardes, syt in the stre-tes, and burne olyue berries. Now yf one of them be rauyshed awaye, and lye with any man, he cōme by the taketh hir neghbourelle
to task, because she was not so worthely vsed, nor hir corde broken. What so euer is done for them, it is but in vayne and nought. How maye it then be thought or sayde that they are goddes? Carpenters & gold-smithes make them, neither be ye any other thinge but euen what the worke men wyll
haue of them. Yea the goldsmithes them sel ues that make them, are of no longe contyn-uance. How shulde then the thinges that are made of them, be goddes? Nayne ther-by are the thinges (yee very shame is it)
that they leaue behynde the their posterite.
For yf warre or sickenes cōmeth any warre or
plage vpon them, then the preestes ymagyn,
where they maye hyde the selues with the.
Thus can men thinke then, that they by god-
des which neither maye defende them selues
from warre, nor delyuer the from myschyefe
nor plage, they be but of wood, of stone,
of syluer and of golde: all people and kyn-redes shall knowe hereafter, that they be but thinges: yee it shalbe openly declared, that they be no goddes: but euen the be ry workes of mens handes, and that God hath nothinge to do with them. They can set no kynge in the lōde nor geue rayne vn-
to men. They can geue no sentence of a matter, neither defende ye lōde frō wronge: for they are not able to do so much as a crowe, that flyeth betwixte heauen and earth.

Whē there happeneth a fyre in the house G
of those goddes of wodde, of syluer, and of golde, the preestes wil escape & saue thē sel-
ues, but the goddes burne as the balkes therin. They can not withstonde ony kynge or battayle: how maye it then be thought or graunted, that they be goddes? Moreouer, these goddes of wodde, of stone, of golde, & syluer maye neither defende thē selues from theues nor robbers: yee the very wicked are stronger then they. These stripe them out of their apparell, that they be clothed wythall, these take their golde and syluer from them, and so get thē awaye: yet can they not helpe thē selues. Therfore it is much better for a man, to be a kinge and so to shewe hys
power: or els a profitable vessel in a house,
wherin he that vseth it, might haue pleasu re: yee or to be a dore in houle, to kepe such thinges safe as be therin: then to be such a vayne god. The sonne, the mone, and all ye starres when they geue their lyghte are obedient, and do men good: When the lightenynge glistereth, all is cleare: The wynde bloweth in euery countre, and whē
God cōmaundeth the cloudes to go rounde about the whole worlde, they do as they are bydden: when the fyre is sent downe frō
aboue and commaunded, it burneth vp hil-les and woodes: But as for those goddes, H
they are not like one of these thinges, neither in beuty nor strength. Wherfore men shul-de not thinke, nor saye ye they be goddes, seynge they can neither geue sentēce in iudgment, nor do men good. For so much now as ye are sure, that they be no goddes, then feare them not: For they can neither speake
euell nor good of kinges. They can shewe no tokens in heauen for the heythen, neither shyne as the Sonne, nor geue light as the Mone: yee ye vnreasonable beastes are better then they: for they can get thē vnder the rofe, and do them selues good. Now can ye be certified by no maner of meanes, that they be goddes: therfore feare thē not. For like as a fraybeggarde in a garden of cucumbers
keepeth nothinge, euen so are their goddes of wood, of syluer, and golde: and like as a whyte thorne in an orchārde ye euery byrde

syteth vpon: yet like as a dead body that is cast in the burne. Euen so is it with those goddes of wodde, syluer, and golde.

By the purple and scarlet which they haue vpon them, and soone fayleth away, ye maye vnderstonde, that they be no goddes: yee they them selues shalbe consumed at the last, which shal be a greate rebuke of the londe. Blessed is the goodly man, that hath no ymages, and worshippeth none: for he shalbe farre from reproffe.

The first Chapter.

In the xii yeare of the reigne of the Medes [illegible] many people vnder his dominion, and buylded a noble strong cite, which he called Ecbatanis. The walles of it made he of fre stone, foure score cubites hye, and fyftie cubites brode. He made towres there vpon of an hundreth cubites hye. But vpon the foure corners euery syde was twentie foot brode. He made the portes in the height like as the towres. This kynge ruled in his mighte hoost, and in his glorious charrettes.

So in the xviii yeare of his raigne it happened, that Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Assirians (which raigned in the greate cite of Ninue) fought against Arphaxat, and ouercame him in the greate felde called Ragau, beside Euphrates and Tigris and Iadason in the felde of Ercad the kynge of Elikes.

Then was the kyngdome of Nabuchodonosor exalted, and his hart was lift vp, and he sent vnto all them that dwelt in Cilicia, in Damascus, in Libanus, and vnto the Heithen that dwelt in Carmel and Cedar, and to such as dwelt in Galile in the greate felde of Eldrelon, to all them that dwelt in Samaria, and beyonde the water of Iordane vnto Jerusalem and the whole lande of Jesse vnto the mountaynes of Ethiopia. Vnto all these dyd Nabuchodonosor kynge of the Assirians sende messangers. But they all holde pese content, wolde not sende vnto him, & sent the messangers awaye empte and put them a waye without honoure. Then Nabuchodonosor the kynge toke indignacion at all thole landes, and swore by his trone and by his kyngdom, that he wolde be auenged of all these countres.

The ii. Chapter.

In the.xvii. yeare of kynge Nabuchodonosor, vpō ỳ.xxii. daye of the firste moneth, it was deuysed in the courte of Nabuchodonosor the kynge of the Assirians how he myght defende himselfe. So he called vnto him all his elders, all his captaynes and men of warre, and shewed them his secrete counsell and tolde them that his purpose was to bringe ỳ whole earth vnder his dominion. Now whan they were all content with this sayenge, Nabuchodonosor ỳ kynge called Holofernes the chefe captayne of his warres & saide vnto him: Go thy waye forth agaynst all the kyngdomes of ỳ west, and specially agaynst those that haue despised my commaundement. * Thou shalt spare no cyte, all stronge cities shalt thou bryng in subiection vnto me.

Then Holofernes called together all the rulers & gouuerners of all the power in Assiria, and mustred the souldyers vnto ỳ hoost (as the kynge commaunded him) name ly an hundreth and twētye thousande fyghtynge men vpon fote, and twolue thousande archers vpon horsebacke. All his ordinaūce did he bringe with an innumerable multitude of camels, so that the hoost was well prouyded for with oxen, and small catell, and ỳ without nombre. He caused come to be prepared out of all Syria for his hoost. Much golde and syluer also toke he out of the kynges house. So he toke his iourney, and he & all his hoost, with charrettes, horsmē, and archers of whom there were so many, that they couered the grounde of the lande, lyke vnto grashoppers.

And whan he was gone past the borders of the Assirians, he came towarde the great mountaynes of Ange, which lye vpō the left hande of Celicia: and so he wente vp in to all their castels, and wanne euery stroge hold. As for ỳ welthy cite of Melothus, he brake into it & spoyled all ỳ children of Thara and the Ismaelites, which laye towarde the wyldernes and vpon the south syde of ỳ lande of Chelon. He wente ouer Euphrates and came in to Mesopotamia, and brake downe all the hye cities that were there. Along by the brooke of Mambre tyll a man come to the see: and he toke the borders in frō Celicia vnto the coastes of Japhet towarde ỳ south. He caried awaye all the Madianites, and spoyled all their goodes: & who so euer withstode him, he slew thē with ỳ swerade. Furthermore he wente downe in to the felde of Damascus in the tyme of haruest, and brēt vp all the corne and all the trees, and caused the vynes to be cut downe. And the feare of him fell vpon all them that dwelt in earth.

The.iii. Chapter.

So the kynges & princes of all cities & lōdes sent their Embassatours namely, they of Syria and Mesopotamia, Syria Sobal and Lybia & Celicia, which came to Holofernes, & sayde: Let thy wrath ceasse towarde vs: It is better for vs to serue the greate kynge Nabuchonosor vnto oure lyues, and to be subiecte vnto the, then that we shulde dye and be slayne, and receaue greater hurte. All oure cities and possessions, all mountaynes and hylles, all feldes, greate and small catell, shepe, goates, oxen, and camels, all oure goodes and housholdes, be in thy power, vnder thy subiection be it altogether. We oure selues also & oure children wylbe thyne owne, come vnto vs a peaceable LORDE, and vse our seruyce at thy pleasure.

Then came Holofernes downe from the mountaynes with horsemē & greate power, and conquered all stronge fensed cities, and all that dwelt in the londe. And out of all cities he toke stronge men, & such as were mete for ỳ warre, to helpe him. * There came such a feare also vpon those coūtrees, ỳ the indwellers of all the cities, the princes & rulers & the people together, wēte forth to mete him as he came, & receaued hym honorably with garlandes & torches, with daunses tabrettes, and pypes

Neuertheles though they dyd thys, yet might they not swage his rigorous stomak: but he destroyed their cities, & hewed downe their woodes. For Nabuchodonosor the kynge had commaunded him, that he shulde rote out all the goddes of the londe, to ỳ intent that he onely might be called and taken for God, of the nacions which Holofernes with his power brought vnder hym. So wēte he thorow Syria Sobal, & thorow all Appamia, and all Mesopotamia, came to Idumeans in the londe of Gabaa & Septopolis, and toke their cities, and remayned there thirty dayes, wherin he caused al the whole multitude of his hoost to be gathered together.

The.iiii. Chapter.

WHan the chyldren of Israel that dwelt in Jewry herde this, they were sore afrayed of him. There came such tremblinge also & feare vpon them, that they sorowed he shulde do vnto the cite of Jerusalem and the temple of the LORDE, as he had done to other cities and their temples. So they sent in to all Samaria rounde aboute vnto Jericho, toke in and occupied all the coppes of the mountaynes, made fast the townes with walles, and prepared corne for them agaynst the battayll.

Eliachim also ỹ preest wrote vnto all them that dwelt towarde Esdrelon (whiche lyeth ouer agaynst ỹ greate felde by Dotha Jm) & vnto all those by whom men might haue passage vnto them, that they shulde take in the wayes of the mountaynes, where there myght be ony waye and passage to Jerusalem, & ỹ they shulde holde diligent watch, where ony straight way was betwixt ỹ mountaynes. And the chyldren of Israell dyd, as Eliachim the preest of the LORDE had commaunded thē. * And all the people, cried earnestly, and humbled their soules with fastinges and prayers, they and their wiues. The prestes put on hayre clothes, and layed the ponge babes before the temple of the LORDE, and couered the aulter of the LORDE with an heere cloth. And with one accorde cried they vnto the LORDE God of Israel, that their children shulde not be geuen in to a pray, and their wyues in to a spoyle, ỹ their cities shulde not be layed waist, & ỹ their Sanctuary shulde not be vnhalowed and so they to be a shame and rebuke vnto the heithen.

Then Eliachim the hye preest of the LORDE wente rounde aboute all Israel, & spake vnto them, sayenge: Be ye sure, that the LORDE will heare youre peticions, yf ye cōtynue stedfast in fastinges and prayers in the sight of the LORDE. Remembre. Moses the seruaunte of the LORDE, * which ouerthrew ỹ Amalechites (ỹ trusted in their might and power, in their hoost, their shildes, in their charettes and horsme) not with weapens, but with holy prayers. Euen so shall all the enemies of Israel be, yf ye contynue in this worke, that ye haue begonne. So vpon this exhortacion they cōtynued in prayer before the LORDE. In so much that they which offred brent sacrifices vnto the LORDE, offred the offringes vnto the LORDE beynge araped in heere clothes, and had ashes vpon their heades. And they all besought God from their whole hart, that he wolde loke vpō ỹ people of Israel.

The.v.Chapter.

AND worde came to Holofernes the pryncē of the warres of the Assyrians, that the chyldren of Israel prepared them selues to make resistaunce, and how they had stopped the wayes betwixte the mounes. Then was he exceadinge wroth, & called all ỹ pryncēs of Moab, & the captaines of Ammon, & sayde vnto thē: Tell me, what people is this, that kepeth in the mountaynes? Or what maner of cytties are they? What is their power? Or what maner of hoost haue they? Who is their captayne? And why do they despise vs * more then all those that dwell in the east) and come not forth to mete vs, that they myght receaue vs with peace?

* Then Achior the captayne of all ỹ Ammonites answered, and sayde: Syr, yf it please the to heare me, I will tell the trueth before the concernynge this people that dwell in the mountaynes, and there shal no lye go out of my mouth.

This people is of the generacion of the Caldees, they dwelt fyrst in Mesopotamia, for they wolde not folowe ỹ goddes of their fathers that were in the londe of the Caldees, & so forsoke they the customes of their fore fathers (which had many goddes) and worshipped one God, that made heaue and earth: which also commaunded them that they * shulde go frō thence, and dwell as pe can. & Now whā there came a derth in to ỹ whole lōde * they wente downe to Egipte there they dwelt foure hundreth yeares, in ỹ which they multiplied so greatly, that their hoost might not be nombred. * And whā the kynge of Egipte oppressed them, and subdued thē in buildinge of his cities with makinge of clape & brick, they cried vnto God their LORDE, which punyshed the whole londe of Egipte with dyuerse plages.

* Now whan the kynge of Egypte let the go their wayes, and the plage ceased, & they folowed after the, to take the, and to bringe thē agayne in to his seruyce, whyle they were flyenge awaye, the God of heaue opened the see, so that the waters stode fast vpon both the sydes as a wall, and their went thorow ỹ botome of the see dre shod. In the which place whan an innumerable people of the Egipcians folowed vpon them, they ouerwhelmed with the waters, that there remayned not one, to tell the that cam after, how it happened.

So when this people was passed thorow the red see, they came in to the wylderne of mount Sinai, where neuer man might dwell alowe, and where the sonne of mā had neuer vsed.* There were the bytter waters made swete for them that they myght drynke, & .xl. yeares had they meate frō heuen. Where so euer they wente (without bowe and arowe, without bucler or swearde) God fought for the, and caused the to haue the victory, yee no man was able to ouercome this people, excepte it were so, that they departed vnfaithfully from the worshippinge of the LORDE their God.* But as often as they worshipped eny other beside their God, he gaue them ouer to be spoyled, to be slayne, and to be put to confusion. Neuertheles as oft as they were sory for departinge frō the worshippe of their God, the same God of heauen gaue them power & strength to withstande their enemies.

Thus ouer they slew the kynge of the Cananites, Jebusites, Pherezites, Hethites, Gergesites and Amorites, and all the mightie men of Hesebon, and toke their londes and cities in possession: & so longe as they synned not in the sight of their God, it wente well with the, for their God hateth vnrighteousnesse.* For in tymes past whan they were out of the waye, which God had geuen them that they shulde walke in it, they were ouercome in dyuerse battayles of many nations, and many of them were caried awaye prisoners in to a straunge coūtre. But now sence they haue turned them selues agayne vnto the LORDE their God, & are come home agayne out of the countrees where they were scatred abrode: and thus haue they recouered these moūtaynes & dwell therein, yee Jerusalē where their Sanctuary is, they haue it agayne in possession.

And therfore my lorde, make diligent inquisitiō, yf this people haue done wickednesse in the sight of their God, then let vs go vp agaynst the, for doutles their God shall delyuer them in to thy handes, and subdue them vnto thy power. But yf this people haue not displeased their God, we shall not be able to withstande the*, for their God shall defende the, and we shall be a shame before the worlde.

And whan Achior had spoken out these wordes all the gentlemen of Holofernes were wroth, & thought to slaye him, & saide one to another what is he this, which darre saye the children of Israel are able to withstande Nabuchodonosor the kynge and his hoost, where as they are an vnwapened people, without strength or vnderstondinge at the feates of warre? That Achior therfore may knowe, that he hath deceaued vs, we will go vp in to the mountaynes: and whan the mightie men of the are taken, he also shalbe stickte with the swearde, that all the people maye knowe, that Nabuchodonosor is the God of the earth, & that there is none other without him.

The.vi.Chapter.

A

SO whan they had left of speakynge, Holofernes toke sore in dignacion, & saide vnto Achior: For so much as thou hast prophecied vnto vs, sayenge:* the people of Israel shalbe defended of their God, I will shew the, that there is no God but Nabuchodonosor, yee whan we slaye them all as one man, thou also shalt perisshe with them thorow the swerade of the Assirians, & all Israel shal be destroyed with the, & the shalt thou fele, that Nabuchodonosor is the lorde of the whole earth. Then shall the swerade of my knyghthode go thorow thy sydes, & thou shalt fall downe stickte amonge the wounded of Israel, & shalt not come to thy self agayne, but be vtterly destroyed with the. But yf thou thynkest thy prophecy to be true, why dost thou then chaunge thy colour? why art thou afrayed? Thynkest thou that my wordes are not able to be performed? But that thou mayest knowe, that thou shalt fele these thinges with them, beholde, from this houre forth wyll I sende the vnto ponder people, that whan the punyshment of my swerade (which they haue worthely deserued) falleth vpon them, thou mayest be punyshed with them.

Judit. f.i

B

So Holofernes cōmaunded hys seruauntes to take Achior, & to cary hym vnto Bethulia, and to delyuer hym in to the handes of the children of Israel. Then Holofernes seruaūtes toke him, & were thorow the playne felde. But whan they drew nye vnto the mountaynes, the slyngecasters came out agaynst them: Neuertheles they gat them awaye by the syde of the mountayne, & bounde Achior hand & fote to a tree, & so left hym bounde & turned agayne vnto their lorde.

Notwithstondinge the children of Israel wente downe frō Bethulia, came vnto him, lowsed him, brought him to Bethulia, set him in the middest of the people, and axed him what the matter was, that the Assirias had left him bounde.

C Oslas the sonne of Micha of the tribe of Simeon, & Charmim (which is also called Gothoniel) were ꝑ pryncipall rulers at the same tyme. Now whan Achior stode in the myddest of the Senatours, & before thē all, he tolde thē, * what answere he gaue Holofernes, to the thinge that he axed him, and how Holofernes people wolde haue slayne him for so sayenge, & how Holofernes himselfe was wroth, & cōmaunded him for the same cause to be delyuered vnto ꝑ Israelites: that whā he ouercame the childrē of Israel he might commaunde Achior also to be put to death with dyuerse tormentes, because he Judit.5 k salde: * ꝑ God of heauen is their defender.

And whan Achior had playnely tolde out all these thinges, all the people fell downe vpon their faces, prayslnge the LORDE, poured out their prayers together vnto the LORDE, with a generall cōplaynte & weppynge, & sayde: O LORDE God of heauen and earth, beholde their pryde, and loke vpon oure lowlynes, and considre how it standeth with thy sayntes, and make it to be knowne, ꝑ thou forsakest not those, which holde them fast by the, and that thou brynggest thē lowe, that presume of them selues, and make their boast in their owne strēgth.

D So whan the wepinge and prayer of ꝑ people (which they had made the whole daye lōge) was ended, they cōforted Achior sayenge the God of oure fathers, whose power and strength thou hast prayed, shall so rewarde the, that thou shalt rather se their destruccion. Whan the LORDE our God thē shal geue his seruauntes this liberte, God be wt the also amonge vs: so that yf it please the, thou with thyne mayest dwell with vs.

Now whan Oslas had ended the councell, he toke him in to his house, and made a greate supper, called all the elders to it, & so they refreshed them selues after the fastynge. And afterwarde was all the people called together, whiche made their prayes all the night longe in the congregation, and be sought the God of Israel, for helpe.

The.vii.Chapter.

A THe next daye Holofernes commaunded his hoost, to go vp a- Judit.2 b gaynst Bethulia, * There were an. C. and. xx. thousande fightinge men on fote, and two and two & twentie thousande horsmen, besyde ꝑ prepatynge of them that were wonne, & came to them on euery syde out of the countrees and cities which he had take. All these prepared them selues vnto the battayll agaynst the Israelites, and came on by ꝑ hyll syde, vnto ꝑ top that loketh ouer against Dothaim, from the place whiche is called Belma, vnto Chelmon that lyeth towarde Esdrelon.

Now whan the childrē of Israel sawe so B greate multitude of the Assirians, they fell downe flat vpon the grounde, strowed ashes vpon their heades, and prayed with one accorde, that the God of Israel wolde shew his mercy vpō his people. And so they toke their weapens, and sat dewirte ꝑ mountaynes in the narow place, and kepte ꝑ wape daye and night. But whyle Holofernes was goinge aboute, he founde the watr springe, which from the south syde was cōueyed in to the cite by a condyte: this commaunded he to be directe another waye, & to cut their condite in sunder. There were welles also not farre from the walles, which they vsed secretly, more for pleasure then for necessite.

Then wente the Ammonites & the Mo- C bites vnto Holofernes, and sayde: The childrē of Israell trust nether in speare nor rowe, but haue taken in, and kepe the mountaynes and hilles, That thou mayest ouercome them therfore without ꝑ strykinge of ony battayll, set mē to kepe the welles, that they drawe no water out of them: so shalt thou destrope thē without swerade, or at the least they shall be so feble, that they must be fayne to geue ouer the cite, which they thinke not able to be wōne, for so much as it lyeth in mountaynes. These wordes pleased Holofernes well and all his men of warre, and * he set an hundreth men at euery well Jud.2 rounde aboute.

And whan this watch had endured tow D tie dayes, ꝑ cisternes & all springes ꝑ had water, fayled them that dwelt in the cite of Bethulia, so that in the whole cite they had not drynke ynough for one daye, for the people had water geue them daylie in a measure. Then came the men and women, yonge persōnes & childrē all vnto Oslas, and sayde all with one voyce: * God be iudge bet- Judit.7 wene vs and the, for thou hast dealt euell by vs: thou woldest not speake peaceably vnto the kynge of the Assirians, therfore hath God solde vs in their handes, and there is no mā to helpe vs, where as we are brought

ryne before their eyes in thirst and greate destruction. Therfore gather now together all the people that be in the cite, that we maye all yelde oure selues willingly vnto
the people of Holofernes: for better it is that we be captyue and prayse the LORDE with oure lyues, then to be slayne and perysshe,
and to be laughed to scorne and shamed of every man whan we se oure wyues & chyldren dye before oure eyes. We take heauen and earth this daye to recorde, and the God of oure fathers (which punisheth vs accordynge to the deseruynge of oure synnes) &
geue you warnynge, that ye geue vp the cite vs in to the power of Holofernes hoost,
that our ende may be shorte with y swearde,
which els shall endure longe for wante of water and for thirst.

Whan they had spoke out these wordes,
there was a greate weppynge and howlynge in the whole congregacion, and that of every man, and they cryed vnto the whole houre
longe vnto God with one voyce, sayenge:
we haue synned with oure fathers, we haue done amysse, we haue dealt wickedly. Thou art gracious, haue mercy vpō vs, punysh
vs in righteousnes with thine owne scourge, and geue not those ouer that knolege
not how a people which knoweth the not,
they saye amonge the heithen: * where is their God?

And whan they were so weery with this mone and weppynge, that they helde their tonges, Ozias stode vp with watrye eyes,
and sayde: * O take good hartes vnto you (dere brethren) and be of good cheare, and let vs tarye yet these fyue dayes for mercy of the LORDE: peraduenture he shal cut away his indignacion, and geue glory vnto his name. But yf he helpe vs not whan these dayes are past, we shall do as ye haue sayde.

The.viii.Chapter.

And it happened whā these wor-
des came to the eares of Judith a wyddowe, which was y
doughter of Merary, the sonne
of Idox, the sonne of Joseph,
the sonne of Ozias, the sonne of Elai, y sonne of Jammor, the sonne of Gedeon, the son ne of Raphaim, the sonne of Achitob, the sonne of Melchia, the sonne of Enam, y son
ne of Nathania, the sonne of Salathiel y sonne of Symeon, the sonne of Ruben. And her husbande was called Manasses, which dyed in the daye of the barlye harueste. For whyle he was byndinge y sheaues together
in the felde, the heate came vpon his heade.
and he dyed at Bethulia his cite, and there was he buried beside his fathers. Now was Judith his desolate wydowe thre yeares a sir monethes. And in y hygher partes of hir house she made hirself a preuy chābre, wher
she dwelt, beynge closed in wt hir maydes.
She dyd weare a smocke of heere & fasted
all the dayes of hir lyfe, excepte the Sabbathes, and new moones and y solempne da-yes that the people of Israel kepte. She was a fayre and beutyfull personne. Hyr husbande also had left her greate ryches, a plenteous houshold, greate vnmoueable possessions and many cattell. Also Judith was a woman of a very good reporte with euery one, for she feared the LORDE greatly, and there was no body that speake an euell worde of her.

Whā this Judith herde, how Ozias had promysed the people, * that after the fyfte daye he wolde geue vp the cite vnto the Issirians, she sent for the elders Chabry and Charmin: and whan they came to her, she sayde: what thinge is thys, wherin Ozias hath consented, that yf God helpe not within fyue dayes, he wyll geue ouer the cyte to the Assirians: What are ye, that ye tempte
the LORDE? This deuyce optayneth no mercy of God, but prouoketh hym vnto wrath and displeasure. Wyll ye set the mercy of the LORDE a tyme, and apoynte hym
a daye after youre wyll?

Neuertheleffe for so much as the LOR-
DE is pacient, let vs rather amende oure
selues pourynge out teares, and beseche hym of grace. * For God threatneth
not as a man, nother wyll he be prouoked vnto wrath as the chyldren of men. And therfore let vs hartely fal downe before him and serue hym with a meke spyrite, and with weppynge eyes saye vnto the LORDE, that he deale with vs accordinge to his owne wil
and mercy: that lyke as oure harte is now
pered, and brought lowe thorowe y pryde
of them, it maye so be comforted thorowe hys grace: in so much as we folowe not the synnes of oure fathers, which forsoke their God, and worshypped other goddes: * for the whiche synne they perysshed with the swearde, were spoyled and brought to shame of al their enemies. As for vs, we knowe
none other God but onely him, for whose cō
forte let vs tary wt mekenesse. * He shall re-quyre and make inquisition for our bloude,
from the veracions of our enemies: he shall

bryngе downe all the Heithen, that ryse vp agaynst vs, & put them to dishonoure, euen the LORDE oure God.

D Therfore deare brethren, seynge ye are the honorable and elders in the people of God, vnto whom al the people haue respect and vpon whom the life of the people stondeth, lift vp their hartes with youre erectacion, that they maye cal to remembraunce

C Then sayde Osias and the elders vnto Judith: All that thou speakest, is true, and no man can reproue thy wordes. Praye thou for vs now therfore vnto God, for thou art an holy woman, and feareſt God. And
1. Cor. 14 d 1. Joh. 4 a 1. Tess. 5. a Judith saide vnto them: * Beynge ye knowe, that my wordes are of God, then proue my counsell and deuyce, yf it be of God: and beseke God, that he wyll brynge my counsell to a good ende.

Judit. 10 b * Thus haue I deuysed: ye shall stonde this night before the porte, & I wil go forth with Abra my mayde: Praye ye therfore vnto God, that he wyll graciously remembre his people of Israel within fyue dates, as ye haue sayde. As for the thinge that I go in hande withall, are ye no questions of it, tyl I open it vnto you my selfe: do ye nothinge els, but praye vnto the LORDE youre God for me. Then Osias the prince of the people of Juda saide vnto her: Go thy waye in peace, the LORDE be with the, that we maye be auenged of oure enemies. And so they wente from her agayne.

The. ix. Chapter.

NOw whā they were gone their waye, Judith wente in to her oratory, put on an heery smocke, strowed ashes vpon hir heade, fell downe before the LORDE, and cryed vnto hym, sayenge: O LORDE God of my father Symeon * which gauest him a sweарde for a defence against the enemies, that vsed violence and willfulnes, & that rauyshed the virgin and put her to dishonestly, Thou that gauest their wives in to a praye, and their doughters in to captyuyte, and all their praye for a spoyle vnto the seruauntes, which bare a zele vnto the, helpe me wydowe, O LORDE my God, I beseke the. For thou hast done all thinges from the begynnynge, and loke what thou hast taken in hande and deuysed, it came euer to passe. For all thy wayes are prepared, & thy iudgementes are done in thy euerlastynge foreknowlege. O loke now vpō the armyes of ỹ Assyrians, * like as it was thy pleasure
e somtyme to loke vpon the hoost of the Egyptians, whā they beynge weapened, persecuted thy seruauntes, & put their trust in their charettes, horsmen, and in the multitude of their men of warre. But thou lokedest vpon their hoost, castinge a thick darckenes before them: and whan they came in to the depe, the waters ouerwhelmed the.

Euē so LORDE let it go with these, that
g trust in ỹ power and multitude of their men of warre, in their charettes, arowes & speares, and knowe not, that thou onely art oure God, * which destroyest warres from the beginnynge, and that thou art ỹ LORDE. O lyft vp thine arme now lyke as euer from ỹ begynnynge, and in thy power bryng their power to naught, cause their mighe to fall in thy wrath. They make their boast, they wyl vnhalowe and defyle thy Sanctuary, and to wayst the tabernacle of thy name, & to cast downe the horne of thine aulter with their sweard. Bryng to passe (O LORDE) ỹ the pryde of the enemye maye be cut downe with hys owne sweарde: ỹ he maye be taken with the snare of his eyes in me, and ỹ thou mayest smyte hym with the lyppes of my loue. O geue me a stedfast mynde, that I maye despyse hym and his strength, and that I maye destroye hym.

This shal bryng thy name an euerlastin
C ge remembraunce, * yf the hande of a woman ouerthrowe him. For thy power (O LORDE) stondeth not in ỹ power of men, neither hast thou ony pleasure in the strēgth of horses. There was neuer proude personne that

but in the prayer of the humble & them that thy pleasure bene euermore.
O God of the heauens, thou maker
of waters, and LORDE of al creatures,
me poore woman, callynge vpon the,
& putting my trust in thy mercy. Remember thy couenaunt O LORDE, and put wordes in my mouth, and stablysh
counsayle in my hart, that thy house maye be filled in holynes, and that all the people maye knowe and vnderstonde, þ thou art God, and that there is none other but thou.

The.xi.Chapter.

AND whan she had lefte of cryenge to the LORDE, she rose vp from the place, where she had lyen flat before the LORDE and called hir mayde, went into hir house, layed the heerie cloth from her, & put of the garmētes of hir widowhode, washed hir body, anoynted her with precious thinges of swete sauour, broyded and plated hir hayre, set an hat vpon hir heade, and put on such apparell as belongeth vnto gladnesse, slippers vpon hir fete, armelettes, spanges, earynges, rynges, and decked herself with all her best araye.

LORDE, gaue her also a speciall grace & fayrnesse (for all this deckinge of hir was not done for ony volupteousnes & pleasure of the flesh, but of a right discrete and vertue, therfore dyd the LORDE encrease hyr bewtye) so þ she was exceadynge amiable and wel fauoured in all mens eyes. She gaue hir mayde also a bottell of wyne & a pot with oyle, pottage, cakes, bread and fygges, and vitayle hir waye.

And whan she came to the porte of the cite founde Ozias and the elders of the cite wayting there. Which whan they sawe her they were astonyed, & marualled great at her bewty, neuertheles they axed no question at her, but let her go, sayenge: The God of our fathers geue the his grace, and with his power performe all the deuyce of thy herte, that Jerusalem maye reioyce ouer the, and that thy name maye be in the nombre of the holy & righteous. And all they þ were there, sayde vnto one voyce: so be it, so be it. Iudith made hir prayer vnto the LORD, whan she came out at the porte, the .v. hir mayde.

And as she was goinge downe the mountayne, it happened that aboute the spryngē of the daye, the spyes of the Assirias met vn-

her, and toke her, sayenge: whence commest thou: Or whither goest thou: She answered: I am a doughter of þ Hebrues, and am fled from them, for I knowe, that they shalbe geue vnto you to be spoyled: because they thought scorne to yelde thē selues vnto you, that they might fynde mercy in youre sight. Therfore haue I deuysed by my self after this maner: I will go before the prynce Holofernes, and tell him all their secretes, and wyll shew him, how he maye come by them, and wynne them, so that not one man of his hoost shall perish.

And whan these men had herde hir wordes, & consydered hir fayre face, they were astonyed (for they wondred at hir excellent bewtye) and sayde vnto her: Thou hast saued thy lyfe by fyndinge out this deuyce, that thou woldest come downe to our lorde and be thou sure, that whan thou commest vnto him, he shall intreate the well, & thou shalt please hym hartely. So they brought her in to Holofernes pauylion, and told hym of her. Now whan she came in before him, immediatly he was ouercome and taken with hir bewtye. Then sayde his seruauntes: who wolde despyse the people of the Jewes, that haue so fayre women? Shulde we not by treason fight agaynst them for these? So whan Judith sawe Holofernes sytting in a canapye, that was wrought of purple, sylke, golde, smaragde and precious stones, she loked fast vpon him, and fell downe vpon the earth. And Holofernes seruauntes toke hir vp agayne, at their lordes commaundement.

The.xi.Chapter.

THen sayde Holofernes vnto her. Be of good chere, and feare not in thin hart, for I neuer hurted man, that wolde serue Nabuchodonosor the kynge. As for thy people, yf they had not despysed me, I shulde not haue lift vp a speare agaynst them. But tell me now, what is the cause þ thou art departed from them, and wherfore art thou come vnto vs?

And Judith sayde vnto him: Syr, vnderstonde the wordes of thy handmayden: for yf thou wilt do after þ wordes of thy handmayden, the LORDE shall bringe thy matter to a prosperous effecte. As a truly as Nabuchodonosor a lorde of þ lōde liueth, & as truly as his power liueth, which is sent to the punyshment of all men that go wronge, all men shall not onely be subdued vnto him thorow ȳ, but all the beastes also of the felde. For all people speake of thy prudēt actiuyte, and it hath euer bene reported, how thou onely art good and mightie in all his kyngdome, and thy discrecion is commēded in all londes.

B * The thynge is manifest also, ȳ Achior Judit. 5. a spake, and it is wel knowne, what thou cōmaūdest to do vnto him. For this is playne and of a suretye, that oure God is so wroth with vs (by the reason of oure synne) that he hath shewed by hys prophetes vnto the people, how that for their synnes he wyl deliuer them ouer vnto the enemie. And for so much as the children of Israel knowe that they haue so displeased their God, thy are sore afrayed of the. They suffre greate honger also, & for wante of water, they are dead now in a maner. Moreouer, they are appoynted to slaye all their catteil, that they maye drynke ȳ bloude of them: and are purposed to spende all the holy ornamentes of their God (whiche he hath forbidde the to touch) for corne, wyne and oyle. Seinge now that they do these thinges, it is a playne case, ȳ they must nedes be destroyed. Which whan C I thy handmayden perceaued, I fled from them, & the LORDE hath sent me vnto the, to shew the these thinges. For I thy handmayde worshippe God euen here now beside the, and thy handemayden shal go forth, and I will make my prayer vnto God, & he shal tell me, whan he wyl reworde the their synne: then shal I come and shew the, & bringe the thorow the myddest of Ierusalem, so that thou shalt haue all ȳ people of Israel, as the shepe without a shepherde: there shal not so much as one dogg barck against the, for these thinges are shewed me by the prouydence of God: and for so much as God is displeased with them, he hath sent me to tell the the same.

D These wordes pleased Holofernes and al his seruātes, which marueyled at the wysdome of her, and sayde one to another: there is not such a woman vpon earth, in beawtye and discrecion of wordes. And Holofernes sayde vnto her: God hath downe well, that he hath sent the hyther before thy people, that thou mayest geue them in to oure handes. And for so much as thy purpose is good, yf thy God performe it vnto me, he shall be my God also, and thou shalt be excellent and greate in the courte of Nabuchodonosor, and thy name shalbe spoken of in all the londe.

The.xii. Chapter.

Then commaunded she her seruaūt in where his treasure laye, and charged that she shulde bere hyed wellynge there, & appointed, what shulde be geuen her from his table. Iudith answered hym and sayde: * As for the meate that thou hast commaunded to geue me, I maye not eate of it as now (lest I displease my God) but wyl eate as of such as I haue brought with me. Then sayde Holofernes vnto her: yf these thynges that thou hast brought with the fayle, what shall we do vnto the? And Iudith sayde: As truly as thou lyuest my lorde, thy handemayden shall not spende all this, tyll God haue brought to passe by my hande, the thynge that I haue deuysed.

So his seruauntes brought her into the tent, where as he had appointed. And as she was goynge in, she desyred that she might haue leue to go forth by night & before daye, to hir prayer and to make intercession vnto the LORDE. Then commaunded Holofernes his chamberlaynes: that she shulde go out and in at hir pleasure, to praye vnto her God those thre dayes.

And so in the night season she went forth in to the valley of Bethulia, and washed her self in the welwater. Then went she vp, besought the LORDE God of Israel that he wolde prosperе hir waye, for the deliueraunce of his people. And so she went in, & remayned clene in hir tent, till she toke hir meate in the euenynge.

Upon the fourth daye it happened, that Holofernes made a costly supper vnto his seruauntes, & sayde vnto Bagao his chamberlayne: Go thy waye, and counsell this Hebrueslē, that she maye be wyllynge to consent to kepe company with me. For it were a shame vnto all the Assyrians, that a woman shulde so laugh a man to scorne, that she were come from hym vnmaryed withall.

Then went Bagao vnto Iudith, and sayde: Let not the good doughter be afrayed to come in to my lorde, that she maye be honoured before hym, that she maye eate and drynke wyne, and be merry with hym. Unto whom Iudith answered: Who am I, yf I shulde saye my lorde naye? what so euer is good before his eyes, I shall do: and loke what is his pleasure, that shal I thynke be done, as longe as I lyue.

So she stode vp, and decked hirself with hir apparell, and went in, and stode before hym. And Holofernes hart was wholy nyght, so that he brent in desyre towarde her. And Holofernes saide vnto her: drynke now and be merry, and be merry, for thow hast fauoure before me. Then sayde Judith: Syr, I wil drynke, for my mynde is me ryer to daye, then euer it was in all my lyfe. And she tooke and ate and dranke before him, the thinges that hir mayden had prepared for her. And Holofernes was mery vp her, and dranke more wyne, then euer he dyd afo in his lyfe.

The.xiii. Chapter.

NOw whan it was late in the night his seruauntes made haste, euery mã to his lodginge. And Bagao shut the chamber dores and wente his waye, for* they were all ouerladen wyth wyne. So was Judith alone in the chamber. As for Holofernes he laye vpon the bed all dronken, & for dronkennes he fell a slepe.

Then commaunded Judith hir mayden to bide without before ꝑ dore, and to waye. And Judith stode before the bed, makyng hir prayer with teares, & moued hir lippes secretly, and sayde, Strength me O LORDE God of Israel, and haue respecte vnto the workes of my handes in this houre, that thou mayest set vp thy cite of Jerusalem like as thou hast promysed: O graũte that by the I maye performe the thynge, which I haue deuysed thorow the beleue that I haue in the.

And whan she had spoken this, she wente to the bedsteade, and lowsed the swerade that hanged vpon it, and drew it out. Then toke she holde of ꝑ heerie lockes of his heade, & sayde: Strength me o LORDE God in this houre, and with that, she gaue hym two strokes vpon ꝑ neck, and smote of his head. Then toke she the canapy awaye, & rolled ꝑ dead body aside. Immedyatly she went forth, and delyuered the head of Holofernes vnto hir mayden, and bad hir put it in hir wallet.

And so these two wente forth together after their custome, as though they wolde haue gone, and so passed by the hoost, and came ouer the valley vnto the porte of the cyte. Then Judith cried afarre of vnto ꝑ watch men vpon the walles: Open the gates (sayde she) for God is with vs, whiche hath shewed his power in Israel. And whan they came vnto hir, they called the elders of the cite together. And they came all to mete her, bothe great, ponge & olde, for they thought not that she shulde haue come so soone. So they lyghted candels, and gathered about hir: euerichone: but she wẽte vp into an hye place, and caused silence to be proclamed.

Whan euery man now helde his tunge, C Judith sayde: O prayse the LORD oure God, for he hath not despysed, nor forsaken them, that put theire trust in him: and in me his honde mayden he hath performed hys mercy, which he promysed vnto the house of Israel, yee in my hãde this same nyght hath he slayne the enemy of his people,

And with that she toke forth the heade of Holofernes out of the wallet, and shewed it them, sayenge: Beholde the heade of Holofernes the captayne of the Assirias, and this is the canapy, wherin he laye in his dronkẽnes: where the LORDE oure God hath slayne him by the hande of a woman.

But as truly as the LORD lyueth, hys angell hath kepte me, goinge thither, remayninge there, & cõmynge hyther agayne from thẽce, And the LORD hath not suffred me his handmayden to be defyled, but without any fylthynes of synne hath he brought me agayne vnto you: & ꝑ with greate victory, so that I am escaped, and ye delyuered. O geue thankes vnto him euerychone, * for he is gracious, and his mercy endureth for euer. psal. 105. & and. 106. a

So they prayed the LORD al together D and gaue thãkes vnto him. And to her they sayde: The LORDE hath blessed ꝑ in his power, for thorow the he hath brought oure enemies to naught.

And Ozias the chefe ruler of the people of Israel, sayde vnto her: Blessed art thou (O doughter of the LORDE the hye God,) aboue all wemen vpon earth.

Blessed be the LORDE the maker of heauen, and earth whiche hath gyded the a right to wouũde and to smyte of the heade of the captayne of oure enemies. For this daye he hath made thy name honorable, that thy prayse shall neuer come out of ꝑ mouth of men, whiche shall alwaye remembre the power of ꝑ LORD: seynge thou hast not spared thine owne selfe, but put the in peoperdy, cõsideringe the anguysh and trouble of thy people, and so hast helped their fall before God oure LORDE. And all the people sayde: Amen, Amen.

Achior also was called, & he came. Then E sayde Judith vnto him: The God of Israel vnto whõ thou gauest wytnes, that he wolde be auenged of his enemyes, euen he hath this night thorow my hande smytte of the head of all the vnfaithfull. And that thou mayest se that it so is, beholde, this is ꝑ heade of Holofernes, which in his ꝓsumptuous ꝓyde despysed the God of the people of Israel, and threatened ꝑ with destruccion, Judit 6a sayenge:* whā the people of Israel is take, I shall cause the also to be stickte with the swearde. Whā Achior sawe Holofernes heade he fell downe vpon his face to the grou̇nde for very anguish & feare, so ꝑ he swowned withall. But after that he was come agayne to himself, he fell downe before her & ꝓayed her, sayēge: Blessed art thou of thy God in all the tabernacles of Jacob: for all the people that heare of thy name, shall ꝓayse the God of Israel because of the.

The.xiiii. Chapter.

¶ Judith sayde vnto all the people Brethren heare me, Stycke vp this heade vpon oure walles, & whan the Sonne aryseth, take euery man his weapen, and fall out violently. not as though ye wolde go besyde them, but to renne vpō them with violence. Whan the spyes in the tentes se this they shall of necessite be cōpelled to flye backwarde, and to rayse vp their captayne to the battayll. So whan their captaynes come in to Holofernes pauylion, & fynde the dead body wrapped in the bloude, fearfulnes shal fall vpon them: and whan ye perceaue that they flye, folowe thē without al care, for God shal deliuer them vnto you, to be destroyed.

Then Achior seyenge the power of God which he had shewed vnto ꝑ people of Israel, fell of frō his heithenish beleue, & put his trust in God, and let him selfe be circūcised: & so was he nombred amōge the people of Israel, he and all his posterite vnto this daye.

¶ Now as soone as it was daye, they stickte vp Holofernes heade vpō the walles, and euery man toke his weapē, & so they wente out wᵗ an horrible crye. Whā the spyes sawe ꝑ, they came vnto Holofernes tent. And they ꝑ were within the tent, came before his chamber, & made a greate rustlynge, to wake him vp, because they thought wyth the noyse to haue raised him. For there durst not one of ꝑ Assirians knocke, go in, nor to ope.

But whan the captaynes and ꝓuces & all the chefe in the kynge of the Assirians hoost came together, they sayde vnto the chamberlaynes: Go poure waye in, and wake him vp, * for ꝑ myse are crepte out of their holes, and darre ꝓuoke vs vnto battayll. 1.Reg.

Thē wente Bagao in to his chāber, stode before the bed, & clapped with his hādes, for he thought he had bene slepinge wᵗ Judith. C

But whā he had herkened perfectly wᵗ his eares, & coulde perceaue no steringe, he wēt nyer to ꝑ bed, & lift it vp, and thē sawe he the dead body of Holofernes lyenge there without a heade, weltred in his bloude vpon the earth. Then cryed he wᵗ loude voyce, & with weppynge rent his clothes, & wente in to Judiths tēt, & founde her not: And so he leapte out vnto the people, and sayde one womā of the Jewes, hath brought al Nabuchodons sors people to shame.

For lo, Holofernes lyeth vpon the grounde, and hath no heade.

Whā the chefe of ꝑ Assirians hoost herde ꝑ, they rēte their clothes, & there fell an intollerable feare & trēblinge vpō thē, so ꝑ their myndes were sore afrayed. And there was an exceadinge greate crye in ꝑ whole hoost.

The.xv. Chapter.

¶ Now whan all the hoost herde ꝑ Holofernes was headed, their myndē & coūcell fell frō thē: and such a feare came vpō thē: ꝑ they vndertoke to defende thē selues by flyenge awaye: one spake not to another, but hanged downe their heades, left all behynde thē, and made haist to escape from the Hebrues: for they herde, that they were haistinge to come after with their weapens, and so they fled by the wayes of the feldes, and thorow all the fote pathes of the dayes.

And whan ꝑ childrē of Israel sawe that they fled, thy folowed vpon them, and wēdowne with tropettes, blowinge and makynge a greate crye after thē. As for the Assirians, they had no order, & kepte not thē selues together, but fled their waye. Neuerthelesse ꝑ childrē of Israel fell vpon thē with one cōpany & order, & discomfited as many as they might gett. And Ozias sent messangers vnto all the cities & coūtrees of Israel. B

So all the rigions and euery citie sent out their best men after them in harnesse, & smote thē with the swearde, tyll they came to ꝑ vttemost parte of their borders. And the other ꝑ were in Bethulia, came in to the tenons of the Illyrians, and toke all that they which were fled, had left behynde the, and so they founde greate good. And they that came agayne to Bethulia from the battayl, toke with them such thynges as had bene theyrs: there was no nombre of the catell, and of all ꝑ costly yewels, so that from the lowest vnto the hyghest, they were all maysters of the spoyles of them. And Joachym the hyghe prest at Jerusalē, came to Bethulia with al the elders, that they might se Judith.

C Now whan she came out vnto them, they beganne all to prayse her with one voyce, sayinge: thou worshippe of ꝑ cyte of Jerusalē thou ioye of Israel, thou honour of our people, thou hast done manly, and thy hart is comforted, because thou hast loued clenlynes, and chastyte, and hast knowne no man but thyne owne husbande: therfore hath the hande of the LORDE comforted the, and blessed shalt thou be for euer. And all the people sayde: so be it, so be it.

In thyrtie dayes coulde the people of Israel scarse gather vp the spoyles of the Assyrians. But al that belonged vnto Holofernes, and had bene his specially, (whether it were of golde, of syluer, precious stones, clothinge and all ornamentes) they gaue it vnto Judith. And all the people reioysed, both men, maydens, and yonge people, with pypes, and harpes.

The.xvi. Chapter.

THen sange Judith this songe vnto the LORDE: Begynne vnto the LORDE vpon the tabrettes, synge vnto the LORDE vpon the cymbales. O synge vnto hym a new songe of thankesgeuynge, be ioyfull and call vpon his name. * It is the LORDE that destroyeth warres, euen the LORDE is his name. Which hath pitched his tentes in the myddest of his people, that he myght delyuer vs from the hande of all our enemies. Assur came out of the mountaynes in the multitude of his strength. * His people stopped the water brokes, and their hostes couered the valleys. He purposed to haue brent vp my londe, and to slaye my yonge men with the swearde.

The holde haue caried awaye my chyldre and virgins in to captiuyte, but the almighty LORDE hurte hym, and delyuered him into the hādes of a woman, which brought him to confusion. For theyr myghtie was not destroyed of the yonge men. It was not the sonnes of Tytan that slew hym, nother haue the greate giauntes sett them selues agaynst hym: but Judith the doughter of Merari with hyr fayre bewtie hath discomfited, and brought hym to naught. * For she layed awaye hyr wydowes garment, and put on the apparell of gladnesse in the retoysynge of the chyldren of Israel. She anoynted hyr face, and bounde hyr heere in a hoode, to begyle hym. Hyr sleppers rauyshed his eyes, hyr bewtye captyuated his mynde * with the swearde smote she of his neck. Judit,13 B

The Persians were astōmied at hyr stedfastnesse, and the Medes at hyr boldnes. Then howled the armyes of the Illirians, whan my symple appeared, dyre of thyrst. The sonnes of the doughters haue pearsed them thorow, and slayne them as fugitiue chyldren: they perysshed in the battayl, for the very fear of the LORDE my God. Let vs synge a songe of thankesgeuynge vnto the LORDE, a new songe of prayse wyll we synge vnto oure God. LORDE, LORDE thou art a greate God, myghtie in power, whom no man maye ouercome. All thy creatures shulde serue the, * for thou spakest but the worde, & they were made: * thou sentest thy spyrete, and they were created, and no man maye withstonde thy voyce. The mountaynes shall moue from the foundacions with the waters, the stony rockes shall melt before the lyke ware. But they that feare the, shalbe greate with the in all thynges. Wo vnto the people that ryse vp agaynst my generacion, for the almyghtie LORDE wyll auenge hymself of them, and in the daye of iudgment wyll he vyset them. For he shall geue fyre, and wormes in to theyr flesh, that they maye burne, and fele it for euermore. Gene. 1. Psa.17.d Apoc.10

D After this it happened, that after the victory all the people came to Jerusalem, to geue prayse and thankes vnto the LORDE. And whan they were purified, they offred all theyr brentsacrifyces, and theyr promysed offerynges. And Judith offred all Holofernes weapens, and al the yewels, that the people had geuen her, and the canapy that she toke from his bed, * and hanged them vp vnto the LORDE. The people was ioyfull, as the vse is: and this ioye by reason of the victory, with Judith, endured thre monethes. 2. Mc 7.b Judit,13.b

So after these dayes euery man went home agayne & Judith was in greate reputacion at Bethulia, and right honorably taken in all the londe of Israel. Unto hyr dea true also was chastyte ioyned, so that after hyr husbonde Manasses dyed, she neuer knew man all the dayes of hyr lyfe. Upon the hye solempne dayes she wente out with greate worshippe. She dwelt in hyr husbādes houle an hundreth and fyue yeare, and left hyr hondmeayden fre, and dyed, and was buried beside hyr husbande in Bethu-

Gene. 50 lia. * And all the people mourned for her seuen dayes. So longe as she lyued, there was none that troubled Israel, and many yeares also after hyr death.

The daye wherin this victory was gotten, was solemply holden, and rekened of the Jewes in the nombre of the holy dayes, and is yet greatly holden of the Jewes euer sence, vnto this daye.

The chapters in the boke of Hester: Which are not founde in the text of the Hebrue, but in the Greke and Latyn.

The.xi. Chapter after the Latyn.

In this chapter is declared the dreame of Mardocheus.

A Hester. 2. a

MArdocheus the sonne of Jayr, the sonne of Semey, the sonne of Cisey of the tryde of Ben Jamin a Jew: which had his dwelynge in Susis, a man of greate reputacion, and excellent amonge all the
Dan. 14. b. that were in the kynges courte (Neuertheless he was one of the preseners, * whom Jere. 24. b. Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon, had caried awaye from Jerusalem vnto Babylon with Jechonias the kynge of Juda.) In the seconde yeare of the raygne of greate Artarerses in the fyrst daye of the moneth Nisā, had this Mardocheus such a dreame: He thought he herde a greate tempest, horrible thonderclappes, erthquakes, and greate vprour in the londe: and that he sawe two greate dragōs, ready to fyght one against another. Theyr crie was greate. At the which roaringe and crie all Heythen were vp, to fyght agaynst the righteous people. And the same daye was full of darcknes, & very vnclease, full of trouble, and anguysh, yee a greate fearfulnes was there in all the londe. The righteous were amased, for they feared the plage and euell that was deuised ouer them, and were at a poynte with themselues to dye. So they cried vnto God, and whyle they were criēge, the litle welle grew in to a greate ryuer and in to many waters. And with that it was daye, and the sonne rose vp agayne. And the lowly were exalted and deuoured the glorious and proude.

Now whan Mardocheus had sene this dreame, he awoke, and mused stedfastly in his hart, what God wolde do: and so he desyred to knowe all the matter, and his mynde was there vpon vntyll the nyght.

The.xii. Chapter.

In this chapter is declared: how Mardocheus vttereth the treason of ye two seruauntes agaynst the kynge, and therfore doth the kynge rewarde hym.

ATt the same tyme dwelt Bardocheus with Bagatha, and Thares the kynges chamberlaynes and porters of the palace. * But
Da. 6. whā he herde theyr deuyce, and had diligently consydered theyr ymaginacions, he perceaued that they wente about to laye theyr cruell handes vpon the kynge Artarerses: and so he certified the kyng therof. Then caused the kynge to examen the two gelded with tormentes. And whan they had graunted it, they were put to death.

B This ye kynge caused to be put in the cronicles for an euerlastinge remembraunce, and Mardocheus wrote vp the same matter. So the kynge commaunded, that Mardocheus shulde do seruyce in the courte, and for this faythfulnesse of his, he gaue hym a rewarde. But Aman the sonne of Amadathi the Agathite, which was holden in greate honoure and reputacion in the kynges courte, vndertoke to hurte Mardocheus, and his people, because of the two chamberlaynes that were put to death.

The.xiii. Chapter.

The copie of the commaundemēt which kynge Artarerses (by the enstygacion of Aman) sent out in all countres, for the destruccion of the Jewes. The prayer of Mardocheus.

The greate kynge Assuerus which raigned from India vn to Ethiopia, ouer an hundreth and seuen and twentye londes sendeth his frendly salutacion vnto all the princes and deputes of the cõ trey, which be subiectes vnto his dominion. Forasmuch as I was made lorde ouer many people, and had subdued the whole earth vnto my dominion, my mynde was not with pryde and boldnes to exalte myselfe by the reason of my power: but purposed with equite & clemence and gentylnes, to gouerne those that be vnder my iurisdiccion, and wholy to set them in a peaceable lyfe, and therby to bringe my kyngdom vnto tranquylite, that men myght safely go thorow on euery syde, and enioye peace agayne, which all men desire. Now whan I asked my counceilers, how these thynges myght be brought to a good ende, there was one by vs, excellent in wysdome, whose good wyll, trueth and fayth towarde me hath oft bene shewed, and proued (which was also the principall and next vnto the kynge) Aman by name, which certified vs all how that in al londes there was crept a rebellious folke, that made statutes contrary vnto all other people, and had alwaye despysed the proclamed commaundementes of kynges: and how that for this cause it were not to be suffred, that such rebellion shulde continue by you and not to be put downe. Beynge now we perceaue the same that this people alone are cõtrary vnto euery man, kynge straunge and other maner of fashion, and withstonde oure statutes and lawes, and go aboute to stablysh shrewd maners, that oure kyngdome shulde neuer come to good estate and stedfastnes: Therfore haue we commaunded, that al they that are appointed in wrytinge and shewed vnto you by Aman (which is ordened and set ouer all oure busynes, and the moost principall next vnto the kynge, and in maner as a father) shall with theyr wyues and chyldren be destroyed, and roted out with the swerde of theyr enemies and aduersaries: and that there shalbe no mercy shewed, and no mans sparyd. And this shalbe done the xiii. daye of the moneth called Adar, of this same yere, that they which of olde (and now also haue euer bene rebellious, maye in one daye with violence be thrust down in to the hell, to the entent that after this maner, oure kyngdome maye haue peace and tranquylite.

Mardocheus thought vpon all the workes and noble actes of the LORDE and made his prayer vnto hym, sayenge: O LORDE LORDE, thou valeaunt and almyghtie kynge (for all thynges are in thy power, and yf thou wilt helpe and delyuer Israel, there is noman that can withstonde nor lett the: for thou hast made heauen, and earth, and what wonderous thynge so euer is vnder the heauen: thou art LORDE of all thynges, and there is noman, that can resyste the. O LORDE) Thou knowest all thinges, thou wotest LORDE, that it was nother of malyce, nor presumpcion, nor for ony despyte of glory, that I wolde not bowe downe myself nor worshippe proude presumptuous Aman (for I wolde haue bene content, and that with good wyll, yf it myght haue done Israel ony good, to haue kyst euen his fotesteppes) but that I dyd it, because I wolde not sett the honoure of a man in the steade of the glorye of God, and because I wolde worshippe none but onely the my LORDE. And this haue I done no pryde nor presumpcion.

And therfore O LORDE thou God and kynge, haue mercy vpon thy people for they ymagyn how they maye bringe vs to naught, yee theyr mynde and desyre is to destroye and to ouerthrowe the people, that hath euer bene thyne enheritaunce of olde. O despyse not thy portion, which thou hast delyuered, and brought out of Egypte for thyne owne self. Heare my prayer, and be mercifull vnto thy people, whom thou hast chose for an heretage vnto thyself. Turne oure complaynte and sorow in to ioye, that we maye lyue O LORDE, and prayse thy name. O LORDE, suffre not the mouthes of them that prayse the, to be destroyed.

All the people of Israel in lyke maner cried as earnestly as they coulde vnto the LORDE, for theyr death, and destruccion stode before theyr eyes.

The.xiiii. Chapter.

Of the sore wo, complaynte, and prayer of quene Hester.

Quene Hester also beynge in the daunger of death, reioyced vnto the LORDE, layed away hyr glorious apparell, and put on the garmentes that serued for syghtinge and mournynge. In the steade of precious oyntment, she scatred ashes and donge vpon hyr heade: and as for hyr body, she humbled it, and brought it very lowe. All the places where she was wõte to haue ioye afore, those filled she with the heere that she pluckt out hyrselfe. She prayed also vnto the LORDE God of Israel with these wordes.

O my LORDE, thou onely art oure kynge, helpe me desolate woman, which haue no helper but the, for my misery and destruccion is harde at my hande. * Fro my youth vp I haue harde out of the kynred of my father, that thou takest Israel from amonge all people (and so haue our fathers of theyre fore elders) that they shulde be thy perpetuall inheritaunce, and loke what thoudydest promyse them, thou hast made it good vnto them. Deu.4.c. and.7.b.

B Now well LORDE, we haue synned before the, * therfore hast thou geuen vs in to the handes of oure enemies, because we worshipped theyr goddes. LORDE thou art righteous. Neuertheles it satisfieth them not, that we are in bytter and heup captiuyte, and oppressed amõge them, but thou hast layed theyr handes vpon the hõdes of theyr goddes: so that they beginne to take awaye, the thynge that thou with thy mouth hast ordeined and appointed: to destroye thine inheritaunce, to shut and to stoppe the mouthes of them that prayse the, to quench the glory, and worshippe of thy house and thine aulter, and to open the mouthes of the Heythen, that they maye prayse the power, and vertue of the goddes, and to magnifie the fleshly kynge for euer. Jere.32.c.

C O LORDE, geue not thy cepter vnto them that be nothynge, lest they laugh vs to scorne in oure mysery and fall: but turne theyr deuyce vpon them selues, and punysh hym, that hath begonne the same ouer vs, and set hym to an example. Thynke vpon vs O LORDE and shew thyselfe in the tyme of our distres and of oure trouble. Strengthe me O thou kynge of goddes, thou LORDE of all power, * geue me an eloquent, and pleasaunt speach in my mouth before the Lyõ. Turne his hart in to y hate of oure enemie, to destroye hym, and al such as consent vnto hym. But delyuer vs with thy hande, and helpe me desolate woman, which haue no defence nor helper but onely the. LORDE thou knowest all thynges, thou wotest that I loue not the glory and worshippe of the vnryghteous, and that I hate and abhorre the bed of the vncircumcysed and of all Heythen Exo.4.c. Jere.1.c

D Thou knowest and wotest my necessite, that I hate the token of my preemynence, and worshippe, which I beare vpon my hande, what tyme as I must shew my self, and be sene, and that I abhorre it as an vncleane cloth, and that I weare it not when I am quyete alone by my self. Thou knowest also that I thy handemayden haue not eaten at Amans table, and that I haue had no pleasure nor delyte in the kynges fest, that I haue not dronke the drynkofferynges, and that I thy handemayden haue had no ioye sens the daye that I was brought hither vnto this daye: but onely in the O LORDE. O thou God of Abraham, o thou myghtye God aboue al, heare the voyce of them, that haue none other hope, and deliuer vs out of the hande of the wicked, and delyuer me out of my feare.

The.xv. Chapter.

C Quene Hester appeareth before the kynge, with an heuy hart for the trouble of hyr people, and God turneth the kynges hart.

AND vpon the thyrde daye it happened, that Hester layed awaye the mournynge garmentes, and put on hyr glorious apparell, and beste hyrselfe goodly (after that she had called vpon God, which is the preseruer and sauioure of all thynges) toke two maydes with her: vpon the one she leaned hyrselfe, as one that was tender: the other folowed her, and bare the trayn of hyr vesture. The shyne of hyr beaute made hyr face rose coloured. The syghtsulnesse of hir face was chearful and amyable, but hyr hart was sorouful for greate feare. She went in thorow all the dores, and stode before the kynge. The kynge sat vpon the trone of his kingdome, and was clothed in his goodly araye, all of golde, and set with precious stones, and he was very terrible. He lyft vp his face, that shone in the clearnes, and loked grymly vpon her. Then fell the Quene downe, was pale and sayne, leaned hyrselfe vpõ the heade of the mayde that went with her.

Neuertheles * God turned the kynges mynde, that he was gentle, that he leapt out of his seate for feare, and gat her in his armes, and helde hyr vp till she came to herselfe agayne. He gaue her louynge wordes also, and sayde vnto her: Hester what is the matter? I am thy brother, be of good cheare thou shalt not dye: for our commaundement toucheth the comons, not the. Come nye. And with that he helde vp his golden wande and layed it vpon hir neck, and embraced her frendly, and sayde: talke with me. Then sayde he: * I sawe the (O Lorde) as an Hester.15.a

angell of God, and my hart was troubled for feare of thy maiesty and clearnesse. For excellent and wonderfull art thou (O Lorde) and thy face is ful of amyte. But as she was thus speakyng vnto hym, she fel down agayne for faintnes: for the which cause the kynge was afraied, and all his seruauntes comforted her.

The. xvi. Chapter.

A copye of the commaundemente which kynge Artarerses caused to be proclaimed in all the countrees of hys dompnyon, for the wealth of the Iewes.

THe greate kynge Artarerses, which raygneth from India vnto Ethiopia, ouer an hundreth and .xxvii. londes, sendeth vnto the prynces and rulers of the sayd londes, such as loue hym, his frendly salutacion. There be many, that for the sondry frendshippes and benefytes, which are dayly done vnto them for theyr worshippe, be euer the more proude and hye mynded and vndertake not onely to hurte oure subiectes (for plenteous benefytes maye they not lacke) and begynne to ymagyn some thynge agaynst those that do them good, and take not onely all vnthankfulnes awaye from them but in pryde and presumpcion (as they that be vnmyndefull, and vnthankfull for the good dedes) they go aboute to escape the iudgement of God, that seyth all thynges, which iudgment) hateth and punysheth all wickednes. It happeneth oft also, that they which be set in office by the hygher power, and vnto whom the busynes and causes of the subiectes are committed to be handled, are proude, and defyle them selues with the bloude of innocent bloude, which bryngeth them to intollerable hurte. Which also with false and deceatfull wordes, and with wronge tales, deceaue and betraye the innocent goodnes of prynces.

Nowe is it profytable and good, that we take hede, make search therafter, and consyder not onely what hath happened vnto vs of late, but the shamefull, dishonest, and wicked thynges, that the debytes haue now taken in hande before oure eyes: and ought to beware in tyme tocome, that we maye make the kyngdome quyete, and peasable for all men, and that we myght some what driue it to a chaunge: and as for the thynge that now is present before oure eyes to withstande it, and to put it downe, after the moost frendly maner.

* What tyme now as Iman the sonne of Hester.3.a
Amadathu the Macedonian (a straunger beerely of the Persyans bloude, and farre from oure goodnes) was come in amonge vs as an aleaunt, and had optayned the frendshippe that we beare towarde all people, so that he was called oure father, and had in hye honoure of euery man, as the next and principall vnto the kynge, he coulde not forbeare hymselfe from his pryde, hath vndertaken not onely to robbe vs of the kyngdome, but of oure lyfe also.

With manyfolde deceate also hath he desyred to destroye Mardocheus oure helper, and preseruer, which hath done vs good in all thynges: and innocent Hester the lyke partaker of oure kingdome, with all hir people. For hys mynde was (whan he had taken them out of the waye, and robbed vs of them) by this meanes to translate the kyngdome of the Persyans vnto them of Macedonia. But we fynde, that the Iewes (which were accused of the wycked, that they myghe be destroyed) are no euell doers, but vse reasonable, and ryght lawes, and that they be the chyldren of the moost hye lyuynge God, by whom the kyngdome of vs and oure progenitours hath bene well ordred hytherto. Wherfore as for the letters and commaundementes, that were put forth by Iman, the sonne of Amadathu, ye shall do well, yf ye holde them of none effecte: for he that set them vp, and inuented them, hangeth the at Susys before the porte, wyth all hys kynred, and God (which hath all thynges in hys power) hath rewarded hym after hys deserynge.

And vpon this ye shal publish and set vp the copy of thys letter in all places, that the Iewes maye freely and wythout hynderaunce holde them selues after theyr owne statutes, and that they maye be helped, and that vpon the .xiii. daye of the. xii. moneth Adar they maye be auenged of them, which in the tyme of theyr anguysh and trouble wolde haue oppressed them. For the God that gouerneth all thynges, hath turneth to ioye, the daye wherin the chosen people shulde haue perysshed.

Moreouer, amonge the hye solempne dayes that ye haue, ye shall holde this daye also with al gladnesse: that now and in tyme to come, this daye maye be a remembraunce to good, for all such as loue the prosperyte

of the Persians: but a remembraunce of destruccion to those that be sedicious vnto vs.

All cities and londes that do not this, shal horybly perish and be destroyed with the swearde and fyre, and shall not onely be nomore inhabited of men, but be abhorred also of the wylde beastes and foules.

¶ The boke of Wysdome.

What this boke conteyneth.

Chap. i In exhortacion for iudges, and rulers to loue wysdome. The spirite of wysdom hateth falsede, dissimulacion and ypocrysie, reproueth vnpeyshteousnesse and abhorred wickeddoers.

Chap. ii The ymaginacions, and thoughtes of the vngodly, how they geue themselues ouer vnto synne, and persecute all vertue and treuth.

Chap. iii The felicite and health of godly people, though they be put here to trouble and heuinesse Agayne, what sorowe shall happen to the vngodly, & theyr chyldren.

Chap. iiii To lyue chaysi and godly wythal, is commendable. A dispraise of the wicked. The honour of vertevous age. The shameful death of ỹ vngodly.

Chap. v How the iustmen shal stode agaynst the wicked, ỹ haue put them here to trouble, & what sorowe shall come vpon the vngodly. Agayne, what hope shall happen the ryghteous, which haue God hymself for theyr defence.

Chap. vi An exhortacion vnto such as be in rule and auctorite, to receaue wysdome & commendacion of wysdome.

Chap. vii All men haue lyke intraunce in to the worlde, yet who so calleth vpon God for wysdome, shall haue his desyre. The spirit that commeth by wysdome passeth all other thynges.

Chap. viii Wysdom shuld be receaued in youth. He that marieth himself vnto her, shall optaine loue of God and men.

Chap. ix A prayer vnto god for ỹ gift of wysdō.

Chap. x What profit and good came by wisdome in the olde tyme.

Chap. xi How wisdome leadeth the righteous and how the vngodly are punyshed thorow ỹ myghtie hande of God.

Chap. xii God is merciful and suffreth longe to the intent that synners shulde amende.

Chap. xiii Vayne are they that haue not the knowlege of the lyuynge God, but turne vnto the creatures: vnhappie are they ỹ honoure ymages.

Chap. xiiii The worshippynge of ymages. The power of God. Punyshment of them, that make ymages, and such as worshippe them. How ymages came vp first. The honourynge of ymages in the tawle, begynnynge, and ende of all mysshefe.

Chap. xv The faythfull haue respecte vnto god and not vnto ymages.

Chap. xvi God punysheth the wicked, but defendeth the godly, and that by greate wonders.

Chap. xvii Of the greate darknesse in Egypte, and blyndnesse of the vngodly.

Chap. xviii How god destroyed the firstbozne of Egypte, gods people eate the eastrelambe wyfully, the Egyptians mourne, god punysheth the synners in the wildernesse. Moses intreateth for the people.

Chap. xix Lyke as the wycked are euer synnynge more and more, so doth the wrath of god neuer ceasse, tyll they be destroyed. Of them that were punyshed in the tyme of Loth.

The first Chapter.

Set youre affectiō lyke vnto wysdome, ye ỹ be iudges of ỹ earth. Haue a good opinō of ỹ LORDE & seke hi in ỹ synglenesse of hart. * For he wyll be founde of them that tempte hym not, and appeareth vnto such as put their trust in him. As for frowarde thoughtes, they seperate from God, but vertue (yf it be alowed) refourmeth the vnwyse. And why? wysdome shall not entre into a frowarde soule, nor dwell in the body ỹ is subdued vnto synne. For the holy goost abhorreth fayned nurture, & withdraweth hymself from the thoughtes ỹ are wythout vnderstōdynge: and where wickednes hath the vpperhande, he flyeth from thence. * For the spirite of wysdome is louynge, gētle, and gracious, and wyll haue no pleasure in him that speaketh euell vnto his lyppes. For God is a witnesse of his reynes, a true searcher out of his hart, and an hearer of his tunge. * For the spirite of the LORDE fylleth the rounde compasse of the worlde, and the same that vpholdeth all thynges, hath knowlege also of the voyce.

Therfore he that speaketh vnrighteous thynges, can not be hydde, * nether may he escape the iudgment of reprofe. And why inquysicion shalbe made for the thoughtes of the vngodly, and the reporte of his wordes shall come vnto God, so that his wickednes shalbe punysched. For the eare of gelousy heareth all thynges, and the noyse of the grudgynges shall not be hyd. Therfore beware of murmurynge, which is nothing worth, & refrayne youre tunge frō slaunder. * For there is no worde so darck and secrete that it shall go for naught: and the mouth that speaketh lyes, slayeth the soule.

Seke not youre owne death in the errour of youre lyfe, * destroye not youre selues thorow the workes of youre owne handes. For God hath not made death, neither hath he pleasure in the destruccion of the lyuynge. For he created all thynges, that they myght haue theyr beynge: yee all the people of the earth hath he made, that they, mynde haue health, that there shulde be no destruccion in them, and that the kyngdome of hell shulde not be vpon earth (for ryghteousnesse is euerlastynge and immortall, but vnrighteousnes bryngeth death.) Neuertheles the vngodly call her vnto them both with worde, and workes, and whyle they thynke

vnkynde a frende of her, they come to naught
by the vngodly that are confederate wyth
hym and take hyr parte, are worthy of death.

The.ii. Chapter.

For the vngodly talke, and ymagyn thus amonge them selues (but not ryght:) * The tyme of

he is the bewrayer of our thoughtes.
eth vs also to loke vpon hym, for
is not lyke other mens, hys wayes ther fashion. He counteth vs but nes, he withdrawe th hymself

from our wayes as from fylthynes: he commendeth greatly the latter ende of the iust, and maketh hys boast that God is hys father. Let vs se then yf his wordes be true, let vs proue what shall come vpon hym: so shal we knowe what ende he shall haue. * For D yf he be the true sonne of God, he will receaue hym, and delyuer hym from the handes of hys enemyes. * Let vs examen hym with despytfull rebuke, and torment hym, that we maye knowe his dignite, and proue hys pacyence. Let vs condemne hym wyth the moost shamefull death: for lyke as he hath spoken, so shall he be rewarded.

Such thynges do the vngodly ymagin, and go astraye, for theyr owne wyckednes hath blynded them. As for the mysteryes of God, they vnderstond them not: they nother hope for the rewarde of ryghteousnesse, nor regarde the worthyppe that holy soules shal haue. For God created man to be vndestroyed, yee * after the ymage of his owne lyknesse made he hym. * Neuertheles thorow enuye of the deuell came death in to the worlde, * and they that holde of hys syde, do as he doth.

The.iii. Chapter.

But the * soules of the ryghteous are in the hande of God, and the payne of death shal not touch them. * In the syght of the vnwyse they appeare to dye and theyr ende is taken for very destruccion The waye of the ryghteous is iudged to be vtter destruccion, but they are in rest. And though they suffre payne before men, * yet is theyr hope full of immortalyte. They are punyshed but in few thynges, neuertheles in many thynges shall they be well rewarded. For God proueth them, and fyndeth them mete for hymself: yee as the golde in the fornace doth he trye them, and receaueth them as a burntoffe ryng, and when the tyme commeth, they shalbe loked vpon.

* The ryghteous shall shyne as the sparkes that rūne thorow the rede bulshe. * They shall iudge the nacyons, and haue dominyon ouer the people, and theyr LORDE shall raygne for euer. They that put theyr trust in hym, shall vnderstonde the treuth, and such as be faythfull, wyll agree vnto hym in loue: for hys chosen shall haue grace, and peace. * But the vngodly shalbe punyshed after theyr owne ymaginacyons, for they haue despysed the ryghteous and forsaken the LORDE.

Who so despyseth wysdome, and nurtour he is vnhappye, and as for the hope of such, it is but vayne, theyr labours vnfrutefull, and theyr worckes vnprofytable. Theyr wyues are vndyscrete, and theyr chyldren mooste vngodly. Theyr creature is cursed. Blessed is rather the baren, and vndefyled, which hath not knowne the synful bed: she shal haue frute in the rewarde of the holy soules.

Esa.56.b. * And blessed is the gelded, which with hys handes hath wrought no vnrighteousnesse nor ymagyned wycked thynges agaynst God For vnto hym shalbe geuen the specyal gyft of fayth, and the mooste acceptable portyon in the temple of God. For glorious is the frute of good labour, and the rote of wysdome shall neuer fade awaye. As for the chyldren of aduoutrers, they shall come to an ende, and the sede of an vnrighteous bed shalbe roted out. And though they lyue longe, yet shall they be nothynge regarded, and theyr last age shalbe wythout honoure. Yf they dye hastely, they haue no hope, nother shall they be spoken to in the daye of knowlege. For horyble is the death and ende of the vnrighteous.

The.iiii. Chapter.

How sayre is a chaste generacyon with vertue? The memoryall therof is immortall, for it is knowne with God, and men. When it is present, men take ensample there at: and yf it go awaye, yet they desyre it. It is alwaye crowned, and holden in honour, and wynneth the rewarde of the vndefyled battayll. But the multitude of vngodly chyldren is vnprofytable, and the thynges that are planted with wyckedome, shall take no depe rote, nor laye ony fast foundacyon. * Though they be greene in the braunches for a tyme, yet shall they be shaken wyth the wynde: for they stonde not fast, and thorow the vehemence of the wynd they shalbe roted out. For the vnperfecte braunches shalbe broken, theyr frute shalbe vnprofytable & soure to eate, yee mete for nothyng And why? all the chyldren that are borne of the wicked, must beare recorde of the wickednesse agaynst theyr fathers & mothers, when they be axed. But though the ryghteous be ouertaken with death, yet shall he be in rest.

Jere.17.b Mala.1.a. Mat.7.c.

Age is an honorable thynge: neuertheles it stodeth not only in the length of tyme, nor in the multitude of yeares: but a mans wysdome is yͤ graye heere, and an vndefyled lyfe is the olde age. He pleased God, and was beloued of hym: so that where as he lyued amonge synners, he translated hym. * yet was he suddenly was he taken awaye, to the intent yͤ wyckednesse shulde not alter his vnderstondynge, and that ypocrysye shulde not begyle his soule. For the craftie bewitchyng of lyes make good thynges darck, the vnstedfastnesse also and wyckednes of voluptuous desyre, turne aside the vnderstondynge of the symple. Though he was soone dead, yet fulfylled he much tyme. For hys soule pleased God, therfore hasted he to take hym awaye from amonge the wycked. This the people se, and vnderstonde it not: they lay not by such thynges in theyr hartes, how that the louynge fauour and mercy of God is vpon hys sayntes, and that he hath respecte vnto hys chosen.

Thus the ryghteous that is dead, condemneth the vngodly which are lyuyng: and the youth that is soone brought to an ende, the longe lyfe of the vnrighteous. For they se yͤ ende of the wyse, but they vnderstonde not what God hath deuysed for hym, and wherfore the LORDE hath taken hym awaye. And why? they se hym and despyse hym, therfore shal God also laugh them to scorne: so that they them selues shal dye here after (but withouthonour) yee in shame among yͤ dead for euermore. For wythout ony hope shall he burst those that be puft vp, & remoue them from the foundacions, so yͤ they shalbe layed wayst vnto the Hyghest. They shall mourne, and theyr memoriall shal remembre their synnes, and theyr owne wyckednesse shal be wraye them.

The.v. Chapter. ✝

Then shall the ryghteous stonde in greate stedfastnesse agaynst such as haue dealt extremely wͤ them, and taken awaye theyr labours. Whē they se it, they shalbe vered with horyble feare, and shall wonder at yͤ haystynesse of the sodayne healthe: grouninge for very distresse of minde, and shall saye within them selues (hauinge inwarde sorow, and mourninge for very anguish of minde):

These are they, whom we somtyme had in derision, and iested vpon. * We fooles thought their life very madnesse, and their ende to be without honoure. But lo, how they are counted among the children of God and theyr porcion is amonge the sayntes.

Therfore we haue erred from the waye of truth, the lyght of ryghteousnesse hath not shyned vnto vs, and the Sonne of vnderstondynge rose not vpon vs. We haue weeryed our selues in the waye of wyckednesse, and destruction. Tedyous wayes haue we gone but as for the waye of the LORDE, we ha
ue not knowne it.

What good hath oure pryde done vnto
vs? what profyt hath the pompe of ryches brought vs? * All those thynges are pas sed awaye lyke a shadowe, and as a messaun
ger runnynge before: as a shyppe that passeth ouer the wawes of the water, * which when it is gone by, the trace therof can not be founde, nother the path of it in the flou-
des. Or as a byrde that flyeth thorow the ayr, and no man can se ony token where she is flowen, but onely heareth the noyse of hyr
wynges, beatyng the lyght wynde, partyng
the ayr thorow the vehemēce of hyr goyng
and flyeth on shakynge hyr wynges, where vnto afterwarde no token of hyr waye can be founde. Or lyke as when an arowe is shot at a marck, it parteth the ayre, which immediately commeth together agayne, so that a mā
can not knowe where it wente thorow. Euē so we in lyke maner as soone as we were borne, beganne immedyatly to drawe to our ende: and haue shewed no token of vertue,
but are consumed in oure own wyckednesse.

Such wordes shall they that haue synned, speake in the hell: * for the hope of the vngodly is like a dyrte thystel flore (or duste)
that is blowne awaye wyth the wynde: lyke
as thyn scomme that is scatred abrode with the storme: lyke as the smoke which is dys-
persed here & there wyth ỹ wynde, and as ỹ
remembraunce of a straunger that taryeth
but a daye, and then departeth.

But the ryghteous shall lyue for euer
more, their rewarde also is with the LORD
and their remembraunce with the Hyghest.
Therfore shall they receaue a glorious kyng
dome, and a bewtifull crowne of the LOR-DES hande: for with his ryghthande shall
he couer them, and wyth his owne arme shal
he defende them. His gelousy also shall take awaye the harnesse, and he shall wapen the creature to be auenged of the enemyes. * He shall put on ryghteousnes for a brestplate, &
take sure iudgment in steade of an helmett.
He shall put on inuincible shylde of equyte shall he take, his cruell wrath shall he sharpen for a speare, and the whole compase of the worlde shall fyght wyth hym agaynst the vn wyse.

Then shall the thonder boltes go out of D
the lyghtenynges, and come out of the rayn
bowe of the cloudes to the place appoynted:
out of the hard stony indygnacion there shal
fall thyck hayles, and the water of the see,
shall be wroth against them, and the floudes
shall runne roughly together. yee a myght-ye wynde shall stonde vp against them, and a storme shall scater them abrode. Thus the vnryghteous dealynge of them shal bryn-ge all the londe to a wyldernes, and wickednes shall ouerthrowe the dwellynges of the myghtye.

The. vi. Chapter.

Wysdome is better than strength, A
and a man of vnderstandynge, Eccl. 9. b.
is more worth then one that is stronge. Heare therfore (O ye Psa. 52. b kinges) & vnderstonde: O learn
ye that be iudges of the endes of the earth.
Geue eare ye that rule the multitudes, and delyte in much people. * For the power is Rom. 13. a geuen you of the LORDE, and the strength
from the Hyghest: which shall trye your wor
kes and searth out your ymagynacyons:
How that ye beynge officers of hys kyngdome, haue not excuted true iudgment, haue not kepte the lawe of ryghteousnes, nor walked after hys wyll. Horribly and that ryght soone shall he appeare vnto you: for an harde iudgment shall they haue that bea B
re rule. * Mercy is graunted vnto the sym Eccl. 10. a ple, but they that be in auctoryte shalbe sore punyshed. For God which is LORDE ouer
all, shall except no mans persone, nother
shal he stonde in awe of ony mans greatnes
se: for he hath made the small, and greate,
and careth for all alyke. But the myghtye shall haue the sorer punyshment.

Unto you therfore (o ye kynges) do I spea
ke, that ye maye learne wysdome and not go amisse: for they that kepe ryghteousnes, shal be ryghteously iudged: and they that are learned in ryghteous thynges, shall fynde
to make answere. Wherfore set your lust vpon my wordes, and loue them, so shall ye come by nourtour, wysdome is a noble thyn
ge, and neuer fayleth awaye: yee she is easely sene of them that loue her, and founde of such as seke her. She preuenteth them that C desyre her, that she maye fyrst shewe herselfe vnto them. Who so awaketh vnto her by tymes, shall haue no greate trauayle, for he shall fynde her syttynge ready at hys dores.
To thynke vpon her, is perfecte vnderstan-
dynge: and who so watcheth for her, shalbe

lake, and that soone. For she goeth about, to kynge such as are mete for her, sheweth herselfe cherefully vnto them in theyr goynges, and meteth them with all diligence. For the vnfayned desyre of reformacion is hyr begynnynge: to care for nurtour is loue, * and loue is the keppynge of hyr lawes. Now the keppynge of the lawes is perfeccyon, and an vncorrupte lyfe maketh a man familyar w̄ God. And so the desyre of wysdome ledeth to the kyngdome euerlastynge. * yf youre delyte be then in royall seates, and cepters (o ye kynges of the people) set your lust vpō wysdome, that ye maye raygne for euermore. O loue the lyght of wysdome, all ye that be rulers of the people. As for wysdome, what she is, and how she came vp. I wil tell you, and wyll not hyde the mysteries of God from you: but wyll seke her out from the begynnynge of the natyuyte, and bringe the knowlege of her in to lyght, and wyll not kepe back the treuth: Nother wyl I haue te do wyth consumynge enuye, for such as man shall not be partaker of wysdome. But the multitude of the wyse is the welfare of the worlde, and a wyse kynge is the vpholdynge of the people. O receaue nourtoure then thorow my wordes, and it shall do you good.

The.vii. Chapter.

IMyself also am a mortall man lyke as all other, and am come of the earthy generacion of him that was fyrst made, and * in my mothers wombe was I fashioned to be flesly: In the tyme of ten monethes was I brought together in bloude thorow the sede of man, and the commodious appetyte of slepe. Whan I was borne, I receaued lyke ayer as other men, and fel vpon the earth (which is my nature) crienge, and weppynge at the fyrst, as all other do. I was wrapped in swadlyng clothes, and brought vp with greate cares. For there is no kynge that hath had ony other begynnynge of byrth. * All men then haue one intraunce vnto lyfe, & one goynge out in lyke maner.

Iob.1.c. 2.Tp.6

B

Wherfore I desyred, and vnderstandynge was geuen me: I called, and the spyrete of wysdome came in to me. I set more by her then by kyngdomes and royall seates, and counted ryches nothynge in comparyson of her. * As for precious stone. I compared it not vnto her: for all golde is but grauell vnto her, and syluer shalbe coūted but claye before hir syght. I loued her aboue welfare, and bewty, and purposed to take her for my lyght, for hyr shyne can not be quenched.

Iob.28.b

3.Re.3.a

* All good thynges came to me wyth her, & innumerable ryches thorow hyr handes. I was glad in them all, for thys wysdome wente before me, and I knew not that she is the mother of all good thynges. Now as I myselfe learned vnfaynedly, so do I make other men partakers of her, & hide her riches from no man: for she is an infinite treasure vnto men, which who so vse, become partakers of the loue & frendshippe of God, and are accepted vnto hym for the gyftes of wysdome.

C

God hath graunted me to talke wysely, & conuenyently to handle the thinges yͭ he hath graciously let me. For it is he, that ledeth vnto wysdome, and teacheth to vse wysdome a ryght. * In his hande are we & our wordes yee all our wysdome, our vnderstandyng, & knowlege of all our workes. For he hath geuen me the true science of these thinges: so yͭ I knowe how the worlde was made, and the powers of yͭ elementes: yͭ begynnyng, endyng & myddest of yͭ tymes how yͭ tymes altre, how one goeth after another, and how they are fulfylled: the course of the ayer: the ordinaūces of the starres: the natures and kindes of beastes: the furiousnesse of beastes: yͭ power of the wyndes: the ymagynacyons of men: the dyuersytyes of yonge plantes: the vertues of rootes, and all such thynges as are secrete and not loked for, haue I learned.

For the worcke master of all thynges hath taught me wysdome. In hyr is the spyrete of vnderstandynge which is holy, manyfolde, one onely, sotyll, curteous, discrete, quyck, vndefyled, playne, swete, louynge the thynge that is good, sharpe, which forbydden not to do well, gentle, kynde, stedfast, sure, free: hauynge all vertues, circumspecte in all thynges: receauynge all spyretes of vnderstondynge, beynge cleane, and sharpe. For wysdome is nymbler yet then all nymbley thynges: she goeth thorow, and attayneth to all thynges, because of hyr clennes. For she is the breth of the power of God, and a pure cleane erpressynge of the clearnes of Almyghtye God. Therfore can no vndefyled thynge come in to her. * For she is yͭ brightnes of the euerlastynge lyght, the vndefyled myrroure of the maiesty of God, and the ymage of his goodnesse. And for so much as she is one, she maye do all thynges: and beynge stedfast herselfe, she renueth all, and amonge the people conueyeth she herself in to the holy soules. She maketh Gods frendes, and Prophetes:

God loueth no man, but hym in whom wysdome dwelleth. For she is more beutyful then the Sonne, and geueth more lyght then the starres, and the daye is not to be compared vnto her: for vpon the daye commeth wyght. But wyckednesse can not ouercome wysdome, and folyshnes maye not be lyth her.

The. viii. Chapter.

Wysdome reacheth from one ende to another myghtely, and louingly doth she ordre all thynges. I haue loued her, and laboured for her euen fro my youth vp: I sought my dilygence to mary myself with her, such loue had I vnto hyr bewtye. Who so hath the company of God, commendeth hyr more hyr, yee the LORDE of all thynges himself loueth her. For she is the scolemaistres of the nurtour of God, and the chosen of hys workes. Yf a man wolde desyre ryches in thys lyfe, what is rycher then wysdome, that worketh al thynges? Thou wilt haue: vnderstandynge worketh. What is it amonge all thynges, that worketh more then wysdome? yf a man loue vertue, and ryghteousnes, let hym labour for wysdome, for she hath greate vertues. And why? she teacheth sobernes and prudence, ryghteousnes and strength, which are such thynges as men can haue nothynge more profytable in theyr lyfe. Yf a man desyre much knowlege, she can tell the thynges that are past, and discerne things for to come: she knoweth the subtilties of wordes, and can expounde darcke sentences. She can tell of tokens and wonderous thynges, or euer they come to passe, and the ordres of all tymes and ages. So I purposed after this maner: I wyll take her vnto my company, and comon louyngly wyth her, no doute she shall geue me good councel and speake comfortably vnto me in my care fulnes and greefe. For hyr sake shall I be wel and honestly taken amonge the comõs, and I shall of the councell. Though I be ponge yet shall I haue sharpe vnderstandynge: so that I shall be maruelous in the syght of greate men, and the faces of prynces shall wonder at me. * Whan I holde my tonge, they shall abyde my leysure: whan I speake, they shall lode vpõ me: and yf I talke much they shal laye theyr hãdes vpõ theyr mouth. Moreouer, by the meanes of her I shall optayne immortalyte, and leaue behynde me an euerlastynge memorial, amonge them that come after me. I shall set the people in order, and the nacions shalbe subdued vnto

me. Horrible tyrauntes shalbe afrayed, whã they do but heare of me: amonge the multitude I shalbe counted good, and myghtie in battayll. Whan I come home, I shal fynde rest with her: for hyr company hath no bytternes, and hyr felowshyp hath no tediousnesse, but myrth and ioye.

Now whan I consydered these thynges by myself, and pondered them in my hart, how that to be ioyned vnto wysdome, is immortalyte, and greate pleasure to haue hyr frendshippe: how that in the workes of hyr handes are infinite ryches: how that, who so kepeth company with her shalbe wyse: and that he which talketh with her, shall come to honoure: I wente aboute seekinge, to get her vnto me. For I was a lad of a ryght wyt, and had a good vnderstandynge.

But whan I grewe to more vnderstandynge, I came to an vndefyled body. Neuertheles whan I perceaued that I coulde not kepe myself chaste, * excepte God gaue it me (and that was a poynte of wysdome also, to knowe whose gift it was) I stepte vnto the LORDE, and besought hym, and wyth my whole hart, I sayde after this maner: Iacob.1.b.

The.ix. Chapter.

O God of my fathers, & * LORDE of mercies, & thou that hast made al thynges with thy worde, & ordeined man thorow thy wysdome, that he shulde haue dominiõ ouer ỹ creature, which thou hast made, that he shulde ordre the worlde accordinge to equyte & ryghteousnes, and execute iudgment wt a trew hart) geue me wysdom, which is euer aboute thy seate, & put me not out frõ amõge thy children: for * I thy seruaunt, & sonne of thy handmaide, am a feble person, of a shorte tyme, & to ponge to the vnderstandyng of iudgment and the lawes. And though a mã be neuer so perfecte amonge the children of men, yet yf thy wysdome be not with hym, he shall be nothynge regarded. * But thou hast chosen me to be a king vnto thy people, and the iudge of thy sonnes and doughters. 3.Reg.3.b & Gene.1. So shall my workes be acceptable, and then shall I gouerne thy people ryghteously, and be worthy to syt in my fathers seate. * For what man is he, that maye knowe the councell of God? ¶ And why? a mortall and corruptible body is heuy vnto ꝑ soule, * and the earthy mansion kepeth downe the vnderstandinge that musseth vpon many thynges. Very hardly can we discerne the thynges that are vpon earth and greate labour haue we, or we can fynde ꝑ thynges which are before oure eyes: Who wil then seke out the grounde of the thynges that are done in heauen? Oh LORDE who can haue knowlege of thy vnderstandinge, and meaninge, excepte thou geue wysdome, and sende thy holy goost from aboue? that the wayes of them which are vpon earth maye be reformed: that men maye learne the thynges that are pleasaunt vnto the, and be preserued thorow wysdome.

The.x. Chapter.

Wysdome preserued the fyrst mā, whom * God made a father of the worlde, whan he was created alone, brought hym out of hys offence, toke hym out of the moulde of the earth, and gaue hym power to rule all thynges. * Whan the vnryghteous wente awaye in his wrath from this wysdō the brotherheade perysshed thorow ꝑ wrath of murthur. * Agayne, whan the water destroyed the whole worlde, wysdome preserued the ryghteous thorow a poore tre, wherof she was gouerner herself. * Moreouer whan wyckednes had gotten the vpperhande, so that the nations were pufft vp with pryde, she knewe, the ryghteous, preserued hym fautlesse vnto God, and layed vp sure mercy for his chyldren. * She preserued the ryghteous, whan he fled from the vngodly that perysshed, what tyme as the fyre fell down vpō ꝑ fiue cities: Like as yet this daye the vnfrutefull, wayst and smokynge londe geueth testymony of theyr wyckednesse: yee the vnrype and vntymely frutes that growe vpon the trees.

And for a token of a remembraunce of the vnfaythfull soule, there standeth a pyller of salt. For all such as regarded not wysdome, gat not only this hurte, that they knewe not the thynges which were good, but also left behynde them vnto men, a memorial of theyr folyshnes: so that in the thynges wherein they sinned, they coulde not be hyd. But as for such as take hede vnto wysdome, she shall delyuer them from sorowe.

* Whan the ryghteous fledde because of his brothers wrath, wysdome led hym the ryght waye, shewed hym the kyngdome of God, gaue hym knowlege of holy thynges, made hym ryche in his laboures, & brought to passe the thynges that he wēte aboute. In the deceatfulnes of such as defrauded hym, she stode by hym, and made hym ryche. She saued hym from the enemyes, and defended hym from the deceauers. She made hym stronge in battayll, and gaue hym the victory, that he myght knowe, how that wysdome is stronger then all thynges. * Whan the ryghteous was solde, she forsoke hym not, but delyuered hym from synners. She wente downe with hym in to the doungeon, and layed hym not in the bandes: * Tyll she had brought hym the cepter of ꝑ realme and power against those that oppressed hym As for them that had accused hym, she declared them to be lyers, and brought hym to perpetuall worshyppe.

stode agynst their ennyes, and were auenged of their aduersaries. * Whā they were thyrstie, they called vpon the, and water was geuen them out of the roke, & their thyrst slaked out of the harde stone. For by the thinges, where thorowe their ennyes were punyshed, were thy helped in their nede. For vnto the enemies thou gauest mans blode in steade of lyuynge water. And where as they had scarcenesse in the rebuke when their children were slayne, thou gauest vnto thine owne a plentyous water vnlooked for: declaringe by the thyrst that was at that tyme, how thou woldest bringe thine owne vnto honour, and slaye their aduersaries. * For whan they were tryed & nourtured with fatherly mercy, they knoleged how the vngodly were iudged, and punyshed thorow the wrath of God. These hast thou exhorted as a father, and proued them: but vnto the other thou hast bene a dredefull kynge layed hard to their charge, and damned thē. Whether they were absent or present, their punyshment was a lyke. For their grefe was dubble: namely mournige, and y remembraunce of thinges past. But whē they perceaued that their punishmētes were thē good, they thought vpon the LORDE, and wondered at y ende. For at the last they helde much of him, of whō in y outcastinge they thought scorne, as of an abiecte. Neuertheless y righteous dyd not so when they were thirsty: but euen like as y though of their foolish were, so was also their wyckednes. * Where as certayne mē now (thorow errour) dyd worshippe dōme serpentes & braine beastes, thou sandest a multitude of dome beastes vpō thē for a vēgeaūce, y they might knowe, that loke where withal a mā synneth, by the same also shall he be punished. * For vnto thy almyghty hande, y made the worlde of naught, it was not vnpossible, to sende amonge them an heape of Beers, or woode liōs, or cruel beastes of a straūge kynde, such as are vnknowne, or spoute fyre, or cast out a smokige breth, or shote horrible sparkes out of their eyes: which might not only destroye them with hurtinge, but also kyll them with their horrible sight. yee without these beastes might they haue ben slayne with one winde, beynge persecuted of their owne workes, and scatered abrode thorow the breth of thy power.

Neuertheless thou hast ordred al thinges in measure, nōbre & weyght. For thou hast euer had greate strength and might, & who maye withstonde y power of thyne armē?

And whyle lyke as y small thinge that y balaunce weyeth, so is the worlde before y: yee as a droppe of the mornynge dew, that falleth downe vpon the earth. Thou hast mercy vpon all, for thou hast power of all thinges: * and makest the as though thou sawest not the synnes of mē, because they shulde amende. For thou louest all the thynges y are, and hatest none of thē whom thou hast made: nether dydest thou ordeyne or make ony thynge of euell will. Rom. 2.d

How might ony thinge endure, yf it were not thy wil? Or how coulde ony thynge be preserued excepte it were called of the? But thou sparest all, for al are thyne, O LORD, thou louer of soules.

The.xii. Chapter.

O LORDE, how gracious & swete is thy spirite in al thinges: Therfore chastenest thou thē measurably that go wronge, and warnest them, concernynge y thynges wherin they offende: thou speakest vnto them (O LORDE) & exhortest thē to leaue their wyckednes, and to put their trust in y. * As for those olde inhabiters of thy holy londe, thou mightest not awaye with them, for they commytted abhominable workes agaynst the: as witchcraft, sorcery and Idolatry: they slew their owne childrē without mercy: they dyd eate vp mēs bowels, & deuoured y bloude: yee because of such abhominacions, misbeleues & offeringes, thou slewest the fathers of the desolate soules by the handes of oure fathers: that the londe which thou louest aboue all other, might be a dwellinge for the children of God. Deut. 9.d 12.d.18.b

Neuertheles thou sparedest thē also (as men) and sandest the forerūners of thyne hoost, euen hornettes to destroye them out by lytle and lytle. Not that thou wast vnable to subdue the vngodly vnto y righteous in battayl, or with cruel beastes, or with one rough word to destroye thē together: * But thy mynde was to dryue thē out by lytle and litle, geuynge thē tyme and place to amende knowynge wel, that it was an vnrighteous nation and wicked of nature, & that their thought might neuer be altered. For it was a cursed sede from the begynnynge, & feared no man: yet hast thou pardoned their synnes. For who wyl saye vnto the: why hast thou done y? For so much then as thou art righteous thy selfe, thou ordrest al thinges righteously, Iob. 9 a * and punishest euen him that hath not deserued to be punyshed, and takest him for a straunger and an aleaunt in the londe of thy power. For thy power is the begynnynge of ryghteousnes: and because thou art LORDE of all thinges, therfore art thou gracious vnto all. When men thinke the not to be of full strength, thou declarest thy power: and boldly delyuerest thou them ouer that knowe ꝑ not. But thou LORDE of power iudgest quyetly, and ordrest vs with greate worshippe, for thou mayest do as thou wilt.

D By such workes now hast thou taught thy people, that a mã also shulde be iust and louynge: and hast made thy childrẽ to be of a good hope: for euẽ whẽ thou iudgest, thou geuest rowme to amende from synnes. For in so much as thou hast punyshed, and with such dyligence delyuered the enemies of thy seruaũtes, which were worthy to dye (where thorowe thou gauest them tyme and place of amẽdement that they myght turne from their wyckednes) with how greate diligẽce thẽ punyshest thou thyne owne children, vnto whose fathers thou hast swore and made cõuenaũtes of good promyses? No where as thou doest but chasten vs, thou punyshest oure enemyes dyuerse wayes: to the intent ꝑ whan we punyshe, we shulde remẽbre thy goodnesse: & whan we oure selues are punyshed, to put oure trust in thy mercy.

Sapi. 11. c Rom. 1 c that they worshipped. * For they wente astraye very longe in the waye of errour, and helde the beastes (which euẽ their enemyes despysed) for goddes, lyuynge as children of no vnderstãdinge. Therfore hast thou sent a scornefull punyshment amonge them, as amonge the children of ignorauncc. As for such as wold not be reformed by those scornes and rebukes, they felt the worthy punyshment of God. For the thynges that they suffred, they bare them vnpatiently, deynge not content in them but vnwyllinge. And whan they perysshed by the same thinges ꝑ they toke for goddes, they knowleged then, that there was but one true God whom afore they wolde not knowe, therfore came ꝑ ende of their dãpnacion vpon them.

VAyne are all men, whiche haue
not the knowlege of God: * as were they that out of the good thynges which are sene, knewe
not hym, that of hymselfe is euer lastinge. Nother toke they so much regarde of the workes that are made, as to knowe,
who was the craftesman of them: * But some toke the fyre, some the wynde or ayre, some the course of the starres, some the water
some toke Sonne and Moone, or the lightes of heauẽ which rule ꝑ earth for goddes.
But though they had such pleasure in their beuty, ꝑ they thought thẽ to haue bene goddes: yet shuld they haue knowne, how much more fayrer he is that made them. For the maker of beuty hath ordened all these thinges. Or yf they maruayled at ꝑ power and workes of them, they shulde haue perceaued therby, that he which made these thinges, is myghtyer then they.

For by the greatnesse & bewty of the cra-B
ture, the maker therof maye playnely be knowne. Not withstondinge they are ꝑ lesse to be blamed, that sought God and wolde haue founde him, and yet myssed. And why? for so much as they wente aboute in hys workes and sought after them, it is a token that they regarded and helde much of hys workes that are sene: howbeyt they are not wholy to be excused. For yf their vnderstondinge & knowlege was so greate, that they coulde discerne ꝑ worlde and ꝑ creatures, why dyd they not rather fynde out ꝑ LORDE therof?

But vnhappie are they, and amonge the dead is their hope, that call thẽ God which are but the workes of mens handes: golde, syluer and the thinge, that is founde out by connynge, the similitude of beastes, or ony vaine stone ꝑ hath ben made by hand of old.
* Or as whan a carpenter cutteth downe a

Then goeth he and offreth of his goodes vnto it for his chyldren and for his wyfe, he ...eth helpe at it, he areth councell at it: he is not ashamed to speake vnto it that hath no soule: for health he maketh his petition vnto hym ỳ is sicke: for lyfe, he prayeth vnto him that is dead: he calleth vpon him for helpe, that is not able to helpe him self: and to sende him a good iourneye, he prayeth him that maye not go. And in all the thinges that he taketh in hande (whether it be to optayne ony thynge or to worke) he prayeth vnto him that cã do no maner of good.

The.xiiii. Chapter

AGayne, another mã purposynge to sayle, & beginnige to take his iourney thorow ỳ ragynge see, calleth for helpe vnto a stock that is farre weaker, then ỳ tre ỳ beareth him. For as for it, coueteousnesse of money hath founde it, and ỳ craftesman made it with his connynge. But thy prouydence (O father) gouerneth all thynges from ỳ begynnynge. * for thou hast made waye in the see, & a sure path in the middest of the wawes: declarynge therby, that thou hast power to helpe in all thynges, yee though a man wẽte to the see without shippe. Neuertheles, that ỳ workes of thy wysdome shulde not be vayne, * thou hast caused an arke to be made: & therfore do men cõmytte their lyues to a small pece of wood passinge ouer ỳ see in a shyppe: & are saued. * For in ỳ olde tyme also whã the proude giauntes perished, he (in whõ the hope was left to increase ỳ worlde) wẽte in to the shippe, which was gouerned thorow thy hande, & left sede behinde him vnto the worlde. For happie is ỳ tre, where thorow ryghteousnes commeth: but cursed is ỳ ymage of wood, ỳ is made with handes, * yee both it & ỳ made it: he, because he made it, and it, because it was called God, where as it is but a fraple thynge. * For ỳ vngodly & hys vngodlynes are both like abhominable vnto God. Euen so ỳ worke and he that made it also, shal be punyshed together. Therfore shall there a plage come vpon the ymages of ỳ Heithen: for out of the creature of God they are become an abhominacion, a temptacion vnto the soules of men, and a snare for the fete of the onwyse. And why? ỳ sekinge out of ymages is ỳ begynnynge of whordome, and ỳ bringinge vp of them is ỳ destruction of life. For they were not from the begynnynge, nother shall they contynue for euer. The welthy ydelnes of men hath foũde them out vpon earth, therfore shall they come shortly to an ende. Whẽ a father mourned for his sonne that was taken awaye frõ him, he made him an ymage (in all ỳ haust) of his dead sonne: & so beganne to worshippe him as God, which was but a dead mã, & ordened his seruauntes to offre vnto him. Thus by processe of tyme and thorow lõge costume, this errour was kepte as a lawe, & tyrauntes cõpelled men by vyolence to honour ymages. As for those ỳ were so farre of, ỳ men myghte not worshippe them presently, their picture was brought frõ farre (like the ymage of a kynge whõ they wolde honoure) to the intent that with greate diligẽce they might worshippe him which was farre of, as though he had bene present. Agayne the singular connynge of the craftesman gaue the ignorant also a greate occasion to worshippe ymages. For the workmã wyllinge to do him a pleasure that set hym a worke, laboured with all his connynge to make the ymage of the best fashion. And so (thorow the hewty of the worke) the comon people was deceaued, in so much that they toke him now for a God, which a litle afore was but honored as a man. And this was the errour of mans lyfe, whan men (other for to serue their owne affections, or to do some pleasure vnto kynges) assigned vnto stones & stockes the name of God, which ought to be geuen vnto no man.

Moreouer, this was not ynough for them that they erred in the knowlege of God: but where as they lyued in the greate warres of ignorannce, those many and greate plages called they peace. For other * they slewe their owne children & offred thẽ, or dyd sacrifice in ỳ night seasõ, or els helde vnreasonable watches: so ỳ they kepte nother lyfe nor mariage cleane: but other one slewe another to death maliciously, or els greued his neighboure w adoutrie. And thus were al thinges myxte together: bloude, manslaughter, theft, dissimulacion, corruption, vnfaithfulnesse, sedicion, periury, disquietinge of good me, vnthãkfulnes, defylinge of soules, chaũginge of byrth, vnstedfastnesse of mariage,

Deut. 12.b Iere. 7.a and. 19.d

myſo:dre of aduoutrie and vncléneſſe. And why the honourynge of abhominable ymages, is the cauſe, the begynnynge, and ende of all euell. For they that worſhippe Idols, eyther they are madde whan they be merry, or prophecie lyes, or lyue vngodly, or els lightly forſweare thé ſelues. For in ſo much as their truſt is in the Idols (whiche haue nother ſoule nor vnderſtondynge) though they ſweare falſely, yet they thynke it ſhall not hurte them.

Therfore commeth a greate plage vpon them, and that worthely: for they haue an euell opinió of God geuynge hede vnto Idols ſwearynge vniuſtly to deceaue, and deſpyſynge ryghteouſnes. For their ſwearynge is no vertue, but a plage of them that ſynne, and goeth euer with the offence of the vngodly.

The.xv. Chapter.

A BUt thou (O oure God) art ſwete, longe ſufferynge and true, & in mercy ordreſt thou all thynges. Though we ſynne, yet are we thyne, for we knowe thy ſtrength. yf we ſynne not, then are we ſure that thou regardeſt vs. For to knowe the, is perfecte righteouſnes: yee to knowe thy ryghteouſnes and powet, is the rote of immortalite. As for the thynge that men haue foũde out thorow theyr euell ſcience. it hath not deceaued vs: as the payntinge of the picture (and vnprofitable laboure) and carued ymage, with dyuerſe colours, whoſe ſight entyſeth the ignorannt: ſo that he honoureth and loueth the picture of a dead ymage, that hath no ſoule.

B Neuertheles, they that loue ſuche euell thynges are worthy of death: they that truſt in them, they that make them, they that loue them, and they that honoure them. The potter alſo taketh & tempereth ſoft earth, laboureth it and geue it the faſhion of a veſſell, what ſo euer ſerueth for oure vſe, and ſo of one pece of claye he maketh ſome cleane veſſell for ſeruyce, and ſome contrary. But where to euery veſſel ſerueth, that knoweth ỹ potter hymſelfe. So with his vayne laboure he maketh a God of the ſame claye: thys doth euen he, whiche a lytle afore was made of earth hymſelfe, and within a lytle whyle after (whan he dyeth) turneth to earth agayne.

C Notwithſtandinge, he careth not the more becauſe he ſhal laboure nor becauſe hys lyfe is ſhorte but ſtryueth to excell goldſmithes, the ſyluer ſmythes, and copper ſmythes, and taketh it for an honoure to make vayne thynges. For his harte is aſhes, hys hope is but vayne earth and his lyfe is more vyle then claye: for ſo much as he knoweth not his owne maker, that gaue hym his ſoule to worke, and breathed in hym the breth of lyfe. They counte oure lyfe but a paſtyme, and oure conuerſacion to be but a market, and that men ſhulde euer be getting, yee and that by euell meanes. Now he ỹ of earth maketh fraple veſſell and ymages knoweth himſelf to offende aboue al other.

All the enemies of thy people & that hold them in ſubiection, are vnwyſe, vnhappie and erceadynge proude vnto their owne ſoules: * for they iudge all the Idols of the Heythen to be goddes, whiche nether haue eyeſight to ſe, nor noſes to ſmell, nor eares to heare, nor fingers of handes for to grope and as for their fete, they are to ſlowe to go. For man made them, and he that hath but a borowed ſpirete faſhioned them. But no mã can make a God lyke vnto him: for ſeynge he is but mortall himſelf, it is but mortall that he maketh with vnrighteous handes. He hymſelf is better thé they whom he worſhippeth, for he lyued though he was mortall, but ſo dyd neuer they. yee they worſhippe beaſtes alſo, which are mooſt miſerable: for compare thynges that can not fele vnto them, and they are worſe then thoſe. yet is there not one of theſe beaſtes, that ỹ hys ſight can beholde ony good thinge, nother haue they geue prayſe nor thãke vnto God,

The.xvi. Chapter.

FOr theſe and ſuch other thynges haue they ſuffered worthy punyſhment, and thorow ỹ multitude of beaſtes are they toted out. In ſtede of the which punyſhmentes thou haſt graciouſly ordred thine owne people, and geuen them their deſyre that they longed for: a new and ſtraũge taſte. * preparynge them quayles to be their meate: to the intent that (by the thynges which were ſhewed and ſent vnto thé) they that were ſo gredy of meate, might be withdrawen euen from the deſyre that was neceſſary. But theſe within ſhorte tyme were brought vnto pouerte, and taſted a newe meate. For it was requiſite that (without ony excuſe) deſtruccion ſhulde come vpon thoſe which vſed tyranny, and to ſhewe onely vnto the other, how their enemies were deſtroyed. * For whan the cruell woodneſſe

the beastes came vpon the, they perysshed
through the stinges of the cruell serpentes.

Notwithstondynge thy wrath endured
not perpetually, but they were put in feare
for a lytle season, that they might be refourmed, hauynge a token of saluacion to remēbrance of the commaundement of thy lawe. For he that conuerted, was not healed by the thyn-ge that he sawe, but by the. O sauioure of all men. In this thou shewedest thine enemyes, that it is thou, which delyuerest from all euyll. As for them, * whan they were bytten with grasshoppers and flyes, they dyed, for they were worthy to perysh by such: But nether the tethe of dragons, nor of venymous
worms ouer came thy chyldren, for thy mercy was euer by them and helped the. Therfore were they punysshed to remembre thy wor-
des, but hastely were they healed agayne:
lest they shulde fall in to so depe forgetful-
nesse, that they might not vse thy helpe.

It was neither herbe nor plaister that restored
them to health, but thy worde (O LORDE)
which healeth al thinges. It is thou (LOR-DE) that hast the power of lyfe and death:
thou leadest vnto deathes dore, and bryngest vp agayne. But man thorow wycked-nes slayeth his owne soule, and when hys
breth goeth forth, it turneth not agayne, ne fetcheth the soule that is vanyshed awaye: It is not possible to escape thy hande. For the vngodly that wold not knowe
the, were punysshed by the strength of thyne arme: with straunge waters, haples and rayne were they persecuted, & thorow fyre
were they consumed. For it was a wonderous thinge, that fyre might do more then water which quencheth al thinges: but the worlde
is the auenger of the righteous. Some tyme was the fyre so tame, that the beastes which were sent to punysh the vngodly, brent not:
and that because they shulde see and knowe
that they were persecuted with the punysh-ment of God. And somtyme brent the fyre in the water on euery syde, that it myght de-stroye the vnrighteous nacion of the earth.
Agayne, thou hast fed thyne owne people
with angels foode, & set the bread ready fro heuen without their laboure) beynge very pleasaunt & well gusted. And to shewe thy ryches & swetenesse vnto thy chyldren, thou ga
ue euery one their delyre, so that euery man might take what lyked him best. But the fyre abode the violence of the fyre, & remayned not: that they might knowe, that the encrease in the hayle & rayne, destroyed the fruyte of the enemyes: the fyre also forgatt his strength agayne, that the righteous might be norished. For the creature that serueth the (which art the maker) is fearce in punishinge the vn-righteous, but it is easy & gētle to do good, vnto such as put their trust in the. Therfore C dyd all thynges alike at the same tyme, and were all obedient vnto thy grace, which is the nose of all thinges, according to the de

syre of the that had nede therof: that thy chyldren (O LORDE) whō thou louest, might knowe, * that it is not nature & the encrease of frutes Deut. 8. d that feedeth me, but that it is thy worde, which pre- Mat. 4. a serueth the that put their trust in the. For loke what might not be destroyed of the fyre, as soone as it was warmed with a lytle Sōne beame, it melted: that all men might knowe, that thankes ought to be geuen vnto the before the Sōne ryse, & that thou oughtest to be worshipped before the daye sprynge. For the hope of the vnthankfull shal melt awaye as the winter
yse, & perishe as water, that is not necessary.

re, that will not be informed of

vnrighteous thought to haue thy holy people in subiection, they were bounde with the bandes of darknes & longe night, shutt vn
der the rofe, thinkinge to escape the euerlastinge wysdome. And whyle they thought to be hyd in the darknesse of their synnes, they were scattered abrode in the very myddest of the darck couerynge of forgetfulnes, put to horrible feare & wonderously vexed. For the corner where they where, myght not kepe them from feare: because the sounde came downe and vexed them: yee many terryble
and straunge visions made them afrayed.

No power of the fyre myght geue them B
lyght, nether might the cleare flammes of the starres lighten that horrible night. For there appeated vnto them a sodane fyre, be ynge very dredefull: At the (which whan they sawe nothynge) they were so afrayed, that they thought the thinge which they sawe, to be the more fearfull. * As for the sorcery and enchaū- Exo. 7. b
tement that they vsed, it came to derision, &
the proude wysdome was brought to shame. For they that promysed to driue awaye
the fearfulnes and dread from the sycke
soules where sycke for feare them selues, &
that with some. And though none of the wōders feare them, yet were they afrayed at the beastes which came vpon them, and at the hissynge of the serpentes: In so much þ with tremblinge they swowned, and sayde they sawe not the ayre, whiche no man yet maye escape.

C For it is an heuy thinge, whã a mans owne cõscience beareth recorde of his wyckednes and condempneth hym. And whye a vered and wounded cõscience, taketh euer
Psal.45.a cruel thinges in hãde. * Fearfulnes is nothynge els, but a declaringe that a man seketh helpe and defence, to answere for hymselfe. And loke how much lesse the hope is wtin, the more is the vncertaynte of þ matter, for the which he is punyshed. But they that came in the myghtye nyght, slepte the slepe þ fell vpon them from vnder and from aboue, somtyme were they afrayed thorow the feare of the wonders, and somtyme they were so weake, þ they swowned wal: for an hapstie & sodane fearfulues came vpon the. Afterwarde, of ony of the had fallen, he was kepte & shut in prison, but without chaines. But yf ony dwelt in a vyllage, yf he had bẽ an hyrd or husbandman, he suffred intolerable necessite: for they were al bounde with one chayne of darcknesse.

D Whether it were a blasynge wynde, or a swete songe of þ byrdes amonge the thicke braunches of the trees, or the vehemence of hastie rũninge water, or greate noyse of the fallynge downe of stones, or the playenge & rũnynge of beastes whõ they sawe not, or þ mightie noyse of roarynge beastes, or the sownde that answereth agayne in the hye mountaynes: it made them swowne for very feare. For al the earth shyned with cleare lyght, and no man was hyndered in hys laboure. Onely vpon them there fell a heuy nyght, and ymage of darcknesse that was to come vpon the. yee they were vnto themselues the moost heuy & horrible darknesse.

The.xviii. Chapter.

NEuertheles thy saynts had a very greate light (and the enemyes herde their voice, but they sawe not the figure of the) And Exo.13.a because they suffred not þ same thynges, they magnifyed the: and they that were vered afore (because they were not hurte now) thanked the, and desought the (o God) that there might be a differrence. *. Therfore had they a burnynge pyller of fyre to lede them in the vnknowne waye, & thou gauest the the Sõne for a fre gift without ony hurte. Reason it was, þ they shulde want lyght & to be put in the prison of darknes, which kepte thy cyldren in captyuyte, by whom the vncorrupte light of the lawe of the world was for be to geue. * Whã they thought to slaye the babes of þ righteous (one beynge layed out, and yet preserued to be leder vnto the other, * thou draughtest out þ whole multitude of the children, and destroydest these in þ myghtye water. Of þ nyght were oure fathers certified afore, þ they knowenge vnto what ooches they had geuen credence, nyght be of good cheare. Thus thy people receaued þ health of the ryghteous, but þ vngodly were destroyed. For lyke as thou hast hurte oure enemyes, so hast thou promoted vs whom thou callededst afore. For the ryghteous children of þ good mẽ offred secretly and ordred þ lawe of ryghteousnes vnto vnite: þ the one shulde receaue good and euell in lyke maner, synginge prayses vnto þ father of all men. Agayne, there was herde an vnconuenient voyce of þ enemyes, and a pitrous crye for children that were bewayled. The maister & the seruaunt were punyshed alyke, þ wronge man and þ kynge suffred in like maner. For they all together had innumerable þ dyed one death.

* Nether were the lyuynge sufficient to bury the dead, for in þ twincklinge of an eye the noblest nacion of them was destroyed. As oft as God helped the afore, yet wolde they not make the beleue: but in the destruction of þ fyrst borne they knowleged, that it was þ people of God. For whyle all thynges were stil, and whan þ nyght was in þ myddest of hir course, thy Almyghtie worde (OLORDE) leapte downe from heauen out of thy royall trone, as a rough man of warre, in þ myddest of þ londe that was destroyed: and þ sharpe swearde of þ fourmed thy straightest maundement, standynge and fyllinge all thynges wyth death: yee it stode vpon the earth and reached þ heauen. The syghte of the euell dreames vered them sodenly, & fearfulnesse came vpon them vnwares.

Then laye there one here, another there half dead half quyck, and shewed the cause of his death. For the visions that vered the, shewed the these thinges afore: so that they were not ignorãt, wherfore they perished.

The tentacion of death touched the righteous also, and amonge the multitude in þ wyldernesse there was insurrection, but thy wrath endured not lõge. * For the blamelesse man wente in all the hayst, and toke þ battayll vpon him, brought forth þ weapen of his mynistracion: euen prayer and the ceremonies of reconcilinge, set hymself against ꝯ wrath, and so brought the mystery to an endeclaringe therby, that he was thy ser-uaunt. For he ouercame not the multitude with bodely power, nor with weapens of warre: but with the worde he subdued hym

that sent him, puttynge ꝯ remembraunce
of the oth and cõuenaũt made vnto the fathers. For whan the dead were falle downe by heapes one vpon another, he stode in the middis, quenched the wrath, and parted
the waye vnto the lyuynge. And why? in his longe garment was all the hole world, and in the foure rowes of the stones was ꝯ glorye of the fathers grauen and thy mately
hewen in the crosune of his heade. Vnto whom the destroyer gaue place, and was afrayed of them: for it was onely a tetacion
and taste of wrath.

The.xix.Chapter.

For the vngodly, the wrath
came vpon them without mercy vnto the ende. For he knewe before what shulde happen vnto them: how that (whan they had permitted to let them go, and had sent them out with greate diligence) they wolde
repent and folowe vpon them. * For whã
they were yet mournynge and makinge la-mentacion by the graues of the dead, they ymagined another foolishnes: so that they pursued them in their flyenge, whom they had cast afore with prayer. Worthy ne-cessite did brynge them vnto this ende,
and they had cleane forgotten the thynges that happened vnto them afore. But ꝯ they might take vengeaunce of their punyshment,
that remayned for to be fulfylled vpon them
with tormentes: that thy people might haue a meruaylous passage thorow, and that they might fynde a straunge death.

For all creature fashioned a-gayn of the new according to the wyll of their maker, obeyenge thy commaundemen that thy children might be kepe without harme. For ꝯ cloude ouershadowed their tentes, and the drye earth appeared, where afore was water: so that in ꝯ reed see there was a playne waye without impediment, and the violent hepe became a grene felde: werr thy hande the people wente that were defended with thy hande, seynge thy wonderous and meruaylous workes. For as the horses, so were they led, and leapte like lambes, pray-synge the (O LORDE) which haddest delyuered them. And why? they were yet mynde full of the thynges, that happened whyle
they dwelt in the londe: how the grounde brought forth flyes in steade of cattel, & how the ryuer scrauled with ꝯ multitude of frog-
ges in steade of fyshes.

* But at the last they sawe a new creacion C of byrdes, what tyme as they were decea- Exo. 16.f.

For whan they were speakinge of their appetite, the quayles came vpon them from the see, and punyshmentes came vpon ꝯ sinners, not without the tokens which came topasse afore by the vehemence of ꝯ stormes:
for they suffered worthely after dynge to their wickednesse, they dealt so abhominably &
churlishly with straungers. Some receaued
no vnknowne gestes, some brought straũgers in to bondage that dyd them good. Besyde all these thinges there were some, that not only receaued no straungers with their welles, but persecuted those also, * ꝯ dyd thẽ 2. Joh. 3

Therfore were they punyshed with blynd-nesse, * like as they that were couered with Gen. 19.f.

teous: so that euery one sought the intraunce
of his doze.

Thus the elementes turned in to them D
selues, lyke as when one tune is chaunged vpon an instrument of musyck, and yet all the residue kepe their melody: which maye
easely be perceaued, by the sight of the thin-ges that are come to passe. The drye londe was turned in to a watery and the thynge
that afore swamme in the water, wente now vpon ꝯ drye grounde. The fyre had power in the water (contrary to his owne vertue) and
the water forgat his owne kynde to quench.
Againe the flammes of the noysome beastes

neither melted they ꝯ yse, which eis mel-teth lightly. In al thinges hast thou promoted thy people (O LORDE) & brought the to honoure:
thou hast not despy-
sed them, but al
waye and in al
places hast thou
stonde by them.

The ende of the boke of wysdome.

Ecclesiasticus called Jesus Syrac

The prologe of Jesus the sonne of Syrac vnto his boke.

MAny and greate men haue declared wysdome vnto vs out of the lawe, out of the prophetes & out of other that folowed them. In the which thynges Israel ought to be commended, by the reason of doctrine and wysdome. Therfore they that haue it and reade it, shulde not onely them selues be wyse there of, but serue other also with teachinge and wrytinge.

After that my graundfather Jesus had geuen diligent labour to reade the lawe, the prophetes and other bokes that were left vs of oure fathers, and had wel exercised himself therin: he purposed also to wryte some thynge of wysdome and good maners, to the intent they which were wyllinge to learne and to be wyse, might haue the more vnderstandinge, and be the more apte to leade a good conuersacion.

Wherfore I exhorte you to receaue it louyngly, to reade it with diligence, & to take it in good worthe though oure wordes be not so eloquent as the famous oratours. For the thynge that is wrytten in the Hebrewe tunge, soundeth not so wel whā it is translated in to another speache. Not onely this boke of myne, but also the lawe, the prophetes, & other bokes sounde farre other wyse, then they do, whan they are spoken in their owne language.

Now in the .xxxviii. yeare when I came in to Egipte in the tyme of Ptolome Euergetes, and continued there all my life, I gat libertie to reade and wryte many good thinges. Wherfore I thought it good and necessary, to bestowe my diligence and trauayle to interprete this boke. And cōsiderynge that I had tyme, I laboured and dyd my best to perfourme this boke, & to bringe it vnto lyght: that the straūgers also which are disposed to learne, might applye thē selues vnto good maners, & lyue accordinge to the lawe of GOD.

What this boke conteyneth.

Chap. i. All wysdome commeth of God, for he one lyde bydeth. The feare of Gods feare.

Chap. ii. An exhortacion vnto patience and to the feare of God.

Chap. iii. A doctrine for children, how they shulde honoure father and mother: and how men ought to be gētle and lowly.

Chap. iiii. Wysdome teacheth to be mercyfull and to synne vnto euery man. What rewarde wysdome geueth to them that loue her and serue her.

Chap. v. Let no man trust in his ryches, let no man leane vpon his owne power, let no man despyse ye mercy and longe sufferynge of God.

Chap. vi. Of true and false frendshippe. And exhortacion to herken vnto wysdome.

Chap. vii. Many goodly lessons and instructions.

Chap. viii. She teacheth to beware of stryfe, to beware of the feare of no man, to auoyde fleterynge, to beware of vnfaithfull and cruell people.

Chap. ix. How men shulde behaue them selues in their wyues, and how the frendshippe ought not to be broken, &c. with many other good lessons.

Chap. x. Of iudges and rulers of the people. How pryde ought to be eschued.

Chap. xi. Many good instructions.

Chap. xii. How and to who a man shulde do good.

Chap. xiii. How the poore shulde kepe himself from the ryche.

Chap. xiiii. The vnhappynesse and wyckednes of sythe vpwardes. An exhortacion to do good & to clene vnto wysdome.

Chap. xv. The profet that commeth of the feare of God and wysdome, which the wicked wyl not receaue.

Chap. xvi. The multitude of cruell children is not good, for the grace of God is not amonge the vngodly. The patience, mercy, and wysdome of God

Chap. xvii. How God made mā, endewed him with gyftes, openynge hys wyll and lawe vnto him: but cho se Israell out of all people.

Chap. xviii. The wysdome of God and sodē of hys workes, which no man maye comprehende. The dayes of man are shorte. God suffereth lōge, & rubbeth and traineth at such as wyll receaue nurture.

Chap. xix. Many good lessons of wysdome.

Chap. xx. When ought to gyue rebuke, to reproue and to rebuke, but not to be cruell, vnkynde or vnkynde. Of sylence and speakinge, and how to beware of lyes.

Chap. xxi. All manner of synnes ought to be eschued. The difference of the wyse and folysh.

Chap. xxii. A foole ought not be reproued nor taught. The fourth Cōmaundement. Of the neighbours and frendes.

Chap. xxiii. A faythfull prayer vnto God, to rule the mouth and tunge & all wycked lustes and wyttes, and the harte from euell thoughtes. Of the great abhominacion abusynge of.

Chap. xxiiii. A commendacion of wysdome.

Chap. xxv. There be wordynge before, vnto an euell perteyne women. Wyckednes, there is nothinge lyke the euell, vngodly and frauelente women.

Chap. xxvi. A commendacion and prayse of a good honest woman, and of the wysdome annexed vnto her.

Chap. xxvii. Many goodly sentences.

Chap. xxviii. Men ought not to take vengeaunce, but euery man to forgeue his neighbour, and not to haue euell will to stryue. What harme commeth of false tunges and slaūderers

Chap. xxix. How and shulde haue compassion & loue vnto their neighbours: how they that lende, ought to behaue them selues ageynst. Of vnthankfull straūgers. How euery man ought to be content with that he hath, & not to be charged vnto other.

Chap. xxx. Who so loueth hys children, nurtereth the, & chastyseth the. Howe to vse a mans selfe in meate and drynke. What harme commeth of vnmesurable dronkennesse and dronke. What profyte and helpe is in temperaūce.

Chap. xxxi. The mysery of the couetous. How men shulde behaue them selfe at the table, and be mesurable in meate and drynke. What harme commeth of vnmesurable dronkennesse and dronke. What profyte and helpe is in temperaūce.

Chap. xxxii. To be lowly to rule and be ruled. How men ought to vse them selues at a feaste. How a man ought to feare God, & to be diligent and faythfull vnto them, that are appointed ouer him. &c. with other good lessons.

Chap. xxxiii. How God ought to be feared, & his lawe kepte, & difference of dayes and of mē. The subiectes of children ought to be holde.

Chap. xxxiii. The hope of ỹ vngodly is vayn: ỹ righteous shalbe preserued, for he putteth his trust in God, which shall not be reuenged with offrynges, but with an in ward lyst.

Chap. xxxv. The offrynge that pleaseth God, is to kepe his commaundementes, to be thankfull, mercifull, & to cease from lyinge. God is the defender of wydowes, fatherlesse, and oppressed, and heareth theyr prayer.

Chap. xxxvi. An earnest prayer vnto God for helpe against the enemyes. The prayse of an honest woman.

Chap. xxxvii. Of true and false frendshipe. Good counsaile ought to be sought at them, which are vertuous & fear God, but first at God himselfe. Of wysdome and counsell.

Chap. xxxviii. Phisitions and medecynes ought not to be dispysed, but vsed as a gift of God: nevertheles God himself is first to be sought in all sykenesse. Men ought to be moderate in mourninge for the dead, and remember them selues also vnto death. Every workman ought to be diligent in his labour, & to please God with his offrynge his bodyly exercises.

Chap. xxxix. Wysdome and the feare of God excell all other thynges. All thynges are made to serue the vngodly.

Chap. xl. The lyfe of man is a battayll. All thynges passe away, but the veryth abydeth for ever. The wretched and lamynge conditions of the vngodly. The lyfe, frendshipe and vngardnesse of the vngodly.

Chap. xli. Death is fearfull vnto the wicked, but comfortable vnto the righteous. The cursynge of the vngodly. A good name is a noble thynge. What ỹ thynges be worthy of shame ought to be ashamed.

Chap. xlvi. The mightynesse of Josue and Caleb. Of the iudges in Israel, vnto ỹ tyme of faythfull Samuel.

Chap. xlvii. Of Nathan, Dauid and Salomon.

Chap. xlviii. Of Elyas, Ezechias and Esay.

Chap. xlix. The actes of good Josias. The decaye of Jerusalem. Of the prophetes and patriarches.

Chap. l. A commendacion of Symeon the sonne of Onias.

Chap. li. A prayer of Jesus Syrach, Wysdome calleth vs vnto her.

The first Chapter.

All wysdome * cometh of God ỹ LORDE, & hath bene euer with him, and is before all tyme. Who hath nombred ỹ sonde of the see, ỹ droppes of the rayne and the dayes of tyme? Who hath measured the height of heauen, ỹ breedth of the earth and the depenesse of the see? Who hath sought out the grounde of Gods wysdome, whiche hath bene before all thinges, * Wysdome hath bene before al thinges, & ỹ vnderstöndinge of prudence from euerlastinge. (Gods worde in the height is ỹ well of wysdome, and the euerlastinge cömaundementes are the entraunce of her.) Vnto whom hath ỹ rote of wysdome bene declared? Or who hath knowne hir wyt? Vnto whom hath the doctryne of wysdome bene discouered and shewed? and who hath vnderstande the manyfolde entraunce of her?

There is one: euen the Hyghest, the maker of all thynges, the Almyghtye, the kynge of power (of who men ought to stonde greatly in awe) which sytteth vpon his trone, beynge a God of dominö: He hath treated her thorow the holy goost: he hath sene her: nombred her, & measured her: He hath poured her out vpon all his workes, and vpon all flesh accordinge to his gift: he geueth hir richely vnto them that loue hym. The feare of the LORDE is worshippe and triumphe, gladnesse, and a ioyfull crowne. The feare of ỹ LORDE maketh a mery harte, geueth gladnesse, ioye & löge lyfe. Who so feareth the LORDE, it shall go wel with hym at the last, and in the daye of his death he shall be blessed.

The loue of God is honorable wysdome: loke vnto who it appeareth, they loue it for they se what wöderous thynges it doth.

* The feare of ỹ LORDE is the beginninge of wysdome, and was made with ỹ faithful in the mothers wombe: it shall go with the chosen wemen, & shalbe knowne of the righteous and faythfull. Who so feareth the LORDE, shall be happie: and whan he hath nede of comforte, he shalbe blessed. To feare God, is the wysdome that maketh rych, and hun-

geth al good with her. She fylleth þ whole house with hir giftes, & the garners wt hir treasure. The feare of þ LORDE is the crowne of wysdome, and geueth plenteous peace and health. He hath sene her and noumbred her, knowlege and vnderstondinge of wysdome hath he poured out as rayne: & the þ holde her fast, hath he brought to honoure.

D The feare of the LORDE is the rote of wysdome, and hir braunches are longe life. (In the treasures of wysdome is vnderstondinge and deuocion of knolege, but wysdome is abhorred of synners.) The feare of þ LORDE dryueth out synne, for he that is without feare, can not be made ryghteous, and his wylful boldnes is his owne destruccion. A patient man wyl suffre vnto the tyme, and then shall he haue the rewarde of ioye. A good vnderstondynge wyl hyde his wordes for a tyme, and many mens lippes shall speake of his wysdome. In the treasures of wysdome is the declaracion of doctrine, but the synner abhorreth the worshipe of God. My sonne yf thou desyre wysdome, kepe the commaundement, and God shall geue her vnto the: for the feare of the LORDE is wysdome and nurtoure, he hath pleasure in fayth and loupnge meknesse, and he shall fyll the treasures therof. Be not obstinate and vnfaythfull to the feare of the LORDE, and come not vnto hym with a dubble hart. Be not an ypocryte in the sight of men, and take good hede what thou speakest. Marke well these thynges, lest thou happen to fall and bringe thy soule to dishonoure, and so God discouer thy secretes, and cast the downe in the myddest of the congregacion: because thou woldest not receaue þ feare of God, and because thy harte is full of faynednesse an dereate.

The.ii. Chapter.

A Myt.4.a. 2.Ty.3.b. 2.Pet.4.b My sonne, * yf thou wilt come in to the seruyce of God, stode fast in ryghteousnesse and feare, & arme thy soule to tentacion: fasten thyne harte, and be patient: bowe downe thine eare, receaue the wordes of vnderstondinge, and shrynke not away whan thou art entysed. Holde the fast vpon God, ioyne thy self vnto hym & suffre, that thy lyfe maye encrease at the last. What so euer happeneth vnto the, receaue it: suffre in heuynesse, & be patient in thy trouble. * For Ecclus.3.a. Wys.17.a like as golde and syluer are tryed in þ fyre, euen so are acceptable men in the fornace of aduersyte. Beleue in God, and he shal helpe the: ordre thy waye a ryght, and put thy trust in him. Holde fast his feare, and growe therin. O ye that feare the LORDE take sure holde of his mercy: shrynke not away from hym, that ye fall not. O ye that feare þ LORDE, beleue hym, and youre rewarde shall not be emptye. O ye that feare the LORDE put youre trust in hym, and mercy shall come vnto you for pleasure. O ye that feare þ LORDE, set youre loue vpon hym, & youre hartes shalbe lyghtened.

Consydre the olde generacions of men (o ye childzen) and marke well: * was there euer ony one confounded that put his trust in the LORDE? Who euer contynued in his feare and was forsaken? Or whom dyd he euer despyse, that called faythfully vpon hym, For God is gracious and mercyfull, he forgeueth synnes in the tyme of trouble, and is a defender for all them that seke hym in the treuth. Wo be vnto hym that hath a dubble hart, wycked lippes and euell occupied handes, and to the synner that goeth two maner of waies. Wo be vnto them that are lowse of harte, which put not their trust in God, and therfore shall they not be defended of hym. Wo be vnto the that haue lost patience, forsaken the right wayes, and are turned back in to frowarde wayes. What wyll they do, whan the LORDE shal begynne to vysyt them?

They that feare the LORDE, wil not mistrust hys worde: * and they that loue hym, wyll kepe hys commaundement. They that feare the LORDE wyl seke out the thynges that are pleasaunt vnto him: * and they that loue hym, shall fulfyll hys lawe. They that feare the LORDE wyl prepare their hartes, and humble their soules in his sight. (They that feare the LORDE, kepe his commaundemetes, and wyll be patient, tyll they se hymself) sayenge: * better is it for vs to fall in to the handes of the LORDE, then in to the handes of men: for his mercy is as greate as hymself.

The.iii. Chapter.

The childzen of wysdome are a congregacion of the ryghteous and their exercyse is obedience and loue. Heare me youre father (o my deare childzen) & do there after, þ ye maye be safe. * For the LORDE wil haue the father honoured of the childzen, and loke what a mother commaundeth hir childzen to do, he wil haue it kepte. Who so honoureth his father, hys synnes shall be

bygynst him: and he that honoureth his mo ther, is like one that gathareth treasure together. Who so honoureth his father, shall haue ioye of his owne childre: & whā he ma-keth his prayer, he shall be herde. * He ý ho
noureth his father, shall haue a longe life: &
he that is obedient for the LORDES sake,
his mother shall haue ioye of hym.

He that feareth the LORDE, honoureth
his father and mother, and doth them serue
as it were vnto the LORDE himselfe. Ho-noure thy father in dede, in worde, and in al
patience, that thou mayest haue his blessinge for ý blessinge of ý father buyldeth vp
the houses of the children, but the mothers curse roteth out the foundacions. Reioce not whan thy father is reproued, for it is no honoure vnto the, but a shame. For the wor shippe of a mās father is his owne worship-
pe, and where ý father is without honoure,
there is the dishonesty of the sonne. My sonne make much of thy father in his age, and greue him not as longe as he liueth And yf
his vnderstandinge fayle, haue pacience wt him, & dyspyse him not in thy strength. For the good dede that thou shewest vnto thy fa ther, shall not be forgotten: and whan thou art sore wanteste, it shall be rewarded the (and for thy mothers offence thou shalt be recompensed with good, yee it shal be foun-
den for the in righteousnes) and in the daye
of trouble thou shalt be remembred: thy syn-nes also shall melt awaye, like as the yse in the fayre warme wether.

He ý forsaketh his father, shall come to shame: & he that defyeth his mother, is cursed of God. My sonne perfourme thy wor-kes in louinge mekenesse, so shalt thou be be loued aboue other mē. The greater thou art
the more hūble thy self (in all thynges) & thou shalt fynde fauour in the sight of God. For great power belongeth onely vnto God, &
he is honoured of the lowly.

* Seke not out the thinges that are abo-
ue thy capacite, and searche not the grounde
of such thinges as are to myghtie for the: *
but what God hath commaunded the,
thynke vpon that alwaye, and be not curyous in many of hys workes. For it is not ne cessary for the, to se with thine eyes, the thin-ges ý are secrete. Make not thou to much businesse in superfluous thynges, and be not curious in many of hys workes: for many thynges are shewed vnto the allready, which be aboue the capacite of men. The multitude wyth such hath begyled many a man, and tangled theyr wyttes in vanyte.
Now he ý loueth patell, shall perish therin. D

An harde harte shal fare euell at the last (an harte that goeth two wayes, shall not prospere: and he that is frowarde of harte, wyll euer be the worse and worse) A wicked
hart shall be laden with sorowes, and ý vngodly synner wyll heape one synne vpon another. The councell of the proude hath no healthe, for the plante of synne shall be roted out in them. The hart of him that hath vn-derstondinge, shall perceaue hye thynges,
and a good eare wyll gladly herken vnto wysdome. In harte that is wyse and hath vnderstondynge, wyll abstayne from syn-nes, and increase in the workes of righteous
nes. Water quencheth burnynge fyre, Esa.4.c.a

hath nede. Despyse not an hongrie soule, and defie not ý poore
in his necessite: greue not the hart of hym
that is helpelesse, and withdrawe not ý gyft from the nedefull. Refuse not the prayer of one that is in trouble, and turne not awaye thy face from the nedy. Cast not thyne eyes aside from the poore, that thou geue hym not occasion to speake euell of the. For yf he complayne of in the bytternes of hys soule,
his prayer shall be herde: euen he that made hym, shall heare hym. Be curteous vnto the company of the poore, humble thy soule vn
to elder, and bowe downe thy heade to a mā
of worshyppe. Let it not greue the to bowe
downe thyne eare vnto the poore, but paye
thy det, and geue hym a frendly answere,
and that with mekenesse.

* Delyuer hym ý suffreth wrōge frō the B
hande of the oppressoure, and be not faynt Gen.14.c

mercyfull vnto the fatherles as a father: &
be in stede of an husbande vnto their mother: so shalt thou be as an obedient sonne
of the Hyest, and he shall loue the more then thy mother doth. Wysdome bringeth vpe in to hir children, receaueth them that seke her, and wyll go before them in the waye of rygtheousnes. He ý loueth her, loueth lyfe: &
they that seke dyligently, shall haue greate

lope. They ꝑ kepe her, shal haue ꝑ herytage of lyfe: for where she entreth in: there is the blessynge of God. They ꝑ honoure her shal be the seruauntes of the holy one: and they that loue her, are beloued of God. Who so geueth eare vnto her, shall iudge the Heythē: and he that hath respecte vnto her, shall dwell safely.

C He that beleueth her, shal haue her in possession, and his generacion shall endure: for whan he falleth, she shal go with him before all. Feare, drede, and tentacion shal she bringe vpon hym, and trye hym in hir doctrine: tyll she haue so proued hym in his thoughtes, that he cōmitte his soule vnto her. Thē shal she stablish him, bringe the right waye vnto him, make him a glad mā, shewe hym hir secretes, and heape vpon him the treasures of knowlege, vnderstondinge & righteousnes. But yt he go wronge, she shall forsake him, and geue him ouer in to the handes of his enempe.

D My sonne, * make much of the tyme, eschue the thynge that is euell, & and for thy lyfe shame not to saye the treuth. For there is a shame that bringeth synne, and there is a shame that bringeth worshyppe and fauoure. * Accepte no person after thine owne will, that thou be not confounded to thyne owne decaye. Be not ashamed of thy neghboure in his aduersyte, and kepe not back thy counceil whan it maye do good, nether hyde thy wysdome in hir bewty. For in the tunge is wysdome knowne, so is vnderstandynge, knowlege, and learnynge in the tal kynge of the wyse, and stedfastnesse in the workes of righteousnes. In no wyse speake agaynst the worde of treuth, but be ashamed of the lyes of thyne owne ignorauncē. Shame not to confesse thine errour, and submitte not thyself vnto euery man because of synne. Wythstande not the face of the myghtye, and stryue not agaynst the streame. But for the treuth stryue thou vnto death, and God shall fyght for the agaynst thyne enempes. Be not hastie in thy tunge, nether slack and negligent in thy workes. Be not as a lyon in thyne owne house, destroynge thy housholde folkes, and oppressynge them that are vnder the. * Let not thyne hande be stretched out to receaue, and shutt whan thou shuldest geue.

Rust not vnto thy ryches. * and saye not: tushe, I haue ynough for my lyfe. (For it shall not helpe in the tyme of vengeaunce and temptacion) Folowe not the lust of thyne owne harte in thy strength, and saye not: tush, howe shulde I, or who wyl cast me downe because of my workes? for doutles God shall auenge it. And saye not: I haue committed mo synnes, but what euell hath happened me. For the Almyghtye is a patient rewarde. * Because thy synne is forgeuen the, be not therfore wythout feare, nether heape one synne vpon another. * And saye not: tush, the mercy of the LORDE is greate, he shall forgeue my synnes, be they neuer so many. * For lyke as he is mercyfull, so goeth wrath frō hym also, and hys indignacion commeth downe vpon synners.

Make no tarynge to turne vnto the LORDE, and put not of from daye to daye: for sodenly shall his wrath come, and in tyme of vengeaunce he shall destroye the. * Trust not in wicked ryches for they shal not helpe in the daye punyshment & wrath. Be not carted aboute to euery wynde, and go not in to euery waye: for so doth the synner that hath a dubble tunge (Stonde fast in the waye of the LORDE) be stedfast in thy vnderstondynge, abyde by thy worde, and folowe the worde of peace and righteousnes. Be gentle to heare the worde of God, that thou mayest vnderstonde it, and make a true answere with wysdome. * Be swift to heare, but slowe and patient in geuynge answere. If thou hast vnderstondynge, shape thy neghboure an answere: If no, laye thyne hande vpon thy mouth: lest thou be trapped in an vndiscrete worde, and so confounded. Honoure and worshyppe is in a mans wyse talkynge, but the tunge of the vndiscrete is his owne destruction. * Be not a preuy accusar as longe as thou lyuest & vse no sklaunder wt thy tonge. For shame and sorow goeth ouer the theefe, and an euell name ouer hym that is dubble tunged: but he that is a preuy accusar of other men, shalbe hated enuyed and confounded. The. vi. Chapter.

Be not thy neghbours enempe for thy frendes sake: for who so is euel shalbe ꝑ heyre of rebuke & dishonoure, & who so euer beareth enuye & a dubble tunge, offendeth. * Be not proude in the deupte of thyne

owne vnderstandynge, lest thy leaues wyther, and thy frute be destroyed, and so thou lyest as a dyetre. For a wycked soule destroyeth hym that hath it, maketh hym to be laughed to scorne of hys enemyes, (and bringeth hym to the porcyon of the vngodly.)

A swete worde multiplyeth frendes, and pacifyeth them that be at variaunce, and a thankfull tunge wyll be plenteous in a good man. Holde frendshyppe wyth many, nevertheles haue, but one counceler of a thousande.

If thou gettest a frende, * proue hym well, and be not haystye to geue hym credence. For some man is a frende but for a tyme, and wyll not abyde in the daye of trouble.

And there is some frende that turneth to enemyte, and taketh parte agaynst the: and yf he knowe ony hurte by the, he telleth it out.

Agayne, some frende is but a companyon at the table, and in the daye of nede he continueth not. But a sure frende wyll be vnto the euen as thyne owne self, and deale faythfully with thy housholde folke. If thou suffre trouble and aduersyte, he is with the, and departeth not hymselfe from the. Departe from thine enemies, yee & beware of thy frendes.

A faythfull frende is a stronge defence: who so fyndeth such one, fyndeth a noble treasure. A faythfull frende hath no peare, the weyght of golde and syluer is not to be compared to the goodnesse of hys fayth. A faythfull frende is a medecyne of lyfe, and they that feare the LORDE, shall fynde hym. Who so feareth the LORDE, shal prosper with frendes: and as he is hymselfe, so shall hys frende be also. My sonne, receaue doctryn frō thy youth vp, so shalt thou fynde wysdome tyll thou be olde. Go to her as one that ploweth, and soweth, and waite patient vpon hyr good frutes. * For thou shalt haue but lytle laboure in hyr worke, but thou shalt eate of hyr frutes ryght soone. O how vnsemynge shatpe is wysdome to vnlearned men: an vnstedfast body wyll not remayne in her. Vnto such she is as it were a touchstone, and he casteth her from hym in all the hast: for wysdome is with him but in name, there be but few that haue knowlege of her. (But with them that knowe her, she abydeth euen vnto the appearynge of God.)

Geue eare (my sonne) receaue my doctryne, and refuse not my councell. Put thy fote in hyr fyncke, * and take hyr yocke vpon thy neck: bowe downe thy shulder vnder her beare her patiently, and be not weery of hir bandes. Come vnto her with thy whole hart, and kepe hyr wayes with al thy power. Serche after her, and she shalbe shewed the: and whan thou hast her, forsake her not. For at the last thou shalt fynde rest in her, and that shall be turned to thy greate ioye. Then shal hyr fetters be a stronge defence for the, and hyr yocke a glorious rayment. For the bewtye of lyfe is in her, and hyr bandes are the couplynge together of saluacyon. Yee a glorious rayment is it, thou shalt put it on, and ꝑ same crown of ioye shalt thou weare.

My sonne, yf thou wilt take hede, thou shalt haue vnderstondynge: & yf thou wilt applye thy mynde, thou shalt be wyse. If thou wilt bowe downe thine eare, thou shalt receaue doctryne: and yf thou delyte in hearynge, thou shalt be wyse. Stonde with the multitude of such elders as haue vnderstandynge, and consente vnto theyr wysdome with thyne hart: * that thou mayest heare all goodly sermons, and that the worthy sentences escape the not. And yf thou seyst a man of dyscrete vnderstandynge, gett the soone vnto him, and let thy fote treade vpon the steppes of hys doores. * Let thy mynde be vpon the commaundemētes of God, and be earnestly occupied in hys lawes: so shall he stablysh thy hart, and geue the wysdome at thyne owne desyre.

The.vii. Chapter.

Labour not vnto mā for ony lordshyppe, nother vnto the kynge for the seate of honoure. * Justyfye not thy selfe before God, (for he knoweth the hart) and desyre not to be reputed wyse in the presence of the kyng. Make no laboure to be made a iudge, except it so were, that thou couldest mightely put downe wyckednes: for yf thou shuldest stonde in awe of the presence of ꝑ myghtye, thou shuldest kayle in geuynge sentence. Offende not in the multitude of the cyte, and put not thyselfe amonge the people. * Bynde not two synnes together, for in one synne shalt thou not be vnpunyshed. Saie not (tush, God wil loke vpon the multitude of my oblacions, and whan I offre to the Hyghest God, he wyll accepte it.

myddest of snares, and vpon the bulwerkes
of the cyte. Beware of thy neghbour as nye as thou canst, * and medle with such as
be wyse and haue vnderstandynge. Let iust men be thy gestes, let thy myrth be in the fea
re of God, let the remembraunce of God be in thy mynde, * and let all thy talkynge be in the commaundementes of the Hyghest.
In the handes of craftesmen shall the wor
kes be commended. * so shall the pryn
ces of the people in the wysdome of theyr talkynge. A man full of wordes is parlous in hys cyte: and he that is temerarious,
and past shame in hys talkynge, is to be ab
horred.

The. x. Chapter.

A Wyse iudge wyll order his peo ple wyth discrecyon, and where
a man of vnderstandynge bea
reth rule, there goeth it well.
* As the iudge of the people is hymself, euen so are hys officers: and loke what maner of man the ruler of the cyte is,
such are they that dwell therin also. * An vnwyse kynge destroyeth hys people, but where they that be in auctorite are men of vnderstondynge, there the cyte prospereth.

The power of the earth is in the hande
of God, and whan hys tyme is, he shall set a profytable ruler vpon it. In the hande of God is the power of man, and vpō the scry
bes shall he laye hys honoure. * Remembre
no wrong of thy neghbour, and medle thou wyth no vnryghteous workes. Pryde is ha tefull before God and men, and all wicked nesse of the heythen is to be abhorred. * Be cause of vnryghteous dealynge, wronge,
blasphemyes and dyuerse deceate, a realme
shalbe translated frō one people to another.

There is nothynge worse then a couē tous man. What auaūcest thou the, o thou earth and asshes? There is not a more wyc ked thynge, then to loue moneye. And whye such one hath hys soule to sell: yet is he but fylthye donge whyle he lyueth.

And though the phisician shewe hys hel
pe neuer so longe, yet in conclusyon it goeth
after thys maner: to daye a kynge, tomorow dead. For whan a man dyeth, he is the heyr of serpentes, beastes and wormes. The be gynnynge of mans pryde, is to fall awaye
from God: and why? hys hart is gone from hys maker, for pryde is the ouergynall of all synne. Who so taketh holde therof, shal be fylled wyth cursynges, and at the last it shal ouerthrowe hym. Therfore hath the LORD brought the congregacions of the wicked to dishonour, and destroyed them vnto ȳ ende.
* God hath destroyed the seates of proude

pryuces, and set vp the meke in theyr steade
God hath wythered the rotes of the proude Heythen, and planted the lowly amonge
Gene.19.f them. * God hath ouerthrowne the londes of the Heythen, and destroyed them out of the ground. He hath caused them to wyther awaye, he hath brought them to naught, and made the memorall of them to ceasse from out of the earth. (God hath destroyed the name of the proude, and left the name of the humble of mynde.) Pryde was not made for man, nother wrothfulnes for mens chyldre. The sede of men that feareth God, shalbe brought to honoure: but the sede which trāsgresseth the commaundementes of the LORDE shalbe shamed. He that is the ruler amonge brethre is holde in honour amōg the: & he regardeth such as feare the LORDE.

D The glory of the ryche, of the honorable and of the poore is the feare of God.

Despyse not thou the iust poore man, and magnifye not the rych vngodly. Greate is the iudge and mightte in honour, yet is there none greater, then he that feareth God

E Thy sonne, keke thy soule in mekenes, and geue her hyr due honoure. Who shall iustifye hym, that synneth agaynst hymselfe? Who wyll honoure hym, that dishonoureth his owne lyfe? The poore is honoured for his faithfulnes and treuth, but ꝑ rych is had in reputacio because of his goodes. He that ordreth hymself honestly in powerte, how much more shall he behaue hymself honestly in ryches? And who so ordreth hymself vnhonestly in ryches, how much more shal he behaue hymself dishonestly in powerte?

The.xi.Chapter.

Pro.18.a. herde the cause, but fyrst let men tell out theyr tales.

B Striue not for a matter that toucheth not thyselfe, and stonde not in the iudgmēt of synners. My sonne, medle not with many matters: * and yf thou wylt be ryche, thou shalt
Mat.6.b. not be vngylty: and though thou folow after, yet shalt thou not get it: and though thou runnest thy waye afore, yet shalt thou not escape. * There is some man that labourth
Pro.28.a. and the more he weerieth hymself, the lesse he hath. Agayne, some man is slouthfull, hath nede of helpe, wanteth strength, and hath greate powerte, and Gods eye loketh vpon hym to good, setteth him vp from hys lowe estate, * and lyfteth vp hys heade: so Job.5.a. that many man marueyll at hym, and geue honoure vnto God.

C * Prosperite & aduersyte, lyfe and death: powerte and ryches come all of the LORDE (Wysdome, nurtoure and knowlege of the lawe are with God: loue and the wayes of good are with hym. Errour and darckenes are made for synners: and they that exalte themselues in euel, ware olde in euel.) The gyft of God remayneth for the righteous, and his good wyll shall geue prosperite for euer. Some man is rych by lyueng nygardly, and that is the porcyon of hys reward, in Luc.12.a. that he sayeth: * now haue I gotten rest, and now wyll I eate and drynke of my goodes myselfe alone. And yet he consydereth not, that the tyme drawyth nye, that he must leaue all these thynges vnto other men, and dye hymself. Stonde thou fast in thy conuenaunt, & exercyse thyselfe therin, and remayne in the worke vnto the age. Continue not in the workes of synners, but put thy trust in God, and byde in thyne estate: for it is but
D an easy thynge in the syght of God, to make a poore man ryche, and that sodenly. The blessynge of God hasteth to the rewarde of the righteous, and maketh hys frutes sone to florysh, and prospere. Saye not: what helpeth it me? and what shall I haue

the whyle: Agayn, saye not: I haue ynough
and can I wante. * When thou art in wel fare, forget not aduersyte: and whā it goeth
not well with the, haue a good hope, that it shall be better. For it is but a small thynge
vnto God, in the daye of death to rewarde
euery man accordinge to his wayes. The ad uersite of an houre maketh one to forget all pleasure, and when a man dyeth, his wor-kes are discouered. Prayse no body before his death: for a man shalbe knowne in his children.

Bringe not euery man in to thine house;
for the deceitfull layeth wayte diuersly.
Like as a partrich in a maunde, so is the hert of the proude: and like as a spye, that lieth vpon the fall of his neighboure. For he turneth good vnto euel, and slaundreth
the chosen. Of one sparck is made a greate fyr, and an vngodly man layeth wayte for bloude. Beware of the deceatfull, for he pur poseth wicked thynges, to bringe the to a perpetuall shame. If thou takest an alcaunt with the, he shall destroye the in vnquietnes
and bryue the from thyne owne wayes.

The.xii. Chapter.

When thou wilt do good, knowe
to whom thou doest it, and so shalt thou be greatly thanked for thy benefites. * Do good vnto the ryghteous, and thou shalt fynde greate rewarde: though not of him (no doute) the LORDE himselfe shall rewarde the. He stondeth not in a good case, that is alwaye occupied in euell, and geueth
no almes: for the Hyghest hateth the syn-
ners, and hath mercy vpon them that shew
the workes of repentaūce. Geue thou vnto the iuste God, and receaue not a syn-
ners: for the vngodly and synners, he shal recompence vengeaunce vnto them, and ke-pe them to the daye of wrath. Geue thou vnto the good, and receaue not the synner: do good vnto hym that is lowly, but geue not to the vngodly. Let not thy bread be geuen him, that he be not myghtyer then thy self therby. For so shalt thou receaue twyse as much euell, in all the good that thou doest
vnto hym: And why? the Hyghest hateth synners, and shall rewarde vengeaunce to the vngodly.

In prosperyte a frende shal not be know
en, and in aduersyte an enemye shall not be
hyd. For when a mā is in wealth, it greeueth his enemies: but in heuynes and trouble a man shall knowe his frende. Trust neuer thyne enemy, for lyke as an yron rusteth, so doth his wyckednes. And though he make much crouchynge, and kneelynge, yet kepe

well thy mynde, and beware of hym. Set hym not by the, nother let him syt at thy right
hande: lest he turne hym, get in to thy place,
take thy towme, and syde thy seate, & so thou
at the last remembre my wordes, and be pyt
ched at my sayenges.

* Synde not two synnes together, for C
there shall not one be vnpunished. Who wil Eccli.7.a haue pyte of the charmer, that is stynged of the serpent, or of all such as come nye the bea stes? Euen so is it with him that kepeth com pany with a wyckedman, and lappeth hymself in hys synnes. For a season wyll he byde with the, but yf thou stomble, he tarieth not.
* An enemy is swete in his lyppes, he cā ma Jere. 41.b
ke many wordes, & speake many good thyn-ges: yet he can wepe with his eyes, but in his harte, he imagyneth how to throwe the
in to the pytte: and yf he maye fynde oportunyte, he wyll not be satisfyed with bloude. If aduersyte come vpon the, thou shalt fynde hym there fyrst: and though he pretende to helpe, yet shal he vndermyne the. He shall shake his heade, and clap his handes ouer
the for very gladnes, and whyle he maketh
many wordes, he shall dysguyse his countenaunce.

cleane vp thyne or thyne, and at the last shalt he laugh the to scorne. Afterwarde, whan he seith that thou hast nothing, he shal forsake the, & shake his heade at the (humble thy selfe vnto God, and abyde hys handes).

B Beware, that thou be not deceaued, and brought downe in thy simpilnesse. (Be not to humble in thy wysdome, lest whan thou art brought lowe, thou be deceaued thorow foolyshnes.) yf thou be called of a mighty man, absent thy selfe, so shalt he call the to hym the more ofte. Preasse not thou vnto hym that thou be not shutte out: but go not thou farre of, lest he forgette the. Withdrawe not thy selfe from speach, but beleue not hys many wordes. For with much communication shall he tempte the, and (with a pretty mock) shall he questyon of thy secretes. The vnmercifull mynde of hys shall marck thy wordes, he shall not spare to do the hurt, and to put the in prison. Beware, and take good hede to thy selfe, for thou walkest in parell of thy ouerthorowynge.

C (Now whan thou hearest his wordes, make the as though thou wertest in a dreame, and wake vp. Loue God all thy lyfe longe, and call vpon him in thy nede.) Euery beast loueth hys lyke, euen so let euery man loue hys neighbour. All fleshy wyl resorte to theyr lyke, and euery man wyll kepe company wyth such as he is hymselfe. But as the wolf agreeth wyth the lambe, so doth the vngodly wyth the righteous. * What felowshyppe shulde an holy man haue with a dogge? How can the ryche and the poore agree together? The wylde asse is the lyons praye in the wylderneße, euen so are poore men the meate of ryche. Lyke as the proude maye not awaye with lowlynes, euen so doth the ryche abhorre the poore. yf a rych man fall, hys frendes set hym vp agayne: but whan the poore falleth, hys frendes forsake hym. yf a rych man fall in to an errour, he hath many helpers: he speaketh proude wordes, and yet men iustifye hym.

2.Co. 6.r.

D But yf a poore man go wronge, he is pushed: yet though he speake wysely, yet can it haue no place. Whan the ryche man speaketh euery body holdeth his tunge: and loke what he sayeth, they praise it vnto the cloudes. But yf the poore man speake, they saye: What felowe is this? and yf he do amysse, they shall destroye hym. Ryches are good vnto hym that hath no synne in hys conscience, and pouerte is a wycked thynge in the mouth of the vngodly. The hart of man chaungeth hys countenaunce, whether it be in good or euell. A chearfull countenaunce is a token of a good hart, for els is it an harde thynge to knowe the thought.

The.xiiii. Chapter.

BLessed is the man, that hath not fallen with the worde of hys mouth, and is not prycked with the conscience of synne. Happye is he that hath beene heuye in hys mynde, and is not fallen from hys hope. It becommeth not a couetous man and a nygarde, to be ryche: and what profyte a nygarde do with golde? He that wythall hys carefulnes heapeth together vnryghteously, gathereth for other folkes, and another man shall make good cheare wyth hys goodes. He that is wycked vnto hymself, how shulde he be good vnto other men? How can such one haue ony pleasure of hys goodes? There is nothynge worse, than whan one enuyeth hymself, and that is a rewarde of hys wyckednes. yf he do ony good, he doth it not knowynge therof, and agaynst hys wyll, and at the last he declareth hys vngratefulnes. A nygarde hath a wycked eye, he turneth awaye hys face, and despyseth hys owne soule. * Couetous mans eye hath neuer ynough in the portyon of wyckednes, vntyll the tyme that he wyther awaye, and haue lost hys owne soule.

A wycked eye sparath bread, and there is scarcenesse vpon hys table. My sonne, be good to thyselfe of that thou hast, and geue the LORDE hys due offrynges. Remembre that death tarieth not, and how that the conuenaunt of the graue is shewed vnto the: (for the conuenaunt of thy wolde shalt dye the death.) * Do good vnto thy frende before thou dye, and accordynge to thy ability reach out thyne honde, and geue vnto the poore. Be not dyspoynted of the good daye, and let not the portyon of the good date ouerpasse the. Shalt thou not leaue the trauayles and labours vnto other men? In the deuydynge of the herytage geue and take, and sanctyfye thy soule. Worke thou vnrighteousnes before thy death, for in the hell there is no meate to fynde.

* All fleshy shall fade awaye lyke grasse, and lyke a flourysshynge leafe in a grenetree. Some growe: some are cast downe: euen so is the generacyon of fleshy, and blode: one commeth to an ende, another is borne.

The.xv. Chapter.

not be confused vpon. She shall bringe
him to honoure amonge his neighbours,
and in the myddest of the congregacion shal
she open his mouth. With the spyrete of wysdome & vnderstandynge shall she fyl hym, and clothe hym with a garmet of glory. She shall bringe the treasure of myrth, and ioye
vpon hym, and geue hym an euerlastynge name to heritage. But foolysh men wyll not take vpon her, but such as haue vnderstandynge wil mete her, for she is farre fro pryde and deceate. Men that go about wyth lyes, will not remembre her: but men of truth shall be founde in her, euen vnto the glorifyenge of god. Prayse is not semely in the mouth of the vngodly, for he is not sent of

of vngodly children, and haue
no pleasure in them, yf they feare not God. Trust not thou to their lyfe, and regarde not their labours: for one sonne that feareth God is better, then a thousande vngodly. And better it is for a man to dye without children,
then to leaue behynde hym lucky children as
are vngodly. For by one that hath vnder-

but though the vngodly be many, yet shall
it be wasted thorow them. Many such thyn-

ment also, he iudged a man accordynge to hys workes. The vngodly shall not escape in hys spoyle, and the longe patyence of hym that sheweth mercy, shall not byde behynde. All mercy shall make place vnto euerymā accordynge to the deseruynge of hys workes, (and after the vnderstandynge of hys pylgrymage.)

C Saye not thou: I wyll hyde my self from God, for who wyll thynke vpon me from aboue? I shall not be knowne in so great an heape of people, for what is my soule amonge so many creatures? Beholde, the heauen, yee the heauen of heauens, the depe, the earth and all that therin is, shall be moued at hys presence: the mountaynes, the hylles, and the foundacions of the earth shall shake for feare, whan God vysyteth them. These thynges doth no hart vnderstonde, but he vnderstandeth euery hart, and who vnderstandeth hys wayes? No man seyth hys stormē, and the mooste parte of his workes are secrete. Who wyll declare the workes of hys ryghteousnes? Or who shall be able to abyde them: for the cōuenaunt is fare from dome, and the tryenge out of men, is in the fulfillynge. He that is humble of hart, thynketh vpon such thynges: but an vnwyse and erroneous man casteth hys mynde vnto foolysh thynges.

D My sonne, herken thou vnto me, and learne vnderstandynge, and marke my wordes with thyne hart: I wyll geue the a sure doctryne, and planely shall I instructe the. God hath set hys workes in good ordre frō the begynnynge, and parte of them hath he sundered from the other. He hath garnysshed hys workes from euerlastynge, and theyr begynnynges accordynge to theyr generacions. None of them hyndereth another, nother was ony of them disobedient vnto his worde. After this, God loked vpon ꝑ earth, and fylled it with his goodes. With all maner of lyuynge beastes hath he couered the grounde, and they all shalbe turned vnto earth agayne.

The.xvii. Chapter.

A Gen. 1, 2 GOd * dyd shape man of ꝑ earth, and turned hym vnto earth agayne. He gaue hym the nombre of dayes, and certayne tyme yee and gaue hym power of the thynges that are vpon the earth. He clothed hym with strength, and made hym after his owne lyknes. He made all fleshy to stonde in awe of hym, so that he had the dompynon of all beastes and foules. * He made out of hym an helper lyke vnto hymself, and gaue them dyscrecyon and tunge, eyes and eares, and a hart to vnderstande, and fylled them wyth instruccyon and vnderstandynge. He created for them also the knowledge of the spyrete, fylled theyr hart with vnderstandynge, and shewed them good and euyl. He set hys eyes vpon theyr hartes, declarynge vnto them hys greate and noble workes: (that they shulde prayse hys holy name together, reioyce of hys wonders, and declarynge of hys noble actes.) * Besydes this, he gaue them instruccyon, and the lawe of lyfe for an heretage. He made an euerlastynge cōuenaunt wyth them, and shewed them hys ryghteousnes, and iudgmentes. Their sawe hys glory wyth theyr eyes, and theyr eares herde the maiesty of hys voyce, and he sayde vnto them: beware of all vnryghteous thynges. He gaue euery man also a commaundement concernynge hys neyghboure.

Theyr wayes are euer before hym, and are not hyd from hys eyes. * He hath set a ruler vpon euery people, * but Israel is the LORDES portyon. All theyr workes are as the sonne in the syght of God, and hys eyes are alwaye lokynge vpon theyr wayes. All theyr vnryghteousnesses are manyfest vnto hym, and all theyr wyckednesses are open in hys syght. * The mercy that a mā sheweth is as it were a purse wyth him, and a mans good dede preserueth hym as ꝑ apple of an eye. * At the last shall he aryse, and rewarde euery man vpon hys heade as he hath deserued, and shall turne them together in to the nethermooste partes of the earth. * But vnto them that wyll repent, he hath geuen the waye of ryghteousnes. As for such as be weake, he comforteth them, suffreth them, and sendeth them the portyon of the verytie. O turne then vnto the LORDE forsake thy synnes, make thy prayer before the LORDE, do the lest offence, turne agayne vnto the LORDE forsake thyne vnryghteousnes, be an vtter enemy to abhompnacyon (learne to knowe the ryghteousnes, and iudgmentes of God, stonde in the portyon that is set forth for the and in ꝑ prayer of the mooste hyghe God. Go in to the portion of the holy worlde, wyth such as be lyuynge and geue thankes vnto God.

E * Who wyll prayse the LORDE in ꝑ hell. Abyde not thou in the errours of the vngod-

ly, but geue hym thankes before death. As for the dead, thankfulnesse perysheth fro hym as nothynge. Geue thou thankes in thy lyfe yee whyle thou art lyuynge and whole shalt thou geue thankes, and prayse God, and reioyce in hys mercy. O how great is the louynge kyndnesse of the LORDE, and hys mercyfull goodnes vnto such as turne vnto hym? for all thinges maye not be in man and why? the sonne of man is not immortall, and he hath pleasure in the vanyte of wickednes. What is more cleare then the Sonne? yet shall it fayle. Or what is more wycked, then the thynge that flesh and blou he hath ymagyned? and that same shall be reuoked. The LORDE seyth the power of the hye heauen, and that men all are but earth, and asshes.

The.xviii.Chapter.

HE that lyueth for euermor, *made all thynges together. God onely is ryghteous and remayneth a vyctorious kyng for euer *Who shalbe able to expresse hys workes of hym? Who hath sought out the grounde of his noble actes? Who shall declare the power of his greatnesse? Or, who wyll take vpon hym to tell out his mercy? As for the wonderous workes of the LORDE there maye nothyng be taken from them, no thyng maye be put vnto them, nother maye the ground of them be found out. But whā a man hath done his best, he must begynne agayne: and whan he thynketh to be come to an ende, he must go agayne to his labour. What is man? Wherto is he worth? What good or euell can he do? * yf the nombre of a mans dayes be almoost an hundreth yeare tis much.

Lyke as the droppes of rayne are vnto the see, and as a grauell stone is in comparyson of the sonde: * so are these few yeares in the dayes euerlastynge. Therfore is the LORDE pacyent with them, and poureth out his mercy vpon them. He sawe and perceaued the thoughtes, and ymaginacyons of theyr harte, that they were euell: therfore herped he vp his mercifull goodnes vpon them, and shewed them in the waye of ryghteousnes. The mercy that a man hath, reacheth to his neighboure: but the mercy of god is vpon all flesh. He chasteneth, he teacheth, and nourtureth: ye euen as a shepherde turneth agayne hys flock, so doth he all them, that receaue chastenynge, nourture and doctryne. * Mercifull is he vnto them, that stonde in awe of his iudgmentes.

Myy sonne, whan thou doest good, make no grudgynge at it: and what so euer thou geuest, speake no dyscomfortable wordes. Shall not the dew coole the heate? Euen so is a worde better then a gyft. * Is not a frendly worde a good honest gyft? but a gracious man geueth them both. * A foole shal cast a mā in the tethe, and that roughly, and a gyft of the nygarde putteth out the eyes. Get the ryghteousnes before thou come to iudgment: learne before thou speake, and go to physyck or euer thou be syck: * examen and iudge thyself, before the iudgment come, and so shalt thou fynde grace in the syght of God. Humble thyself afore thou be syck, and in tyme of thy dysease shew thy conuersacyon. * Let not to praye alwaye, and stonde not in feare to be reformed vnto death: for the rewarde of God endureth for euer. Before thou prayest, prepare thy soule, and be not as one that tempteth God. Thynke vpon the wrathfull indignacion that shal be at the ende, and the houre of vengeaunce, whan he shall turne awye hys face. *Whan thou hast ynough, remembre the tyme of honger: and whan thou art rych, thynke vpon the tyme of pouerte, and scarcenesse.

From the mornynge vntyll the euenynge the tyme is chaunged, and all such thynges are soone done in the syght of God. A wyse man feareth God in all thynges, and in the dayes of transgressyon he kepeth hym self from synne. A discrete man hath pleasure in wysdome, and he that findeth her, maketh much of her. They that haue had vnderstandynge, haue dealt wysely in wordes, haye vnderstonde the treuth and ryghteousnes, and haue sought out wyse sentēces, and iudgmentes. * Folowe not thy lustes, but turne the from thyne owne will. For yf thou geuest thy soule hyr desyres, it shall make thyne enemyes to laugh the scorne. Take not thy pleasure in greate volupteousnes, and medle not to much withall. Make not to greate cheare of the thynge that thou hast wonne by auauntage: lest thou fall in to pouerte, and haue nothynge in thy purse: (and so shalt thou be enuyous to thine owne lyfe.)

The.xix.Chapter.

A Labouringe man that is geuen vnto dronckennes, shall not be ryche: and he that maketh not much of small thynges, shall fal by lytle and lytle. * Wyne and

1 Tim. 11.a *women make wyse men renagates, and put men of vnderstondynge to rebuke: and he that accompanyeth aduouterers, shall become a wycked man. Wothes and wormes shal haue hym to heretage, yee he shall be sett vp to a greater example, and his soule shalbe Iosu. 22.c roted out of the nombre. *He that is hastye to geue credence, is light mynded: shalbe mynished, (and he that offendeth agaynst hys owne soule, shalbe hated the more.) Who so reioyceth in wyckednes, shalbe punished: he that hateth to be reformed, hys lyfe shalbe shortened: and he that abhorreth bablynge of wordes, quencheth wyckednes. (He that offendeth agaynst his owne soule, shal repent it: and he that reioyceth in wyckednes, shall be punished.

B Rehearse not a wycked and churlysh worde twyse, and thou shalt not be hyndered. Shew not thy secretes notherto frend nor foo and yf thou hast offended, tell it not out. For he shall herken vnto the and marck the: and whan he fyndeth opportunyte, he shall Eccl. 22.b and. 27.c. hate the. * yf thou hast harde a worde agaynst thy neghboure, let it be dead wythyn the: and be sure, thou shalt haue no harme therby. A foole trauaileth with a worde, lyke as a woman that is payneth with bearynge of chylde. Lyke as an arowe shot in a dogges thye, so is a worde in a fooles hart.

Leuit. 19.b Mat. 18.b *Tell thy frende hys faute, lest he be ignoraunt, and saye: I haue not done it or yf he haue done it, that he do it nomore. Reproue thy neghboure, that he kepe hys tunge: and yf he haue spoken, that he saye it nomore.

C Tell thy neghboure his faute, for oft tymes an offence is made, and geue not credence to euery worde. A man falleth somtyme with his tunge, but not with his wyll. * For Eccl. 34.a and. 35.b. what is he that hath not offended in his tunge? Geue thy neghboure warnynge, before Iacob. 3.a thou threaten hym, and geue place vnto the lawe of the LORDE. The feare of God is all wysdome, and he that is a ryght wyse man kepeth the lawe. As for the doctryne of wyckednes, it is no wysdome, and the prudence of synners is no good vnderstondynge: it is but wyckednesse, and abhompnacyon, and a blasphemynge of wysdome. A symple man of small vnderstandynge that feareth God, is better then one that hath much wysdome, and transgresseth the lawe of the Hyghest.

D A craftye subtell man can be wyse, but he is vnryghteous, and with gyftes he wrayesteth the open and manyfest lawe. A wycked man can behaue hymself humbly, and can louke with his heade, and yet is he but a deceauer wythin. * He hydeth his face, and dysguyseth it: and because he shulde not be knowne, he preuenteth the. Ecclus.

And though he be so weake that he can do the no harme, yet whan he maye fynde opportunyte, he shall do some euell. A man maye be knowe by his face, and one that hath vnderstondynge, maye be perceaued by the loke of his countenaunce. * A mans garment, laughter, and goynge, declare what he is. Eccl.

The. xx. Chapter.

SOme man, *reproueth his neghboure oft tymes, but not in due season: A gayne, some man holdeth his tunge, and he is wyse, and discrete. It is much better to geue warnynge, and to reproue, then to beare euell wyll: for he that knowlegeth hym self openly, shalbe preserued from hurt, and destruccion. Lyke as whā a chamberlayne thorow despyte, and lust defyleth a mayden, euen so is it with hym that vseth violence, and vnryghteousnes in the lawe: (O how good a thynge is it, a man that is reproued, to shewe openly his repentaunce: for so shalt thou escape wylfull synne. I del.

Some man kepeth sylence, and is founde wyse: but he that is not ashamed what he sayeth, is hatefull. Some man holdeth hys tunge, because he hath not the vnderstandynge of the language: and some man kepeth sylence, waytynge a conuenyent tyme. * A wyse man wyll holde hys tūge tyll he se opportunyte, but a wanton, and an vndiscrete body shal regarde no tyme. He that vseth many wordes, shall hurte hys owne soule: and he that taketh auctoryte vpon hym vnryghteously, shal be hated. Eccl.

Some man hath oftymes prosperyte in wycked thynges: A gayn, some man getteth much, and hath harme and losse. There is some gyft that is nothynge worth: Againe, there is some gift, whose reward is dubble. Some man getteth a fall for beynge to proude, and some commeth to worshippe from lowe estate. Some man bieth much for a lytle price, and must paye for it seuenfolde.

* A wyse man with his wordes maketh B Ecc. hymself to be loued, but the fauours of fooles shalbe poured out. The gyft of the vnwyse shall do the no good, for hys eyes are seuenfolde. * He shal geue lytle, and saye he Ecc.

gaue much: he openeth his mouth, ād crieth out, as it were one that crieth out wyne. To day he lendeth, tomorow he aseth it agayne, and such a man is to be hated. The foole say eth: I haue no frende, I haue no thanke for all my good dedes: yee euen they that eate my bread, speake no good of me. O how oft, and of how many shall he be laughed to scorne? he taketh a more perlous fall by such wordes, then yf he fell vpon the ground: euē so shall the falles of wycked men come hastely. In ỹ mouth of hym that is vntaught, are many vnconuenient, and vnmete wordes. A wyse sentence shall not be alowed at the mouth of the foole, for he speaketh it not in due season.

Some man synneth not, because he hath not wherwithall, and in his rest he shall be vnged. Some man there is that destroyeth his owne soule with shame, and for an vnwyse bodyes sake destroyeth he it, (& wyth mysdoynge of personnes shal he vndo hymself. Some mā promyseth his frende a gyft to his shame, and getteth an enemye of a man: yet shall it be euer in the mouth of the vnwyse. A theefe is better, then a man that is accustomed to lyenne, but they both shall haue destruccion to heretage. The condicions of men are vnhoneste, and theyr shame is euer with them.

A wyse man shall bryngе hymself to honour with his wordes, * and he that hath vnderstondynge shalbe setby amonge great men. * He that tylleth his londe, shal increase his heape of corne: he that worketh righteousnes, shalbe exalted, & he that pleaseth great men, shall escape much euell.

Rewardes and gyftes blynde the eyes of ỹ wyse, and make hym domme, that he can not reproue men theyr faultes. * Wysdome that is hyd, and treasure that is hoorded vp, what profyte is in theboth? Better is he that kepeth his ignorāunce secrete, then a man that hydeth his wysdome.

The.xxi. Chapter.

Stryke and wrongeous dealynge fall wayst awaye a mans goodes, and thorow pryde a ryche house shalbe brought to naught thus ỹ ryches of the proude shalbe roted out * The prayer of the poore goeth out of the mouth, and commeth vnto the eares, and his vengeaunce (or defence) shall come, and that hastely. Who so hateth to be reformed, it is a token of an vngodly persone: but he that feareth God, wyll remembre hymself. A myghtie man is knowne a farre of by hys tunge, but he that hath vnderstondynge, perceaueth that he shall haue a fall. Ero 3. f. and. 22. f.

Who so buyldeth his house with other mens cost, is lyke one that gathereth stones in wynter. * The congregacyon of the vngodly is lyke stubble gathered together, theyr ende is a flamme of fyre. The waye of ỹ vngodly is set with stones, but in their end is hell, darknes, and paynes. He that kepeth the lawe, wyll holde fast the vnderstondyng therof, and the ende of the feare of God is wysdome. He that is not wyse, wyll not be taught in good: but the vnwyse man aboundeth in wyckednes: and where bytternes is, there is no vnderstondynge. The knowlege of the wyse shall flowe lyke water that reneth ouer, and hys councell is lyke a fountayne of lyfe. Eccl. 18. a

The hart of a foole is lyke a broken vessell, he can kepe no wysdome. When a man of vnderstondynge heareth a wyse worde, he shall commende it, and make much of it. But yf a volupteous man heare it, he shall haue no pleasure therin, but cast it behynde hys back. The talkynge of a foole is lyke an heuy burthen by the waye: but to heare a wyse man speake, it is a pleasure. Where a doute is in the congregacion, it is ared at the mouth of the wyse, and they shal ponder his wordes in theyr hartes. Lyke as a house that is destroyed, euen so is wysdome vnto a foole: As for the knowlege of the vnwyse, it is but darck wordes. Doctryne is vnto him that hath no vnderstandynge, euen as fetters aboute his fete, and lyke manycles vpon his ryghthande. * A foole lyfteth vp his voyce with laughter, but a wyse man shall scarse laugh secretely. Eccl. 19. b.

Learnynge is vnto a wyse man a Jewel of golde, and lyke an armlet vpon his right arme. A foolysh mans foote is soone in hys neighbours house, but one that hath experience, shall be ashamed at the persone of the myghtye. A foole wyll pepe in at the wyndow in to the house, but he that is well nourtoured, wyll stonde wythout. A foolysh man stondeth herkenynge at the doze, but he that is wyse, wyll be ashamed.

The lyppes of the vnwyse wylbe tellyng foolysh thynges, but the wordes of such as haue vnderstandynge, shalbe weyed in the balaunce. The harte of fooles is in theyr mouth, but the mouth of the wyse is in theyr hart. Whan the vngodly curseth the blas-

The. xxii. Chapter.

A Slouthfull body is moulded of a stone of claye: he that toucheth hym, must wash his handes agayn. A mysnourtured sonne is the dishonoure of the father. A foolysh doughter shalbe lytle regarded. A wyse doughter is an heretage vnto hyr husbande: but she that commeth to dishonesty, bryngeth hyr father in heuynes. A doughter that is past shame, dishonoureth both hyr father, and hyr husbande: the vngodly shall regarde her, but they both shall despyse her. The playeng of musyck is not mete where heuynes is, euen so is the correction, and doctryne of wysdome euer vnpleasaunt vnto fooles.

Who so teacheth a foole, is euen as one that gleweth a potsherde together: as one that telleth a tayle to hym that heareth hym not, and as one that rayseth a man out of an heuy slepe. Who so telleth a foole of wysdome, is euen as a man, which speaketh to one that is a slepe. Whan he hath told his tayle, he sayeth: what is the matter? Whan one dyeth, lamentacion is a made for hym, because the lyght fayleth hym: euen so let men mourne ouer a foole, for he wanteth vnderstondynge. Make but lytle weppynge, becau-

Talke not much with a foole, and go not with hym that hath no vnderstondynge. Be ware of hym, lest it turne the to trauayle, and thou shalt not be defyled with hys synne. Departe from him, and thou shalt fynd rest, & shalt not be drawe back in to his beare, then an vnwyse, foolysh, and vngodly man. Lyke as the band of wood bounde together in the foundacyon of the house can not be lowsed, euen so is it with the hart that is stablysshed in the thought of councell. The thought of the wyse, shall nother feare, nor be offended at ony tyme.

Lyke as a fayre playstred wall in a wynter house, and an hye buyldynge, maye not abyde the wynde and storm: euen so is a fooles hart afrayed in his ymagination: he fareth at euery thynge, and can not endure. He that nyppeth a mans eye, bryngeth forth teres: and he that prycketh the hart, bryngeth forth the meanynge, and thought. Who so casteth a stone at the byrdes, frayeth them awaye: and he that blaspheneth his frende, breaketh ỹ frendshyppe, though thou drewest a sword at thy frend, yet despayr not, for thou mayest come agayne to thy frend, yf he speake fourely, feare not, for ye maye be agreed together agayne: excepte it be so that thou blaspheme hym, dysdayne hym, open hys secretes, and wound him traytorously: for all such thynges shall dryue awaye a frende.

Be faythfull vnto thy neighbour in hys pouerte, that thou mayest reioyce with hym also in hys prosperyte. Abyde stedfast vnto hym in the tyme of his trouble, that thou mayest be heyre with him in his heretage. Lyke as the vapor, and smoke goeth out at the ouen before the fyre, euen so euell wordes, rebukes, and threatenynges go before bloudsheddynge. Be not ashamed to defende thy frende: as for me, I wyll not hyde my face frō hym, though he shulde do me harme. Who so euer heareth it, shal beware of him.
* Who shall set a watch before my mouth, pa.
and a sure seale vpon my lyppes, that I fall not with them, and that my tunge destroye me not?

The. xxiii. Chapter.

O LORDE, father and gouernour of my lyfe, leaue me not in theyr ymagination, and councell. Oh let me not fall in such reproue. Who wyll kepe my thought & the scourge, and the doctryne of wysdome in myne harte: that he spare not myne ignoraunce, that I fall not with them, lest myne ignorauncs increase, that myne offences be not many in nombre, and that my synnes attende not: lest I fall before myne enemies and so my aduersary reioyce. O LORDE, thou father & God of my lyfe, leaue me not in their ymagination. O let me not haue a proude loke, but turne awaye all voluptuousnes fro me. Take fro me ỳ lustes of the body, let not the desyres of vnclennes take hold vpō me, and geue me not ouer in to an vnshamefast and obstinate mynde.

Heare me (o ye children) I wil geue you a doctryne, how ye shall ordre youre mouth: who so kepeth it, shall not perish thorow his lippes, nor be hurt thorow wicked workes as ỳ synner, he shalbe taken in hys owne vanyte: he that is proude and cursed, shal fall therin. * Let not thy mouth be accustomed vnto swearinge, for in it there are many falles. Let not ỳ namynge of God be cōmonly in thy mouth: for like as a seruaunt which is oft punyshed can not be wythout some sore, euen so what so euer he be ỳ swearith & nameth God, shal not be cleane pour ỳ cō synne. A man ỳ vseth much swearinge, shalbe fylled with wickednes, & ỳ plage shall neuer go from his house. If he begyle his brother, his faute shalbe vpon him: yf he forbeare not his synne, he maketh a dubble offence: and yf he sweare in vayne, he shall not be founde righteous, for his house shalbe full of plages.

* The wordes of the swearer bringeth (God graunte that it be not founde in ỳ house of Iacob) But they that feare God refuse all such and lyue not wickedly in synne. * Vse not thy mouth to vnhoneste and vnclene talkynge, for in it is the worde of synne. Remembre thy father and thy mother, when thou art set amonge greate men: lest God forget the in their syght, & lest thou be vsed in their custome, suffre rebuke, & wyshe not to haue bene borne, and so curse the daye of thy natyuite. * The man that is accustomed with the wordes of blasphemy, shall neuer be reformed al the dayes of his lyfe. To synne twyse is to much, but ỳ thirde bringeth wrath and destruccion. In whose house can not be quenched (euen like a burninge fyre, till it haue swalowed vp) consumed to an vnchayste man hath no rest in his flesh, till he haue kyndled a fyre.

All bread is swete to an whoremonger, he shal not leaue of, till he haue his purpose. A man that breaketh wedlock, & regardeth not his wife, but sayeth: * Tush, who seyth me? I am compassed aboute with darcknes, the walles couer me, no body seyth me: whom nede I to feare? The Hyest wyll not remembre my synnes. He vnderstondeth not that his eyes se all thynges, for all such feare of men dyueth awaye the feare of God from hym: for he feareth onely the eyes of men, and consydereth not that the eyes of ỳ LORDE are clearer then the Sonne, beholdinge all the wayes of men and the grounde of the depe, and lokynge euen to mens harres in secrete places. The LORDE God knewe all thynges or euer they were made, and after they be brought to passe also he loked vpon them all. * The same man shalbe openly punyshed in the stretes of the cyte, & shall be chased abrode lyke a ponge horse foale: and whan he thynketh lest vpon it, he shall be taken. Thus shall he be put to shame of euery man, because he wolde not vnderstonde the feare of the LORDE. And thus shall it go also with euery wyfe that leaueth his husoande, and getteth enherytaunce by a straunge marriage. * First, she hath ben vnfaythfull vnto the lawe of the Hyest: Secondly, she hath forsaken hir owne husbande. Thirdly, she hath played the whore in aduoutry, and gotten hir chyldren by another man. She shall be brought out of the congregacion, and hir chyldren shalbe loked vpon. Hir chyldren shal not take rote: and as for frute, hir braunches shall bringe forth none. A shamefull reporte shall she leaue behynde her, and hir dishonoure shall not be put out. And they that remayne, shall knowe, that there is nothynge better, then the feare of God: and that there is nothing swetter, then to take hede vnto the commaundementes of the LORDE. Greate worshipe is it to folowe the LORDE, for longe lyfe shalbe receaued of him.

Whosoeuer shal prayse himself, and be honoured in God, and reioyce in the myddest of his people: In the congregacions of the Hyest shall she open hir mouth, and triumphe in the beholdynge of hys power: In the myddest of hir people shall she be exalted, and wondred at in the holy fulnesse: In the multitude of the chosen she shalbe commended, and amonge such as be blessed she shalbe prayed, and shall saye: I am come out of the mouth of the Hyest, first borne before all creatures. I caused the lyght that fayleth not to aryse in the heaue, and couered all the earth as a cloude. My dwellynge is aboue in the heyth, &

IIII thynges there are, that my I spyrite fauoureth, which be also alowed before God and me. ✠ ec.
The vnyte of brethren, & the lo- & neue of neighbours, ✠ and man & wowyfe that agree well together.

Three thynges there be which my soule
hateth, and I vtterly abhorre the life of the:
A poore man that is proude. A rich man that is a lyar: ✠ and an olde body that dotith & de.
is vnchaste.

If thou hast gathered nothynge in thy youth, what wil thou fynde then in thyne age? O how pleasaunt a thynge is it, whan graye headed men are discrete, and whā the elders can geue good councell? O how com
ly a thynge is wysdome vnto agedmen? yee vnderstondynge and councell is a glorious thynge. The crowne of olde men is to haue much experience, and the feare of God is their worshippe.

B There be .iii. thinges, which I haue iudged in my hart to be happy, and the tenth wyll I tell forth vnto men with my tunge.
A man ẏ whyle he lyueth, hath ioye of hys
children, and seith the fall of his enemyes.
Well is hym, that dwelleth with an houswyfe of vnderstondynge, * and ẏ hath not fallen with his tunge, and ẏ hath not bene
dryne to serue such as are vnmete for hym.
Well is him, that fyndeth a faythfull frend:
and well is hym, which talketh of wysdome to an eare ẏ heareth hym. O how great is he, ẏ fyndeth wysdome and knowlege:
yet is he not aboue hym, & feareth ẏ LOR-DE. The feare of God hath set it self aboue all thynges. Blessed is the man, vnto whom it is graunted to haue the feare of God. Unto whō shal he be lykened, ẏ kepeth it fast?
The feare of God is the begynninge of his
loue, and the begynninge of faith is to cleaue fast vnto it. The heupnes of ẏ hart is all the punyshment, and the wickednes of a wo man goeth aboue all. All punyshment & pla gue is nothinge in comparison of the plage
of ẏ hart euē so al wickednes is nothinge to the wyckednes of a woman.

C What so euer happeneth vnto a man, is but inge in comparison of it, ẏ his euel wil
lers do vnto hym: and all vengeaunce is no thinge to ẏ vengeaunce of the enemye. The re is not a more wicked heade then ẏ heade
of the serpēt, and there is no wrath aboue ẏ wrath of a womā. * I wyl rather dwel with a lyon and dragō, then to kepe house with a wicked wyfe. The wickednesse of a womā chaungeth hir face, she shal mocke hir cōu-ersaunce as it were a Beer, & as a sack shal
she hewe it amonge ẏ neighbours. Hir husbande is brought to shame amōge his negh bours, & whā he heareth it, it maketh him to syghe. All wickednes is but litle to ẏ wyckednes of a woman, ẏ portion of ẏ vngodly shall fall vpon her.

D Like as to clymme vp a sondy waye is to
ẏ feet of the aged, euē so is a wife full of wor
des to a still quiete mā. * Loke not to narow
ly vpon the bewtye of a woman, lest thou be prouoked in desyre towarde her. The wrath of a woman is dishonoure and greate confusion, If a woman gett the maistrie, then is she contrary to hir husbande. A wicked wyfe maketh a sory hart, an heuy countenaunce
and a dead wounde (weake handes and fe-ble knees, is a woman ẏ comforteth not hir husbande) * Of the woman came the be- Gen.3.b

dead. Geue thy water no passage, no not a lytle, neither geue a wycked woman hir wil.
If she walke not after thy hande, she shall
cōfoūde ẏ in the syght of thyne enemyes.
Cut her of then from thy flesh, that she do not alwaye abuse the.

The.xxvi.Chapter.

HAppy is the man ẏ hath a ver- A honest woman maketh hir husbande a ioyfull man, & she shall

she maye gett.

By euery hedge shal she set hir downe, &
ope hir quyuer agaynst euery arowe. A lou ge wyfe reioyceth hir husbande: and fedeth hir bones with hir wysdome. A woman of few wordes is a gift of God, and to a well
nurtured mynde maye nothing be cōpared.

An honest and manerly woman is a gyft C

aboue other gyftes, and there is no waight to be compared, vnto a mynde that can rule it self. Like as the Sonne whan it aryseth, is an ornament in the hye heauen of ỹ LORDE, so is a vertuous wife the bewtye of all hir house. boure, but a wicked personne letteth hym cō me to shame. Forget not the frendshippe of thy suertye, for he hath geuen his soule for the. The vngodly despyseth the good dede of his suertye, and the vnthankfull and ignorant leaueth his suertye in daunger. Some man prompteth for his neghboures and whan he hath lost his honesty, he shall forsake hym. Suertishipe hath destroyed many a ryche man, and remoued them as ꝑ were wes in the see. Mighte people hath it driuen awaye, and caused them to wander in straunge countrees. An vngodly man transgressynge the commaundement of ꝑ LORDE, shall fall in to an euell suertishippe: and though he forge hymself to get out, yet shall he fall into iudgement. Helpe thy neghboure out after thy power, and beware, that thou thy self fall not in such dett.

Eccli.29.c * The chefe thinge that leyeth in the lyfe, is water and bread, clothinge and lodginge to couer the shame.

* Better is it to haue a poore lyuynge in a mans owne house, then delicate fayre amōge the straunge. * Be yt litle or much that thou hast, holde the cōtent with al (and thou shalt not be blamed as a vagabounder:) for a mysserable lyfe is it, to go from house to house: and where a mans fremde, he darre not ope his mouth. Though one be logged, and haue meate and drynke, yet shall he be take as an vnworthy, & heare many bytter rough wordes, namely thus: Go thy waye thou straunger, and prepare a table (for thy self) and fede me also of that thou hast. Awaye thou straunger (so, that he regardeth his honoure nomore) my brother commeth in to my house, and so he telleth him the necessyte of hys house. These thynges are bytter to a man that hath vnderstondinge: namely, the forbiddinge of the house, and that the lender calleth him in the teth.

Phil.2.b 1.Tim.6.b Heb.13.a

The.xxx. Chapter.

Who so loueth his chylde, * holdeth hym styll vnder correccion that he maye haue ioye of hym afterwarde (and that he grope not after his neghbours dores)

Pro.13.c. and.22.b

Deut.6.a He that teacheth hys sonne, shall haue ioye in him, and not be ashamed of hym amonge his aquayntaūce. Who so enfourmeth and teacheth hys sonne, greueth the enemye, and before his fredes he maye haue ioye of him. Though ꝑ father dye, yet is he as though he were not dead: for he hath left one behynde him that is lyke hym. In his lyfe he sawe hym, and had ioye in hym, and was not sory in his death, (neither was he ashamed before the enemyes.) For he left behynde hym an auenger agaynst his enemyes, & a good dore vnto the fredes. For the life of a childe shall hynde the woundes together, and hys harte is greued at euery erye. An vntamed horse wylde harde, and a wanton childe shall be wylfull. If thou bringe vp thy sonne delicatly, he shall make the afrayed: and if thou playe with hym, he shall brynge the to heuynes. Laugh not with hym, lest thou be pyt with him alle, and lest thy teth be set on edge at the last.

* Geue him not liberte in his youth, and ercuse not his fautes. Bow downe his neck whyle he is ponge, and beate hym vpon his sides whyle he is yet but a chylde, lest he wax stubborne, & geue no more credence vnto ꝑ (and so shall thou haue heuynes of soule.) Teach thy chylde, and be dylygent therin, lest yt be to thy shame. Better is ꝑ poore bonde man (whyle he is) and stronge, then a man to be riche, & not to haue his dealth. Dealth and welfare is aboue all golde, and an whole body aboue all treasure. There is no ryches aboue a sounde body, and no ioye aboue ꝑ ioye of hert. Death is better then a myserable lyfe, or els nuall sickenes. The good thynges that are put vp in a close mouth are lyke vnto meate that is layed vpon ꝑ graue.

What good doth the offeringe vnto an Idoll. * For he can neither eate, taste nor smell. Euen so is it also with the vnthankfull man, that lyeth with a bitter and sorye hert. * Geue not ouer thy mynde vnto heuynes, and vexe not thy self in thyne owne councell. The ioye and cheerfulnes of the hart is the lyfe of man, and a mans gladnes is the prolongynge of his dayes. Louethyne owne soule, and comforte thyne hart and put sorow and heuynes, dryue te farre from the, * for heuynes hath slayne many a man and byngeth no profyt. Zele & anger shorten the dayes of the lyfe: carefulnes and sorow brynge age before the tyme. Unto a mery hart euery thynge hath a good taste, that he eateth.

The.xxxi. Chapter.

Rawpisse and * carefulnes for ryches taketh awaye the slepe, and maketh the fleshly continue. When one slepeth and taketh rest, he waketh euer vp, lyke as a greate sickenes breaketh the slepe. The riche hath greate labour in gatherynge hys ryches together, and then with the pleasure of hys ryches he taketh his rest, & is refreshed. But who so laboureth and prospereth not, he is poore: and though he leaue of, yet is he a begger. He that loueth riches, shall not be satisfied: and who so foloweth corruption, shall haue ynough therof. * Many one are come in greate mysfortune by the reason of golde, and haue founde their destruccion before them. It is a tre of fallynge vnto them that offre it vp, and all such as be foolish fal therin. Blessed is the rich, whiche is founde without blemysh, and hath not gone after golde, nor hoped in money and treasures. Where is there such one? and we shall commende hym, and call hym blessed, for greate thynges doth he amonge his people. Who is tryed, and founde perfecte in such thinges, shalbe commended and praysed. Who might offende, and hath not offended? Who could do euell, and hath not done it? Therfor shall his good be stablished, and the whole congregacion shall declare his almes dedes. If thou sytt at a greate mans table, ope not thy mouth wyde vpon it, and make not many wordes. Remembre, that an euell eye is shrew.

What thinge created is worse then a wicked eye? therfore wepeth it before euery mās face. Laye not thyne hand vpon euery thinge that thine eye seyth, and stryue not with men in the dyshe. * Ponder by thy self what thy neighboure wolde fayne haue, and be discrete in euery poynte. Eate the thynge þ is set before the manerly, as it becommeth a man, and eate not to much, lest thou be abhorred. Leaue thou of first of all because of manours, lest thou be he whom no mā maye satisfie, whiche maye turne to thy decaye. When thou syttest amonge many men, reach not thine hande out first of al. * O how well content is a wyse man with a litle wyne? so that in slepe thou shalt not be seke therof, nor fele ony payne. A swete wholsome slepe shall such one haue, and fele no indigestion grefe. He ryseth vp by tymes in the mornynge, and is well at ease in him selfe. But an vnstable eater slepeth vnquyetly, and hath ache and payne of the body. If thou fele that thou hast eaten to much, ryse, go thy waye, cast it of thy stomack, & take thy rest: (and so shalt thou bringe no sykenes vnto thy body.)

My sonne, heare me, and despyse my not: and at the last thou shalt fynde as I haue sayde the. * In all thy workes be diligent & quycke, so shal there no sykenes happen vnto the. * Who so is liberal in dealynge out hys meate, many men shall blesse him and prayse him with their lippes: and the same is a sure token of his loue and faithfulnes. But he that is vnfaythfull in meate, the whole eyte shall complayne of hym: and þ is sure experience of his infidelite and wyckednes. * Be not thou a wine bebber, for wyne hath destroyed many a man. The fyre proueth the harde yron, euen so doth wyne proue the hartes of the proude, whan they be dronken.

* Wyne soberly dronke, quyckeneth the lyfe of mā. If thou drinkest it measurably, thou shalt be temperate. What lyfe is it þ maye contynue without wyne? Wyne was made from the begynnynge to make men glad (and not for dronkennes) Wyne measurably dronke is a reioycenge of the soule & body. But yf it be dronken with excesse, it maketh bytternes and sorowe vnto þ mynde. Dronkēnes fylleth the mynde of the foolish with shame and rupne, mynisheth the strēgth, & maketh woundes. * Rebuke not thy neghboure at þ wyne, and despyse hym not in his myrth. Geue him no despytefull wordes. and prease not vpon hym wyth cōtrary sayenges.

The.xxxii. Chapter

If thou be made a ruler, * heaue not thy self therin, but be thou as one of the people. * Take diligent care for them, and loke well therto: & whan thou hast done all thy dewtye, set the downe, þ thou mayest be mery with them, and receaue a crowne of honoure. Talke wysely & honestly, for wysdome becommeth the right well. Hynder not musyck. Speake not, where there is no audiēce: * & poure not forth wysdome out of tyme, at an inportunyte. Like as the Carbuncle stone shyneth, that is set in golde, so doth a songe garnysh the wyne feast: and as the Smaragde that is set in golde, so is the swetnes of musyck by the myrth of wyne.

Thou ponge mā, speake that becommeth the, & that is profitable, and yet scarse whā thou art twyse ared. Comprehende much with few wordes. In many thinges be as one that is ignorant, geue eare, and holde thy tunge withall. If thou be amonge men of hyer auctorite, desyre not to compare thy self vnto them: and whā an elder speaketh, make not thou many wordes therin. Be-the thonder goeth lightenynge, and before nurtoure and shamefastnesse goeth loue and fauoure. Stonde vp by tymes, and be not ye last, but get the home soone, and there take thy pastyme, and do what thou wilt: so that a thou do no euell, and defye no man. But afore all thinges geue thankes vnto hym that hath made the, and replenished the with his goodes.

C Who so feareth the LORDE, wil receaue his doctryne: and they that get them to him by tymes, shall fynde grace, he that seketh the lawe, shall be fylled withall: As for him that is but layned, he wil be offended therat They that feare the LORDE, shal fynde the iudgment, & their righteousnes shalbe kindled as a light. An vngodly man will not be reformed, but can helpe himselfe with the example of other in hys purpose. A man of vnderstondinge despyseth no good councel but a wylde and proude body hath no feare. My sonne, do nothinge without aduisemẽt, so shal it not repẽt the after the dede. Go not in the waye where thou mayest fall, nor where thou mayest stõble agaynst the stone. Geue not thy self in to a laborious slypperye waye, and beware of thine owne childzen. In all thy workes put thy trust in God frõ thy whole harte, for that is kepinge of the commaundemẽtes. Who so beleueth Gods worde: taketh hede to the commaundementes: and he that putteth his trust in ye LORDE, shall wante nothinge.

The.xxxiii.Chapter.

A There shall no euell happen vnto him that feareth God: but whan he is in tentation, ye LORDE shall delyuer him. A wyse man hateth not the lawe, but an ypocrite is as a shyp in a raginge water. A man of vnderstondinge geueth credẽce vnto the lawe of God, & ye lawe is faithful vnto him. Be sure of the matter, then talke therof: Be first wel instructe, thẽ mayest thou geue answere. The harte of ye foolish is like a cartwhele, & his thoughtes rũne aboute like the axell tre. Like as a wylde horse that neyeth vnder euery one ye sytteth vpon him, so is it with a scorne full frende. Why doth one daye excel another, seynge al the dayes of the yeare come of the Sonne? The wysdome of the LORDE hath so parted them a sunder, and so hath he ordened the tymes and solempne feastes. Some of them hath he chosen and halowed before other dayes. And all men are made of the grounde, and out of the earth of Adam.

In the multitude of science hath ye LORDE sundereth them, and made their wayes of diuerse fashions. Some of them hath he blessed, made much of them, halowed them, and clayned them to himself. But some of them hath he cursed, brought them lowe, & put them out of their estate. * Like as the clay is in ye potters hande, and all the ordringe therof at his pleasure: so are men also in the hande of him that made them, so ye he maye geue them as it lyketh hym best. * Agaynst euell is good, & agaynst death is life: so is the vngodly agaynst such as feare God. Beholde, thus are al ye workes of the Hyghest, and there are euer two agaynst two, and one set agaynst another. I am awaked vp last of all, as one that gathereth after in haruest. In the giftes of God and in his blessinge I am increased, and haue fylled my wyne presse, like a grape gatherer * Beholde, how I haue not laboured onely for my self, but for al such as loue nurtoure and wysdome.

Heare me O ye greate men of the people, and harken with youre eares ye rulers of ye congregacion. Geue not thy sonne and wife thy brother and frende power ouer the, whyle thou lyuest: and geue not awaye thy substaunce and good to another, lest it repent the, and thou be layne to begge therfor that self. As longe as thou liuest and hast breath let no man chaunge the: For better is itt ye thy childzẽ to praye the, then that thou shuldest be layne to loke in their handes. In all thy workes be excellẽt, that thine honour be neuer stayned. At the tyme whan thou shalt ende by dates, and finish thy life, distribute thine inheretaũce. The fodder, ye whyppe, and the burden belongeth vnto the Asse: Meate correction, and worke vnto the seruaunt.

If thou set thy seruaunt to laboure, thou shalt fynde rest. But yf thou let hym go ydel, he shall seke lyberrie. The yock and the whyp ye bowe downe the necke, but tame thou thy euell seruaunt with bondes and correction. Sende hym to labour, that he go not ydle: For idelnesse bringeth much euell. Set hym to worke, for that belongeth vnto hym and becommeth hym well. If he be not obedient, bynde his fete: but do not to much vnto hym in onye wyse, and without discrecion do nothynge. * If thou haue a (faithfull) seruaunt let him be vnto the as thine owne soule, for in bloude hast thou gotten him. If thou haue a servaile,holde him as thy selfe,for thou hast ne-

re of hym as thy selfe. If thou intreatest him evil,and depest him harde,and makest
him to be proude,and to renne awaye from thou canst not tell, what waye thou shalt fynde hym.

The.xxxiiii.Chapter

1 Nwyse people begyle them selues with vayne and deceatfull hope,and fooles trust in dreames. Who so regardeth dreames,is like him that will take holde of a shadowe, and folowe after þ wind. Even so is it with the appearynges of dreames. Before the face is the lykenes of a man.Who can be clensed of the vncleane? By what reuth can be spoken of a lyar? Both sclaydge, witchcraft, sorcery and dreamynges is but vanyte: lyke as whan a woman trauayleth with chylde, and hath many imaginacyes in hir harte.Where as such dreames come not of God, set not thine harte vpō them: For dreames haue deceaued many a man: and they fayled, that put their trust therin.

2 Thou shalte fulfylled wythout lyes, and wysdome is sufficient to a faythfull mouth. A wyse man that is well instructe, vnderstondeth much: and he that hath good experience,can talke of wysdome. He that hath no experience, knoweth litle: and he þ is vnlerned, causeth much wickednes. Whan I was yet in erroure, I learned much also: yee I was learned, that I coude not expresse it all, and came ofte in parell of death thereby, but I was delyuered from it. Now I se, that they which feare God, haue the right iudgement: their hope stondeth in hym, that can helpe them. Who so feareth the LORDE, feareth in awe of no man, and is not afrayed, for the LORDE is hys hope and confidence.

3 Blessed is the soule of hym þ feareth the LORDE: In whō putteth he his trust: who is his strength? For the eyes of the LORDE haue respecte vnto them that loue him. He is their mightie protection, & stronge grounde of defence for the heate, a refuge for the hote noone daye, a succure for stombling, & an helpe for fallynge. He setteth vp the soule, and lightneth þ eyes: He geueth health life, and blessynge. He that geueth an offeryng of vnrighteous good, his offerynge is defiled: and the scornefull dealynges of the vnrighteous please not God. * God hath no delyte in the offerynges of þ vngodly, nether maye synne be reconcyled in the multitude of oblacions. Who so bringeth an offeryng out of the goodes of the poore, doth euen as one that kylleth the sonne before the fathers eyes.

The bread of the nedefull is the lyfe of þ poore: he that defraudeth hym therof, is a man of bloude. Who so robbeth his neighboure of his lyuinge, doth as greate a synne as though he slew him to death. * He that defraudeth þ labourer of his hyre, is a bloudeshedder. Whan one buyldeth, and another breaketh downe, what profyt haue they then but laboure? Whan one prayeth, and another curseth, whose voyce wil the LORDE heare? * He that washeth himself because of a dead body, and then toucheth the dead agayne, what doth his washinge? * So is it with a man that fasteth for hys synnes, and doth them agayne: who wyll heare hys prayer? Or what doth his fastinge helpe hym?

The.xxxv.Chapter.

Who so kepeth the lawe, bringeth offerynges ynough. * He that holdeth fast the commaundement, offreth the right thankoffeiynge. He that is thankfull and recōpenceth, offreth fyne floure. * Who so is mercyful and geueth almes, that is þ right thankofferynge, God hath pleasure, whan one departeth from synne: and to forsake vnrighteousnes reconcyleth vs wyth hym. * Thou shalt not appeare emptye before the LORDE, for all such is done because of the commaundement. The offerynge of the righteous maketh the aulter fat, and a swete smell is it before the Hyghest. * The offerige of the righteous is acceptable vnto God, & shal neuer be forgotte. Geue hi his honoure wyth a chearfull eye, & hepe not backe the fyrstlynges of thy hondes. * In all thy gyftes shew a merye countenaunce, and hallowe thy tythes vnto God with gladnes. Geue vnto God accordynge as he hath enriched and prospered þ: * & loke what thyne hande is able, that geue with a chearfull eye: for the LORDE recompenceth, and geueth the seuen tymes as much agayne.

Geue no vnrygh teous gyftes, for such wil not be receaue. Beware of wrongeous offerynges, for the LORD is a righteous iudge & * regardeth no mās persoune: He accepteth not the persoune of the poore, & but he heareth ꝑ prayer of ꝑ oppressed. He despyseth not the desyre of the fatherlesse, nor ꝑ wydow, whan she poureth out hir prayer before him. Doth not God se, ꝑ teares ꝑ runne downe the chekes of the wydowe? Or heareth he not the complaynte, ouer such as make her to wepe? Who so serueth God after his pleasure, shalbe accepted, and his prayer reacheth vnto the cloudes. * The prayer of him that humbleth himself goeth thorow the cloudes, tyll she come vpe. She wil not be cõforted, nor go hir waye, tyll ꝑ hyghest God haue respecte vnto her, geue true sentence, and performme the iudgement. And ꝑ LORDE wil not be slacke in commynge, nor tary longe: tyll he haue smytten in sonder ꝑ backes of the vnmercyfull, and auenged himself of the Heythen: tyll he haue taken a waye the multitude of the cruell, and broke the cepter of ꝑ vnrighteous: tyll he gene euery man after his workes, and rewarde the as they haue deserued, tyll he haue delyuered his people, mayntened their cause, and reioyced them in his mercy. O how fayre a thynge is mercy, in the tyme of anguish and trouble? It is like a cloude of rayne, that cõmeth in the tyme of a drouth.

Actu. 10. a

The. xxxvi. Chapter.

HAue mercy vpon vs O LORD, thou God of all thinges. Haue respecte vnto vs (shewe vs the light of thy mercyes, and sende thy feare amonge the Heythen & straungers, which seke not after the: that they maye knowe how ꝑ ther is no God but thou, and that maye shew thy wonderous workes.) Lyft vp thyne hande ouer the outlandish Heythen, that they maye learne to knowe thy might and power. Like as thou art halowed in vs before them, so brynge to passe, ꝑ thou mayest be magnified also in the before vs: ꝑ they maye knowe ꝑ, like as we knowe the. For there is none other God, but only thou O LORD. Renewe ꝑ tokes, & chaunge ꝑ wonderous workes. Shewe thine hãde and thy right arme gloriously. Rayse thy indignacion, and poure out thy wrath. Take awaye the aduersary, and smyte the enemy. Make the tyme shorte, remembre thy couenaunt, that thy wonderous workes maye be praysed. Let the wrath of the fyre consume them, that lyue so careles: and let them perysh, that do thy people hurte. Smyte in sunder the heade of the princes that be oure enemyes, and saye there is none other but we.

Gather all the tribes of Iacob together B
agayne, that they maye knowe, how that there is none other God but onely thou, ꝑ they maye shewe thy wonderous workes, and be thy people and heritage: like as vnto the begynnynge. O LORDE haue mercy vpon the people that hath thy name, & vpõ Israel, * whom thou hast lykened to a firstborne sonne. O be mercyfull vnto Jerusalem * the cyte of thy Sanctuary, the cyte of thy rest. Fyll Sion with thy vnspeakable vertues, & thy people with thy glory. Geue witnes vnto thy creature, whom thou madest from the begynnynge, and rayse vp the prophecies that haue bene shewed in thy name. Rewarde them that wayte for the, that thy prophetes maye be founde faithfull. O LORDE heare the prayer of thy seruauntes accordinge to the blessinge of Aaron ouer thy people, * that al they which dwel vpon earth, maye knowe, that thou art the LORDE the eternall God, which is from euerlastynge.

Deut. 32. a

The belly deyoureth all meates, yet is one C
meate better then another. Like as the tunge tasteth hunyõ, * so doth an harte of vnderstondinge marck false wordes. A frowarde hart geueth heuynes, but a man of experience lifteth him vp agayne. The woman receaueth euery mã, yet is one doughter better then another. A fayre wyfe reioyceth hir husbande, and a man loueth nothinge better. If she be louynge & vertuous wythall, then is not hir husbande like other men. He that hath gotten a vertuous woman, hath a goodly possession: she is vnto him an helpe & pyller where vpon he resteth. Where no hedge is, there ꝑ goodes are spoyled: and where no husbande is, there ꝑ nedes mourneth. Like as there is no credence geuen to a robber, ꝑ goeth from one cite to another. So is not ꝑ man beleued, that hath no nest, and must turne in, where he maye abyde in the night.

Prou. 27. b

The. xxxvii. Chapter.

EVery frende sayeth: I will be I frendly vnto him also. But there is some frende, whiche is onely a frende in name. Rewareth there not heuinesse vnto death whan a companion and frende is turned to an enemye? O moost wicked presumpcion! ꝑ whence art thou spronge vp, to couer the earth ẅ falsede & deceate? * There is some Gen
companyon, which in prosperite reioyceth

with his frende: but in the tyme of trouble, he taketh parte agaynst hym. There is some companyon, that mourneth with hys frende for the bely sake: but whan trouble commeth, he taketh holde of the shylde. For get not thy frende in thy mynde, thynke vpon hym in thy ryches. * Euery counceler bringeth forth his councell. Neuertheles there is some, that counceleth but for hys owne profyt. Beware of the counceller, and be aduysed afore wherto thou wilt vse hym for he wyll geue councell for hymselfe. Lest he cast the lot vpon the, and saye vnto the: Thy waye and purpose is good, and afterwarde he stande agaynst the, and loke what shall become of the.

Aske no councell at him, that suspecketh the for an enemye, and hyde thy councell from such as hate the. Aske no councel at a woman, concernynge thynges that she longeth for: nor at a fearfull & faynt harte body, in matters of warre: nor at a marchaunt, how deare he wyll cheape thy wares towarde his: nor at a byer of sellynge: nor at an enuyous man, of thankes geuynge: nor at the vnmercifull of louynge kyndnes: nor at the slouthfull, of worckynge: nor at an hyrelynge which hath no rowme, of profyt nor wealth (An yole body holde not gladly heare speake of much labour.) Take no such folkes to councel, but be diligent to seke councell at a vertuous man, that feareth God, such one as thou knowest to be a keper of the commaundementes, which hath a minde after thine owne mynde, and is sorye for the whan thou stomblest.

And holde thy councell fast in thyne hart for there is no man more faithful to kepe it, than thou thy selfe. For a mans mynde is some tyme more disposed to tell out, then seuen watchmen that syt aboue in an hye place belynge aboute them. And aboue all thys praye the Hyghest, that he wil lede thy waye in trouthe and treuth. Before all thy workes are counsell fyrst: & or euer thou doest ony thinge, be wel aduysed. There be foure thinges that declare a chaunged hart, wher out there springeth euel & good, death & lyfe, & a wilfull tunge that babbleth much. Some man is apte and wel instructe in many thinges, and yet bery vnprofitable vnto himselfe. Some man there is, that can geue wyse & prudent councell, and yet is he hated, & cometh a begger: for that grace is not geuen him of God, to be accepted. Another is robbed of all wysdome, yet is he wyse vnto him selfe, and the frute of vnderstondinge is fayth full in his mouth.

A wyse man maketh his people wyse, and the frutes of his wysdome fayle not. A wyse man shalbe plentously blessed of God: and all they that se hym, shall speake good of him. The lyfe of man stondeth in the nombre of the dayes, but the dayes of Israel are innumerable. A wyse man shall optayne faithfulnes and credence amonge his people, and his name shalbe perpetual. My sonne, proue thy soule in thy lyfe: & yf thou se ony euell thynge geue it not vnto her. * For all thinges are not profitable for all men: nether hath euery soule pleasure in euery thynge. Be not gredy in euery eatynge, and be not to hastie vpon all meates. * For excesse of meates bryngeth syknes, and glotony commeth at the last to an vnmeasurable heate. Thorow glotony haue many one perysshed: but he that dyeteth hymselfe temperatly, prolongeth his lyfe.

Honoure the Physician: honoure him because of necessite. God hath created him (for of the Hyghest commeth medicyne) and he shal receaue giftes of the kynge. The wysdome of the phisician bringeth him to greate worshippe, & in the sight of the greate men of this worlde, he shalbe honorably taken. The LORDE hath created medicyne of the earth, and he that is wyse, wyl not abhorre it. * Was not the bytter watter made swete with a tree that men might learne to knowe the vertue therof. The LORDE hath geuen men wysdome & vnderstondinge, that he might be honoured in his wonderous workes. Wyth such doth he heale me, & taketh awaye their paynes: Of such doth the Apotecary make a confection, yet can no man perfourme all his workes. For of the LORDE commeth prosperous wealth ouer all the earth.

Exo.15.d 4.Re.4.c.

B

My sonne, despyse not this in thy sikenes: * but praye vnto the LORDE, and he shall make the whole. Leaue of from synne, and order thy handes aright: clense thine harte from all wyckednes. Geue a swete sauoured offrynge, and the fyne floure for a token of remembraunce: make the offrynge fat, as one that geueth the first frutes, and geue rowme to the Physician. For the LORDE hath created him: let hym not go from the, for thou hast nede of him. The houre maye come, that the seke maye be helped thorow them, whan they praye vnto the LORDE, that he maye recouer, and get health to lyue longer. He ꝑ synneth before his maker, shall fall in the handes of the Phisician.

C My sonne, * bringe forth thy teares ouer
Eccli. 22.c the dead: and beginne to mourne, as ꝑ thou haddest suffred greate harme thy self: & the couer his body after a conuenient maner, & despyse not his buryall. Enforce thy selfe

Heupnes and pouerte greueth the hart in tentatiō & offence. Take no heupnes to hart, dryue it awaye, and remēbre the last thynges. Forget it not, for there is no turnynge agayne. Thou shalt do hym no good, but hurte thy self. Remembre hys iudgmēt, thine also shalbe lyke wyse: vnto

D The wysdome of the scrybe is at conuenyent tyme of rest. and he that ceasseth from exercyse and laboure, shalbe wyse. He that holdeth the plough, and hath pleasure in prodding and dryuinge ꝑ oxen, and goeth aboute with such workes, he can speake of oxen. He setteth his hart to make forowes, and is diligent to geue the kyne fodder. So is euery carpenter also and workmaster ꝑ laboureth styll night and daye: he caruеth, graueth & cutteth out, and his desyre is in sondrye connynge thynges, and his harte ymagineth, how he maye connyngly cast an ymage, his diligence also & watchinge perfourmeth the worke. The pronsmyth in like maner bideth by his stythie, & doth his diligence to laboure the pron. The vapoure of the fyre brenneth his flesh, & he must fyght with the heate of the fornace. The noyse of the hammer soundeth euer in his eares, & his eyes loke styll vpon the thinge ꝑ he maketh. He hath set his minde there vpon, that he wyl make out his worke, and therfore he watcheth, how he maye set it out, & bringe it to an ende.

So doth the potter set by his worke, he
C turneth the whele aboute with his fete, he is diligent and carefull in all hys doynges, and his laboure and worke is without nombre. He fashioneth the claye with his arme, and with his fete he tempereth it. His harte magineth how he maye make it pleasaunt, and his diligence is to cleanse the ouen. All these hope is their handes, & euery one thynketh to be connynge in his worke. Without these maye not the cytes be manteyned, inhabited nor occupied: yet come they not hye in the congregation: they vnderstonde not the conuenaunt of the lawe: they can not declare equyte and iudgment: they can not fynde out the darck sentences: but thorow them shall the creature of the worlde be manteyned: their prayer concerneth onely the worke and laboure cōminge.

The. xxxix. Chapter.

But he that applyeth his mynde to vnderstāde ꝑ lawe of God doth diligently seke out ꝑ wysdome of them of the olde tyme, and exercyseth hymselfe in the prophetes. He kepeth ꝑ sayenges of famous men, and pearceth to the vnderstondynge of darck sentences of wysdome. He seketh out the mysterye of secrete sayenges, and exercyseth hym self therin contynually. He doth serue amonge greate men, & appereth before the prince. He goeth in to a straūge countre, and trauayleth thorow it: loke what good or euell is amonge men, he proueth it, & seketh it out. He purposeth in his harte, to resorte early vnto the LORDE that made hym, and to praye before ꝑ hyghest God. He openeth his mouth in prayer, and prayeth for his synnes.

Whē the greate LORDE wil, he shalbe fil
B led wᵗ the spryte of vnderstōding, ꝑ he maye then poure out wyse sentences, & geue thankes vnto ꝑ LORDE in his prayer. He shall ordre his deuyce, and lede hys knowlege aright, & geue him vnderstondinge of secrete thinges. He shall shew forth the scīēce of his learninge, & reioyce in the cōuenaunt of the lawe of ꝑ LORDE. The whole congregacion shal cōmende his wysdome, & it shal neuer be put out. The remembraunce of hym shal neuer be forgotē, and his name shal cōtynue frō one generacion to another. * His
Ecc. wysdome shalbe spoken of, & the whole congregacion shall openly declare his prayse. Whyle he lyueth he hath a greater name thē a thousande besyde, & after his death, ꝑ same name remayneth vnto him. yet wyl I speake of mo men of vnderstondinge, for I am full as the Moone.

Herke vnto me (ye holy vertreous childre)
C bringe forth frute, as the rose that is planted by the brokes of the felde, and geue ye a swete smell as Libanus. Florish as the rose garde, synge a songe of prayse. O geue thā his vnto God ouer all his worckes. Geue glory and honour vnto the LORDE, shew his prayse with youre lyppes yee euen with the songe of youre lyppes, with harpes, and playenge, and in geuynge thankes vnto hym, saye after thys maner. * All the worckes of the LORDE are exceadynge good, and all hys commaundementes are mete, and conuenient in due season.

Ymā nede not to saye: what is this? what is that? for at tyme conuenient they shall all be sought. * At his commaundement the water was as a wall, and at the worde of his mouth the waters stode styll. In his cōmaundement is euery thynge acceptable, & nothynge can be hyd from his eyen. He loth from euerlastynge to euerlastyng, and there is nothynge to wonderfull or hyghe vnto hym. I man nede not to saye thē, what is this, or that? For he hath made all thynges to do good vnto man. His blessinge shal renne ouer as ꝑ streame, and moysture the earth lyke a floude of water. Lyke as he maketh the water for drouth, so shall his wrath fall vpon the Heythen.

His wayes are playne, and ryght vnto the iust, but the vngodly stomble at them.

For the good are good thynges created from the begynnynge, and euel thynges for the vngodly. * All thynges necessary for the lyfe of man are created from the begynnynge: water, fyre, yron, and salt, meel, wheate, and hony, milke and wyne, oyle, and clothinge. * All these thynges are created for the best to the faythfull: But to ꝑ vngodly shall all these thynges be turned to hurte and harme. There be spretes that are created for vēgeaunce, and in their rigorousnes haue they fashioned theyr tormentes. * In the tyme of the ende they shall poure out theyr strength, and pacifye the wrath of hym that made thē. Fyre, hayle, honger, and death: all these thynges are created for vengeaunce.

The teth of wylde noysome beastes, the scorpions, serpentes, and the swearde are created also for vengeaunce, to the destruccyon of the vngodly. They shall be glad to do his commaundementes: and whan nede is, they shalbe ready vpon earth: and whan theyr houre is come, they shall not ouerpasse the commaundement of the LORDE.

Therfore haue I taken a good corage vnto me from the begynnyng, and thought to put these thynges in wrytinge, and to leaue them behynde me. * All the worckes of ꝑ LORDE are good, and he geueth euery one in due season, and whan nede is. So that a man nede not to saye: this is worse the that. For in due season they are al pleasaunt, and good: And therfore prayse the LORDE with whole hart and mouth, and geue thankes vnto hys name.

The.xl. Chapter.

A Greate trauayle is created for all men, and an heuy yock vpon all mens chyldren, from ꝑ daye that they go out of theyr mothers wombe, tyl they be buried in (the earth) the mother of all thynges: namely, theyr thoughtes and ymaginacyons, feare of the hart, councell, meditacions, longynge and desyre, the daye of death: from ꝑ hyghest that sytteth vpon the glorious seate, vnto the lowest and moost symple vpon the earth: from hym that is gorgeously arayed, and weareth a crowne, vntyl him that is but homely and symple clothed. There is nothing but wrath, zele, fearfulnes, vnquietnes, and feare of death, rigorous anger, and stryfe. And in the nyght whan one shulde rest and slepe vpon hys bedde, the slepe chaungeth hys vnderstandyng and knowlege. A lytle as nothynge is his rest, in the slepe, as well as in the daye of laboure. B

He feareth and is disquyeted in the vysyon of hys hart, as one that runneth out of a battayll: and in the tyme of health he awaketh, and marueyleth that the feare was no thynge. Such thynges happen vnto al flesh both man and best: but seuenfolde to the vngodly. Moreouer death, bloudsheddynge, stryfe, and swearde, oppressyon, honger, destruccyon, and punyshment: * these thynges are all created agaynst the vngodly, & for theyr sakes came the floude also. * All ꝑ is of the earth, shall turne to earth agayne: & all waters ebbe agayne in to the see. All bybes and vnryghteousnes shalbe put awaye, but faythfulnes and treuth shall endure for euer. The substaunce and goodes of the vngodly shalbe dryed vp and syncke awaye as a waterfloude, and they shall make a sounde lyke a greate thonder in the rayne, Eccl.39.c & Ge.7.b Gene.3.b Eccl.41.b

Lyke as the ryghteous reioyceth, whan he openeth his hande, so shall the transgressours be vayne, whan theyr goodes danysh and consume awaye. * The chyldren of the vngodly shall not optaine many braunches and the vncleane rotes vpon the hyghe rockes shalbe roted out before the gras by the water syde and vpon the ryuer bankes. C Eccl.41.b

Frendlynes and lyberalyte in the increase and blessyng of God, is lyke a paradyse, & garden of pleasure: such mercy also & kyndnes endureth for euer. * To labour and to be content with that a man hath, is a swete pleasaunt lyfe: and that is to fynde a treasure aboue all treasures. To beget chyldren, and to repayre the cyte, maketh a perpetuall name: but an honest woman is more worth then they both. Wyne and mynstrelsye reioyce the hart, but the loue of wysdome is aboue them both.

1.Ti.6.b. Phil.4.b.

D Pypinge and harpynge make a swete noyse, but a frendly tunge goeth beyonde them both. Thyne eye desyreth fauoure and bewtie but a grene sede tyme rather the they both. A frende and companyon come together at opportunyte, * but aboue them both is a wyfe that agreeth with hyr husbande. One brother helpeth another in the tyme of trouble, but almes shall delyuer more then they but. Golde and syluer fasten the fete, but a good councell is more pleasaunt then they both. Temporall substaunce & strength lyft vp the mynde: but the feare of the LORDE more then they both. The feare of the LORDE wanteth nothynge, and nedeth no helpe. The feare of the LORDE is as a pleasaunt garden of blessyng, and nothyng so bewtyfull as it is. My sonne, lede not a beggers lyfe, for better it were to dye then to begge. Who so loketh to another mans table, taketh no thought for hys owne lyuynge how to vpholde hys lyfe, for he fedeth hymself with other mens meate. But a wyse and well nurtoured man wyll beware therof. Beggynge is swete in the mouth of of the vnshamefast, but in hys belye there burneth a fyre,

Eccli.25.a

The.xli. Chapter.

O Death, how bytter is the remembrance of the, to a man that seketh rest and comforte in his substaunce and ryches, vnto the man that hath nothynge to vexe hym and that hath prosperyte in all thynges, yee vnto hym that yet is able to receaue meate? O death, how acceptable & good is thy iudgment vnto the nedefull, and vnto hym whose strength fayleth, and that is now in hys last age, and that in all thynges is full of care and fearfulnes: vnto hym also that is in dispayre, and hath no hope nor patience? Be not thou afrayed of death: remembre them, that haue bene before the: and that come after the, * this is the iudgment of the LORDE ouer all flesh. And why wouldest thou be agaynst this pleasure of the Hyghest? Whether it be ten, an hundreth, or a thousande yeares: death areth not how longe one haue lyued.

Gene.3.d.

The chyldren of the vngodly are abhominable chyldren, and so are they that kepe company with the vngodly. * The inheritaunce of vngodly chyldren shall come to naught, and theyr posterye shall haue perpetuall shame and confusyon. The chyldren complayne of an vngodly father: and why? for hys sake they are rebuked and despysed. Wo be vnto you (O ye vngodly) which haue forsaken the lawe of the Hyghest God: yf ye be borne, ye shall be borne to cursynge: yf ye dye, the curse shall be youre porcyon.

Ecclu.

* All that is of the earth, shall turne to earth agayne: so go the vngodly also out of the curse in to destruccion. The sorow of men is in theyr body: but the name of the vngodly shalbe put out, for it is nothynge worth. * Laboure to get the a good name, for that shall contynue surer by the, then a thousande greate treasures of golde. A good lyfe hath a nombre of dayes, but a good name endureth euer.

Gen. Ecclu.

My chyldren, kepe wysdome in peace: for wysdome that is hyd and a treasure that is not sene, what profit is in them both? * A man that hydeth his foolyshnes, is better then a man that hydeth his wysdome. Therfore be ye turned at my wordes: for it is not good in all thynges and, alwaye to be ashamed. True fayth must proue, and measure it.

C

Ecclu.

Be ashamed of whordome before father and mother: Be ashamed of lesynge before the prynce & men of auctorite: Of synne, before the iudge and ruler: Of offence, before the congregacyon and people: Of vnrighteousnes, before a companyon, and frende: Of theft, before the neighbours. * As for the treuth of God and hys couenaunt, be not ashamed therof.

Ecclu.

Be ashamed to lye with thyne elbowes vpon the bread: Be ashamed to loke vpon harlottes: Be ashamed to turne awaye thy face from thy frende: Be ashamed to take, and not to geue: Be ashamed also to loke vpon another mans wyfe, and to make many tryflynge wordes with hyr mayden, or to stonde by hyr bedsyde. Be ashamed to vpbrade thy frende: and whan thou geuest ony thynge, cast hym not in the teth wythall.

REhearse not a thynge twyse, and disclose not the wordes, ỹ thou hast harde in secrete. Be shame-fast, and well manered in dede,
so shall euery man fauoure the.
Of these thynges be not thou ashamed, and accepte no persomne to offende. Namely, of these thynges be not ashamed: Of the lawe of God, of the cõuenaunt, of iudgment: to iustyfye the vngodly from his vngodlynes vnto ryghteoulnes, ād to make hym a good man: to deale faithfully with neghbour and compayon: to destrybute the heretage vnto
the frendes: to be dilygent to kepe true measure and weight: to be content, whether thou getest much of lytle: to deale truely with tēporall goodes in beynge an sellynge: to bryn ge vp chyldren with dyligence: to correcte
an euell seruaunt: to kepe that thyne is frō
an euell wyfe: to set a lock where many han-des are: what thou delyuerest, and geuest
ouer to kepe, to tell it, and to weye it: to wryte vp all the delyuerynge and receaupnge: to enforme the vnlearned, and vnwyse: Of olde men, that are iudged of the longe. yf
thou be dilygent in these thynges, truely
thou shalt be learned and wyse and accepted
of all men.

The doughter maketh the father to watch secretly: and the carefulnes that he hath for her, taketh awaye hys slepe: yee in the youth, lest she shulde ouergrowe hym: And

before all the people. * Beholde not euery
mans bewte, and haue not much dwellyn
amonge women. For lyke as the worme in cloth commeth out of clothynge, * so
all wyckednes come of women.

It is better to be with an euell man, then with a frendly wyfe that putteth one to shame and rebuke. I wyll remembre the wor-kes of the LORDE, and declare the thyng
that I haue sene. In the wordes of the LOR DE are his workes. The Sonne ouerlooketh
all thynges with hys shyne, and al hys wor kes are full of the clarnes therof. Hath not the LORDE brought to passe, that hys sayntes shulde tell out all hys wondrous workes, which the almyghtye LORDE
hath stablyshed, All thynges endure in hys glory. He seketh out the grounde of the depe
and the hart, and he knoweth all theyr ymāgynacyon and wysdome. For the LORDE knoweth all scyence and he loketh in to the token of the tyme. He declareth the thyn-ges that are past and for to come, and dyscio
seth thynges that are secrete. * No thought Iob. 42.a

hyghe excellent workes of hys wysdome,
and he is from euerlastynge to euerlastyn-
ge. Unto hym maye nothynge be added no-

hys workes, and as a sparke to loke vpon.

Greate is the LORDE that made it, and nes of the starres, the bewtyfull apparell of heauen, the apparell that the LORDE ligh

teneth in the heyght. At his holy worde they contynue in theyr order, and not one of

Gen.2.9 b. them kayleth in him watch. * Loke vpō the rayne bowe, and prayse hym that made it: very bewtyfull is it in his shyne. He compasseth the heaven aboute with his clearnes, & glory, the handes of the Hyghest haue bended it. Thorow hys commaundemēt he maketh the snowe to fall, and the thonder of his iudgmēt to smyte haystely. Thorow his commaundement the treasures are opened, and the cloudes flye as the fooles. In his power hath he strenghtened the cloudes, and broken the hayle stones.

The mountaynes melt at the syght of hym, the wynde bloweth accordynge to hys wyll. The sounde of his thonder beateth the earth, and so doth the storme of the north: the whyrle wynde also lyghteth downe as a fethered foule, casteth out and spredeth the snow abrode: and as the gresshoppers that destroye al, so kalleth it downe. The eye marueyleth at the bewty of the whytenesse therof and the hart is afrayed at the rayne of it. He poureth out the frost vpon earth, lyke salt, and whan it is frosen, it is as sharpe as the prycke of a thystle.

¶ Whan the colde northwynde bloweth, harde Christall commeth of the water. He lyghteth downe vpon all the gatherynges together of water, and putteth on the waters as a brest plate. He deuoureth the mountaynes, and burneth the wyldernesses: and loke what is grene, he putteth it out lyke fyre. The medicine of all these is, whan a cloude commeth haistely: and whan a dew commeth vpon the heate, it shalbe refreshed agayne.

(In his worde he stilleth the wynde.) In hys councel he setteth the depe, and (the LORDE) Iesus planted it. They that saple ouer the see, tell of hys parels and harmes: and whan we heare it with oure eares, we marueyll therat. For there be straunge wonderous workes, dyuerse maner of nyce beastes walfyshes. Thorow hym are all thynges set in good order and perfourmed, and in hys worde all thynges endure.

D I speake much, but I can not sufficiētly attayne vnto it, for he himself onely is the perfection of all wordes. We shulde prayse the LORDE after all oure power, for he is Psa.95.d. greate in all his workes. * The LORDE is to be feared yee very greate is he, & marueylous is his power. Prayse the LORDE and magnifye hym as much as ye maye, yet Ps.105.a doth he farre exceade all prayse. * O magnifye hym with all youre power, and labour earnestly, yet are ye in no wyse able sufficiently to prayse hym. * Who hath sene him that he myght tell vs? Who can magnifye hym so greatly as he is? For there are hyd yet greater thynges then these be: as for vs we haue sene but few of his workes. For the LORDE hath made all thynges, and geuen wysdome to such as feare God. Dan.7.b. Iob.36.a

The.xliiii.Chapter.

¶ A commendacion of the olde vertuous fathers.

LEt vs commende the noble famous men, and the generacyon of oure forefelders and fathers. Many more glorious actes hath the LORDE done, and shewed his greate power euer sence the begynnyng. The noble famous men raygned in theyr kyngdomes, and bare excellent rule. In theyr wysdome and vnderstondyng, they folowed the counsell shewed in the prophecies. * They led the folke thorow the counsell and wysdome of the scrybes of the people. Wyse sentences are founde in theyr instrucyon. They sought the swetenes and melody of musyck, and brought forth the pleasaunt songes in scrypture. They were ryche also, and coulde comforte & pacifye thole that dwelt with them. All these were very noble, and honorable men in theyr generacyons, and were well reported of in theyr tymes. These haue left a name behynde them, so that theyr prayse shall alwaye be spoken of. Ekx. Afterwarde there were some, whole remembraunce is gone. * They cam to naught, and perysshed, as though they had neuer bene: & became as though they had neuer bene borne and theyr chyldren also with them. Gen.

But verthes these are louynge men, whose ryghteousnes shal neuer be forgotten: but continue by theyr posterye. Theyr chyldren are an holy good heritage: Theyr sede endured fast in the couenaunt. For theyr sakes shall theyr chyldren, and sede continue for euer, and theyr prayse shall neuer be put downe. Theyr bodyes are buried in peace, but theyr name lyueth for euermore. The people can speake of theyr wysdom, and the congregacion can talke of theyr prayse. * Enoch walked ryght and acceptably before the LORDE: therfore was he translated for an example of amendement to the generacyons. * Noe was a stedfast and ryghteous man: and in the tyme of wrath he became a reconcylynge. Therfore was he left a remnaunt vnto the earth, whan the floude came. * In euerlastynge conuenaunt was made with hym, that all flesh shulde perysshe nomore with the water.

* Abraham was a greate father of many people, in glory was there none lyke vnto hym. He kepte the lawe of the Hyghest, & came in to a conuenaunt with hym. He set the conuenaunt in hys flesh, * and whan he was tempted, he was founde kaythfull. Therfore swore God vnto him with an ooth that he wolde blesse all people in hys sede, that he wolde multiplie, and increase him as the dust of the earth, and to exalte hys sede as the starres: yee and that hys sede shulde haue the possession, and inheretaunce of the londe from see to see, and from the ryuer vnto the borders of the londe.

* With Isaac dyd he stablysh the same conuenaunt, for Abrahams his fathers sake. yet that gracious blessinge and health of all men, and conuenaunt dyd he stablysh wyth Isaac, and made it to rest vpon the heade of Iacob. He knew hym, * in that he prospered hym so well and rychely, and gaue hym inheritage, and sundered hys portion by it self, * and parted it amonge the twolue tryues. Kerykull men brought he out of hym, which founde fauoure before all flesh.

The.xlv. Chapter.

MOses beloued of God and men whose remembraunce is in hyghe prayse: hym hathe he LORDE made lyke in the glory of ỳ sayntes, and magnyfyed hym so that the enmyes stode in awe of hym, thorow hys wordes he dyd greate wonders. He made hym greate in the syght of kynges, gaue hym commaundement before hys people, and shewed hym hys glorious power. * He stablysshed hym with kaythfulnes and mekenes, and chose hym out of al men. For he herde his voyce, and ledde him in ỳ darcke cloude: * and there he gaue hym the commaundementes, yee the lawe of lyfe and wysdome that he myght teach Jacob the conuenaunt, and Israel his lawes.

* He chose Aaron hys brother also out of the tribe of Leui, exalted hym, and made hym such like. * In euerlastynge conuenaunt made he with him, and gaue hym the prysthode in the people. He made him glorious in bewtyful araye, and clothed him with the garment of honour. He put perfecte ioye vpon hym, and gyrded him with strength. He decked him with fyne clothes and a tunycle, with an ouerbody cote also and gyrdle.

MAnly and strong in battayll was * Jesus þ sone of Naue, which in steade of Moses the prophet was geuen to be captayne of the people (which accordynge vnto his name was a greate sauecoure, vnto the electe of God) to punysh the enemyes, that rose vp agaynst Israel, that Israel myght optayne theyr inheritaunce. O how greate, noble and excellent was he, * whan he lyft vp hys hande, and drew out hys swearde agaynst þ cyties? Who stode so manly before hym? For the LORDE hymself brought in the enemyes. * Stode not the Sonne styll at hys commaundement, and one daye was as longe as two? He called vpõ the Hyghest and moost myghtye, whan þ enemyes prealsed vpon hym on euery syde: and the LORDE herde hym with the hayle stones. They smote the Heythenysh people myghtely, and in falling downe they slew al the aduersaries so that the Heythen knewe hys hoost, and al hys defence, that the LORDE himself fought agaynst them, for he folowed vpon þ myghtie men of them.

* In the tyme of Moses also he and Caleb the sonne of Jephune, dyd a good worke which stode agaynst the enemyes, wythelde the people from synne, and stylled the wycked murmurynge. * And of syxe hundreth thousande people of fote, they two were preserued, whan they were brought in to the heretage, namely, a londe that floweth wyth mylke & hony. * The LORD gaue strength also vnto Caleb, which remayned with him vnto hys age: so that he went vp in to the hyghe places of the londe, and his sede conquered the same for an heretage: that all the chyldren of Israel myght se, how good a thynge it is, to be obedient vnto the LORD And the iudges or rulers (euery one after hys name) whose hart wente not a whorynge nor departed from the LORDE, and that forsoke not the LORDE vnfaythfully, whose remembraunce hath a good reporte. And the LORDE thondred from heauen, and mayde hys voyce to be herde with a greate noyse. He dyscomfyted the prynces of Tyre, & all the rulers of the Phylystynes. * Before hys last ende, he made protestacyon in the syght of the LORDE, and his anoynted, that the toke nother substaunce, nor good of ony man, no not so much as a shue: and no man myght accuse hym. After this he tolde, that hys ende was at honde, and shewed the kynge also hys ende, and death: and from the earth lyft he vp hys voyce in the prophetye, that the vngodly people shulde perysshe.

* Thus brought he hym to worshyppe
above all prynces, and made hym to haue
a good reporte in the prayse of the LORDE that he shuld weare a crowne of glory. * For
he destroyed the enemyes on euery syde, ro-
ted out the Philystynes hys aduersaryes,
and brake their horne in sunder lyke as it is vnto yet thys daye. In all hys workes he praysed the Hyghest, and Holyest, and ascribed the honoure vnto hym. With hys whole hart dyd he prayse and loue him that made hym. * He set syngers also before the aulter, and in their tune he made swete son
ges. He ordeined to kepe the holy dayes wor shypfully, and that the solempne feastes tho
rowe the whole yeare shulde be honorably holden, with praysynge the name of the LORDE, and with syngynge by tymes
in the morynge in the Sanctuary.

* The LORDE toke awaye hys synnes
and exalted hys horne for euer. He gaue him
the conuenaunt of the kyngdome, and the seate of worshyppe in Israel. * After hym
there rose vp the wyse sonne called Salo-

he myght buylde hym an house in hys name
and prepare the Sanctuary for euer) lyke
as he was well instructe in hys youth, and filled with wysdome and vnderstondynge
as it were with a waterfloude. He couered and filled the whole londe with symilytu-
des and wyse prudent sentences.

cause of hys peace he was beloued. All lon-des marueyled at hys songes, prouerbes, sy mylitudes, and at hys peace, and at the na-

the God of Israel. * He gathered golde as tynne, and he had as much syluer as leade.
* He was mouch in vnordynate loue towar
de women, and was ouercome in affection.
He stayned hys honour, and worshyppe, yee
hys posterite defyled he also, in bryngynge
the wrath of the LORDE vpon hys chyldren, and sorowe after hys tope: * so that hys kyngdome was deuyded, and Ephraim became an vnfaythfull, and an vnconstant kyngdome. * Neuertheles God forsoke not his mercy, nother was he vtterly destroyed,
because of hys workes, that he shulde leaue
vp no posterite.

As for the sede þ came vpon him (which he loued) he brought it not vtterly to naught but gaue yet a remnaunt vnto Iacob, and a rote vnto Dauid out of hym. Thus rested Salomon with hys fathers, and out of hys sede he left behynde hym a very foolyshnes of the people, and such one as had no vnderstondynge: namely. * Roboam which 3.Re.12.b turned awaye the people thorow hys counsell, and Ieroboam the sonne of Nabat, 3 Re.12.b
* which caused Israel to synne, and shewed Ephraym the waye of vngodlynes: In so much that theyr synnes, and mysdedes had the vpperhande so sore, that at the last they were dryuen out of the londe for the same: yee he sought out, and brought vp all wyckednes tyll the vengeaunce came vpon them.

He toke care for hys people, and delyuered them from destruccyon. He kepte hys cyte and made it stronge, that it shulde not be beseged. his hande and toke of the drynckofferynge, and poured in of his wyne: so he poured vpon
the brome of the aulter a good smell vnto
the Hyghest prynce.

Then beganne the sonnes of Aaron to synge, and to blowe wyth trompettes, and make a greate noyse, for a remembraunce and prayse vnto the LORDE. Then were the people afrayed, and fell downe to the

besought the LORDE the Hyghest, that he wolde be mercyfull, tyll the honoure of the LORDE were perfourmed. Thus en

Then wente he downe, and stretched out his handes ouer the whole multytude of the people of Israel, that they shulde geue
prayse and thankes out of theyr lyppes vn-
to the LORDE, and to reioyce in his na-

he myght openly shew the thankesgeuynge
before the Hyghest, namely thus: O geue
prayse and thankes (ye all) vnto the LOR-DE oure God, which hath euer done noble,
and greate thynges: which hath increased oure dayes from oure mothers wombe, and dealt wyth vs accordynge to his mercy: that he will geue vs the ioyfulnes of hart, and peace for oure tymes in Israel. Which faith fully beleueth his mercy for vs euermore, and shall delyuereth vs in due season.

There be two maner of people, that I ab horre in my hart: as for the thyrde, whom I loue, it is no people: They that syt vpon the mountayne of Samaria, the Philystynes, and the foolysh people that dwell in Sychimis.

I Iesus the sonne of Syrac Eleazarus
of Ierusalem, haue marked vp these informations and documentes of wysdome and vnderstādinge in this boke, & poured out þ wisdome out of my hart. Blessed is he that exercyseth hym selfe therin: and who so tak-eth such to hart, shal be wyse. For yf he do these thi ges, he shal be stronge in all. For the lighte of the LORDE ledeth hym.

The.li. Chapter.

A prayer of Iesus the sonne of Syrac

I Thanke þ O LORDE and kyng
and praise the O God my Sa-uioure I wil yelde prayse vnto
thy name: for thou arte my defe
der and helper, and hast preser
ued my body from destruccion, from þ snā-
re of traytorous tunges, and from þ lippes
þ are occupied whith lyes. Thou hast ben my helper, from such as stode vp agynst me
and hast delyuered me after the multitude of thy mercy, and for thy holy names sake.
Thou hast delyuered me from the roarynge
of them, that prepared the selues to deuoure
me, out of the handes of such as sought after my lyfe: from the multytude of them
that troubled me, and wente aboute to set fyre vpō me oncuery syde, so þ I am not brēt
in the myddest of the fyre: From the depe of hell, from an vncleane tunge, from lyenge wordes, from the wycked kynge, and from an vnrighteous tūge. My soule shal prayse the LORDE vnto death, for my lyfe drew nye vnto hell.

They compassed me rounde aboute on
euery syde, and there was no man to helpe
me. I loked aboute me, yf there were ony man that wolde succoure me: but ther was none. Then thought I vpon thy mercy O LORDE, and vpon thy actes that thou hast done euer of olde: namely, that thou delyue-
rest such as put theyr trust in the, and ryd-dest them out of the handes of þ Heythen.

Thus lyfte I vp my prayer from the earth, and prayed for delyueraunce from death. I called vpon the LORDE my father, that he wolde not leaue me wythout helpe, in the daye of my trouble, and in the tyme of the proude. I prayse thy name con tynually, yeldinge honoure & thankes vnto
it: & so my prayer was herde. Thou sauedest me from destruccyon, and delyuered me from the vnryghteous tyme. Therfore wyll I aknowlege and prayse the, and magnifye the name of the LORDE.

C Whan I was yet but yonge, or euer I went astraye, I desyred wysdome openly in my prayer. I came therfor before ỹ temple and sought her vnto the last. Then florished she vnto me, as a grape that is soone rype. My hart reioyced in her, then went my fote the ryght waye, ye from youth vp sought I after her: I bowed downe myne eare and receaued her. I founde me much wysdome and prospered greatly in her. Therfore wyl I ascrybe the glory vnto hym, that geueth me wysdome: for I am aduysed to do therafter. I wil be gelous to cleue vnto the thinge that is good, so shall I not be confounded. My soule hath wrestled wyth her, and I haue bene dyligent to be occupyed in her. I lyft vp myne handes an hyghe, then was my soule lyghtened thorow wysdome, that I knowleged my foolyshnes. I ordred my soule after her, she and I were one hart from the begynnynge, and I founde her in clennesse. And therfore shall I not be forsaken.

D My hart longed after her, and I gat a good treasure. Thorow her the LORDE hath geuen me a new tunge, wherwyth I wyll praise hym. O come vnto me ye vnlearned, & dwell in the house of wysdome: wythdrawe not youre selues from her, but talke and comon of these thynges, for youre soules are very thyrstye. I opened my mouth, Esa.55.a and spake: * O come and bye wysdome wythout money, bowe downe youre nerk vnder hyr yock, and your soule shal receaue wysdome. She is harde at hande, and is cõtent to be founde. Beholde wyth your eyes, Eccli.6.c. * how that I haue had but lytle laboure, and yet haue founde much rest. O receaue wysdome, and ye shal haue, plenteousnes of syluer and golde in possessyon. Let your mynde reioyce in hys mercye, and be not ashamed of hys prayse. Worke hys worke by tymes, and he shall geue you your rewarde in due tyme.

AND they walked in ỹ myddest of the fyre, prayesynge God, and magnifyng ỹ LORD. Azarias stode vp, & prayde on this maner. Euen in the myddest of the fyre opened he his mouth, and sayde: Blessed be thou (O LORD God of our fathers) ryght worthy to be prayed and honoured is that name of thyne for euermore: for thou art ryghteous in al the thynges that thou hast done to vs: yee faythfull are all thy workes, thy wayes are ryght, and thy iudgmentes true. In all the thynges that thou hast brought vpõ vs, and vpon the holy cyte of our fathers (ye Jerusalem) thou hast executed true iudgmẽt: yee accordynge to ryght, and equyte hast thou brought these thynges vpon vs, because of oure synnes.

For why: we haue offended, & done wyckedly, departynge from the: * In all thynges haue we trespased, and not obeyed thy commaundementes, nor kepte them, nether done as thou hast bidden vs, that we might prospere. * Wherfore, al ỹ thou hast brought vpon vs, and euery thynge that thou hast done to vs, thou hast done them in true iudgment: As in delyuerynge vs in to the handes of oure enemyes, amonge vngodly and wycked abhominacions, and to an vnryghteous kynge, yee the moost frowarde vpon earth. And now we maye not open our mouthes, we are become a shame and reproch vnto thy seruauntes, & to them ỹ worshyppe the.

yet for thy names sake (we beseche the) geue vs not vp for euer, breake not thy couenaunt, and take not awaye thy mercy from vs, for thy beloued Abrahams sake, for thy seruaunt Isaacs sake, and for thy holy Israels sake: to whom thou hast spoken and promysed, * that thou wolden multiplye their sede as the starres of heauen, and as the sonde that lieth vpõ the see shore. For we (O LORDE) are become lesse then any people, and be kepte vnder this daye in all the worlde, because of oure synnes. And that now we haue nother prynce, lorde, prophet, burntoffrynge, sacrifyce, oblacion, incense, nor sanctuary before the.

Nevertheles, in a contryte harte, and in a lowly spryte let vs be receaued, that we may optayne thy mercy. Like as in ỹ burnt offrynge of rammes, and bullockes, and ly ke as in thousandes of fat lambes: so let our sacrifyce be in thy syght thys daye, that it may please the, * for there is no confusion for them, that put theyr trust in the. And now we folowe the with all our harte, we feare the, and seke thy face. Put vs not to shame, but deale with vs after thy louynge
benygnite, and accordynge to the multitude of thy mercies. Delyuer vs by thy myracles (O LORDE) and get thy name an honoure:
that all they which do thy seruauntes euell:
maye be confounded, Let them be ashamed
for thy Almyghtie power, and let theyr
strength be broken: that they maye knowe,
how that thou onely art the LORDE God
and honoure worthy thorow out all the world.

And the kynges seruauntes that put them in, ceassed not to make the ouen hote,
with lyde fyre, dyre strawe, pitch, and faggottes: so that the flamme wente out of the ouen vpon a.xlix. cubytes, yee it toke awaye
and burnt vp those Caldees, that it gat holde vpon beyde the ouen. But the angell of the LORDE came downe in to the ouen to Azarias, and hys felowes, and smote the flame of the fyre out of the ouen, and made the middest of the ouen, as it had bene a colde wynde blowynge: so that the fyre nothyng touched them, greued them, nor dyd them hurte. Then these thre (as out of one mouth) praysed, honoured, and blessed God
in the fornace, sayenge:

* Blessed be thou, o LORDE God of our fathers: for thou art prayse and honou
worthy, yee and to be magnyfyed for euer
more. * Blessed be the holy name of thy glo rious ye is worthy to be praysed, and magnyfyed in all worldes. Blessed be thou in the holy temple of thy glory, for aboue all thyn-ges thou art to be praysed, yee and more thé worthy to be magnyfyed for euer. Blessed art thou in the trone of thy kyngdome, for aboue all thou arte worthy to be wel spoken
of, and to be more then magnyfyed for euer.
Blessed be thou, that lokest thorow the depe
and sittest vpon the Cherubyns: for thou art worthy to be praysed, and aboue all to be magnyfyed for euer. Blessed be thou in the firmament of heauen, for thou art prayse

The story of Sulanna Which is the .xiii. chapter of Daniel after the Latyn.

THere dwelt a man in Babylon, called Joachym: that toke a wyfe whose name was Sulanna, (the doughter of Helchias) a very fayre womā, and such one as feared God. Hyr father, & hyr mother, also were godly people, and taught hyr doughter accordyng to the lawe of Moses. Now Joachym (hyr husbond) was a greate ryche man, and had a fayre orcharde ioynynge vnto his house. And to hym resorted the Jewes comunly, because he was a man of reputacion among them. The same yeare were there made two iudges, such as the LORDE speaketh of. All the wyckednesse of Babylon, commeth from the elders (that is) from the iudges, which seme rule to ꝑ people. These came oft to Joachims house: and all such as had ony thynge to do in the lawe, came thyther vnto them.

Now when the people came agayne at after noone, Sulanna wente in to hyr husbondes orcharde, to walke. The elders seyng this, that she wēt in daylie and walked: they burned for lust to her, yee they were almoost out of theyr wittes, and cast downe theyr eyes, that they shulde not se heauen, nor remembre, that God is a ryghteous iudge. For they were both wounded with the loue of her, neither durst one shewe another hys grefe. And for shame, they durst not tell her theyr inordynate lust, that they wolde fayne haue had to do with her, yet they layed watte for her earnestly from daye to daye, ꝑ they myght (at the leest) haue a syght of her. Then the one sayde to ꝑ other: Up, let vs go home, for it is dyner tyme. So they wente thyre waye from her.

When they returned agayne, they came together, enquerying out the matter betwene them selues: yee the one tolde the other of hys wicked lust. Then appoynted they a tyme when they myght take Sulanna alone.

It happened also that they spyed out a conuenient tyme, when she wente forth to walke (as hyr maner was) and no body with her but two maydens, and thought to wash herselfe in ꝑ garde, for it was an hoot season.

so there was not one person there, excepte the two elders, that had hyd themselues, to beholde her. So she sayde to hir maydens: Fet me oyle & lope, & shut the orcharde dore, that I maye wash me. And they dyd as she bad them, and shut the orcharde dore, & went out them selues at a backe dore, to fet the thynge that she had commaunded: but Sulanna knewe not, that the Elders laye there hyd within. Now when the maydens were gone forth, the two elders gat them vp and came vpon her, sayenge: Now, the orcharde dores are shut, that no man can se vs: we haue a lust vnto the, therfore consent vnto vs, and lye with vs.

If thou wilt not, we shall bringe a testimonyall agaynst the, that there was a yonge felowe with the, and that thou hast sent away thy maydens from the for the same cause. Sulanna sighed, and sayde: Alas I am in trouble on euery syde. Though I folowe youre mynde, it wyl be my death: and if I assent not vnto you, I can not escape your handes. Wel, it is better for me, to fal into youre handes without ye dede doinge, then to synne in the sight of the LORDE: & with that, she cried out with a loude voyce: the elders cried also out agaynst her.

Then ranne there one to the orcharde dore, & made it open. Now when the seruauntes of the house herde ye crie in the orcharde, they rushed in at the backe dore, to se what the matter was. So when the elders tolde them, the seruauntes were greatly ashamed: for there was neuer such a reporte made of Sulanna. On the morow after came the people to Joachim hir husbande, and the elders came also, full of myschieuous imaginations agaynst Sulanna, to bring her vnto death, & spake thus before ye people: Sende for Sulanna the doughter of Helcias, Joachims wife. And immediatly they sent for her. So she came with her father and mother, hir chylder, and all hyr kynne. Now Sulanna was a tender person and maruelous fayre of face. Therfore the wicked men commaunded to take of the couering from her face (for she was couered) that at the leest, they might so be satisfied in their lust. Then hir frendes, yee and all they that knewe her, beganne to wepe.

Then the two elders stode vp in the myddest of the people, & layed their handes vpon ye head of Sulanna: which wepte and loked vp vnto heauē, for hyr harte had a sure trust in the LORDE. And the elders sayde: As we were walkynge in the orcharde alone, this woman came in with hir two maydens: whom she sent awaye from her, and shutted the orcharde dores. With that, a yonge felowe (which there was hyd) came vnto her, and laye with her. As for vs we stode in a corner of the orcharde. And when we sawe this wickednes, we ranne to her: & perceaued ye they had medled together. But we could not hold hym, for he was stronger then we, thus he opened the dore, and gat him awaye. Now when we had taken this woman, we axed her, what yonge felow this was: but she wold not tel vs. This is ye matter, & we be witnesses of the same.

The comune sorte beleued them, as those that were the elders and iudges of the people, and so they condemned her to death. Sulāna cryed out with a loude voyce, and sayde: O euerlasting God, * thou searcher of secretes, thou that knowest all thinges afore they come to passe: thou wotest, that they haue borne false wytnes agaynst me: & beholde I must dye, where as I neuer dyd any such thynges, as these men haue maliciously inuented agaynst me. And the LORDE herde hir voyce. For when she was led forth to the death, the LORDE rayled vp the spyrite of a yonge chylde, whose name was Daniel, whyche cryed with a loude voyce: * I am clene from thys blonde. Then all the people turned them towarde hym, and sayde: What meane these wordes, that thou hast spoken? Daniel stode in the myddest of them & sayde: Are ye such fooles (O ye chylder of Israel) that ye can not discerne? ye haue here condemned a doughter of Israel vnto death, and knowe not the treuth wherfore: Go sye on iudgement agayne, for they haue spoken false wytnesse agaynst her.

Wherfore the people turned agayne in all the hayst. And the elders (that is ye principal heades) sayd vnto him: Come sit downe here among vs, and shewe vs this matter, seynge God hath geuen the as greate honoure, as an elder. And Daniel sayde vnto the * Put these two asyde one from another & the shal I hear them. When they were put a sunder one frome another, he called one of the, and sayde vnto him: O thou olde cancherde carle, that hast vsed thy wickednesse so longe: thine vngracious dedes which thou hast done afore, are now come to light. For thou hast geuen false iudgmentes, thou hast oppressed the innocent, and letten the gyltie go free: where as yet the LORDE sayeth: * The [illegible] and eyghe-

Hteous se thou slaye not. Well than, yf thou hast sene her, tell me, vnder what tre sawest thou them talkynge together? He answered Vnder a Wolbery tre. And Daniel sayde: very well. Now thou lyest euen vpon thyne heade. Lo the messaunger of the LORDE, hath receaued the sentence of hym, to cut the in two.

Then put he hym aside, and called for the other, and sayde vnto him: O thou sede of Canaan, but not of Juda: Faynesse hath deceaued the, and lust hath subuerted thyne harte. Thus dealte ye afore with the doughters of Israel, and they (for feare) consented vnto you: but the doughter of Juda wolde not abyde youre wickednesse. Now tell me thā, vnder what tre diddest thou take them speakinge togethe? He answered: vnder a pomgranate tre. Then sayde Danyel vnto him: very wel, now thou lyest also euen vpō thine heade. Bell

The story of Bel: Which is the xiiii. Chapter of Daniel after the Latin.

THere was at Babilon an ymage, called Bel: and there were spent vpon him euery daye.xii. 1 cakes, xl. shepe, and sixe greate pottes of wyne. Hym dyd the kynge worshippe himself, and went dayly to honour him: but Daniel worshipped his owne God. And the kynge sayde vnto him: Why doest not thou worshipp Bel? He answered & sayde: * Because I maye not worshippe thinges, that be made with honder, & but the lyuynge God which made heauen and earth, and hath power vpon all flesh. The kynge sayde vnto hym: thynkest thou not, that Bel is a lyuynge God? Seyest thou not, how much he eateth and drinketh euery daye? Daniel smyled, and sayde: O kynge deceaue not thyselfe: Thys is but made of claye within, and of metall without * nether eateth he euer ony thynge.

Then the kynge was wroth, and called for his prestes, and sayde vnto them: Yf ye 2 tell my not who this is, that eateth vp these expences, ye shall dye: But yf ye can certifie me, that Bel eateth them, then Daniel shall dye, for he hath spoken blasphemy agayns Bel. And Daniel sayde vnto ꝑ kynge: let it be so, accordinge as thou hast sayde. The prestes of Bel were. lxx. besyde their wyues and chyldre. And the kynge went with Daniel in to the temple of Bel. So Bels prestes sayde: Lo, we wil go out, and set thou ꝑ meate there (O kynge) and poure in ꝑ wyne, then shut the dore fast, and seale it with thine owne signet: and tomorow whan thou comest in, yf thou fyndest not, that Bel hath eaten vp all, we will suffre death: or els Daniel, that hath lyed vpon vs. The prestes thought them selues sure enough, for vnder the altare they had made a preuy intraunce, and there wente they in euer, and dyd eate vp what there was.

So when they were gone forth, the kynge set meates before Bel. Now Daniel had cōmaunded his seruātes to bringe ashes and these he sifted thorow out all the temple, that the kynge might se. Then wente they out, and sparred ꝑ dore, sealinge it with the kynges signet, and so departed. In the nyght came the prestes with their wyues & chyldren (as they were wõte to do) & dyd eate & drinke vp all. In the morninge by tymes at the breake of the daye, the kynge arose, & Daniel with hym. And the kynge sayde: Daniel, are the seales whole yet? He answerde: yet (o kynge) they be whole. Now as soone as he had opened the doze, the kynge loked vnto the altare, and cried with a lowde voyce: Greate art thou o Bel, and wyth the is no deceate. Then laughed Daniel, & bade the kynge that he shulde not go in, & sayde: Beholde the pauement, marcke well, whose fotesteppes are these? The kynge sayde: I se the fotesteppes of men, women and chyldren.

Therfore the kyng was angrie, and toke the prestes, with their wyues and chyldren, where they shewed hym ỹ preuy dozes, where they came in, & dyd eate vp such thinges as were vpon the altare. For the which cause ỹ kynge slewe them, * and delyuered Bel in to Daniels power, which destroyed hym & his temple.

And in ỹ same place there was a greate dragon, which they of Babylon wozshypped. And ỹ kynge sayde vnto Daniel: sayest thou not that this is but a god of matall also? he liueth, he eateth and drinketh: so that thou canst not saye, ỹ he is no lyuynge God, therfore wozshippe hym. Daniel sayde vnto the kynge: I wyll wozshippe the LORDE my God, * he is the true lyuynge God: as for this, he is not the God of lyfe. But geue me leaue (o kynge) and I shal destroye this dragon without swearde oz staf. The kynge sayde: I geue the leaue. Then Daniel toke pytch, tatte and heery woll, & dyd seth them together, and made lõpes therof: this put in the Dragons mouth, and so the dragon burst in sonder: and Daniel sayde: Lo here is he whõ ye wozshipped.

When they of Babylon herde that, they were greate indignacion, and gathered thẽ selues agaynst the kynge, sayenge: The kynge is become a Jewe also, he hath destroyed Bel, he hath slayne the Dragon, & slayne the prestes to death. So they came to ỹ kynge and sayde: let vs haue Daniel, oz els we wyl destroye the and thyne house.

And whan the kynge sawe, that they rushed in so sore vpon hym, and that necessite constrayned hym, * he delyuered Daniel vnto them: which cast hym in to the lyons denne, where he was sixe dayes. In the denne were seuen lyons, and they had geuen them euery daye two bodies and two shepe: which then were not geuen them, that they might deuoure Daniel.

There was in Jewry a prophet called Habacuc, which had made porage, and crõmed bread in a depe platter, and was going in to the felde, for to bringe it to ỹ mowers. But the angell of the LORDE sayde vnto Habacuc: go cary the meate that thou hast in to Babilon, vnto Daniel, which is in the lyons denne. And Habacuc sayde: LORDE, I neuer sawe Babylon: and as for the dens, I knowe it not. * Then the angell of the LORDE toke hym by ỹ toppe, and bare hym by the heere of ỹ heade, & (thorow a mighty wynde) set hym in Babylon vpon the denne. And Habacuc cryed, sayenge: O Daniel * thou seruaunt of God, haue, take the breakfast that God hath sent the. And Daniel sayde: O God, hast thou thought vpon me? well, thou neuer faylest them that loue the. So daniel arose, and dyd eate, and the angel of ỹ LORDE set Habacuc in his owne place agayne immediatly.

Upon the seuenth daye, the kynge went to bewepe Daniel: and whan he came to ỹ denne, he loked in: and beholde, Daniel sat in the myddest of the lyons. Then cryed the kynge with a loude voyce, sayenge: Greate art thou, o LORDE God of Daniel: * and he drewe him out of the dene. * As for those that were the cause of his destruccio, he dyd cast them in to the denne, and they were deuoured in a moment before his face.

After this, wrote the kynge vnto all people, kynredes and tunges that dwelt in al coutrees, sayenge: peace be multiplied vnto you. My commãdement is, in all the dominion of my realme, that men feare and stonde in awe of Daniels God, * for he is ỹ lyuinge God, which endureth euer. * his kyngdom abydeth vncorrupte, and his power is euerlastynge. It is he that can delyuer and saue: he doth wonders and marueylous workes in heauen and in earth, for he hath saued Daniel from the power of the Lyons.

of the thre chyldren

The first Chapter.

After that Alexander the sonne of Philippe kynge of Macedonia went forth of the lande of Cethim, & slewe Darius kynge of the Persians and Medes: It happened, ye he toke greate wares in honde, wanne very many stronge cytties, and slewe many kynges of the earth: goynge thorow to the endes of the worlde, and gettynge many spoyles of the people: In so much, that the worlde stode in greate awe of hym, * and therfore was he proude in his harte. And when he had gathered a mightye stronge hoost, and subdued the londes and people with their princes, so that they became tributaries vnto him: he fell sick. And when he perceaued that he must nedes dye, he called for his noble estates (which had ben brought vp with hym of children), * & parted his kyngdome amonge them, whyle he was yet alyue. So Alexander raygned.xii. yeare, and then dyed,

After his death fell the kyngdome vnto his princes, and they optayned it euery one in his rowme, and caused them selues to be crowned as kynges: & so dyd their children after them many yeares, & much wickednes increaced in the worlde. Out of these came ye vngracious rote, noble Antiochus ye sone of Antiochus ye kynge (* which had ben a pledge at Rome) & he raigned in ye.cxxxvii. yeare of the raygne of the Grekes.

In those dayes wente there out of Israel wicked men, which moued much people with their councell, sayenge: * Let vs go & make a cõuenaunt with the Heithen, yt are rounde aboute vs: for sence we departed from them, we haue had much sorow. So this deuyce pleased them well, and certayne of the people toke vpon the for to go vnto ye kynge, which gaue them licence to do after the ordinaunce of the Heithen. * Then set they vp an open scole (at Jerusalem) of the lawes of the Heithen, and were nomore circumcised: but forsoke the holy Testament, and ioyned them selues to the Heithe, * and were cleane solde to do myschefe.

So whe Antiochus beganne to be mighty in his kyngdome, he wente about to optayne ye londe of Egipte also, that he might haue the dominion of two realmes. * Vpõ this entred he in to Egypte with a stronge

hoste, with carrettes, elephantes, horsmē & a greate nombre of shippes, and begānne to warre agaynst Ptolome ỹ kynge of Egipte but Ptolome was afrayed of hym, & fled: and many of his people were wounded to death. Thus Antiochus wanne many stroge cities, and toke awaye greate good out of the londe of Egypte.

* And after that Antiochus had smytten Egypte he turned againe in the. C. xliii. yeare and wente towarde Israel, and came vp to Jerusalem wyth a myghtie people: and entred proudly in to the Sanctuary, and toke awaye the golden altare, the candelsticke and all the ornamentes therof: the table of ỹ shewbread, the pouringe vessel, the chargers, the golden spones, the vale, the crownes and golden apparel of the temple and brake downe all. He toke also the syluer and golde, the precious Jewels, and the secrete treasures that he founde. And when he had taken awaye all together, caused greate murthur of men, and so fulfilled his malicious pryde, he departed in to his owne londe.

Thus there arose greate heuynesse & misery in all the londe of Israel. The prynces and the elders of ỹ people mourned, ỹ yonge men and the maydens were defyled, and the fayre bewty of women was chaunged: the bridegrome and the bryde toke them to mournynge: the londe and those that dwelt therin, was moued: for all the house of Jacob was brought to confusion.

* After two yeares the kynge sent his chefe treasurer vnto the cities of Juda, which came to Jerusalem with a greate multitude of people, speakinge peaceable wordes vnto them, but all was deceate: * for when they had geuen hym credence, he fell sodenly vpon the cyte, and smote it sore, and destroyed much people of Israel. And whan he had spoyled the cyte, he set fyre on it, castinge downe houses and walles on euery syde. The women and their chyldren toke they captyue, and led awaye their cattell. Then buylded they the castel of Dauid wyth a greate and thicke wall, and with mighty towres, & made it a stronge holde for them. Beside all thys they set wicked people and vngodly men to kepe it, floared it with weapens and bytayles: gathered the goodes of Jerusalem, and layed them vp there: thus became it a theuysh castell.

And this was done to laye wayte for the people that wente in to the Sanctuary, and for the cruell destruccion of Israel. Thus they shed innocēt bloude on euery syde of ỹ Sanctuary, and defiled it: In so much that the citesyns were layne to departe, and the cyte became an habitacion of straungers, beynge desolate of hir owne sede, for hir owne natyues were fayne to leaue her. Hir sanctuary was clene waysted, * hir holy dayes were turned in to mournig, hir Sabbathes were had in derision, & hir honoure brought to naught. Loke how greate hir glory was afore, so greate was hir confusion, and hir ioye turned in to sorow. Tobi. 2. a Amos. 8. b

* Antiochus also the kynge sent out a cōmission vnto all his kyngdome, that all the people shulde be one. Then they left euery man his lawe, and all the Heythen agreed to the cōmaundement of kynge Antiochus yee many of the Israelites consented vnto, offeringe vnto Idols, and defylinge the Sabbath. So ỹ kynge Antiochus sent his messaungers with his commission vnto Jerusalem, and to all the cyties of Juda: that they shulde folowe the lawes of ỹ Heythen, and forbadde other burntofferynge, meatofferynge or peaceofferynge to be made in the temple of God, and there shulde no Sabbath nor hye feast daye be kepte: but commaunded, that the Sanctuary and the holy people of Israel shulde be defyled. C 2. Mac. 6. a

He commaunded also that there shulde be set vp other altares, tempels and Idols: to offre vp swynes flesh and other vncleane beastes: that men shulde leaue their children vncircumcised, to defyle their soules with all maner of vnclennesse & abhominacions: that they myght so forget ỹ lawe, and chaunge all the holy ordinaunces of God: & that who so euer wolde not do accordynge to the cōmaundemēt of kynge Antiochus, shulde suffre death. In lyke maner commaunded he thorow out all his realme, and set rulers ouer the people, for to compell them to do these thynges, commaundinge the cyties of Juda to do sacrifice vnto Idols.

Then wente the people vnto the Heithen by heapes, forsoke the lawe of the LORDE and committed much euell in the londe: yee and chased out the secrete Israelites, which had hyd them selues in corners and preuy places. The xv. daye of the moneth Casleu, in the. CxlV. yeare, set kynge Antiochus an abhominable Idoll of desolacion vpō the altare of God, and they buylded altares thorow out all the cyties of Juda on euery syde, before the dores of the houses, and in the stretes: where they brent incense, and dyd sacrifice. * And as for the bokes of the lawe of God, they brent them in ꝑ fyre, and rente them in peces. What so euer he was that had a boke of the Testament of the LORDE founde by hym, yee who so euer endeuoured himselfe to kepe the lawe of the LORDE, the kynges commaundemēt was that they shulde put him to death. And thorow hys auctorite they executed these thynges euery moneth, vpon the people of Israel that were foūde in the cyties.

Jere.36.c

2.Mac.6.b * The fyue and twentye daye of the moneth, what tyme as they dyd sacrifice vpon the altare (which stode in the steade of the altare of the LORDE) accordinge to the commaundement of kynge Antiochus, they put certayne womē to death, which had caused their chyldren to be circumcysed: Not only that, but they hanged vp the chyldren by ꝑ neckes thorow out all their houses, & slewe the circumcisers of them.

Yet were there many of the people of Israel, which determyned in them selues, that they wolde not eate vncleane thynges: but chose rather to suffre death, then to be defyled with vncleane meates. So because they wolde not breake the blessed lawe of God, they were cruelly slayne. And this greate tyranny increased very sory vpō the people of Israel.

The.ii.Chapter.

IN those dayes there dyd stonde vp one Mathathias the sonne of John the sonne of Symeon the prest (out of ꝑ kynred of Joarib) frō Jerusalem, and dwelt vpon the mount of Modin, and had. v. sonnes: Jhō called Gaddis: Symon called Thaly: Judas, other wyse called Machabeus: Eleazar, other wyse called Abaron: & Jonathas, whose surname was Apphus. These sawe the euell, that was done amonge the people of Juda and Jerusalem. And Mathathias sayde: Wo is me, alas that euer I was borne, to se this mysery of my people, and the piteous destruccion of the holy cyte: and thus to syt so styll, it beynge delyuered in to the hondes of the enemyes, * Hir Sanctuary is come in to the power of straungers, hir temple is, as it were a mā that hath lost his good name. Hir precious ornamentes are caried awaye captyue, hyr olde men are slayne in the stretes, and hyr yonge men are fallen thorow the swearde of the enemyes. 1.Mac

What people is it, that hath not some possession in hyr kyngdome? Or who hath not gotten some of hyr spoyles? All hir glory is taken awaye. She was a Quene, and now she is become an handmayde. Behold our Sanctuary, oure bewty & honoure is waysted awaye and defyled by the Gentiles. What helpeth it vs then to lyue? And Mathathias rente his clothes, he and his sonnes, and put sack cloth vpon them, and mourned very sore.

Then came the men thyther whiche were sent of kynge Antiochus, to compell such as were fled in the cyte of Modin, for to do sacrifice and to burne incense vnto Idols, & to forsake the lawe of God. So, many of ꝑ people of Israel consented and enclyned vn to them, but Mathathias and his sonnes remayned stedfast. The speake the commissioners of kynge Antiochus, and sayde vnto Mathathias: Thou art a noble man, of greate reputacion and greate in this cite, hauynge sayre chyldren and brethren. Come thou therfore fyrst, and fulfyll the kynges commaundement, lyke as all the Heythen haue done, yee and the men of Juda, and such as remayne at Jerusalem: so shalt thou and thy chyldren be in the kynges fauoure, and enriched with gold, syluer & greate rewardes.

Mathathias answered, and spake with a loude voyce: Though all nacions obey kynge Antiochus, and fall awaye euery man frō keppynge ꝑ lawe of their fathers: though they consente to his commaundemētes, yet will I & my sonnes and my brethren, not fall frō the lawe of oure fathers. God forbyd we shulde: * that were not good for vs, that we shulde forsake the lawe and ordinaunces of God, and to agre vnto the commaundement of kynge Antiochus. Therfore we will do no such sacrifice, nether breake the statutes of our lawe, * to go another waye. And whē he had spoke these wordes there came one of the Jewes, which openly in ꝑ sight of al, dyd sacrifice vnto ꝑ Idols vpon the aulter in the cite of Modin, accordinge to the kyngys commaundement.

When Matathias sawe this, it greued hym at the harte, so that hys raynes shoke withall, and his wrath kindled for very zele of the lawe. Wyth that he gaue a skippe forth, and kylled the Jew beside the aulter: yee and slewe the kynges commissioner, ꝑ compelled hym to do sacrifice, and destroyed the aulter at the same tyme: such a zele had he vnto the lawe God, * lyke as Phynees dyd vnto Zambri the sonne of Salomy. And Matathias cried with a loude voyce throwout the cyte, sayenge: Who so is feruent in the lawe, and kepe the conuenaunt let hym folowe me. * So he and his sonnes fled in to the mountaynes and left all that euer they had in the cyte. Many other godlyemen also departed in to the wyldernesse with their children, their wyues and theyr catell, and remayned there: for the tyrannye increased so sore vpon them.

Now when the kynges seruauntes and the host, which was at Jerusalem in the cyte of Dauyd herde, that certayne men had broken the kynges commaundement, and were gone their waye to the wyldernesse in secrete places, and that there were many assembled after them: they folowed vpon the and fought agaynst them in the Sabbath daye, and sayde: Wyll ye yet rebell? Get you forth and do the commaundement of kynge Antiochus, and ye shall lyue. They answered: We wyll not go forth, neither wyll we do the kynges commaundement, to defyle the Sabbath daye. Then beganne they to fyght agaynst them: neuertheles they gaue them none other answere, nether cast they one stone at them, nor made fast theyr lurkinge places, but sayde: We will dye all in our innocency, heauen and earth shall testifye for vs, that ye put vs to death wronge fully. Thus they fought agaynst them vpon the Sabbath, and slewe both men and wemen, their wyues and their children, to ꝑ nombre of a thousande people.

When Matathias and hys frendes herde this, they mourned for them tyght sore, and sayde one to another: If so be that we all do as oure brethren haue done, & fyght not for oure lyues and for oure lawes agaynst the Heythen, then shall they the sooner vs out of the earth. So they concluded amonge them selues at the same tyme, sayenge: What so euer he be that commeth to make battayll with vs vpon the Sabbath daye, we wyll fyght agaynst hym, and not dye all, as oure brethren that were murthered so haynously. Vpon thys came the Synagoge of the Jewes vnto them: stroge men of Israel, all such as were feruent in the lawe. And all they that were fled for persecucion, came to helpe them, and to stonde by them: In so much that they gathered an hoost of men, and slewe the wicked doers in their gelousy, and the vngodly men in their wrath. Some of the wicked fled vnto the Heythen, and escaped.

Thus Matathias and his frendes wente aboute, and destroyed the aulters, and circumcised the children, that had not yet receaued ꝑ circūcision: as many as they founde within ꝑ coastes of Israel: and folowed mightely vpon the children of pryde, and thys acte prospered in their hondes: In so much, that they kepte the lawe agaynst the power of the Gentiles and the kynges, and gaue not ouer their dominion vnto wycked doers.

After thys when the tyme drew on fast, that Matathias shulde dye, he sayde vnto his sonnes: Now is pryde and persecution increased, now is the tyme of destruccion and wrathfull displeasure: Wherfore (o my sonnes) be ye feruent in the lawe, and laye downe youre lyues for the Testament of the fathers: call to remembraunce what actes oure fathers dyd in their tyme, so shall ye receaue greate honoure and an euerlastinge name.

Remembre Abraham: * was not he founde faythfull in temtacion, and it was reckened vnto him for righteousnesse? & Joseph in tyme of his trouble kepte the commaundement, and was made a lorde of Egipte. * Phinees oure father was so feruet for the honoure of God, that he optayned the cōuenaunt of an euerlastynge preesthode. * Josue for fulfyllynge the worde of God, was made the captayne of Israel. * Caleb bare witnesse before the congregacion, and receaued an heretage. & Dauid also in his mercyfull kyndnesse, optayned the trone of an euerlastynge kyngdome. * Elias beynge gelous and feruent in the lawe, was taken vp in to heauen. * Hananias, Azarias and Mysael remayned stedfast in faith, and were delyuered out of the fyre. In like maner * Daniel beynge vngylte, was saued from the mouth of the Lyons.

And thus ye maye consydre throwout all ages sence the worlde begaume, * that who so euer put their trust in God, were not ouercome. & Feare not ye then the wordes of an vngodly mā, * for his glory is but dōge

The.iii.Chapter

Iosephus cap.8.9.li. 12.Antiq.

THen stode vp Judas Machabeus in his father steade, and all his b;ethren helped hym: &
so dyd all they that helde with his father, & fought with chart
fulnesse fo; Israel. So Judas gat his people greate honoure: he put on a b;est plate
as a giaunte, and a;ayed himself with his harnesse, and defended the hoost wyth hys swearde. In hys actes he was like a lyon, psal.100.b & as a lyons whelpe roaringe at his p;aye.
1.mac.3a * He was an enemie to ꝑ wicked, and hu̅ted them out: & b;ent vp those, that vered his people. So that his enemies fled fo; feare of hym, and all the wo;kers of vngodlynes
were put to trouble: such lucke & p;osperite
was in his hode. This greued dyuerse kynges, but Jacob was greatly reioyced tho-row his actes, and he gat him selfe a greate
name fo; euer.

He wente tho;ow the cities of Juda, destroyenge the vngodly out of them, turnynge awaye the w;ath from Israel, and reccauynge such as were opp;esse̅d: and the fame
of hym wente vnto the vtermost parte of ꝑ earth. Then Appollonius (a p;ince of Syria gathered a myghtie greate hoost of the Heythen and out of Samaria, to fight a-gaynst Israel. Which when Judas perce-ued, he wente fo;th to mete him, fought w him, slew him, and a greate multitude with him: the remnaunte fled, and he take they;
substaunce. Judas also toke Appollonius owne swearde, and fought with it al his life longe.

Now whe Seron (another p;ynce of Sy ria) herde saye, that Judas had gathered vnto hym the congregacion and church of the faythfull, he sayde: I wyll get me a name and a p;ayse tho;ow out the realme: fo;
I wyll go fyght wyth Judas and them
ꝑ are with hym, as many as haue dispysed ꝑ kynges commaundement. So he made hym ready, and there wente with hym a greate myghtie hoost of the vngodly, to stonde by hym, and to be auenged of the chyld;en of Israel. And when they came nye vnto Bethoron, Judas wente fo;th a-gaynst them wyth a small company. And when hys people sawe such a greate hoost
be fo;e the̅, they sayde vnto Judas: Howe
are we able (beynge so fewe) to fight agaīst
so greate a multitude and so stronge? beynge we be so weery, and haue fasted al thys daye?

But Judas sayde: * It is a smal matter
fo; many to be ouerrom with few; yet there is no difference to the God of heauen, to delyuer by a greate multitude o; by a small cōpany: * fo; the victo;y of the battayll stan-deth not in the multitude of the hoost, but the strength commeth from heauen. Behade, they come agaynst vs with a p;esump-tuous and p;oude multitude to destroie vs
oure wyues and oure chyld;en, and to robbe
vs, But we wyll fyght fo; oure lyues & fo;
oure lawes, and the LORDE himself shall destroye the̅ before oure face: therfo;e be not ye afraied of them.

As soone as he had spoken these wo;des,
he leapte sodenly vpon the̅. Thus was Se-ro̅ smytten, and his hoost put to flight, and Judas folowed vpon them beyonde Betho ron vnto the playne felde: where there were slayne eight hund;eth men of them, and the residue fled in to the londe of the Philisty-nes. Then all the Heythen on euery syde we re afraied fo; Judas and his b;eth;en: so ꝑ
the rumou;e of hym came vnto the kynges eares, fo; all the Gentyles couide tell of the warres of Judas.

So whan kynge Antiochus herde these tidinges, he was angrie in his mynde: wherfo;e he sente fo;th and gathered an hoost of his whole realme, very stronge armies: and

spended his treasury, and gaue his hoost a yeares wages in honde, commaundynge them to be ready at all tymes.

Neuertheleſſe when he ſawe, that there was not mouye ynough in his treaſuries, and that thorow the diſcorde and perſecucion, which he made in the londe (to put downe ꝑ lawes that had bene of olde tyme) hys reuenues and tributes of the londe were mynished: he feared that he was not able for to beare the coſtes and charges ony lenger, nor to haue ſuch giftes, to geue ſo liberally as he dyd afore, more then the kynges that were before him.

Wherfore he was heuy in his mynde, and thought * to go in Perſides, for to take tributes of the londe, and ſo to gather much moneye. So he left Lyſias (a noble man of the kynges bloude) to ouerſee ꝑ kynges buſynelles, from the water Euphrates vnto the borders of Egipte: and to kepe wel his ſonne Antiochus, tyll he came agayne.

Moreouer, he gaue him half of his hoost & elephantes, and committed vnto him euery thynge of his mynde, concernynge thoſe which dwelt in Juda, and Jeruſalem: that he ſhulde ſende out an army agaynſt them, to deſtroye and to rote out the power of Iſrael and the remnaunt of Jeruſalem, to put out their memoryall from that place, to ſet ſtraungers for to inhabite al their quarters, and to parte their londe amonge the. Thus the kynge toke the other parte of the hoost and departed from Antiothe (a cite of hys realme) ouer the water of Euphrates, in the yere of the hundreth and.xlvii. yeare, and wente thorow the hye countrees.

* And Lyſias chose vnto him Ptolome ꝑ ſonne of Dorimmus, Nycanor and Gorgias mighty men, & the kynges frendes. The ſame tyme with, xl. thouſande fote men and vii. thouſande horſmen, for to go in to ꝑ lond of Juda, and to deſtroye it, as the kynge commaunded. So they wente forth with all their power, and came to Emmaus in to the playne felde. When the marchauntes herde the rumoure of them, they and their ſeruauntes toke very much ſyluer and golde, for to bye the children of Iſrael to be their ſeruaunte men. There came vnto them alſo yet armies of warre on euery ſyde, out of Syria and from the Paleſtynes.

When Judas and his brethren ſawe that trouble increaſed, and that the hoost drewe nye vnto their borders: conſideringe ꝑ kynges wordes which he commaunded vnto the people: namely, that they ſhulde vtterly waſte & deſtroye them: They ſaide one to another: Let vs redreſſe the decaye of oure people, let vs fight for oure folke and for oure Sanctuary. Then the congregacion were ſoone ready gathered to fight, to praie and to make ſupplicacio vnto God for mercy and grace.

* As for Jeruſalem, it laye voyde, & was as it had bene a wyldernelle. There wente no man in nor out at it, and the Sanctuary was troden downe. The aleauntes kepte the caſtell, there was the habitacion of the Heythen. The myrth of Jacob was taken awaye the ꝑpe and ꝑ harpe was gone frō amonge them. 1.Mac.3.b
